The employés of the Post Office, in memory of their respected chief, collected amongst themselves in three months, in small sums of shillings or pence willingly given, more than £1000 for the purchase of a life-boat to be called after his name.

For the two proposed beds about £3000 are required. The promoters of the Mildmay Memorial Fund do not wish to ask for contributions. They simply desire to bring to the notice of those who would like to give something, the fact which many may not be aware of, namely, that such a fund is being raised.

A striking feature of Sir Arthur's career was his bold and uncompromising attitude in endeavouring to check the tide of Romish sacerdotalism and corruption of truth which seems to be steadily rising around us—an attitude which will command the sympathy of all readers of The Christian.

Col. J. F. Morton, Conference Hall, Mildmay Park, London, N., will be happy to receive and acknowledge any sums, large or small. He will also forward collecting cards to any persons who would like to collect small but willing offerings in that way.—Yours faithfully, Joseph Tanner.

BLACKGANG MISSION.—Mrs. Smith, in sending out her little report, says:—"During six months I have received help from Christian workers, during the remaining months I have laboured alone; but the Lord has enabled me to maintain the Sunday services, and superintendence of the Sunday school, as also the week-day meetings, with occasional help from outside, and a measure of assistance from the Mission members. I shall be thankful if friends will help me to secure the services of an efficient fellow worker. From £50 to £100 will be required for this purpose, over and above what has hitherto been contributed for the general expenses." Mrs. Smith's address is: Needles View, Chale, Isle of Wight.

THE MARATHON OF TO-DAY.

By MISS LUCY E. GUINNESS.

Under this title Miss Guinness lately issued a very striking and special number of Regions Beyond (S. W. Partridge & Co. 4d.), in which she surveys the whole field of conflict with sin and Satan, showing the magnitude of the forces arrayed against us, in order to awaken renewed devotion and increased self-surrender for the sake of the dying millions on every hand.

After recalling the Marathon of the past, with its deeds of desperate valour in face of overwhelming odds, the writer proceeds to depict the powers of darkness bent on the destruction of the human race, and gives painful facts, illustrating the ruin brought by the drink plague, the opium curse, and the slave trade. The whole rings as a trumpet blast calling the followers of Christ to go forth as they have never yet done, in his name and for his sake, to witness to perishing men his power to save.

We give one striking extract in which Miss Guinness emphasises the world's need, in her chapter on—

THE LIBERATOR OF THE WORLD.

"Let the oppressed go free. . . .
"Break every yoke."

Whose voice has spoken so? Who in this world of slaves has said that sentence? Drink, opium, slavery, with their tyranny and terror, are only three among earth's many curses. Add to them the horrors of war, the iniquity of State-regulated vice, and the flood of immorality that defiles every country under heaven. Add to them crime, hatred, envy, pride, cruelty, selfishness, passion. Add avarice, idleness, lying, injustice, and modern luxury indulged in in the face of suffering and starving thousands. Add the black list of gambling, betting, racing, folly, fashion, impure literature, and all that these involve. Add heathenism's devil worship, wholesale murder, cannibalism, witchcraft, infanticide, polygamy, child-marriage, and abominations indescribable. Think of the meaning for each human heart of but two words —conscious guilt. Fathom the fact of sin here in the world around us.

Are we not standing on a battlefield?

Fight—conquer if you will—drink, opium, slavery. Oppression and ruin are not conquered. Protest and agitate against these. You are dealing with the outskirts of an army. There is a central mind and hand—a wicked one. Human ills are neither limited by nor dependent on outward evil systems—though immensely aggravated by them. The source of our sorrow is deeper, as the weeping prophet wrote 2500 years ago—"The sword reacheth unto the soul."

Black with a moral midnight, black with serried hosts of evil, our round globe wheels through space, peopled by spiritual slaves. But as we listen in the darkness, one thrilling cry rings out to God and man—above the rush of onslaught, the charge and recoil of fighters, the cry of agony and long groan of defeat—a cry, heaven-clear, life-bringing: "If the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

Once these words were spoken. Once He was here on earth, who could say and who did say, "He that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Christ claimed as his commission "to preach liberty to the captives, the opening of prison to them that are bound."

We are only concerned with one question. Is that promise of Jesus true?

And having found its answer—God's everlasting yes—we are only concerned with one duty, to make Christ known to men.

Humanity is meeting its Marathon to-day. A struggle for the liberty of our race is going forward against tremendous odds. Shall earth's 1,400,000,000 moral slaves be made free?

"He that committeth sin is the slave of sin." It is the work of Jesus to make men and women free from the guilt and power of sin. This He can do. This He has done. This He does.

How easily the words are written! How lightly you have read them, glancing quickly down this page! Trite, commonplace, familiar, they seem a truism scarce worth repeating. We have grown so accustomed to them, that we do not see the unutterable mystery and miracle they involve.

Is it true? Is He a living Liberator? Is a Liberator here, amid the strife and blackness of earth's great battlefield? Is He able to set us and all men free from the guilt and power of sin?

Millions of men and woman confronted with that question would rise up at this hour and answer, Yes.

Are we among their number?

The calmness of Divinity is in Him. Knowing He cannot fail, He works in the great quiet of simple universal law—the law of life. He does not speak of details, or urge activities. He says, "Abide in Me." Do this, and all else follows. Light cannot live with darkness. Sin cannot live with God.

He does not command a crusade against special forms of evil. He bids us preach the Gospel, knowing everything else lies there. "Make known the love of God, the redemption of the world; call every prodigal home to the Father's heart. Through repentance, through believing, through self-surrender, through the word of truth, through the Holy Ghost, through fellowship with us, they shall be made new—free."

Such is his message and commandment.

And of all earth's many wonders this seems strangest—that we should know ourselves living in a world of moral slaves; that we should know that Christ has liberated us, and that He can free all men; that we should know the Gospel that we hold in charge from Him for "all the world" is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth"; that we should know it works and has worked miracles of transformation wherever it has gone; that we should know God longs for the salvation of "all men everywhere," and has commanded us to preach that Gospel "to every creature"; and —that we should not do it.

Where is the central fighting-ground of the Marathon of to-day?

Not round the awful curses of drink, opium, slavery, or vice; not in the world of politics or science; not in the arena of threatening European war. It is here, round the standard of the Cross.

The supreme fight is within you, within me.

Is the kingdom of God triumphant hour by hour in our daily lives?

Jesus can make it so.

Is the Kingdom of God extended through us to "all the world," as much as in us lies? Jesus would have it so.

Nothing else than this, nothing less than this, will ever fulfil the purpose for which He lived and died and rose again.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-three years have passed away since the sin of all the world was laid on Jesus, since God redeemed our ruined race. How many of our race have heard the news of that redemption? Only about one third.

He bade us go to all the world and tell it to everybody. We are staying at home, for the most part, and telling no one at all. It is ministers' business to preach, we say.

We have had enough men, and money, any time in the last half-century, to have carried the Gospel again and again to every nation under heaven. Have we done it?

MR. C. INGLIS IN LIVERPOOL.

Liverpool and its suburbs have been the scene of great religious activity during the past three weeks, in connection with the Church of England Mission and other special efforts, in which God has signally owned the preaching of his Word.

Mr. C. Inglis has been preaching nightly in one of the large buildings on the south side of the city. On Sundays there have been overflowing congregations, and the place filled nearly half an hour before the time of service, so eager were the people to hear the Gospel. A large number entered the inquiry-room, many of whom were under deep conviction of sin; the workers who spoke with them believe that many have passed from death unto life.

The Bible talks were greatly blessed to God's people, and many tired workers who were refreshed, and weak ones who were strengthened, will look back with great thankfulness to God to this happy and fruitful mission.

TO MAKE YOUR CLASS the best in the school you need not be the ablest teacher, but you must be the most devoted.

AFRICAN MISSIONS VISITED.—21.

By MR. D. A. HUNTER.

To write a detailed account of the mission work carried on in Maritzburg and Durban would take up too much space. Suffice it to say that in Maritzburg the Free Church of Scotland has a most interesting work, under the superintendence of Rev. John Bruce. It includes both day and night schools, a large native church, and a home for native girls. Mr. Bruce has amply disproved the saying, common out here, that the prisons are filled with natives who have been educated, or have been brought up on mission stations. He went to the prison, and questioned each of the native prisoners; also, by courtesy of the authorities, he was enabled to find out the proportion of educated or mission boys brought before the magistrate, and it turns out to be something less than two per cent. It is a pity that the members of colonial churches do not post themselves better as to facts before they say so many hard things of the "Mission Kaffir."

I had a talk with Bishop Baynes, recently appointed to Natal, and happened to remark on the unsympathetic attitude of the colonial churches towards Christian missions. "Unsympathetic!" exclaimed the Bishop warmly, "it is downright opposition." Work is carried on by various sections of the Anglican Church, which, however, has been much hindered by internal dissensions. Rev. Mr. Green has an interesting industrial training school for boys, St. Albans; while Miss Sarney has a number of girls at St. Margaret's Home. In connection with Rev. David Russell's church, some native work is being carried on. I was privileged to be present at a bright little Christian Endeavour meeting (for whites), of which Mr. Russell is president. To describe it correctly, however, we must drop the Y. in Y.P.S.C.E.

Judging from criticisms passed on missionaries and their methods at a fellowship meeting of the Maritzburg Y.M.C.A., I fear the missionaries receive but scant sympathy from the large proportion of Colonial Christians. Even if they and their methods are wrong, Colonial Christians are in no way exempted from Christ's command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature"; and it seems to me that those Christians who find fault with the missionaries ought to be prepared to go and do better work themselves. I do not see how much blessing can come upon many of the Colonial churches until they take to heart Haggai i. and ii., and change their old attitude towards the heathen.

In a previous letter I mentioned some of the missionary agencies at work in Durban. I regret not having seen more of the work of the American Mission in that town, and of the S.E. African Mission. In these towns, where many natives gather from all sides to obtain work, and where so much of the white people's influence is only evil continually, vigorously worked missions are most important.

I purchased a fresh pair of horses, and started from Maritzburg early on Thursday morning for my long overland drive. Passing through Richmond, I reached Umkumasi, a very grand and deep valley, just before sunset. Next morning it rained, and I had hard work to get even as far as Ixopo, on account of the frightful state of the roads. On Saturday I crossed the Umzimkulu into East Griqualand, and went on as far as Clydesdale, a large station (S.P.G.) of the Anglican Church.

The missionary received me very hospitably, and I was interested in all I saw and heard, although I could not enter heartily into the High Church services. On Sunday there was communion at 8 a.m. in Zulu; English service with sermon at 11 a.m.; Zulu at 2 p.m.; and being the 31st of December, there was a midnight service spoken in English, and translated into Dutch and Zulu. On account of the Christmas vacation, I saw neither the boys' nor girls' schools, both of which are on industrial lines.

Early on Monday morning I was once more on the road, and got safely down the redoubtable Ibisi hill before breakfast time. Harding was reached by lunch time, and here I met Rev. Samuel Aitchison, of Ikwezi Lamaci. We drove out to his station some seven miles from Harding, and I was greatly interested in all I saw there. This mission has its headquarters at the Y.M.C.A., Needless Alley, Birmingham, and deserves much more hearty support than it at present receives.

AGGRESSIVE WORK.—6.

The line of dock here is a valuable sphere of operations for the Lord's work, and abounds in opportunities for usefulness.

For a period of about eight years, I regularly, every morning, after reading my business letters, took a supply of tracts and walked a few miles along and around various docks, speaking with individuals and groups of men, holding conversations in policemen's and dock-gatemen's huts; and at times using bales of cotton or any other goods on the quays as a pulpit from which to address the people round about. It was invigorating and encouraging work, and I secured the attention of the people largely because I was not in any way an official, but purely a volunteer. There is undoubtedly a power in such a position, especially amongst working men, who usually think so much of a little pay. Very many were the striking cases I met with, and the intensely interesting talks I had with the three or four gatemen together, and the solitary policeman in his hut.

I remember calling at a policeman's hut near the Sandon Docks, and telling the old, old story to the man on duty. About ten days afterwards I called at the same hut, and found another officer there. I asked where the previous one was, and he replied, "Dead, sir." I then preached Jesus to him.

About a fortnight later I called again, and found a sort of porter there. I asked where the officer was, and he answered, "Dead, sir." I then pointed him to the Saviour. I called once more a short time afterwards, and found still another stranger, and he told me the man I had last seen was also dead. I then preached the Gospel to him also.

Three men had passed away within about six weeks time! And yet men will go on absorbed with the things of time and sense, without making any preparation whatever for eternity!

One morning I came upon about a dozen sailors basking in the sun on some granite steps of a dock bridge. I approached them saying, "Friends; let me give you some tracts." A quick reply came. "All right, sir; let's have your tracts, for we all know the Lord here."

They were the crew of a fishing smack, and I found that, in whatever port they entered, they scattered their tracts and preached Jesus. They were about as lively a company of men as I ever came across. And shall not we, as believers, also be lively and joyous if we are using the means God has provided for the sustenance and development of the Divine life, viz., study of the Scriptures, private prayer, and work for God? for without these we cannot possibly be strong, healthy, and happy, spiritually?

Upon another occasion I asked a policeman about his soul's salvation, and he said he was a backslider. He once knew the love of God, and had joy and peace in believing in Jesus, but the world had drawn him away. I dwelt upon God's unqualified invitation to the backslider to return, and the full and free pardon and restoration awaiting him when he does. He remarked how strange it was that we should have this conversation, for he had lately been married, and had a presentiment that morning that something unusual would happen that day, and now he saw it was our meeting. Whilst much affected, he promised he would, with the help of God, commence the Christian life again. "God's ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts as our thoughts."

Some days later I met a dockgate-man, who said that about ten years previously a gentleman gave him a tract headed "Do you love Jesus?"

He had been drinking the night before, and the tract arrested him, and eventually was made the means of his conversion. He then opened his purse, and produced the old dark-looking tract, which he had ever since carried with him. What encouragement to tract-distributors and those who sow the seed "beside all waters"!

On one occasion I stopped a man at the Prince's Dock, and asked if he were saved. He hesitated, and looked confused; yet from his conversation it appeared to me that he was a Christian, and I told him so.

He suddenly burst into tears like a child, and left me with an affectionate squeeze of the hand. "The Lord knoweth them that are his" (2 Tim. ii. 19). Does He know that we are his, and do we know it also? The rule, is if we are his, we do know it, and if we don't know it is a very bad sign.

TRANSFORMATION IN MADAGASCAR.

BY S. BACKWELL FENN.

(Concluded.)

In order to give a clear account of the work of the Medical Mission, I propose to divide it into its five main branches, and say a few words about each.

I. In-patient Work. — The hospital is always open, all the year round, for the reception of in-patients. A few years ago the reluctance shown by the people to enter a hospital was great, as they did not like the necessary restrictions and rules. But this, we are glad to say, is gradually but surely giving way, and with this larger and better hospital we are often over-crowded, and are obliged to refuse admittance to some. Many, too, come from great distances, and these we are always glad to see, for they carry back with them to their distant homes accounts of what they have seen and heard. Short services are held in each ward morning and evening, and as opportunity offers the good seed is also sown by private talks with the patients. Did time and space permit, many an interesting tale might be told of blessing received both to soul and body.

Let me just add that the hospital, being also a training institution, is worked very much on the same plans as our hospitals are at home. There are staff nurses, nurses and probationers, also clerical clerks among the students. Temperature charts, notes, and histories of cases are all carefully made and kept, and as far as the time and strength of two doctors and one lady superintendent permit, the work is done thoroughly.

II. Out-patient Work.—There are four dispensaries connected with the Medical Mission. One is at the hospital itself, where patients are seen three days a week. Another is situated at the north end of the town, near the great market-place, and is opened three times a week also. A third dispensary is at the extreme southern end of the city, where patients are seen on Mondays and Thursdays, and a fourth is at the little town of Ilazaina, about eight miles north of the capital. This dispensary is only visited once a week. Thus a large number of sick folk are seen and prescribed for every year; and with these also a short service is held before the consultation begins.

III.—Training of Nurses.—Our much esteemed lady superintendent, Miss C. L. Byam, M.R.R.C., could give us more information on this branch of the work than I can. Let me just say that a select band of about forty Malagasy women from various parts form the nursing staff of the hospital and dispensaries. They receive a careful and thorough training from Miss Byam, and make excellent nurses. As one and another leave us to get married, or settle in other parts, new probationers are taken on, and thus a constant change is continually taking place, and distant parts are beginning to feel the benefit of having trustworthy and skilled nurses in their midst.

IV.—Teaching of Students.—The training department of our work, viz., that of young women as nurses and midwives just mentioned, and that of young men as doctors, is perhaps the most important of all. There are at present over fifty students in the Medical Missionary Academy, under the management of a conjoint board, representing the F.F.M.A., L.M.S., and N.M.S. The students have to pass an examination on general education before entering on their medical studies. If this is done successfully, the first year is devoted to science subjects, viz., botany, physics, chemistry, zoology, also Latin and English. If they pass the examination in these subjects and have proved to be worthy men, they are allowed to commence their medical studies proper. These are pursued for at least four more years. The first two are spent in studying anatomy, physiology, histology, and materia medica, and the last two are especially devoted to clerical work in the hospital, medicine, surgery, midwifery, and gynecology. A final examination is held once a year, after which the successful candidates publicly receive the diploma of the Academy. Over twenty young men now hold this diploma. Some have practices in town, and many are settled in country districts and doing excellent work. Thus by spending our time and labour on the few we are, in reality, benefiting the many.

V. Outside Work.—Not much need be said on this point. My esteemed colleague, Dr. C. F. A. Moss, and myself find our time more than fully occupied with the direct work of the Mission. Still there are missionary families and others to be attended to in illness, and occasionally visits have to be paid to Malagasy patients at their homes. A little literary work, too, is done from time to time, and the preparation of suitable text-books for the students is slowly advancing.

This, then, is the picture as it presents itself to our view to-day. Truly a transformation scene, for which we bless God, take courage, and press onward.

Medical Mission Hospital, Isoavinandriana, Antananarivo.

MISS WESTON'S WORK.

An interesting meeting was held on the evening of Wednesday week, in St. Martin's Town Hall, Charing Cross, in connection with Gospel Temperance work in the Royal Navy.

Mr. Froome Talfourd presided, and briefly introduced the "Sailor's Friend," as our sister is often entitled by reason of her devoted and self-sacrificing work for the welfare of blue jackets afloat and ashore, efforts which it appeared have not been confined solely to our own Navy, for the "Blue Backs," as her little monthly is called, are welcomed in the American and other fleets as well as in our own.

Miss Agnes E. Weston pointed out that the principles of temperance were intimately associated with the strength and ability of the men in the navy; and in a navy like ours—where the personnel requires to be increased by 10,000 men in order to bring it up to the strength for which we were now building—it was most essential that those upon whom we would have to rely in time of war should be sober and steady. She attached the greatest importance to temperance work among the boys; and she came to the conclusion that there was "a great deal of salt in the blood still," seeing that during the past five or six months 3,100 extra boys had entered the training service. It was gratifying to find that last year in Portsmouth and Devonport alone no fewer than 2,746 lads in the navy had been induced to sign the pledge. There was not a single ship or gunboat in the navy that did not now have aboard representatives of the Royal Naval Temperance Society; and she stated it had been estimated by Mr. Caine that the temperance men in the naval service saved the country as much as one million sterling per annum. Speaking generally, she was glad to think that the British Navy of to-day was far superior to any in the past, judging by the increase of sobriety among the men. Miss Weston paid a tribute to the zealous work and co-operation of the National Temperance League; and the secretary (Mr. R. Rae) and others delivered speeches in sympathy with the objects of the meeting.

DR. PARKER, of the City Temple, conducted a three days' mission at Bradford this week, in connection with the C.E. movement.

THE MOST IMPORTANT EPOCH of our lives was written in the lost book of our childhood. Our first impression of the outward world, our first sight of daisies and buttercups, our first taste of the fragrance of the rose and the sweet briar, our first sense in overcoming resistance, the earliest joys of our first affections, the very games in which we took delight, and even the griefs and hurts over which we sobbed as though broken-hearted, have all vanished like a forgotten dream.—L. S. Redshawe.

MACEDONIA.—Children in the Sunday schools of this old Bible land are encouraged to learn choice texts of Scripture in the following way:—The "Golden Text" is printed in the common language on the blank space or back of a picture-card. Each scholar is offered a card on the condition of committing to memory the text upon it; if that has been done a fresh card is given the next Sunday, and so on for the year. No card is given unless the text on the last one can be repeated. This system is drawing large numbers of little ones into the Protestant Evangelical Sunday Schools of Bulgaria and Macedonia. The two missionary ladies who originated this work are so pressed by applications that they appeal for supplies. Picture-cards of all sizes and sorts are suitable. At the small mission press in Samokoo the texts are printed on the cards. Parcels will be gladly received and forwarded by the Bible Lands Missions' Aid Society. In lieu of cards small P.O.'s are welcome.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

The Weaver Brothers are having great blessing at the Albert Hall, Nottingham. Many have publicly confessed Christ during the past fortnight; the mission closes on Sunday.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond and Mr. Merton Smith have been holding meetings at St. Louis, U.S. Much stir has been created in the city, and there is reason to hope for lasting results.

Holbeach.—Very successful mission services have been conducted lately by Mr. Jeffreys. There were many inquirers. Believers have been greatly encouraged and blessed. Still greater blessings are expected.

Slough.—The Methodist Recorder records "a remarkable work of God at Slough. Over fifty last week surrendered to Christ, young and old. One old man of eighty-four, another kneeling by his side of seventy-two, and a woman of eighty-five were among the converts. The services are being conducted by Rev. George Eddy, district missionary."

Benson, Oxon.—The mission here last week, conducted by Rev. W. Stott and Mr. J. Crofton Rainey, was productive of much fruit. The attendances were well sustained, believers were built up, and sinners saved. A free tea to 300 parishioners, generously provided by Messrs. W. Littleboy, J. P., and W. Cooper, proved the means of inducing many non-church-goers to attend the services.

Princeton College.—One of the results of the recent revival work in Princeton has been the formation of a society among the students of the senior class of the Seminary, whose object it is to raise volunteers for home mission work and to support weak churches at home. Large delegations of students also visited Trenton and neighbouring towns, last Sunday, and addressed the different churches.

Mr. Wm. Sampson has conducted a mission at Gainsborough. Many prayers had been offered that God would abundantly pour out his Holy Spirit. The Sunday services were largely attended, and many came forward for prayer. A large number of scholars came out for Christ at the meeting for young people. The meeting for men only was largely attended, and many yielded themselves to God. The week-evening services were well attended.

Jersey.—The mission recently conducted by Miss Costin in Jersey appears to have been characterised throughout by great spiritual power. The work at Great Union-road has been very remarkable. Whole families have been converted, and the character of many homes has been entirely changed. The farewell meeting was attended by quite a thousand people, and many persons decided for Christ on that occasion. The additions to the churches at Great Union-road and the Royal-crescent are stated to number 185 adults and thirty juveniles.

Leeds.—A most successful twelve days' mission has been conducted at St. Peter's Chapel by Mr. Welsby and Mr. B. Pawson, of York. During the first week the meetings were held in the schoolroom, the second week in the chapel. The right sort of people attended the services—men in their working clothes, women with shawls, and some without. Night by night the interest deepened, until on the closing night the chapel was nearly filled. There were many interesting cases of conversion, three of the worst drunkards in the neighbourhood among them, and whole families were brought to God.

Rev. James Oatey concluded, on Sunday evening, a deeply interesting and, it is believed, fruitful mission in the Uxbridge-road Tabernacle, Bloemfontein-road, W. Night after night the iron building has been well filled, while on the closing evening the place was crowded out to the doors; many being present who seldom before had entered a place of worship. The word from Isa. lv. 1, was with great power, and in the after meeting numbers were found longing for peace, and some of these professed to enter into pardon and rest. Mr. Oatey has now gone to Yorkshire for a short mission.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey began a month's work in the capital city of Washington on Wednesday, Feb. 7. From the accounts received of the opening days there seems every indication that a real and extended work of grace will be the result of the visit. The great Convention Hall, in which the main gatherings took place, with a seating capacity of some 5000, was crowded out at the first meeting, and Mr. Sankey had to do duty at an overflow, after having sung to the great throng in the hall. The Washington Post reports the services, speaking enthusiastically of Mr. Sankey's songs, and giving long reports of Mr. Moody's stirring exhortations.

Mr. Richard Weaver.—The Lord is graciously answering prayer on behalf of Mr. Weaver's Mission at Malden Hall. Last Sunday was the best day we have yet had. It was a grand sight to see the large number of men at the afternoon service, and to see the hall completely packed in the evening, and the large overflow meeting held in the schoolroom; and better still to know that souls were saved at both services. A very large number stood up to be prayed for, big, burly men were weeping like children, and many came out boldly to the front seats to be spoken with personally by the workers. Those who have professed to be saved are found earnestly seeking the conversion of others. One very interesting case might be mentioned of a young man brought to Christ recently, and he has influenced several of his father's workmen to come to the services, and they, too, are saved, and they now meet every morning for prayer for the mission in the father's hayloft. Thus encouraged, we purpose going on another week. Will readers pray that our aged brother may have physical strength and spiritual power still to go on winning souls for Christ? G. H.

Mr. Lane at Hastings.—We most gratefully record the wonderful blessing granted to the nine days' mission conducted by Mr. W. R. Lane, in Robinson-street Congregational Church, Hastings, Rev. C.New, pastor. There was more widespread spiritual awakening than the church has ever experienced. The noonday devotional meetings were well maintained, and requests for special prayer were unusually numerous. At the evening services the attendance was surprisingly large, sometimes so crowding the chapel that many persons were unable to find room. On the last Sunday evening, which was rough and wet, doorways and staircases were thronged as well as aisles and gangways. The addresses were of singular power, and at the large after-meetings men and women of all ages stood up and publicly testified to their acceptance of the Saviour. The P.S.A. service, at which probably not less than 900 men were present, was followed by an after-meeting, which, like that also for men only on the previous Friday, can never be forgotten. The gathering in the hall after the final service, when parents were rejoicing over children, teachers over scholars, ministers and workers over those for whom they had been long anxious, and seekers over their own salvation, was indescribably sacred and touching. So much blessing involves the church in grave responsibility, which they humbly desire to fulfil.

ONWARD, YE BRAVE!

(Dedicated to Miss Annie R. Taylor and the thirteen volunteers who have given themselves to Christ for Tibet.)

Onward, ye brave, away!
Fearless to face the fray;
Slowly the coming day
Darkens to dawn!
Hill rises after hill,
So, let heart rise, and will;
God shall be with you till
Cometh the morn!

Into the darkness go!
Reck not of frost or snow!
Take thou the light, and lo!
This shall be thine.
Garlands, the deathless wove,
Waiting the brave that rove,
Telling the love of love,
Human, Divine!

Darkness awaiting light,
Go, thou, and make it bright!
Take love, and lo, the night
Breaks into day!
Onward through toil and pain,
Christ did not die in vain!
Lo, He shall rise and reign!
Onward! Away!

THERE IS NO SURER FOUNDATION for a thorough and systematic acquaintance with divine truth in later life than catechetic and mnemonic teaching in childhood.—Dr. J. Oswald Dykes.

A RETIRING VETERAN.—Mr. James Pursell, the honoured and successful manager of the special religious services held for many years at the Britannia Theatre (Hoxton) and the Morley Hall (Hackney), has recently retired, after having superintended these important mission services since October 1862. For thirty-seven years he was in the active service of the London City Mission, all but ten of which he spent as mission visitor to the General Post Office. His friends have decided to present him with some recognition of his work, and subscriptions may be sent to Mr. John Lobb, Carlton House, Victoria Park-road, N.E.; or Mr. Thos. Russell, hon. sec., Grove House, Victoria-grove, Stoke Newington.

PERSONALIA.

Rev. G. S. Barrett, chairman of the Congregational Union, has received the degree of D.D. from the University of Aberdeen.

Rev. John Walton, of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, has, we are glad to hear, completely recovered from his recent illness.

Mr. J. Theo. Isaac seems at latest accounts to be reaping benefit from his voyage, and to be gradually gaining strength. On Tuesday he started by the Oriental on his homeward journey.

Rev. Thomas Armitage, D.D., who has undertaken to occupy the pulpit in the First Baptist Church Boston, for three months, is a veteran preacher of seventy-four years of age, and was a pastor in New York for forty years.

Rev. Dr. McCosh, of Princeton, is now in his eighty-third year, declining in strength, but with his brain still clear and active. His book, now in the press, will be, he says, his last word to the public, to which he has been speaking for nearly sixty years.

Mr. William Noble opens on March 4 a Gospel Temperance Mission in the Dome, Brighton, and Hove Town Hall. The arrangements are in the hands of a united committee, and hopes are entertained that much interest will be stirred. Prayer is specially desired for this mission.

Rev. Dr. De Witt Talmage has completed arrangements for a tour of the world during the coming spring and summer. He hopes to sail from San Francisco in May, taking the steamer to the Hawaiian Islands, and visiting New Zealand, Australia, China, and India. The journey homeward will be made from Ceylon, through Europe.

Lord Bennet, we regret to learn, has been ill ever since his return from America nine weeks ago, and the doctors say it will be many months before he will be able to do any more work. As writing is forbidden him, he asks us to contradict a recent statement that he is "throwing himself into evangelistic work," and thus prevent an influx of correspondence with which he will not be able to deal.

Dr. Joseph Parker, who is conducting a mission this week at Bradford, is far from well. In conducting his mid-week service last Thursday he said he had come from and was returning to a sick bed. He felt the strain of the mid-week services, and almost thought that his health might compel him to abandon them in May, when he completes his twenty-fifth year of such service in the City of London.

Pastor Yen, of Shanghai, arrived in England on Tuesday, and meetings are being arranged for him in different parts of the United Kingdom. It is important that anti-opium workers all over the country should know that there are several good English speakers who have been in China and are kindly willing to address meetings. Application for speakers should be made to Miss Braithwaite, 312, Camden-road, N.

Rev. Solomon L. Ginsburg, writing on January 24, from Campos, Brazil, says: "Last Saturday I returned from Nictheroy, where I was kept in prison for nine days for preaching the Gospel in a place called Sao Fidelis. I had baptized there four persons, and the priest got mad, and not being able to do anything, induced the police magistrate to prohibit my preaching. I informed the magistrate that in the matter of religion I receive my orders from God. He sent me to the chief of police in Nictheroy, who locked me up for nine days. But the Lord was with me and blesssed me. Since my return I have already baptized six believers and five more are awaiting this confession. We ask your kind sympathy and prayers."

MR. GEORGE BLACKLOCK has closed a successful Gospel Temperance Mission in Brecon.

ANY PERSON who punishes a child in an angry moment does the child much harm, and is really the worse offender of the two. There is little need of punishment in a well-ordered school or household.—Parents' Review.

PAKEFIELD.—During the recent severe gales a serious landship occurred in front of Pakefield rectory, endangering the safety of the house. A correspondent writes:—"Doubtless many of your readers, and especially those who have enjoyed the annual Conference at Pakefield, will come quickly to the help of the good rector, Rev. L. Price. About £80 is required to make good the damage."

CONFERENCES IN SCOTLAND.—Conferences on the Inspiration of the Bible, the Jews, and the Second Coming of the Lord Jesus are arranged to be held in Edinburgh, June 5-8; Glasgow, June 12-15; Dundee, June 19 and 20; Aberdeen, June 21 and 22; and Inverness, June 26 and 27. Any who are desirous that similar appointments should be made in the cities and towns where they dwell are requested to communicate with "The Convener of Prophetic Conferences," 22, Hamilton-square, Birkenhead.

Letters to the Editor.

"THE BAPTISM OF THE HOLY GHOST."

Dear Sir,—Much confusion of thought appears to me to exist through not distinguishing between things which differ. Are these things so? Search the Scriptures.

1. In all ages and dispensations the Holy Spirit has striven against the wickedness of men, leading them to repentance, and revealing God as their help and refuge. In all ages he has come upon, and sometimes filled, certain chosen individuals, fitting them for some special service. See Gen. vi. 3, Exod. xxxi. 3, Num. xxiv. 2, 1 Sam. x. 10, etc. Those limited operations differ from the pouring out or forth as mere rivers differ from the sea.

2. The pouring out of the Spirit. (a) The promise of it in Isa. xliv. 3: "I will pour out my Spirit upon thy seed." And in Joel ii. 28, "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh." (b) The partial fulfilment of these promises at Pentecost (Acts ii. 16, 17, 18, 32, 33), "Jesus being exalted. . . . He hath poured forth this which ye see and hear." The ocean fulness has yet to come. Note that pouring out and pouring forth does not necessarily imply pouring upon all.

3. The Baptism in the Spirit. I use the word "in" advisedly. (a) The promise. Jesus said, "John indeed baptized in water, but ye shall be baptized in the Holy Ghost not many days hence" (Acts i. 5). (b) The fulfilment of it. "They (the disciples) were all together in one place." The Spirit came down from heaven and filled the room where they were sitting. As a consequence, they were all baptized or immersed in the Spirit. Note the difference. The sending down or pouring out is not the baptism, any more than the pouring of water into a vessel is the immersion of some body in it. (c) The result. In one spirit they were all baptized into one body. Believers are now expected to live in the Spirit, to walk in the Spirit, to keep the unity of the Spirit. Every believer who receives the testimony of the Spirit (Peter says: "These things which now have been announced unto you through them that preached the Gospel unto you in the Holy Ghost, sent down from heaven") is at once united in the Spirit to the others who believed before him; "added together" is the expression used, Acts ii. 47, and with them is baptized in the Spirit, in whom all the members of Christ's body live, and move, and work, in this dispensation. It appears to me to be utterly unscriptural to teach that a person who is a member of Christ can be so without having received this baptism in the Spirit.

4. The Gift of the Holy Ghost. This expression is sometimes used in its widest sense, embracing the pouring out, the baptism, and the resulting power—(see Acts ii. 38: "Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost")—as a rule, it is used in the sense of special personal endowment, fitting the recipient for service in God's house. (See Acts viii. 20; Acts x. 45; Acts xi. 17; 1 Cor. i. 7; 2 Tim. i. 6.) In this connection the word "upon" is almost always used. Note, first, the "pouring out" is not the gift. The "baptism" is not the gift. A man may be added to the number of those who are "in Christ," and consequently "in the Spirit," and yet not receive the special gift of the Holy Ghost. The two things are distinct. The one general, the other particular. The one is common to all believers in Jesus raised from the dead and glorified; the other bestowed upon individuals according to their receptive power for service and witness. (See Acts ii.) At Pentecost the cloven tongues sat upon each of them. All were filled with the Holy Ghost. He was not only around them in the room, but in them, and upon them. They drank "the same spiritual drink." "All were made to drink in one spirit" (1 Cor. xii. 13). All were consequently perfectly fitted for the service required just then; and all at once began to use the miraculous gifts bestowed upon them, speaking in many languages of the wonderful works of God, as the Spirit gave them utterance.

The case of the disciples at Samaria further illustrates this. They believed Philip when he preached to them the Kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ; they were baptized. As a consequence they must (if real believers) have been added to the other believers who were in the Spirit; and with them must have been partakers of all the privileges and blessings common to them, including baptism in the outpoured Spirit. But for certain reasons easily understood, since Simon the sorcerer's influence was so great there, the gift of the Spirit, enabling them to work miracles, was withheld. "As yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." Simon asks for the gift for the sake of the power it brought, and is refused. Lesson: God withholds the gift when it would be misused. The case of Cornelius affords another illustration. Here Peter's prejudice has to be overcome. God has to show him that faith in the Lord Jesus cleanses the hearts of Gentiles as well as Jews, and makes them fit to be associated in one body. Cornelius and his house believed; but lest there should be any backwardness on Peter's part, or doubt whether God had really received them into the body of Christ and fellowship of the Spirit, He gives the Holy Ghost to all the company. The Holy Ghost fell upon all who heard the word. This corresponds with the cloven tongues sitting upon each. Not the pouring out only, but the pouring upon; not the baptism, but the special gift. The result is always his special endowment. They spoke with tongues and magnified God. Baptism (water baptism) into the name of Jesus here follows as an acceptation of the fact that they had been baptized already in the Spirit.

The case of the twelve disciples at Ephesus so Scripturally dealt with by "R. C. M." in The Christian of January 25, I will only touch on, to say that it is evidently recorded to show that the Gospel, when preached in the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, invariably sets forth Jesus and the resurrection as the power to save, but it adds the presence of the Holy Ghost as the power to keep and endow for service. The Gospel announced to the above disciples was defective on both these points, and what was lacking had to be supplied before they could get into the place of blessing. But note, after instruction in the truth, they were baptised into the name of the Lord Jesus, a token that they had already received baptism in the Spirit. This was not the gift of the Spirit, which here was conveyed though Paul's hands being laid upon them. Having received which, "they spake with tongues and prophesied."

Conclusions.—It is not according to the mind of the Spirit to pray that God will "pour out," or "send down," or "baptize with," or "freshly baptize with" the Holy Spirit. He has been sent from heaven, and dwells with and in all who are Christ's during this dispensation. It is right to ask that we may receive the gift of the Holy Ghost as freely and fully as God has given Him. The gift is bestowed; it is for us to receive him, and all his various offices. He is here in the place of our absent Lord Jesus (the first Helper, Advocate, and Comforter) to teach, guide, remind, reveal, etc. It is right to ask that He may come upon and even rest upon us, either individually for power, for special service, or to enable us to live a life of general loving service in the house of God and to the world. This may also be sought by bodies of of believers who desire united action and power for some special service.

Objections Answered.—How can a man be said to be "in the Spirit" as the result of believing in Jesus crucified and raised, and yet not have the Spirit "in him," or have Him in a very limited manner? Answer: A bottle may be in the water, and yet, if corked, have no water in it. Remove the hindrance and the water will flow in. Jesus said, "Abide in Me and I in you." Believers are all in Christ, but Christ is not fully in all believers, as may be seen by their lives. It is equally true of Christ's representative, the Spirit. How can a believer have been baptized in the Spirit and ever have the Spirit in him more or less, and yet not have the Spirit upon him. Answer: The blessed Lord Jesus had the Spirit dwelling in Him fully and always; and yet after his baptism the Holy Spirit descended in bodily form as a dove upon Him. This was God giving his Son, the God-man, power for his special service. Paul speaks of the power of Christ resting upon him. "Ye shall receive power after the Holy Ghost has come upon you," said Jesus.

Believers need to recognise this more. The power is for us if we seek it. Paul said, "When I am weak, then am I strong." We want to know our weakness and get the power of Christ (the Holy Spirit) upon us. Pentecostal blessings, Pentecostal sayings, doings, and manifestations will then be the result. Readers, please refer to the Scriptures quoted.

Dear Sir,—It is most important that this subject should be fully gone into, and the truth as contained in the Scriptures clearly set forth; otherwise much misconception and unnecessary alarm might be caused among the flock of God. May I be permitted to draw attention to two points which may perhaps be of use in assisting those interested to arrive at a soul-satisfying conclusion?

First, then, we find in Eph. i. 13 that the Ephesian Church, together with all others their brethren in succeeding ages, are assured that, "having believed they were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." Again, in Titus iii. 5, he is reminded, along with every individual believer since, that he was saved "by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost."

These then, believing and sealing, regeneration and renewing, are inseparably connected in the Word of God. May he not reverently and solemnly say, "What God has joined let not man put asunder"?

Secondly, with regard to the examples referred to in chaps. xviii. and xix. of the Acts, viz., Apollos and the believers in Ephesus, we must not fail to notice that these were still practically in the preceding dispensation; they were buried in the brightening hopes which were the marked feature of the closing years of that period, and were unaware that the most glorious day of salvation had dawned, and that in one sense the Sun of Righteousness had arisen with healing in his beams. They were humble believers so far as they had light and knowledge, looking earnestly for his speedy coming, but they were not yet in a position to receive the Spirit of God, who can only enter the heart which has recognised in Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ of God, the appointed sacrifice for sin and received and rested in Him for salvation. I think there can be no case exactly corresponding with such in our day.

Dear Sir,—Seeing in to-day's Christian that you are about to give some more notes on the "Baptism of the Holy Spirit," may I add a few lines on an important part of it not touched on yet, so far as I have seen, viz., the result? We know that at Pentecost they all spake declaring the wonderful works of God. Is this the result looked for in all cases now-a-days?

I have lately been attending some revival meetings in a Wesleyan chapel. The evangelist (on circuit) exhorted his hearers every evening "to come up and receive the baptism of the Holy Spirit," after an otherwise simple and stirring Gospel address. A few responded. But I tell them, "I delight in the preaching of the Word," and believe that where men are saved and called of Christ, the result should be "they went everywhere preaching the Word." Unrestricted liberty of Christians to preach is right; the restriction to a few only is wrong.

But do these Christians believe this, and believe in this result of the Holy Spirit's baptism? as it certainly was at first (see Acts viii. 4). Do they remember that Paul says, "We believe, and therefore speak also" (2 Cor. iv. 13). A one-man ministry is a contradiction, and even the position of the evangelist (on circuit) is partly so, it seems to me. Where man ordains the preacher, there is no liberty given to all.

I will not add more as to the results seen on the day of Pentecost, following on those who received "the baptism of the Holy Ghost," but earnestly commend these things to the careful attention of all who preach, and all who received "the baptism of the Holy Ghost," as no light matter of words or doctrine only.—I am, yours truly and faithfully,

J. S. W.

Dear Sir,—Having read with much interest and profit the articles on this subject in The Christian, I venture to express my gratitude to the writers for the benefit received, and to you for continuing this important correspondence in your paper.

I think receiving the Holy Spirit is not necessarily consequent upon believing in Christ, for the vast majority of Christians are not (in my opinion) filled with the Holy Spirit. I say "filled," not "baptized," for, after our Lord's ascension we do not read one word about being "baptized" with (or into) the Holy Spirit, except the fulfilment of his promise given in Acts i. 5. "Ye shall be baptized with (into) the Holy Ghost not many days hence"—fulfilled in Acts ii. 4, upon the Jews, "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost"; and upon the Gentiles in Acts x. 44, "The Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word"; about which Peter says, in the next chapter, "Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how He said, John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost." This is the last time the word "baptized" is used in reference to the Holy Ghost. It is not once mentioned in any of the Epistles.

Therefore I conclude it is unscriptural to ask people to-day, "Have you been baptized with the Holy Ghost?" for "There is one Lord, one faith, and one baptism" (Eph. iv. 5). The word "baptism" here undoubtedly refers to water, for the "one Spirit" has been spoken of in the previous verse. The marginal reference to Gal. iii. 27 supports this view. In Eph. v. 18, we have the command, "Be filled with the Spirit." The same word filled is used at least ten times in the Acts (in reference to the Holy Spirit) after the baptisms of the Holy Ghost already referred to. This quotation is an important one, because the command to be "filled with the Holy Spirit" was addressed "to the saints at Ephesus"—to people who had already received the Holy Spirit in his regenerating power. I heartily endorse the remarks of Rev. Ernest Boys in his paragraph on 1 Cor. iii. 16, and iv. 19, which appeared in your last issue.—Yours very truly,

Jas. W. Pearce.

"A Constant Reader" (Ashbourne), who is of opinion that for effectual service an anointing or a baptism of the Holy Ghost is needed after conversion, records his own experience. This is a department into which we can hardly go, as experiences are almost as varied as individuals themselves.

Mr. E. Hewetson (Westbourne Park) points out that in order to a filling there must first be an emptying. He adds: "As for believing, and not having the Holy Spirit, I cannot see how that possibly could be, considering our Lord's words, 'Whosoever believeth on Me, hath eternal life.' There is no life without God's Holy Spirit; we are dead until we have the new birth."

Mr. Robert Nelson (Malvern) writes of the Ephesian disciples (Acts xix. 1-6): "We learn from 1 Cor. xii. 3 that 'no one can say Lord Jesus, but by the Holy Ghost.' These had already done this, and had passed from death unto life, yet how imperfect was their knowledge! This was now remedied. Henceforth they were on the same footing as our Lord's other disciples, heirs together of the gift of Life.

"Some might naturally ask, seeing that these supernatural gifts were so useful, why are they not continued to us? It may be replied that the early infant church needed some overt explicit proof that the Lord Jesus possessed in resurrection the very same power He had exhibited formerly while on earth, now greatly enhanced. At Pentecost this was grandly displayed; made visible to the eyes of men. In the present day none of his followers have any doubts on this subject. Faith is now called into exercise. Proof would be superfluous. Our God does nothing in vain."

Our contemporary, The Christian Commonwealth, in an article last week, said:—"We read in the Word of God of the phrase 'baptized in (Greek en) the Holy Spirit'; but never do we read of the 'baptism of the Holy Spirit.' We should have thought that our contemporary, The Christian, so generally careful about such things, would not fall into the error to which we have called attention. But it does fall into it—up to the neck. Both in its correspondence and editorial columns it constantly uses the phrase 'baptism of the Holy Ghost,' as if it were repeating a Biblical expression." The charge is sufficiently general—"constantly." We should like to point out the fact that the three "Expository Notes" which we have just published on this subject were headed "The Gift of the Holy Ghost." Moreover, on January 25, when writing on Acts xix. 1-6, "R. C. M." was careful to follow the Greek by speaking of the Greater than John as "One who should baptize in the Holy Ghost as John baptized in water."

THE POPE'S ADDRESSES: A WARNING.

Dear Sir,—I know of no utterances so calculated to mislead the British public in regard to religious and secular affairs in Italy as those which are put into the mouth of the Pope, and read in his name in St. Peter's from time to time, and which find their way into the English press. In the latest of these addresses the Pope laments the disorders that have taken place in Italy, and "earnestly desires that means may be found to end the present misery, and promptly re-establish order in those places where it has been disturbed."

The hypocrisy of such talk is revealed by the fact that when the disturbances were going on in Sicily and in other places, the Pope, who is ready enough to interfere in English, French, and Russian affairs, never raised a finger to allay them. The secular press of Italy charged the Vatican with this culpable silence. But it went further; it directly charged the Vatican "with having a grim satisfaction in these disorders," and in aiding and encouraging the revolutionaries. The priests led the revolt in Sicily, and the monasteries and convents supplied funds to carry it on.

In his address the Pope traces the cause of these disorders to the "ruin of religion," and goes on to charge this against the State, and to urge the return of the people "to him, who holds from God the supreme magistracy." Italy has lately spent £20,000 in buying copies of the Secolo Bible, which seems to prove that "religion" is not ruined, but that the "Papacy" is, as that sale was made in the teeth of priestly opposition. There is, however, undoubtedly a large amount of irreligion, indifference, and scepticism in Italy. But who is responsible for it? Italians themselves answer, "Not the State, but the Church—the Pope himself."

In the Nuova Antologia for January 15, Prof. Mariano, in an article on the Papacy, says: "It has diffused throughout all a profound indifference and scepticism, and a great emptiness of spirituality. It has kept Italy hanging on the brink of perdition." Also Signor Bonghi, who is a clerical, says, in this same journal, "We are no longer able to look for any revival of spiritual life from the Roman Catholic Church." In this same address the Pope speaks of being "particularly gratified by the testimony of the devotion of the people of Rome." If they are so "devoted" to him, as he says, why should he so earnestly in this same address beg their return to him?

The fact is that the crowds that frequent St. Peter's are made up of foreigners who go as visitors to see the show, and foreigners who are in the pay of the Vatican. Fra Paolo Sarpi was once asked about the teaching of the Jesuits, and he replied, "Read what they write, and do the very opposite," so we may say of the Pope's addresses, carefully prepared for him by these same Jesuits, "Read them, and believe the very opposite."—Yours faithfully, (Rev.) Alexander Robertson.

THE ADVANCE OF POPERY.

Dear Sir,—I notice your remarks on the increase of Popish churches and priests in London during the past year. Is it not that we are reaping in ever-increasing crops, what we have nationally been sowing over at Maynooth these many years?

It seems to me that the Lord's people have greatly lost sight of this fearful national sin. May God raise up men who shall agitate for the repeal of that sinful grant for the permanent education of men who teach soul-destroying error and destroy God's Word and God's Truth, and his people when they can. Agitators against that grant would be true patriots, as our national decline in prosperity, as in Protestantism, dates from then.

We agitate against the opium trade and the C.D. Acts, and rightly, for these are gross sins against man. But how far greater is the sin of educating men to go forth to teach all that is corrupting and contrary to God's Word? This is sin against God.—Yours faithfully, R. T.

"PICTORIAL REPRESENTATIONS OF CHRIST."

Sir,—May a sculptor venture a line expressing his views on the above subject? As a reader of your paper, I have been somewhat surprised to notice the arguments given in favour of the same by your correspondent. From my point of view as an artist (and one who would sooner starve than attempt to use his fancy in such a direction), may I say such emblems are unlawful for a Christian.

I quite acknowledge the eye to be a powerful educator in matters of sense and sentiment, but where is the authority for using the Divine Image in such a way to reach the heart? The lantern should shine in each daily, and reflect a truer image of the Holy Spirit. Use not the "dark lantern," if by such means hearts could have been reached. Think you the Holy Spirit would not have left to us faithful materials of our Lord's resemblance? Art was at its excellence at that time—is there anything permitted to remain to us? No. The Holy Spirit prevented such, knowing what was in man.

For such reasons I have more than once expressed my views relating to sculptured forms of Divinity, and it often fills me with indignation to see places of worship erecting stained glass with subjects created by the artist's fancy, containing portraits of Christ, Paul, and others; places that of all others should be jealous of truth in all things.—Your obedient servant, E. G. P.

THE CIRCULATION OF TRACTS.

Dear Sir,—Notwithstanding the great spread of missions, and the immense circulation of the Scriptures in foreign lands, less than half the world has been evangelised, and the other half has not even heard that there is a Gospel.

There are numerous missionary societies and agencies who are doing able work; still, it is almost incredible to believe that there remain so many nations and tribes into which the Gospel has not penetrated. The command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature," is now very urgently and properly pressed home to the hearts and consciences of believers.

Besides the great missionary and Bible societies, there is a supplemental means of furthering the great cause, and carrying the Gospel to every creature, which has not had due prominence given it, and which can be readily adopted by those who cannot go personally to the mission field; and that is, the preparation of simple Gospel tracts in different languages, and their distribution in large numbers.

The Religious Tract Society has issued tracts in over 200 languages. Drummond's Tract Depot has circulated over 15,000,000 of my foreign "Gospel Leaves" in various languages, and the Editor of The Christian Herald has distributed largely Arabic, French, and Italian Gospels. Allow me to place this before Christians who desire to have a hand in the good work. The only limit to the distribution of these Gospel messengers is want of funds.

PRESENT DAY METHODS.

Dear Sir,—Allow me, through your paper, to bring before Christian workers in these last days of Gospel testimony, the great importance of keeping on Apostolic lines in preaching the Gospel of Christ. In these days it is sad to see the mixture of worldly methods that are being used to render the services "attractive."

The doctrines of the Cross, in which the Apostle Paul gloried, have lost their charm. It is written, "Thou shalt not sow thy vineyard with divers seeds lest the fruit of thy vineyard be defiled." What a weighty principle is here. It is feared there is a terrible amount of mingled seed used; how much of the rudiments of the world do we find mixed up in many Gospel services to make them attractive. May the witnesses for Christ confine themselves to the ministry of sound words, and ever seek rightly to divide the word of truth, so that they may not be ashamed before Him at his coming, but receive a full reward when every man's work shall be tried of what sort it is, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire. In the little while between, may we seek to know nothing among men save Jesus Christ and Him crucified. I would close by pressing home the charge which the Apostle Paul gave to Timothy, "Preach the Word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, with all long-suffering and doctrine." M. S.

FOUNDATION TRUTH.

Sir,—I have read with great interest that which has lately appeared in The Christian lamenting the want of plain Gospel teaching in the present day. It has been the more interesting to me because my mind has been full of the same subject for some time past, which is also the case with several of my friends. God seems to be showing his people the need of fundamental truths—of bringing before the unconverted the truth of the finished work of Christ on the cross. Surely it is the preaching of substitution which is required to convert souls, that Jesus has died for their sins and that whosoever believe are alive from the dead. But, too often in our so-called evangelistic meetings we hear little of the work of Christ; the story is man's side in salvation. To yield the heart to Him, and looking unto Jesus, is true to Scripture and right teaching so far as it goes, but not the Gospel of the grace of God in its completeness.

It may be that the preachers think that their hearers already know the way of salvation; but should even one present be unconverted, it would not be waste of time to show such the way?

To address all as Christians might mislead a seeking soul as to the way to be saved, and cause such to think that salvation is to be obtained by holiness of life.

We must know of the work of Christ for us, ere we can know of his work in us. As you said in a recent editorial note: "How many, after having been professing Christians for ten years, know any more about the Bible than they did the first year after their conversion?" "Would ten out of a hundred be able to give an adequate account of the Atonement, or of any other Scripture doctrine?"—Believe me, yours obediently, (Miss) C. Russell Balfour.

A PROPOSAL WORTH CONSIDERING.

Sir,—It cannot be unknown to you that there are several institutions, carried on by sisterhoods, where destitute orphans and homeless girls from among the upper classes are taught, boarded, and clothed gratis, in order to instil into their young receptive hearts a love for Ritualism and Romish doctrines.

Should not similar institutions be founded by Protestants? A committee of ladies and gentlemen, who would be willing to support and endow such an institution would do a noble work! A lady who had this for some time on her heart, and has herself the necessary experience and capacity, would gladly undertake the management of such an institution. She would furnish a house ready for the reception of eighteen girls; but she has no other capital with which to work the plan.

Ladies may, however, be willing to come forward who have the capital as well as the desire to do such a work for Christ.—Believe me, Sir, yours truly,

YOUNG PEOPLE IN SWITZERLAND.—Another great holiday gathering of young men and women and their friends is being arranged by the editor of The Young Man and The Young Woman. It will be held at Grindelwald in August and September. Parties will leave London every Tuesday and Friday from June 29 to September 14, and a twelve days' Swiss holiday is offered for ten guineas, including second-class return ticket from London (first-class on boat), and full hotel accommodation. All tickets will be available to return any time within forty-five days. Further particulars can be obtained by sending a stamped addressed envelope to Mr. F. A. Atkins, 2, Amen Corner, London, E.C.

THE Y.M.C.A.

Some earnest men, feeling the need of young men around Austin, Texas, have started a Y.M.C.A, which it is hoped may prove useful to many.

Mr. R. McCann has paid an interesting visit to the Canadian Mission College, Indore, Central India, where a new Association has been formed.

Mr. George Williams presided over the annual meeting of the Hammersmith Association, and a special address was delivered by Archdeacon Sinclair.

The Y.M.C.A. at Buda-Pesth has invited the International Conference to meet there following the assembly in London in June. The Conferences are held, as a rule, once in three years.

Five hundred special sermons to young men have already been promised by clergy and ministers throughout the country for Sunday, June 3 next, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. Jubilee.

The Bible and Prayer Union recently started in connection with the Y.M.C.A., and having its headquarters at the Birmingham Association, has already fifteen branches, with nearly 1000 members.

The Cape Town Association Committee earnestly call the attention of young men in this country to the overcrowded condition of the labour market in South Africa, with the view of dissuading emigration on their part.

Newton Abbot Y.M.C.A. has purchased freehold premises in Wolborough-street, which will be immediately adapted to the work of the Association. The cost of the property, including alterations and additions, will be about £1000.

A profitable course of lectures on the Bible and the Higher Criticism was delivered last week at the Brighton Y.M.C.A. by Rev. John Urquhart. The large attendances and the attention shown evidenced the interest felt in these important subjects.

A successful series of meetings for young men have been held by the Dartmouth Y.M.C.A. The district secretary, Mr. Roberts, of Plymouth, delivered five addresses on unbelief, gambling, impurity, and intemperance. The attendance and results were very encouraging.

Exmouth Y.M.C.A., at its fourth annual meeting, reported that good work had been done during the past year. A new gymnasium had been opened and furnished; a mission tent was vigorously worked at Woodbury during the autumn camping of the volunteers; and the membership had increased.

Revs. Dr. Sinclair, Archdeacon of London, Henry J. Pope, President of the Wesleyan Conference, George Short, B.A., President Elect of the Baptist Union, and George S. Barrett, D.D., President of the Congregational Union, have become vice-presidents of the National Union of Young Men's Christian Associations.

The quarterly conference of the Liverpool and North Wales District Union was held at Warrington on Friday week. Mr. Robert Garnett, J.P., presided over the first session, and Mr. R. Wyllie over the second. A public meeting held in the evening was presided over by Mr. John Fairclough, J.P., and the speakers included the Archdeacon of Warrington and the Rev. Dr. Taylor, of Liverpool.

A very successful sub-district conference has been held at Morpeth. The rector of Morpeth was present, and expressed his deep interest in the work. The desire was expressed that in all the Associations there should be a move forward in this Jubilee year. The president, Mr. G. B. Bainbridge, is much interested in an endeavour to obtain better premises for the Morpeth Association. The Forest Hall friends are also initiating a similar movement.

An appeal in support of Y.M.C.A. work throughout France, signed by Pastor Bach, Pastor Appia, and other influential representatives of French Protestant work, has been forwarded to the English National Council. It states that, under God's blessing, the Associations have increased during the last three years from 63 to 106, and that it is the aim of the committee that France should possess an Association in each of her thousand Protestant churches.

Mr. B. D. Wise, M.Inst.C.E., delivered a lecture the other day to the employés of the Belfast and Northern Counties Railway, in the course of which he said he was much impressed by the work of the Y.M.C.A. in America. All through America the association was considered by the American merchant as one of the chief factors for the prosperity and well-being of the young men engaged in the mercantile houses, and the American merchant had discovered—what might well be learned by the merchant of Great Britain—that it paid to support the Y.M.C.A.

EDUCATION DOES NOT IMPART FACULTIES—these are born in the child. It is simply the guidance of growth.—Sir J. Crichton Browne.

AT THE CLOSE OF AN EMINENT LIFE, Ashbel Green said: "If I had my ministry to go over again, I would give more attention to the children."

THE Y.W.C.A.

At the Dundee Y.W.C.A. special services and Bible readings were given last week by Miss Laura Barter.

The Bible to be presented to H.R.H. the Duchess of York, by members of the Young Women's Christian Association, and other women of the United Kingdom, will be on view at the Central Institute, 316, Regent-street, W., for a fortnight to Saturday, March 3.

The report of the Torquay branch rejoices in the blessing granted in the work, and dwells on the changes of the past twenty-six years since the branch started. The Sunday Bible-class has eighty in attendance, the Tuesday class is smaller, but both have been fruitful. The branch numbers 376 members (including juniors). The Employment Agency and Home has continued its good work.

Miss Barter writes on behalf of the Y.W.C.A. at Sutton, Surrey, urging the need of help. Owing to influenza and other matters, the Institute was closed last autumn, though the meetings have been continued in the secretary's house. Efforts are being made to secure a most suitable house now available, but £30 are required to clear off the debt and cover expenses of removal. Address, Miss L. A. Barter, Benhilton, Sutton, Surrey.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Dr. Hugh Macmillan, Greenock, and Mrs. Macmillan have left for Egypt, Palestine, and Syria, where they will tour for three months.

The Misses Finnie, of Kilmarnock, well known in Ayrshire for their benevolent deeds, have laid the inhabitants of the parish of Dreghorn under deep obligation by the erection of a working-man's institute, with gymnasium, etc.

Principal Hutton, of Paisley, had a narrow escape during the recent storm, as the chimney head of the U.P. Church Manse was blown down, and several of the large stones crashed through the roof into the bedroom, where he was sleeping.

The proposal of the magistrates of Glasgow to form an area in the centre of the city within which public-houses would be closed at nine o'clock will meet, it is said, with determined opposition at the hands of the wine, spirit, and beer trade.

Remarkable success is attending the Sabbath evening evangelistic meetings, held in the Albion Hall, Stockbridge, Edinburgh, under the auspices of the Fellowship Union. The audiences number about 700, the majority being young fellows who are not in the habit of going either to churches or mission halls.

At a meeting in Dundee on behalf of the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, Col. Wroughton said that if the society had done nothing more than secure the illegality of the drink traffic in the North Sea, it would have justified its existence. Of the ten vessels belonging to the mission, four are thoroughly equipped hospital ships.

Rev. John Robertson, of the Gorbals Tabernacle, Glasgow, has withdrawn from the Free Church. The reason he gives for this unexpected step is that rationalistic views are prevalent in the church, and especially in the colleges, regarding the Word of God. Mr. Robertson was baptized at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, London, on Monday evening. He purposes beginning evangelistic work in the City Hall, Glasgow.

There has recently been built at a cost of between £3000 and £4000, a beautiful Soldiers' Home at Maryhill, Glasgow, and it is desired to find one or two ladies having sufficient means to enable them to dispense with a salary who would reside at the Home and devote themselves to work among the troops in the adjoining barracks. Mr. R. B. Stewart, 97, West Regent-street, Glasgow, would be glad to hear from any such.

At the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Edinburgh Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, Chief-Constable Henderson (deputy chairman of the Association) gave a summary of the report. The seven departments into which the work of the Association is divided are the firewood factory, the utilisation of waste paper, the sewing room, the clothing of destitute children, the collection of newspapers for the hospitals, the registration of charities, and the social scheme. For business purposes it has been resolved by the directors that the Association shall be known as "The Help."

Miss C. F. Gordon Cumming addressed a meeting in Queen's Rooms, Glasgow, last week, on the work in China of Mr. William Murray. Dr. Elder Cumming presided. The son of a Glasgow sawmiller, Mr. Murray was appointed in 1864 a colporteur by the National Bible Society of Scotland, and in 1874 was sent to North China, but afterwards removed to Pekin, where he has since carried on work. Some years ago he invented a simple system of type printing for enabling the blind to read. Subsequently the system was adapted to the use of the sighted with marvellous success. This system, Miss Gordon believed, would do for China—which has hitherto resisted the introduction of movable type—what the printing press has done for the Western world.

IRISH NOTES.

On Sunday week sermons on the subject of temperance were preached in about 1000 churches throughout Ireland.

By the will of the late Mr. Gervase Taylor the Dublin hospitals and some other charities receive a sum of over £20,000.

According to custom, the Irish branch of the Evangelical Alliance will observe Saturday, March 17 (St. Patrick's Day), as a day of special and united prayer for Ireland.

At a united meeting of ministers of the Episcopal, Presbyterian, and Methodist Churches, held last week in Belfast, it was resolved to hold a united convention for the deepening of spiritual life in Belfast in the autumn.

Evangelistic services have just been held in Brighton Road Church, Dublin, by Rev. J. D. Lamont, Methodist minister; and by Mr. W. J. Loney, of the Irish Evangelisation Society, in Belturbet Methodist Church.

Mr. Sinclair Stevenson, son of the late Rev. Dr. Fleming Stevenson, of Rathgar, Dublin (so well known for his love of missions), has been accepted by the Presbyterian Board of Missions as a missionary for India; Rev. John Keers, of Tralee, is being sent by the same Board as a missionary to China; and Mr. George Forde, of Belfast, is being sent by the Methodist Missionary Society, after spending two years at Richmond College, as a missionary to the Transvaal.

"WILLING HANDS SOCIETY."

This Society was started in 1886, to help missions in China, by enlisting those who, perhaps, are unable to go abroad themselves yet long to help in some way to spread the Gospel among the heathen. Members contribute two (or more) articles of work or painting a year, and give a subscription of 1s. Associates give what they can. The proceeds of the sales of work are divided between the Church Missionary Society and the China Inland Mission.

Further particulars can be had from the secretaries, Mrs. S. Mayne Wade, 3, Maze Hill-terrace, St. Leonards-on-Sea; or Miss Polhill-Turner, 3, Palmeria-square, Brighton, who would be glad to receive the names of those willing to help in this little effort to further the Kingdom of Christ. If any ladies would kindly offer their drawing-rooms for sales, the secretaries would forward boxes of work and defray all expenses.

ROMANISM IN CANADA has lost an influential adherent through the conversion of Mr. L. J. Papineau, who was recently received into the Protestant Church. In a letter Father Chiniquy speaks of this as a great conquest of the grace of God. The detailed notices in the daily Press of Montreal show that the event is regarded as of peculiar significance. Mr. Papineau made a public abjuration of Rome in St. John's French Presbyterian Church, in presence of a large congregation, fully half of whom were Romanists. Addresses suited to the occasion were delivered by Father Chiniquy, Dr. MacVicar, and others, who counselled the convert not to fear what man might do unto him. Slander and persecution have followed hard on Mr. Papineau's act, for a Roman Catholic paper forthwith abused him in unmeasured terms, specially deploring that he should have become "the prey of Chiniquy."

A SECRET FOR PASTORS.—Get somebody interested in somebody else. Don't try to do all the work yourself. It is better to be director-general for the church than to be worker-general! Get somebody to advise, or tenderly warn, somebody else, or visit them in sorrow, or get them out to prayer meeting, or Bible class, or preaching; even if they should need help themselves in these matters! Get them all into partnership with you, in your work. Most people like to have just a little—not too much—business and responsibility; and the feeling of helping the pastor, and being partner with him in his good work, is inspiring. They will wonder what made him call on them, and perhaps never find out that he concluded it was the only way he knew to benefit themselves!—Canadian Independent. [This is no "secret for pastors." The gift of pastor and other gifts are for the express purpose of "perfecting the saints unto the work of ministering unto the building up of the body of Christ" (Eph. iv.).—Ed. Christian.]

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

[From our own Correspondents.]

OXFORD.

Dr. Waller, of Highbury, preached the annual University sermon, on Sunday, on Messianic Prophecy. It is a pleasure to have such men in the University pulpit from time to time.

The address at the University Missionary Union meeting last week was given by Rev. W. W. Cox, of the Moravian Society, and proved to be of exceptional interest as an account of these pioneers in missionary work.

Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe is always a great favourite in Oxford, and his visit last Monday and Tuesday proved no exception to the rule. It is confidently believed that much blessing will accrue from his earnest powerful testimony.

Canon Knox-Little is preaching, as usual, during Lent at St. Barnabas' Church, and is drawing large crowds. There is, thus far, nothing pronouncedly Roman in his teaching, but it betrays a woful lack of definiteness as to the secret of power for holy living.

The first Bampton lecture was delivered last Sunday by Rev. J. R. Illingworth, his subject being the personality of God, deduced from the personality of man in the light of modern philosophical thought. The lectures will, of course, not be popular in their spoken form, but should prove permanently valuable when published.

A very noteworthy expression of Christian unity was manifested by the Nonconformist churches of Oxford last Sunday evening, in an interchange of pulpits throughout the city, and an united Communion service at the close. When, oh when, will the next obvious step be taken of a still wider application of the same interchange among the Oxford churches?

Work in connection with the Student Volunteer Missionary Union is by no means standing still in Oxford. It is a subject of constant prayer at the "D. P. M.," and meetings are held periodically with reference to it. Last week a special effort was made in the ladies' colleges by means of a visit from the secretary and another worker, and there was distinct promise of blessing.

The annual meeting of the Y.M.C.A. was held last Friday, and the large room of the Schools was crowded. The Rector of Exeter made a most sympathetic chairman, while Dr. Monro Gibson, and Rev. T. J. Madden, of Liverpool, delivered admirable and powerful addresses. The tone of the meeting was high and spiritual, and the report speaks of a year of undoubted progress.

CAMBRIDGE.

The University sermon was preached in Great St. Mary's on Sunday afternoon by Archdeacon Cornish, of Truro.

Professor Gwatkin is preaching a course of Lenten sermons at St. Michael's; Professor Ryle preached one of a similar course on Sunday morning at St. Benedict's.

The Henry Martyn Hall was overflowingly crowded on Monday evening to hear Bishop Tucker give an account of missionary progress in Uganda. His words were very impressive, and were listened to with the closest attention.

Dr. Anderson gave the usual weekly address at the Sunday evening meeting of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union. After warning his hearers against a too hasty acceptance of the positions of advanced "critics," he enforced the fact that change of heart is something more than theory or fancy; it is undoubted reality.

At his Sunday morning Bible-reading, Principal Moule took for his subject, "Annihilation." Such theories he declared to be "transported" into the Biblical teaching, and that there is no warrant therein for them. We gratefully record an improvement in Principal Moule's health, which during the past week showed some lowering of tone.

The various Inter-Collegiate Missionary Bands are doing real, if unobtrusive, work in Cambridge, by constantly keeping missionary information in circulation and maintaining the keenness of their members at glowing-point. Not the least enthusiastic of these bands is the Mchwas. Mr. F. C. Smith, of Corpus Christi College, and late missionary in Uganda, favoured them last Friday night with a deeply interesting account of the work there.

Canon Barnett and Mr. Cyril Jackson (London School Board) graphically expatiated on the needs of East London for such University Settlements as Toynbee Hall, on Sunday evening in Peterhouse College. Earnest-minded men, who believe that "the soul of all improvement is the improvement of the soul," combined in wishing that its advocates would give greater prominence to those truths which alone can meet the deepest needs of the masses.

Mrs. S. S. Lewis gave a highly interesting lecture at the Y.W.C.A. on Friday evening, Professor MacAlister presiding. The subject was, "Through the Desert to the Library of Sinai." A graphic account was given of the lecturer's journey to the Sinaitic convent, and of the researches of the party there, of which she was a member. She bore witness to the unspeakable loss Cambridge palæographers have sustained in the death of the late Professor Bensly.

Rev. R. H. Kennet, Hebrew Lecturer, preached a remarkable sermon in Queen's College Chapel on Sunday morning, on 1 Sam. iii. 36, "Put me I pray thee into one of the priests' offices that I may eat a piece of bread." Sermons faithfully dealing with the motives animating men who take Holy Orders, and revealing the high ideal of the ministerial life, are painfully rare in college chapels. Very eloquently and unflinchingly did Mr. Kennet denounce the conduct of men who enter the ministerial ranks to gain a "genteel livelihood," or "a passport to good society," and of those who, living now in carelessness and sin, think the future demands of their solemn position will be satisfied by a quickly-acquired church-tone of voice, the correct genuflexions, and a mere perfunctory performance of certain ritual observances. No slight impression was made by this sermon.

OBITUARY.

MISS E. G. WILSON.

We regret to learn of the departure of Miss Emily Gertrude Wilson, sister of Mrs. Hind Smith and Mr. H. J. Wilson, M.P. She had previously been in a very weak state of health. We hope to give further particulars next week.

MRS. MARTIN HOPE-SUTTON.

We deeply regret to hear of the breavement which has fallen on Mr. Martin Hope Sutton, of Cintra Lodge, Reading, in the loss of his dear wife. Mrs. Sutton, who passed away last week, in her 73rd year, was greatly beloved and respected for her work's sake, having been a humble follower of Jesus, a true friend of the poor, and a helper of the helpless.

MR. W. H. FRY.

This faithful follower of Christ was called home on Tuesday week, 13th inst, after a very short illness. A quiet earnest worker, he was little known outside his immediate circle, but by those who knew him he was greatly beloved and respected. His son, Mr. H. W. Fry, is at present abroad on a tour, partly commercial and partly for the visitation of missionary stations in various parts of the world. The funeral took place on Saturday at Wood Grange Cemetery, Romford, when many friends were present, representing various schools and churches he had helped.

MR. ROBERT UNIACKE ANDERSON.

Not quite four weeks ago the eldest son of General Anderson, of Plumstead and Eastbourne, fell asleep in Jesus at Dehra, in the beautiful Dehra Doon, in North-Western India. He never coveted applause, and he is now beyond it; but it may encourage those who knew him, as well as others, to redeem the time, and labour as unostentatiously for God's glory and the good of our fellow-men, both at home and abroad. "The Master is come, and calleth for thee," it may be said, was the summons to this young man, in the prime of manhood, to leave his young wife and two little boys to come up higher; but not before God had used him in his Church on earth; also in the European community, among both soldiers and civilians, and also among the poor native labourers on the Dehra Doon tea plantation.

DR. DOUGLAS, MONTREAL.

Many will share the sorrow which we experience in announcing the death of Rev. Dr. Douglas, Principal of the Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal. He not only enjoyed the reputation of being the most eloquent Methodist divine in the Dominion, but, owing to his remarkable history, held a peculiar place in the popular regard. A native of Scotland, he was taken to Canada when very young, and apprenticed to a blacksmith at Montreal. He gave his spare time to study, and his position in life improved. After his conversion he joined the Methodist Church, and in various spheres did valuable ministerial work, especially in Canada. At length he became principal of the Theological College at Montreal. The disadvantages of his early days made him a hard student throughout life, and as the result of this perseverance he came to be recognised as an authority on literature, philosophy, the natural sciences, and metaphysics. In 1867 M'Gill University conferred on him the degree of LL.D.

Miss Frances E. Willard, writing to the Methodist Times, says: "He was of an ardent poetic nature, and utterly fearless in the expression of his opinions. He had the orator's gift and equipment, a fine physique, persuasive voice, action at once graceful and dignified. Some years ago Dr. Douglas had visited one of the West India islands, and while there had come in contact with what we call poisonous ivy, which greatly injured his health, and eventually brought upon him the calamity of blindness. He did not suffer this visitation to put a period to his public activities; aided by his loyal and accomplished daughters he wrote articles and speeches almost as before, and whenever he appeared in public, which was frequently, and always upon great occasions when the hosts of light were gathered, the pathos of his countenance and manner seemed only to add to his power with the people. His last years were his best and greatest, for the momentum of his long life of devoted endeavour carried him into the knowledge and affection of all who loved the right.

> For the cause that lacks assistance,
> For the wrong that needs resistance,
> For the future in the distance,
> And the good that we can do,

Dr. Douglas wrought with a giant's strength throughout his long and happy—let us rather say his blessed—life. In him the temperance work, the women's cause, the cause of social purity and of practical Christianity has lost one of its most devoted and efficient advocates."

REV. C. T. JEX-BLAKE.

This devoted minister fell asleep at Lyng Rectory on February 9, murmuring, "I have fought . . ." "For ever with . . ." The poor failing brain would supply no more. In him there passed away a holy, humble man of heart, who for fifty years, ever since his conversion, had served his Saviour with a singular faithfulness and devotedness, alike to Jesus whom he loved and simply preached, and the Church, of whose Protestant and Evangelical principles he was an uncompromising defender. He was for a short time a Church Association Secretary, then a laborious minister in one of the poorest parishes in Norwich; then Vicar of Gayton. Afterwards as rector of the quiet country parish of Lyng, he was a living witness for Christ among his people. He was as Protestant and Evangelical as the Prayer-book, whose truths he unswervingly maintained. And those who saw him in the home and in the parish could only see in him a constant example of "to me to live is Christ." Those who knew him in his more retired life, knew how he steeped all his work in prayer, and pleaded for his people with the more urgency, putting them before God by name, just because he felt his own pleading with them was but too feeble. Universally beloved, respected, and regretted, he was laid to rest in Lyng churchyard till "all that are Christ's" shall rise "at his coming."

LORD ROBERTS ON TEMPERANCE.

In an address on Monday evening at Chelsea Barracks Lord Roberts paid a warm tribute to the successful temperance labours of Rev. J. G. Gregson among soldiers in India. His lordship described the work of the Army Temperance Association founded by himself in India, and which embraces moderate drinkers as well as abstainers. There are now over 20,000 abstainers and 3000 "temperance" men in the Indian army.

The association has spread into the home regiments, and a branch was formed at Chelsea among the Guards on Monday evening.

J. G. L.

MISS MITTENDORFF'S HOME for destitute and deserted children, at Epsom, has between sixty and seventy inmates, all girls, who are suitably educated, taught to do housework, and instructed in Scripture truth. The report for last year says: "Many kindnesses have been shown to us, the Congregational Church inviting the children to their Sunday-school treats, also remembering us in many other ways. During the year eight girls left the Home, the Lord graciously opening a way for each one in providing situations. Six fresh children were received. The first was not strictly an orphan, but destitute and homeless. Another, one of three children of a widow, the mother being in service, had no home and no relatives willing to keep this one. We close the year with a very small balance, and desire still to go on, not going into debt, but waiting on Him who hath said, 'I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee.'" Communications regarding the work should be addressed to the lady superintendent, Miss Macgrath, Clayton House, Epsom, Surrey.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Bishop Tucker had last week most enthusiastic meetings in Liverpool.

A converted Jew was baptized on Sunday week at St. Stephen's, Coleman-street, E.C.

It is stated that Canon Wilberforce has been offered the vacant canonry of Westminster.

The Bishop of Ripon preached on Sunday week to over a thousand men in one of the Bradford churches.

Rev. H. Evington, the Bishop-designate for Kiu-Shiu, has arrived in England, and addressed the committee of the C.M.S. last week.

Rev. H. Tugwell, the Bishop-designate of the Niger, is expected to reach Liverpool this morning. He is on his way home from West Africa.

Rev. J. Stephen Barrass has resigned his secretaryship of the Church of England Young Men's Society; Mr. Rhodes, the lay secretary, is also retiring.

We hear that the well-known Canon McCormick, of Hull, has accepted the charge of St. Augustine's, Highbury, vacant through the death of Prebendary Gordon Calthrop.

Rev. H. T. E. Barlow, eldest son of the vicar of Islington, has been nominated to the second assistant bishopric of Japan. It is still uncertain whether his health will allow him to accept or not.

St. Mary-at-Hill Church, near the Monument, is to be made the centre for evangelistic work every Sunday evening. Rev. W. Carlile, rector of the parish, will be aided by various evangelists of the Church Army.

At St. Catherine's, Edge-hill, Liverpool, a ten days' mission has been conducted by Rev. Robert Railton. Earnest preparation was made by the distribution of tracts throughout the parish, and by much prayer.

Much sympathy has been felt with the Dean of Canterbury in his recent bereavement. Mrs. Payne-Smith was active to the last in every good work. It is reassuring to know that the Dean is again well enough to preach in his turn at the Cathedral.

It is to be noted that among the natives ordained recently to the ministry at Amritsar is Rev. John Williams, a direct descendant of a convert baptized by Xavier in the sixteenth century. Mr. Williams has already done valuable work among the frontier tribes at Tank.

Rev. David Mohun, for thirty-three years minister of the C.M.S. Mission Church, Muirabad (Allahabad), died of paralysis on December 26, aged seventy-four. Probably no Hindustani clergyman, The Indian Churchman says, has done more valuable and faithful work in his day than Mr. Mohun. He was well known and much respected both by Europeans and natives in the N.W.P.

A correspondent writes to The Record:—"As showing the attractive power which the earnest and faithful preaching of the Gospel never fails to exercise, and the appreciation by the people of simple worship conducted on Evangelical lines, it may be noted that the services at Christ Church, North Brixton, are crowded. The service in the evening is followed by a well-attended meeting in the Parochial Hall for praise, prayer, and conversation, and for further exposition touching 'the old, old story,' always old yet ever new."

Last week an important meeting was held at Islington Vicarage on Tuesday in connection with the Oxford Pastorate Fund. Rev. F. J. Chavasse and the Rev. the Hon. W. T. Rice gave an account of the actual work being done in Oxford, and expressed their views upon the promotion of local centres of effort, such as have already been inaugurated with success at Nottingham, Derby, and Worcester. Rev. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence announced that a sum of £4000 had been received or promised in support of the pastorate.

CONGREGATIONAL.

A new church has been opened in the Rochdale-road, Shaw, Lancashire.

Rev. W. R. Le Quesne, who has done good work at Calcutta, has been invalided home.

The new mission house erected by the church at Bishopsgate Chapel is to be opened to-day.

Rev. A. D. Martin, son of Rev. G. Martin, of Lewisham, has entered on the pastorate at Avenue Church, Southampton.

It is stated that the attendance at the Sunday morning adult class, Tabernacle Chapel, Sheffield, has nearly doubled during the last year.

Speaking at a recent meeting in the Murphy Memorial Hall, S.E., Rev. A. Mearns maintained that South London is more spiritually destitute than any other district of London.

Rev. F. Varnon has preached his farewell sermon at Market Weighton, where he ministered for seven years. He is about to enter on the pastorate of Girlington Church, Bradford, a new cause in one of the most rapidly growing parts of the town.

The church at Humberstone-road, Leicester, has had fifty-six members added during the year. In the Sunday-school are over 900 scholars. The Ladies' Sewing Society, Band of Hope, and Tract Society, are most prosperous, each doing good work.

Referring to changes about to be introduced by the amalgamation of the Church Aid Society with the Congregational Union, The Times remarks that "a crisis of very considerable gravity has arisen in the Congregational denomination relative to its home missionary work."

After surmounting many serious difficulties, the church, at Tottenham Court-road feels hopeful that with the settlement of Mr. Suttle, the new pastor, the work is about to enter on a fresh phase of prosperity. This view of the future was strongly urged by Dr. Parker at the recent recognition meeting.

During the present winter Rev. Andrew Mearns has conducted a series of services, with the aid of the magic lantern, at the Lambeth Baths. The interest has increased week by week, and large audiences have been drawn together. "Anyone acquainted with the neighbourhood," writes a correspondent, "can easily see that the congregations are composed mainly of those who otherwise would take no interest in religious worship."

The London Missionary Society have accepted offers of service from Mr. T. Biggin, B.A., who is now entering upon a medical course with the intention of becoming a medical missionary, and from Miss M. A. Prior. Mr. Bach, student at New College, and Mr. A. Young, student at Cheshunt College, have been appointed respectively to Trevandrum and Calcutta; Miss Spence and Miss Webster to Calcutta; and Rev. A. W. Brough, of West Maitland, New South Wales, to Coimbatore.

Dr. Kennedy, in his second Merchants' Lecture on the Book of Jonah, delivered at the Memorial Hall, said if a right idea was taken of the book, as not a biography of Jonah, but as a simple account of his mission to Nineveh, many questions which are now supposed to involve difficulties would be swept away. The book is in harmony with all that is known both of Israel and Nineveh at the time. If it had been written at the post-exilic period supposed by many critics, 100, 200, or 300 years after Nineveh had ceased to be, it must have betrayed some signs of the age of its origin.

Calls.—Rev. C. S. Larkman, of Hampton, to King-street, Northampton.

Resignations.—Rev. A. L. Greig, of Paddock Church, Huddersfield; Rev. T. Parker, of Smallbridge, Rochdale; Rev. E. Thomas, of Bagilt; Rev. J. D. Kilburn, of Hamburg.

BAPTIST.

A new chapel has been opened at New Brighton, near Liverpool.

A lady, who desires to remain unknown, has given £1000 to Tiverton Church.

The Northcote-road Church, Wandsworth, had an increase of 135 in its membership during the past year.

Stirring thanksgiving services have been held at Bow Chapel in connection with the extinction of the debt.

Last week a crowded and enthusiastic meeting was held in the Metropolitan Tabernacle on behalf of the Stockwell Orphanage.

Rev. W. James has entered formally on the pastorate at Cotton-street, Poplar. Already his labours there have been much blessed.

Rev. W. E. Blomfield, of Ipswich, has been holding special services in Woodborough-road Chapel, Nottingham, where a new church is about to be erected.

The church at East Hill, Wandsworth, under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. Ewing, is doing a good work, as is shown by the manual, just issued. The present membership is 469, a clear increase of forty-nine during the past year.

A six days' mission for children and young people has been held at Highbury-hill Chapel, conducted by Mr. George Goodman. A large number of workers met to seek for divine blessing on the services, and the meetings throughout the week following were well attended and successful.

At the recent annual meeting of the Graham-street Church, Birmingham, very encouraging reports were given of the spiritual condition of the church and its various organisations. Numerically, this church stands at the head of the West Midland Association returns, and, besides its many-sided works at home, it has seven mission chapels and out stations.

Houghton-street Church, Southport, reports thirty admitted to fellowship during the year, making 400 received during the past ten years; the income for all purposes was £1750. Among the speakers at the annual meeting was Rev. R. Stephenson, vicar of St. James's, Birkdale, who expressed a desire to promote a spirit of brotherly love all round, and in all Christian churches.

The fifth anniversary services of Raleigh Park Chapel were held on Sunday week, when sermons were preached by Rev. J. Harrison. At the public meeting Mr. Millar took the chair, the speakers being Revs. C. Ingram, J. Field, A. Dickerson, and Prof. A. McCaig, B.A., LL.B. The reports were encouraging, and the singing of the boys from the Stockwell Orphanage was much appreciated.

Calls.—Rev. F. T. Smith, to Truro, Cornwall; Rev. W. L. Mackenzie, of Thanet, to Shooter's Hill, S.E.; Rev. E. B. Woods, of Stalham, to Chorlton-upon-Medlock; Rev. H. C. Sadler, to Raunds.

Resignations.—Rev. H. Briggs, of Roomfield, Todmorden; Rev. E. J. Page, of Bideford.

METHODIST.

New mission chapels have been opened at Foult Moor and Woodhouses, Manchester.

The Poolberg-street Shelter for Men, Dublin, carried on by the Wesleyans, has its 100 beds occupied every night, while many have to be turned away.

Great preparations are being made by the Primitive Methodists for their Centenary Celebration in 1896. A Thanksgiving Fund of £60,000 is proposed to be raised.

Rev. James Travis is about to visit Madrid in connection with the negotiations which have been going on for many months between the Foreign Office and the Spanish Cabinet respecting the mission at Fernando Po.

Dr. Rigg has prepared and issued a pamphlet explaining and defending his proposals for "separated chairmen," a scheme which by many has been regarded as the introduction of bishops into the Wesleyan body.

A three weeks' mission held at Wadebridge, Cornwall, by Mr. W. T. Harris, has produced very gratifying results. The Bible Christian Church has been quickened, and has received a considerable accession to its numbers.

A letter from Rev. W. G. Howe, who, with his wife, recently returned to East Africa, states that they are both in good health. Mr. Howe has had one attack of fever, and Mrs. Howe had, up to the date of the letter, altogether escaped this scourge of the climate.

An account has been received of the return journey of Mrs. Bell, wife of the missionary who remains at his lonely post at Banni, West Africa. Almost at the start of the wife and child for England, the child sickened and died. The stricken mother succeeded in getting her little one buried at Old Calabar. During the voyage Mrs. Bell has improved in health.

The new Primitive Methodist Mission in the Rio del Bey country on the mainland of West Africa is to be named the "Aqua Mission." The mission house is finished, the natives having contributed both the material and the labour to the value of at least £80. Mr. Knox, the evangelist, has undertaken to teach them different handicrafts, as well as on religious matters. The missionaries have for some time conducted services in the idol house.

The annual Convention in connection with work among soldiers and sailors took place on Monday week at City-road. Rev. H. J. Pope presided at both services, and in the afternoon delivered an address. At night, Rev. R. W. Allen stated that £30,000 had been spent by the Wesleyan Church to provide places of worship, etc., for members of the army and navy. The chaplains of all the Wesleyan stations in England were present at the Convention. Testimonies of a minute each were given by the men, and sometimes over twenty were on their feet at once.

The Primitive Methodist Missionary Society states that the long delay, the great privations, and the positive danger to life endured by the Zambesi Mission party are becoming intelligible at last. What has been charged to the subtle craftiness of the King of the Barotse is shown to be only a reasonable indignation against white men aroused in the soul of Lewanika by the gross deception practised on him by a company agent. The African King felt the white men had fooled him. He was indignant; he did not make wise distinctions between English white missionaries and English white traders. Hence the delays, the dangers, the sufferings which the Zambesi Mission party have had to endure.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Marylebone Church reports that under Dr. Pentecost's ministry more than a hundred new members were added last year.

A great revival has broken out in Aberavon district, Glamorganshire. Already, it is stated, over 400 have been added to the churches.

At Camden-road ninety-two new members were added last year. The mission at Leighton-road is reported as vigorous and successful.

Rev. W. S. Jones, of Machynlleth, intends remaining in Cairo for another two months, after which he will visit Palestine, returning to Wales in May.

Principal Prys, of Trevecca College, who has been laid up for some time, has resumed his college duties, but his doctor forbids him to preach for months to come.

At last week's meeting of the Presbytery, Rev. James Paterson, of Belgrave Church, intimated his acceptance of the call to the White Memorial Church, Glasgow.

The Welsh Church at Penmaenmawr has decided to commence a Sunday-school and other mission-services in a part of the town which has hitherto been neglected by all the churches.

The London Presbytery, North, has been seriously debating the deplorable spread of Ritualism and Sacerdotalism in the Established Church of England. The question was finally adjourned to next meeting.

Dr. Monro Gibson's church at St. John's Wood reports a year of increased prosperity. The entire income amounted to £6208. An increase in the weekly offerings enabled the session to make a special grant of £160 to Principal Dykes's fund for aiding the poorer congregations, especially in East London. The present membership is 879. The missions at Kilburn and Portland-town continue to flourish.

It is announced that at the next meeting of the Manchester Presbytery, Rev. J. H. Scott will move the following overture:—"Whereas Ritualistic teaching and practice are seriously increasing in the Church of England, to the imperilling of the principles of the Reformation; whereas every section of the community has an interest and responsibility in connection with the teaching and practice of the National Church; whereas the Nonconformists of the country have borne signal testimony with reference to such teaching and practice; whereas the Presbyterian Church has borne special testimony in this regard; the Synod is overtured to take the matter into consideration and act as in its wisdom it may deem best."

Calls.—Rev. J. M. Porteous, of Newmains, to Mid-Calder Rev. W. Jack to East Kilbride; Rev. A. Aitken, of Cambuslang, to Barclay Church, Edinburgh (as assistant); Rev. W. S. Swanson, of Lochmaben, to Melville Church, Aberdeen.

Resignations.—Rev. A. W. MacDougall, of Whitehaven (on account of ill-health); Rev. J. A. Smith, of Cork.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Successful missions have lately been held at Maidstone and Bridport, and in both the power of the Lord was felt in a remarkable manner. Several souls are believed to have found rest and started on a new life.

England has lost several noble and devoted workers lately, and, in the removal of Caroline E. Talbot, of Ohio, America has suffered too. The call is loud for more consecrated workers on both sides the Atlantic.

George Wood, who about a year ago retired from the Home Missionary service in England, has recently engaged at New Garden, North Carolina, in very acceptable Gospel work. He vividly pourtrayed the truth of his text—God is love—and many rejoiced anew in that love.

The Christian Worker gives a rather comprehensive and very appreciative sketch of Isaac Sharp's life and work. The same paper reports the departure of Wm. and Susan J. Thompson for Palestine, with Timothy and Anna Hussey as their coadjutors, all representing New England yearly meeting. They are likely to visit London yearly meeting subsequently.

At the recent Yorkshire quarterly meeting the "Reawakening of the Society of Friends" was ably discussed, and an extremely telling and interesting paper read by John Wilhelm Rowntree. The Friends' Quarterly Examiner, just issued, also indicates a growing earnestness on this vital theme, and the conviction is stealing over Friends' minds and hearts that the world is ripening for their democratic and non-priestly views on a large scale. Much more effort is felt to be needed.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Four Chinamen have been accepted as S.A. cadets in Calcutta.

There are seven hundred S.A. soldiers in the Arctic Division.

There are more than 200,000 soldiers and 10,237 local officers in the Salvation Army.

Miss Eva Booth, who has been laid aside through overwork, returned to her duties last week.

Saratoga (U.S.A.) Barracks has been burned out; the captain is holding her meetings in the court-room where she was recently tried after waiting seven days in jail.

The authorities of Finland will not have active members of the Salvation Army in their midst. It has been declared illegal by them for the Salvationists to wear their uniform or make money collections.

The twenty-seventh annual balance-sheet and financial statement of the accounts of the moneys received and dealt with at headquarters were issued on the 10th inst. for the year 1893, under the title of "A Year of Grace."

The Rescue Department at Portsmouth is doing good work in its efforts to check the immorality which pervades the streets of that town; the results are so satisfactory that it is expected Mrs. Bramwell Booth will ere long extend her operations to other garrison stations.

(For FALLEN ASLEEP, see page 28.)

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For Don Alexander Lopez, of the Figueras Mission, suffering imprisonment for preaching the Gospel in Spain, and that March 5, the day of his trial, may be marked by Divine intervention for his release.—For a special mission now taking place at Basse Indre, to a colony of Welsh tinworkers, by Pasteur Fargues, of Nantes, in conjunction with Miss Temple and Miss Doury, of Paris.—For blessing on a seven days' mission at the New Hall, Hendon, by Mr. G. Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society.—For blessing on a coming mission at Bath by Mr. M. Burnett. PRAISE.—For souls converted and blessed at a mission in Newcastle.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to individual members. Communications for The Christian should be addressed to the Editor, 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C. Letters of a personal nature should in every case be so marked.

All Advertisements for The Christian should be sent to Messrs. John Haddon and Co., Central Advertising Offices, Bouverie House, Salisbury-square, London, E.C., accompanied by remittance. (For Terms, see Page 1 of cover.)

Warning to Advertisers.—The greatest care should be taken in writing the address at the end of Advertisements. We also beg to call the special attention of Advertisers to the following Notice which appears in The Postal Guide:—"Letters addressed to initials or to fictitious names at any Post Office are not taken in, but are at once sent back to the writers."

Letters Addressed to the Office.—Advertisers who require their letters to be addressed to the office of this Journal will be charged an additional Sixpence for each Advertisement, and another Sixpence extra if letters are to be forwarded to their private address.

Notes and Comments.

We purpose next week to give a portrait and sketch of the late Dr. C. F. Deems, of the Church of the Strangers, New York.

Many will welcome, as we do, with sincere cordiality a new edition, revised and enlarged, of the well-known "Annotated Paragraph Bible." The paragraphing has been effected with rare intelligence and much care, and the introductions, notes, maps, tables, and other features make this a very valuable book, of which we hope next week to give further particulars. (£1 8s. upwards. Religious Tract Society.)

A German pastor sends this reply to "Letter to a Friend," in The Christian of March 8, 1894:—"Every age requires its peculiar Christian Watchword, and, as far as I see, the Scriptural truth which we most stand in need of is this: Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, has, as the Lamb of God, become, through his holy life, his sufferings, death and resurrection, and his ascension into the heavenly places, a complete Saviour, ever present in his Word, for all who are willing to die and rise again with Him; who serve Him; and are waiting for his coming." With our German brother we, as well as the writer of the letter referred to, cordially agree.

"Ye lacked opportunity." So said Paul when, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, he wrote his gracious letter to the Philippians. God counts up what we would do if we had the opportunity, as well as what we do. "It was in thine heart," He said to the disappointed David, who might not build the Temple. He knows all the beautiful temples within that never take shape without. He is satisfied with the heart. How much good would the widow with two mites have done had she possessed a fortune! He knows.

Under the heading "A Call to Prayer," The British Messenger says:—

The evils that abound—indifference to Divine things—neglect of holy ordinances—Sabbath desecration—intemperance—worldliness—and the tendencies that prevail towards ritualism and mere routine in so many of our churches—manifestly call upon all who are the Lord's remembrancers to pray for a revival of vital religion throughout the land.

We cordially endorse the plea. Surely there is need for such united prayer at this time. Why should not daily meetings for prayer be held in all our towns? A little personal effort on the part of one or two Christians in each place would soon bring this about. Many must be longing for a gracious revival such as in the days gone by. Let us agree to ask, and we will surely receive. This is the jubilee of the Y.M.C.A. Would it not be a worthy object for each branch in various towns to seek to establish a permanent "N.P.U." and invite fellow-Christians of all denominations to unite in intercession for our land and people?

All readers of the Epistles of Paul are familiar with the fact that he had continual trouble from Judaising brethren. The tenacity with which the old views were held is what we of the nineteenth century can hardly understand. They seem to have been, in many cases, a superstition as well as a faith. The Jewish Quarterly Review says:—

Even after more than three centuries' separation, triumphant Christianity had not yet emancipated itself from the mother religion; it was still subject to the Jewish law. Jerome rails most bitterly at the superstition of the Christian women, who, ascribing to the Jewish phylacteries an indefinite but vast magical power, covered up crucifixes, the Gospels, and other sacred relics with them, and thought they were thus performing a work pleasing to God.

Jewish birth was considered a weighty factor in the selection of heads of the Church. This attachment to the Law was strongest amongst the lower classes. Truly, the Apostle had a hard fight when he contended for our liberty in Christ; and now that we have it, we must not surrender it to any of the superstitions of later times.

In commenting on the census for India, The Echo says:—

There are chapters of breathless interest relating to the races and the distribution of languages and religions—the 207,000,000 Hindus and the 57,000,000 Moslems—in this wonderful true story. But the most wonderful thing of all is that so few people in England know or care anything about this. India exists for the "services." They have an interest in it. But outside? Yet it is a tremendous national charge, and a fact in human history that, whether it be for a long or short time destined to endure, is very marvellous.

Now, we claim that a great many persons have an interest in India who are not in the "services," and have no connection with them. The interest of our Christian churches may not be all that it should, but at least it is pure and disinterested, and acts as an antidote to the selfishness which perhaps unavoidably goes with the "interest" of the "services." One thing which all lovers of purity will rejoice in for the sake of India is the appointment of Mr. Henry Fowler to the post of Secretary for India. Mr. Fowler was an earnest opponent of State regulation of vice before he entered Parliament, and has remained consistent to his professions. We believe he will make short work of this present illegal attempt to carry the system on in the Indian cantonments.

The Daily News publishes the following paragraph:—

The French Sunday Rest League, presided over by M. Léon Say, has brought the Syndicated Grocers to engage to close their shops on Sundays. Many of them only closed at seven or eight in the evening. The average time during which their assistants are employed on week days is fourteen hours a day. But the Syndicated Grocers are only making a trial of this humane change. M. Léon Say, in congratulating the League on this victory, advised them never to ask the State to help them. State help was a remedy that often killed where it meant to cure. The recent legislation to limit the hours for the employment of women was depriving them of work. It was better to gain one's objects by transforming habits and ideas than by rigid laws, the working of which was sure to oppress.

English Christians can read these words with nothing but the deepest satisfaction. They indicate an upward movement which will have an immense influence on the thought and action of the Parisians and of all Frenchmen. The movement may not, at present, have much connection with Evangelical religion, but it must be favourable to it.

According to Mr. Horsley, the daily average in local prisons in 1877 was over 20,000; in 1893 it was only 13,821. In 1878 the local and convict prisons contained 37,701 prisoners; in 1893 they contained only 17,653. Much of the improvement is attributed by Mr. Horsley to "the child-saving by Church and State." Mr. Horsley says:—

The causes of crime are many, but above all the cause was intemperance. Crime was condensed drunkenness. Prisons emptied and filled according to the fluctuations of the "beerometer." Revivals of trade at once inflated the Excise returns and the Judicial statistics. It was quite a moderate estimate that ascribed half our crime, and its expense directly, and the rest indirectly, to drink.

The lessons, to lay hold of the children, and do all that is possible for them, and also to cripple and destroy the drink traffic, are self-evident to any one.

That an English county should have been civilised within the last half-century seems an incredible thing, yet fifty years ago judges shrank from work in Staffordshire, so serious were the crimes that came before them. Then three of the gaols were overflowing with prisoners; now the amount of prison room required is less, although the population is much greater. One would like to know what was the cause of the exceptional brutality: was it rough degrading kinds of work in which women as well as men had to engage? and what agency has been chiefly instrumental in effecting the happy change? Some forms of Methodism have been exceptionally vigorous in Staffordshire, and one would like to know how far they have moulded the better life. Such questions can only be settled by persons of local knowledge; the light they have is useful for other parts.

Messrs. Gibbings (Bury-street, W. 7s. 6d.) have published in one volume that admirable book, "Hours with the Mystics," which first appeared about thirty-five years ago. Its author, Robert Alfred Vaughan, who died at the early age of thirty-two, was a poet, a philosopher, an historian, a theologian, and a lovely Christian man, and had life been spared him we should, ere now, have had from his pen the History of the Church by an Englishman. Instead, we have this rare work on mystics and mysticism. Ordinary English readers will find special pleasure in reading the chapters on "German Mysticism in the Fourteenth Century," and those on "Quietism." From the preface to the first edition we take two sentences as an illustration of the spirit in which the book was written:—

In the religious history of almost every age and country, we meet with a certain class of minds, impatient of mere ceremonial forms and technical distinctions, who have pleaded the cause of the heart against prescription, and yielded themselves to the most vehement impulses of the soul in its longing to escape from the sign to the thing signified—from the human to the Divine. . . It can scarcely be without some profit that we essay to gather together and arrange this company of ardent natures; to account for their harmony and their differences, to ascertain the extent of their influence for good and evil, to point out their errors, and to estimate even dreams impossible to cold or meaner spirits."

That a life of Christ should be found in a Buddhist monastery in Tibet is an incident remarkable in itself and interesting as suggesting possibilities of what may prove to be valuable documents in most unlikely places. It is reported that M. Nicholas Notovitch, a Russian traveller, going over the Ladak country, visited the city of Leh, and at the convent called Hemis, saw two volumes, apparently of great antiquity, called "The Life of Issa." The summary of the story, given in Monday's Daily News, seems to indicate the object of the documents to be, not simply to relate for readers of Pali the facts of the life and death of Jesus, but to account for the years between thirteen and twenty-nine by representing him as a traveller in India! The "life" seems to be of a piece with many mediæval endeavours to popularise the story of Jesus. The published summary says that Pilate was jealous of the popularity of Jesus, and after recounting the trial and sentence, it concludes: "Issa and the two thieves were crucified, but the third day Issa's sepulchre was found open and empty."

Rev. W. J. Wilkins, formerly of Calcutta, gives an encouraging account in The L.M.S. Chronicle of India now as compared with 1795. "In 1795 it was a rare thing for a Brahman to be engaged in secular work; to-day the gifts of the people have become so greatly reduced that many of the highest class would die of want if they had not found employment in schools and offices. Even in country districts, men of high and low caste occasionally sit down to a meal together, and freely partake of forbidden fare; yet little notice is taken of the fact." The sick are more kindly treated, the Brahman is now treated to a large extent like other people. "Brahmans and low-caste boys sit side by side in class at school and college, and, when grown up, work together in office and warehouse." Perhaps one of the most striking signs of progress is that, whereas native Christians were despised as the offscouring of the earth, to-day they enjoy the confidence of their neighbours, and are elected to fill honourable posts of service.

"A man's foes shall be they of his own household." The strangest trials come from those who ought to be a comfort; none can wound like those who ought to love. But the words are true in many other directions as well. They are true of every man in every calling in life. No one can write an author down but himself; no one can injure a business-man so much as himself. No temptations from without are so dangerous as the foes within, the Canaanites that still dwell in the land, the lusts of the flesh. No foes can injure a Church so much as her own inconsistent members. No enemies can work such harm to a State as idle immoral members of the State A drunken Englishman is more to be dreaded than a regiment of French soldiers.

Mr. W. A. Hunter, M.P., who writes in The Contemporary Review for March on "Outdoor Relief: is it so very bad?" expresses an opinion which will come with surprise to many minds. Without giving all the conclusions he draws, we may name these: "Indoor and outdoor relief are so related in the unions that as the one goes up the other goes down. During the last thirty years outdoor relief in England and Scotland has been reduced by one-half, while indoor relief has been nearly stationary. The real problem for Poor Law reformers is not the abolition of outdoor relief, but the abolition of the workhouse. As the Poor Law is at present administered in England and Scotland, outdoor relief is distinctly superior to indoor relief, whether we have regard to humanity towards the poor or to economy in the interest of the ratepayer." There is certainly food for thought in the assertion that those unions which give most outdoor relief are by far the cheapest, and those unions that give most indoor relief are by much the least useful. All these things bear upon morality and religion, and religion must be made to bear more effectually on them.

Marriages in East London are entered upon with a very light heart, according to a writer in The Contemporary Review; a fit of pique, a taunt from some companion, the desire for a lark, a bet, is often the cause. Sorrow soon follows. There has been no adequate provision for the responsible step. Even where there is some foresight, household goods are bought with a view to their being pawned or sold when hard times come. "Selling the home" is with East Londoners a recognised method of raising money; they argue that it is better to enjoy luxuries while they can than to have money lying idle in the savings bank. This borrowing from the future seems to do all the harm. "There are thousands of homes which have not cost 10s. to get together, and would not realise 5s. if sold, and these afford all of decency and comfort at which their owners aim." Miserable, ailing children, and an early death for the mother, after she has dragged through a few weary years, are the result. The writer is, however, of opinion that were these poor people better taught they would be willing to learn, and would show the worth of the teaching. Let all Sunday-school teachers, then, with boys and girls of ten or twelve years of age, begin at once, and teach how sacred a thing marriage is, how to prepare for it, when and how to enter upon it, and how to use it. Evidently it is no use being shy of the subject.

The American General Committee of the Churches for petitioning the Governments of the world on behalf of International Arbitration is moving in the direction of rousing the Churches of other lands to co-operate in this good and great work. It has appealed to English friends of peace to form a branch British committee. This has been done, and the committee will soon meet. If the Churches are earnest, active, and resolute, they may now express and enforce in an effectual way the longing of the nations for deliverance from their intolerable burdens to support the armies of Europe

If the work of Christians be to relieve the oppressed, and to break every yoke, then here is work to their hands, and work which properly belongs to them. The Church of the middle ages could check the ambition of princes and the rage of nations, and it will be a great reproach to the various Churches of to-day if they cannot, by a combined effort, save Europe from this madness and destruction caused by militarism. In these times the people are coming closer together, and kings and rulers will for the future have to make their decisions and shape their policy in view of that fact. It is for the Churches of Christ, which form a kingdom within all kingdoms, to strengthen and confirm this unity, and to build up a wall of common sentiment and common conviction against war. They are strong enough now to turn Governments into the right way. Who knows but the Governments may be glad of a good excuse for changing their policy?

The Hereford Times has published an account of "A Lent Day at Llanthony Abbey," which is written in a spirit of deep sympathy with the revival by Father Ignatius of mediæval monasticism. The solemn round of ritual performed night and day by these modern copyists is a pitiable misrepresentation of a religion which is as much distinguished by liberty, simplicity, and absence of form and ceremony as by anything. Take this custom as a sample of the rest. Every hour the Sacrament bell tolls five strokes, in memory of our Lord's five wounds. The brother who is going to watch in church rings this before he goes; at hearing the bell, all kneel and say, "Blessed and praised at every moment be the Most Holy and Divine Sacrament." During Lent these sacred brothers never walk in the monastery garden, where they would be seen by seculars! The writer of this account adds:—

Perhaps the hearts of some who scan these lines will throb with the thought of a working man in Birmingham, who lately wrote to Llanthony, "It is a blessed thought for us to know that we, mixed up with the world, and too often, alas, getting entangled in its meshes, are being prayed for by you, that our strength fail not. I, with many of my friends, rejoice to know this, and we do so thank you."

The writer seems to overlook our great High Priest, who is passed through the heavens—Jesus the Son of God, who is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them. There is, perhaps, no greater defect in the ministering of Evangelical truth than the lack of testimony to the priesthood of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is his present office; He was the Faithful Witness in the days of his flesh; He is coming again to take his great power and reign; during the present interval his special office is that of Priest.

The Monthly Messenger is of opinion that a feeling is growing up amongst Presbyterians that meetings of Church Courts might be made more spiritually helpful than they can be if wholly engrossed with business. While admitting that church business may be a means of grace when every detail of it is carried through under the sense of Christ's presence and as for Him, it yet thinks that gatherings of brethren for business would be a greater comfort and inspiration if to business there could often be added something more directly touching the springs of the spiritual life. The North London Presbytery has just resolved to interrupt its business occasionally by intervals of prayer. Many of the ministers and elders, it appears, would rejoice if the Synod could be made, more than is now possible, a season of fellowship of thought and heart, regarding great themes of life and work. We know that the same craving for more prayer exists among a large number of Congregationalists, and has not only found vent for itself in a wish that something should be done, but has done something. Meetings for prayer are now mingled with the business meetings of the Congregational Union of England and Wales. But the true idea is to have prayer running through the whole of the work done. This was the apostolic way.

THANKSGIVING FOR BLESSING SINCE 1859.

We venture to invite all earnest labourers in our Master's vineyard, especially those who have been toiling for many years past in the East of London, and who have received marvellous answers to prayers uttered in times of overwhelming need, to come together and join in a THANKSGIVING MEETING to be held in the Great Assembly Hall, on Wednesday, April 11, 1894, morning at 11, afternoon at 3, evening at 7, to thank and praise our God for all the wonderful things He has done, and to ask Him for far greater things, not only for the East End of London, but for the whole world: according to the words and spirit of the Lord's Prayer that His will may be done in earth "as it is in Heaven," and in accordance with the very words of the one-accord prayer-meeting in Jerusalem, which was immediately answered by thousands of men and women being scattered over the earth, declaring wherever they went the glad tidings.

"Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours but God's."

"To-morrow go ye down against them. . . ."

"Praise the Lord; for His mercy endureth for ever. . . . And when they began to sing and to praise, the Lord set ambushments."—2 Chron. xx. 15, 16, 21, 22.

THE MEETING IN 1861.

Though it is not difficult to outline the proceedings at the meeting for special prayer, to which reference was particularly made in the letter to Mr. Radcliffe, which we published last week, it is impossible adequately to describe the event and its relation to the revival of a generation ago. The meeting was held in Sussex Hall, Leadenhall-street, and attended by about two hundred Christian men and women who were sharing a common desire to carry the Gospel to the teeming population of East London. The time was January 23, 1861, when on many hands there were evidences of the movement of God's Spirit in the Church and in the world. Mr. Radcliffe, who called together these friends—representatives of work in East London—had been holding meetings in John-street Chapel, Bedford-row, and the Hon. and Rev. Baptist W. Noel was throwing himself heart and soul into evangelistic work.

In The Revival, immediately afterwards, we spoke of the meeting as "interesting and happy." Now we look back upon it as inaugurating a period of spiritual blessing, and those of the company who are still with us are enthusiastically of the same persuasion. The prayers were in the key of "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and buoyant with earnest hopefulness.

Mr. Radcliffe expressed the conviction that the immediate need was not more agencies, but more power—Holy Ghost power. Not simply by formal preaching should the Gospel be disseminated, but also by individual communication. "The story of the Cross must be lovingly told; and if men cannot preach in that way, may God raise up women to do it!" Such was the burden of the Convener's message. God be praised for having since then raised up many women to preach in tones of tenderness the Gospel of his love and righteousness.

Mr. Baptist Noel's address was equally cordial and fervent. He expressed his belief that the East of London was ripe for a great work. If many souls were converted there, some of them would become preachers, and hundreds of preachers raised up from the dregs of London would assuredly affect the West End. But (he said) if good is to be done we must be holy ourselves. We are commanded to be "filled with the Spirit." Can any one say, "I have as much humility, zeal, gentleness, goodness, faith, love, and every other grace, as my nature can bear"? This is to be filled with the Spirit: at this we are to aim, and for this to pray. No plans or organisations will do much without this unction from the Holy One.

Mr. Noel went on to emphasise the importance of individual dealing with souls. Conversation after preaching may prevent impressions from evaporating, and it is calculated to give believers who engage in it a very precious experience.

There is full ground for the conviction that the counsels given by the speakers on this memorable occasion found ready acceptance; for an accession of power and "after-meeting" benefits occupy an important place in the story of God's blessing, as vouchsafed in East End work during the past thirty-three years. Prayer has been abundantly answered, and thanks to God are long overdue. The proposal that a large meeting should be held to offer praise has called forth warm response, not only from the East of London, but from workers all over the country.

Our readers are earnestly invited to give this subject a first and constant place in their prayers. Next week replies from friends will be given.

THE McALL MISSIONS IN FRANCE.

There has been manifest blessing of late in many of the halls in Paris. The Salle Rivoli has been largely attended on Sunday afternoons and evenings, where M. Mettetal, M. Couve, M. Theodore Monod, and others have been holding meetings. At the Boulevard Bonne Nouvelle, also, the meetings have been characterised by a deeply earnest spirit, and interesting after-meetings have been held, Pastor Cordey and Mr. Anderson meeting with many who have been truly brought to Christ there.

The work of Gospel Temperance has been greatly developed lately, and many drunkards have been rescued from their besetting sin and have been led to the feet of Jesus. In Calais Mme. Brum tells of the conversion of a notorious character there, who used to call himself "The greatest Anarchist in the world." He was a terrible drunkard, and had been in prison on several occasions, fighting the police and breaking his fetters: so dangerous was he that the police took away his children from him. He was induced to enter the mission hall at Calais the last day of the year '93, and the work of grace began that night in his soul. Now he is "in his right mind," and is a wonder to all who know him, and his wife, who had kept to him through all the misery and cruelty she had to bear at his hands, is now rejoicing, having proved the promise to be true, "Behold, I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you." The police recognise the change brought in the home, and have restored the children to their father.

The day following the first of the Anarchist outrages which have so disturbed Paris during the last few weeks, when the bomb was thrown in the Chambre des Députés, at our hall in Grenelle, one of the quartiers of Paris, a Christian said he was moved to give his testimony as to what the Lord had done for him. He had been an Anarchist, and had been expelled from France for three years. A Belgian by birth, he had been allowed to return, but was not permitted to leave Paris, and was under constant police surveillance. He entered our dispensary at Grenelle, being ill, and there heard for the first time the Gospel, and was brought to know the Lord Jesus as his Saviour for soul and body. He is now a member of a Baptist church, and is a most devoted Christian.

Last November, this man asked the President to use his influence with the Government to restore him his freedom as a foreigner in France. The Home Office accordingly asked the Prefect of Police to make an inquiry, and as the result he was completely exempted from all surveillance, and was given full permission to go where he pleased. He has given his testimony before his old comrades in the notorious Salle Favie. Of course he was insulted and hooted, but he felt that he must declare what the Lord had done for him.

At the Salle Rivoli, blessing has come to a whole family. The daughter was brought to the Lord in the young women's class, conducted by Miss Brown and Miss Johnson. She died of consumption, her last words being an effort to repeat one of Dr. McAll's hymns, which she had learnt to love. The mother was led to the Saviour also, and their prayers were very earnest for the poor father, a quiet and kind-hearted man, who loved his family, but was a slave to strong drink, so that he often lived away from home. He has lately, of his own accord, abstained from drink, and has also signed the pledge; and is now, it is hoped, truly trusting for daily strength to resist temptation in the Only Refuge for the helpless. "It is truly a miracle," said the poor wife the other day to Mr. Brown, sorrowing for the dear child taken from her, but rejoicing over the husband restored to her.

We could tell also of an old man, a determined freethinker, led to a knowledge of his state before God through reading tracts given to him by Colonel Paschkoff, and who died in peace, desiring that his body should be taken into the hall where he had first heard of Christ, and that the service might be held there, so that his former friends might hear the Gospel preached to them. He had belonged to a club, in which the members pledged themselves not to admit any funeral service of a religious character over their graves.

In conclusion, we would thank the readers of The Christian for their practical sympathy, and take this opportunity of reminding them that this Mission, with its thirty-four halls in and around Paris, and nearly one hundred more in the provinces, is being conducted on the same evangelical lines, as during the lifetime of our late honoured President, Dr. McAll. We would also mention that though the spiritual results have never been greater than at the present time, it is increasingly difficult for various reasons to raise funds, year by year, for a purely evangelical Mission.

The Spirit of Wisdom.

The letters and articles which have appeared in regard to the Holy Spirit are timely. There is another view which I venture to think needs emphasising. I refer to the fact that the Holy Spirit is given to be "the Spirit of wisdom and understanding," in order to the believer's intelligence. Knowledge is power. The prominence given to the word "know" in the Scriptures I need not do more than mention.

There is a natural tendency in all believers to decline and go back from the mind and teaching of Christ. Hence the important word of warning, "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God." It is not easy to maintain the consistent triumphs which belong to "the life of faith upon the Son of God." The chief reason is that we are accustomed to the mental activities which form part of our natural life. Our energies lie mainly within the sphere of our senses. Our natural life holds us fast. The confession of our faith is, "For in that Christ died, He died unto sin once, but in that He liveth unto God. Likewise, reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed into sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord." Though this is actually true, we nevertheless keep on appealing to our natural mental activities, and practically deny the very object for which Christ died. We back down in mind on to the platform from which He has delivered us for ever.

Oh to be free from the activities of the natural mind. Thoughts run riot. Not that they are necessarily base and vicious, but they surge and flow in self-assertive human energy. The result is, that instead of being able to say, "How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O Christ. How great is the sum of them. If I should count them they are more in number than the sand," our daily life is as though we had received Christ, but without his intellect, wisdom, and power of thought. "Christ thinketh not in me, for I am full of my own thoughts," represents, I fear, the bulk of Christian experience in this restless age.

We need to be the bond-slaves of Christ ere we know spiritual liberty. Our personal intellectual activities are strong, therefore life in the Holy Spirit is weak. The casting down of the idols of human thought has not taken place. Subjection to Christ as the wisdom of God must be known. The whole range of the imagination, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, must be brought low. Then will strong and exuberant life in the Spirit of wisdom and power be known.

Just as it is impossible to indulge the lusts of the flesh and know the vigour of spiritual life, so also the yielding to "the desires of the mind" must hinder "the strengthening might of his Spirit in the inner man." We have no right to think as we please. Lawless thought is the chief source of sin. We have the power to tenant our minds with our own thoughts. If we do this, it is impossible for the word and mind of Christ to dwell in us richly in all wisdom. The mental house is filled with a human furnishing contrary to Christ, "the wisdom of God."

How few of us know for a single day what it is to be separated from the morbid or turbid flow of personal mental drift. The human mind, by reason of sin, centres in self. The wretched condition described as "self-consciousness" could not hold for an hour were we fully possessed of the mind of Christ.

Turbulence and unrest represent the outcome of the undisciplined flow of human thought and utterance to-day. The enemy has come in like a flood; the Holy Spirit only is competent to raise the needed standard against him. To supply thought, and to teach the children of God how to think, is one of the great functions which pertains to the Holy Spirit. "He shall take of mine and show it unto you," was the promise given by our exalted Lord. It seems to me that I would rather know how to think in line with Christ's intellect than have the wealth of the whole world. The Lord preserve us from practically shutting out our beloved Lord from the chief function and highest right pertaining to his indwelling presence.

Christ in us, but not as a thinker, not as the divine wisdom and intelligence! What a mockery! Let us hear this word. "We then as workers together with Him beseech you that ye receive not the grace of God in vain." Do not know these things and live as though they were not true. Like Samuel, I fear we fail to recognise a higher voice than Eli's. Instead of the Lord's power and glory in the redeemed temple, the lights of intelligence burn low. Half asleep and but dimly conscious of his presence, we act as inexperienced children where in understanding and power we should be men. O Lord, strengthen us with might by thy Spirit in the inner man.

Home Reunion.

The Rock admits, in an article on "Home Reunion," "that there can be no doubt that the consciences of those who profess and call themselves Christians are becoming more and more alive to the evil effects of our unhappy divisions. Not only do they lead to a dissipation of energy, too often to its misapplication, but it is evidently opposed to the whole spirit and teaching of the Great Founder of the Church. It is further a stumbling-block in the way of those who are wandering out of the paths of truth." We cannot imagine any condemnation of the present position to be more serious or more severe than that. What is the cause of that position? The Rock says:—

> We are constantly assured that the Holy Catholic Church is that brotherhood which is presided over by an historic Episcopate, and we are told again and again that the great block in the way of Catholic unity is the question of the validity of non-episcopal orders. It certainly is the obstacle, but only because so many Episcopalians are possessed of the error that unity is synonymous with uniformity in the transmission of Orders and grace. It seems incredible that in this nineteenth century learned divines can gravely argue that men like the late Mr. Spurgeon, the missionaries of the Methodist, Presbyterian, and other societies, who have been used in God's hands to bring countless souls to Christ, are outside the Holy Catholic Church, and must be left to the uncovenanted mercies of God.

We entirely agree with this putting of the case, and we further agree, when our contemporary adds that

> Reunion will not be brought about by the formulating of some scheme for a great uniat Church under an Episcopal government, in which the Pope, the Patriarch of Constantinople, and the Archbishop of Canterbury shall stand on equal pinnacles, but yielding a courteous precedence to the Bishop of Rome, as painted in the dreams of such men as Père Hyacinthe: but by the recognition, frankly and cordially, of the true basis of a unity actually existing, and utterly independent of Church order or polity, and that the threadbare taunt that each sect is a new religion is absolutely absurd. There is a far more vital union among the 200 odd Protestant sects of England than can be found between the rival orders and clashing interests beneath the smooth exterior of the Church of Rome.

What then, we inquire, is to be done? And as far as we can gather from this article, nothing can be done unless individual members of the Church of England and of Nonconformist Churches have the moral courage to act as if the "historic episcopate" had no existence; but that is not an easy matter. Brethren of different churches may have substantial agreement as to fundamental truths, but if those of one Church set up some claim to superiority of orders, equal fellowship becomes impossible, and there is no true fellowship which is not on equal terms. Two men of equal height cannot walk arm in arm if one of them moves on a plane three feet higher than the other.

We know only too well from experience that the following sentences represent the true state of the case:—

> The real barrier in the way of Home Reunion, at any rate, is the fear on the part of Evangelical Churchmen of being thought disloyal to the Episcopacy, or of incurring the displeasure of their Bishop, if they cordially recognised Nonconformists; and, on the other hand, the fear—by no means unnatural—on the part of Dissenters, that they will be treated as an inferior race if they associate with the clergy of the Church of England. Strange that men who will co-operate with those who are teaching the spirit-dwarfing, even if we do not go so far as to say the soul-destroying, errors of Sacerdotalism, because they have succeeded in obtaining Orders in the Church of England, shrink from fellowship with those who are heartily at one with them in faith, and certainly differ no more from them in practice than the extreme Ritualist with his substitute for the Roman mass.

In illustration of this practical difficulty, which has its fountain and origin in "the historic episcopate" pretensions, take the following fact, never before published. Two ministers, one an Episcopalian and the other a Congregationalist, were walking homeward from a meeting of a Ragged School Committee, talking on this subject of their religious separation, when the Nonconformist said, "Let me ask you a plain question, and you will give me a plain answer. When you move to a Nonconformist minister in the street, don't you feel that you are condescending?" "Yes," was the reply. "I knew it was so," said the other; "I could see the condescension in your face." There can be no reunion so long as there is assumption on the one side, whether there be submission to it or resistance of it on the other.

And this assumption, again, is frequently aggravated by social conditions. We know parts of the metropolis where the population being dense and the work urgent, there is a sense of comradeship among all the ministers, there is a sense of loyal regard for each other, and a marked readiness to aid each other; whereas in other parts, rich and suburban, the clergy of the Church of England hold themselves coldly aloof. Perhaps they may be willing to see Nonconformist ministers at meetings in their churches, but they seldom, if ever, go to Nonconformist places. While such things exist, we shall have reason to deplore the present unseemly and hurtful division.

But we may carry the question further. Can there be any true fellowship in the Spirit except outside the gate, where Jesus suffered, and where we should be, bearing his reproach? The Episcopalian who abides there will not despise his Nonconformist brother; and the latter will say, "Henceforth let no man trouble me, for I bear in my body the marks (the stigmata) of the Lord Jesus."

There is no true independence except to him who dwells without the camp, with Him "by Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." There is no deliverance from the religious or the irreligious world, except by being made "the offscouring of all things" for Christ's sake. He made Himself of no reputation, and in so far as his followers are concerned about reputation or social position there can be no real unity either with Him or with each other.

A New Translation

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

'Η ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

3. Will you say that this is self-recommendation once more? or do we need, as some do, letters of recommendation to you or from you?
2 Our letter of introduction is yourselves, a letter written on our hearts, universally known and
3 read. For all can see that you are Christ's epistle committed to our charge, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the Living God, not on tablets of stone, but on human hearts as tablets.
4 Such is the confidence that we have through
5 Christ before God; not because we of ourselves are competent to form any judgment by our own reasonings, but our competency
6 comes from God. It is He also who has made us competent to serve Him in respect to a new Covenant; serving not the written ordinance, but the Spirit, for the written ordinance inflicts death, but the Spirit gives life.
7 If, however, the service that proclaims death (its code being engraved in writing upon stones) came with glory, so that the Children of Israel could not look steadily on the face of Moses because of the lustre of his face—a
8 transient lustre; how shall not the service of the Spirit be far more glorious?
9 For if the service which pronounces doom has glory, much more is the service which tells of 10 righteousness far more glorious still. For indeed that which was "resplendent in glory" has no glory at all in this regard, that it pales
11 before the glory that surpasses it. For if that which was to be abolished came with glory, much more that which is permanent is arrayed in glory.
12 Therefore, cherishing a hope like this, we
13 speak without any reserve, not like Moses, who used to throw a veil over his face to hide from the gaze of the Children of Israel the passing away of what was but transitory.
14 Nay, their minds were made dull; for to this very day the same veil remains during the reading of the Book of the Old Covenant, unlifted, because it is in Christ that it is to be 15 abolished; but to this day, whenever Moses is read, a veil lies upon their heart.
16 But whenever the heart of the nation shall have "returned to" the Lord, the veil is to be "stripped off."
17 Now by "the Lord" is meant the Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, freedom is 18 enjoyed. And we, all of us, with lifted veil, reflecting like bright mirrors the glory of the Lord, are being transformed into the same likeness, from one degree of radiant holiness to another, even as derived from the Lord the Spirit.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS CONFERENCE.

This prosperous and picturesque Kentish town has long enjoyed the benefit of an evangelical ministry. Some of its more consecrated workers have felt, however, that the community greatly needed a spiritual stirring up—a fresh breeze of the Spirit's power which would lift the Christian life of the town to a level more commensurate with its privilege and its possibilities. A conference on the deepening of the spiritual life was arranged for, and the help invoked of some well-known expounders of the truths that have come to be associated with Keswick.

The meetings extended over four days of last week, and were held in the "Great Hall" in the centre of the town. Illness and other circumstances prevented some of the expected brethren from attending, among them being Mr. Robert Wilson, Rev. H. C. G. Moule, and Rev. C. G. Moore. There was no lack of exhorters, however, and if some honoured servants of Christ were kept away, all felt that the Master Himself was there in manifest power, through his Word and Spirit. The attendances were large—in the evening so large that overflows had to be held on several occasions.

Mr. Wilson's place in the chair was taken by Captain Baring, Hon. Sec. of the Convention Committee; and an admirable substitute he made. He is almost an ideal president for such gatherings: bright and happy in manner, unobtrusive and yet ready when the occasion demands to offer some fresh and helpful words by way of exposition. To Capt. Baring was largely due the inception and the arranging of the Conference, and he materially contributed to its actual success.

The chief speaker at the opening meeting on Monday evening was Rev. Preb. Webb Peploe, whose utterances, as always, were very telling, rousing, and thoroughgoing. His thoughts at this introductory gathering may be said to have circled around the word "crucifixion," of which so much is made in the Epistle to the Galatians. It was a highly appropriate deliverance. So indeed were the two addresses he gave on the Tuesday forenoon and evening; in the former he sought to hold up "a magnificent Christ," as the sufficient power for a constantly triumphing life; in the latter he showed how a whole-hearted appropriation of Christ works out in the daily experiences of this rough and tumble life of ours. Some touching references were made to the late Bishop Hill and Mrs. Hill, and to the noble spirit in which they faced the realities of their position. Mr. Webb Peploe took pains, as did other speakers, to point out that in these conventions no claim is advanced of anything like sinlessness; but he showed that the Scriptures teach, and we are warranted in looking for, continual triumph over all besetments that come to us in our Christian walk and warfare, from without or within.

Dr. Elder Cumming, of Glasgow, spoke on several occasions on Tuesday and Wednesday, and his words of truth and soberness were found eminently helpful by many. Rev. H. Sharpe, of Hampstead, who came at short notice instead of Mr. Moule, was also interesting and practical. Rev. J. B. Figgis took part on Wednesday afternoon, but was, unhappily, not able to render further help, owing to sore throat.

On Thursday, and at the last Convention meeting proper on Friday morning, the burden of the speaking rested on the shoulders of Rev. Evan Hopkins. He is a past-master in the art of presenting consecration truth, and in leading the hearers up to the point of definite surrender, committal, and appropriation. On Thursday forenoon he addressed himself more particularly to the babes in the flock of Christ, and unfolded the possibilities of the true Christian life in terms that were as clear as a sunbeam, and as searching. Very admirably he showed the threefold aspect of the salvation which God has provided for all those who will accept and work it out—that which is past and complete, that which is present and continuous that which is future and perfect, when the believer shall be freed from the very presence of sin. From Scripture teaching, and also from personal experience, he pointed out how the blessing of a restful and triumphant life may be realised and possessed.

In the course of his address, Mr. Hopkins told an interesting incident of the New Testament Revision Committee. He said he was talking a little while ago to Dr. David Brown, of Aberdeen, one of the revisers. The conversation touched on Hebrews vii. 25, "Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them." Dr. Brown said he fought hard on the Revision Committee for the use of the words "evermore" instead of "to the uttermost"; if they had only put "evermore" in the margin as an alternative he would have been content, as he was convinced that was the real meaning of the Greek word. Mr. Hopkins, after relating the incident, added that the more he went into the study of the passage the more he was assured that it means "to the very end." The note of time rather than of degree is the prominent one both in the passage and in the context.

On Thursday afternoon, Rev. C. G. Moore's place was taken by Rev. W. Houghton, of Guildford, who had recently returned from addressing several holiness conferences in the Riviera. His theme was the Blessed Life, what it is not, what it is, and how it may be entered on and enjoyed. He necessarily went over ground that is very familiar and well trodden to those who have attended the Keswick and other conferences, but his setting of the truth was well calculated to impress. Mr. Houghton is strong in illustrations, many of them homely but none the less helpful. He remarked in the early part of his address that he liked to take the word "blamelessness" rather than "perfection," as being less liable to misapprehension. A little while ago, he said, he had to bury an old man, a member of his congregation. He was a real old saint, and no one could look into his face without feeling that he carried heaven in his soul. His master when walking home from the funeral said to Mr. Houghton that old Charles Giles had been in his employ for many years, and never once during that time did he give occasion for blame about any one thing. That is how we ought to walk with God, and it is a glorious possibility.

The testimony meeting, on Friday morning, revealed much blessing received. The testimonies took the form of requests for praise read from written slips containing either the text of Scripture which had been applied by God the Holy Ghost, or the testimony couched in Scripture words.

A missionary meeting took place on Friday afternoon, when Mr. Eugene Stock gave an address. The missionary, he said, had to meet abroad the formidable "Siseras" of the great heathen religions—Buddhism, Hindooism, Confucianism, Mohammedanism, Devil-worship. Of these Mr. Stock considered Mohammedanism to be the greatest foe, because it is a religion of externals, fostering human pride. Of Hindooism it had been said that it is the only religion that is worse than none. Mr. Stock described a Hindoo temple he had visited in India, managed by educated English-speaking native gentlemen who have, as a committee, at command the sum of £700,000 to be expended in Brahmins, dancing girls, and "unnameable things." He asked special prayer for Persia, in face of the fact that a telegram had just come to hand, of which the full significance was not yet known. It ran, "All safe, nothing lost; disturbances furthered Gospel."

Mr. Walter Sloan, in the course of an intensely earnest address, urged those who had been feasting so richly during the past week to give portions unto those for whom nothing was prepared; or, rather, God had prepared the portions, but it needed some, ready to take them to the waiting ones. R.

MACCLESFIELD MISSION HALL, CITY-ROAD, E.C.—The annual meeting of this revived old Mission was held on Wednesday evening. The chair was taken by one of Mr. Spurgeon's old members, who thirty-eight years ago heard him preach at Cowbridge Chapel, Herts. This Mission had fallen into dilapidation, and two young men came from the Tabernacle and restarted it. Now for a year it has been going on well, as any will find who will go down to City-road and help these workers in a much-needed Mission surrounded with vice and drink. At the anniversary the reports were encouraging.

THE CHRISTIAN BLIND RELIEF SOCIETY aids 450 pensioners in all parts of the United Kingdom, and relieves the blind of all creeds provided they are of good moral character. At present it has over seventy candidates waiting for election. The society has no paid officials, and no office expenses. The committee have increased their pensioners to correspond with their income, therefore they are dependent upon voluntary contributions. During the year their income has sustained a serious diminution, and they are greatly in need of funds to meet current expenses. (Rev.) J. Pullein Thompson.

THREE MISSIONARY BISHOPS.

The C.M.S. arranged on Friday two meetings to commend to God and bid farewell to the three Bishops so soon to start for their respective fields of labour. The interest shown was great and keen. At the afternoon meeting the attendance was so large that the Large Hall had to be taken instead of the Lower, as originally contemplated.

Sir John H. Kennaway, Bart., M.P., who presided, opened with a touching reference to the circumstances under which the vast audience before him had met to mourn the fallen, as well as commend to God those now going forth to fill the gaps.

As to C.M.S. matters, he deplored the fact that at present there is every appearance of a deficit of £15,000 on the year, and he appealed strongly for willing and hearty aid. This deficiency could be swept away if only the Lord's stewards took the matter in hand thoroughly.

OUTLOOK IN JAPAN.

Bishop Evington, of Kiushiu, Japan, said:—In the nineteen years I have spent in Japan, I have seen practically the evolution of the whole work of the Christians in that land. True, Archdeacon Warren and several others were there before me, but when I arrived they were only preparing for active work, and I heard the Archdeacon's first sermon in Japanese in Osaka. Then the whole land was without the Gospel; now it is steadily spreading in all parts, and there are at least 50,000 Japanese Christians. God has wrought marvellous things in these fair isles of the East.

The speaker went on to describe in a practical way the character of his own diocese, the difficulties to be encountered by reason of the patriotic spirit animating many and rendering even Christians somewhat jealous of outside interference. Summing up, he said that the encouragements are many; that God seems to have a great future in store for the Church in Japan. The grand need of that church is native workers; certainly a few wise, godly, and learned leaders and teachers are much wanted to train and direct those whom we expect God will greatly use for the glory of his name in the far East.

ON THE NIGER.

Bishop Tugwell, of Western Equatorial Africa, said that God has spoken to his Church in the lands of the Niger in no uncertain sound. Many and sore have been the losses, but we rest assured that his way must be best. After a warm and loving tribute to Bishop and Mrs. Hill, the speaker went on to deal with present matters. One point he emphasised was that six months ago the Yoruba Mission was hardly known, now the needs of that Mission are on the lips of thousands, through the life and devotion of Bishop Hill. As concerning his own hopes, fears, and plans: his hopes were high, for they rested in God; fears he had none, God being his helper. The burdens were great, and the responsibilities heavy, but God is sufficient for all. The future is with the Lord—who knoweth who may fall, who may continue to serve. Meanwhile there are several terrible gaps on the West Coast. Of the sixteen men who went out four years ago only four remain—Messrs. Dobinson, Watney, Melville Jones, and Wilson—while the important post of Principal of the Lagos Training Institution is also vacant. We pray God to raise up and send forth one to take up the great work of training natives to become evangelists and pastors on the West Coast. We want many fresh helpers, and we are looking to God alone in whom is our hope.

Rev. R. P. Ashe followed with a series of vocal pictures of Uganda as it was in 1883, when the heroes Mackay and O'Flaherty stood alone for God, and to-day with many Christians, and Christianity recognised and protected. But all this has been won at heavy cost in precious lives; while many noble native converts have gladly laid down their lives for Christ. The prospects for the future are rich in promise. God has purposes of mercy for the peoples of Central Africa, and He is even now calling out a people to do his work among the vast multitudes who dwell in gross darkness.

EVENING GATHERING.

In the evening the Large Hall was again crowded. The area, specially reserved for men, was splendidly filled.

The Bishop of Carlisle, who presided, said that in assembling to bid "God-speed" to the three missionary bishops, they were honouring those who were missionaries first and bishops afterwards. Twenty years ago a great preacher in London, reflecting harsh public opinion which in some quarters obtained with reference to certain colonial bishops, said, "The great want of our colonial Church is a few bishops' graves." In face, however, of the recent records of self-sacrificing heroism, the Bishop of Carlisle showed that it was impossible for such a reproach to be levelled at the present time. He emphasised the ever-increasing need for missionaries to proceed to Africa and Japan in order to spread a knowledge of the truths of Christianity. Whilst in the political world there was a hot controversy as to the expansion of territory and extension of frontier, he rejoiced to think that in Christ there were no delimitations of frontier.

THE CHURCH IN UGANDA.

Bishop Tucker then narrated some of his experiences in Eastern Equatorial Africa, and spoke of the encouraging prospects which had opened up in Uganda since the outburst of popular feeling took place two and a-half years ago, and which he said was altogether unparalleled in the history of the Church and the country. The question of Uganda had united in a very wonderful way men of all parties in the State and all schools of thought in the Church. They thanked God that the sanctity of treaty, the freedom of the slave, and the eternal principles of truth, righteousness, and justice were never yet—and he prayed they never might be—questions of party politics. On those great principles, at least, Great Britain stood united. Although up to the present Her Majesty's Government had made no public announcement of their intentions with respect to Uganda, still he ventured to think there could be no doubt as to what course of action they would adopt. It was not a question as to whether the British flag should be hoisted in Uganda, but rather as to whether it should be hauled down. The British flag had done everything in that country for something like twelve months; and he believed it would still continue to fly there, bearing witness to our uprightness, to the good faith, and the honour of Englishmen. Therefore he was convinced that whatever English Government was in power, it would do its duty in respect to Uganda. He only wished he could feel as certain that the Church of England would do its duty equally in respect to evangelisation. The Eastern Soudan had been closed since Khartoum fell and Gordon perished; and if ever the Soudan was to be reopened to Christian enterprise and the resources of civilisation, it would not be by way of Suakim or Egypt on the North, but by the Soudan from the South.

Rev. F. E. Wigram appealed for financial help on behalf of the Church Missionary Society, and said that although their financial year did not close for a month, their expenditure was already £11,000 in excess of that of last year, and at the end of the month there would probably be an excess of expenditure over that of last year of about £14,000. During the day much earnest prayer was made for missions, and specially for the work in East and West Africa and in Japan.

THE TINPLATE WORKERS.

I have just spent some days with Mr. Wintle and the hungry workers out of work in Monmouthshire. But times of adversity bring out much that is pleasant to see and hear. The letters from friends who have contributed to meet the need are as welcome for the sympathy they express as for the help they enclose. They are chiefly from those who cannot give without feeling it, and the hope is often expressed that possessors of larger means may be led to help more substantially. A man came one day and gave something wrapped in paper, saying that he wanted clothes very badly, but he could do without them a little longer, and he had brought his week's wages (£1) to help feed the hungry. A poor woman, receiving half-a-crown a week from the parish, was so touched when she heard of this that she brought half-a-crown, her week's parish relief. Doubtless Jesus says of her what He said of her sister who gave the two mites.

Mr. Wintle has a capital series of slides, and the history he gives of the Mission from the beginning, with many records of the wonderful works of God in the salvation of very wicked sinners, is like a chapter out of the Acts of the Apostles. His address is Pontymoile, Mon.

THE CLAIMS OF THE NAVVY.

I have been laid aside from active work among our navvies since October, 1892, when my spine was injured by a fall on one of our works. I cannot, therefore, personally bring the following remarkable Gospel opening before the Christian public, and trust you will make it known in The Christian.

The navvies of the world are English and Italian. Most of the Continental and much of the American engineering is done by the latter. In the whole length of Italy in 1892 I found that, unlike the English navvies, who form a separate and distinct class here, the Italian navvies go from their settled homes in spring to the works in Switzerland, Austria, etc., by many thousands, and return home in autumn. On the Mont Cenis and St. Gothard Tunnels thousands of Italian navvies were employed, and the conditions of their lives were terrible. The Simplon Tunnel will, I am told, employ 8000 men.

We may be receding in England into Popery, but in the home of the Pope the Bible is eagerly sought and read. The first edition of the Italian Illustrated Family Bible, which has been issued by the Milan Secolo in numbers at a halfpenny each, or 10fr. complete, is now exhausted. This publication has marked an epoch in the history of the Bible in Italy, and has brought about a revolution in its circulation. Dr. Gray, of the Scotch Church in Rome, is the superintendent of the colporteurs of the Scotch Bible Society, and will gladly send a colporteur occasionally to the Italian side of the Alps, but has no power to do more. He assured me that the preaching of God's Word to Italian navvies, and placing the Bible in their hands, would send the Gospel light into every part of Italy, when in autumn the men returned to their homes.

A lady last August walked over the Grimsel Pass from the Rhone Glacier to Handeck. She found 700 Italian navvies making the new carriage road principally for the use of tourists. They were totally uncared for; the nearest priest was ten miles off. These 700 men left for Italy last October, they are to return to Handeck this April, and we understand the road making will last the summer.

WHAT ARE NEEDED

are two Italian missionaries to live for six months among the men, hold daily Gospel meetings, and sell, or when necessary give, the Scriptures. Tried, energetic, and suitable converts can be supplied from Rome. A small undenominational committee should direct the mission from Rome. The cost would be about £150. The mission could, however, only be visited once in two months by one of the committee on account of the expense. Hence the need of a gentleman and his wife, or two ladies, who can speak Italian well (and pay their own expenses, which would be light), to live in the little hospice on the spot, and superintend the mission. The air is delightful, the scenery grand, and a splendid opening for mission work, within no great distance from home, and for a definitely short period. This is a chance of a glorious service for Christ which may never come again in your readers' lives. What is done must be done immediately. I will gladly undertake to receive money, and make all arrangements which can be done by writing (I am useless now for anything else). I trust my name in connection with the English Navvy Mission, of which I was one of the founders eighteen years ago, will guarantee the very careful application of funds, without which, of course, no commencement can be made. If we are able to start, from month to month I will send a short report of progress to The Christian. I hope to be out of the hospital (D.V.) in two weeks. My home address is now Barwood, Ramsbottom, Manchester, instead of Ripon. May God send us £150, and the volunteer workers.

The navvies here are so interested in their mission that the "Navvies' Letter," which I have the pleasure of editing, has a circulation in England and Scotland of 112,000 copies. The contributions from navvies toward printing in 1893 amounted to £76 in pence.

LOWER SIAM.—Dr. Amner is at Tongkah, an island off the west coast of Lower Siam. The population is in part Siamese and in part Hok-kien Chinese, and Dr. Amner's special work is among the Chinese. He is in touch with the other labourers, who evangelise among the Chinese of the Malay Peninsula.

"WHO IS MY NEIGHBOUR?"

AN INDICTMENT OF NOMINAL CHRISTIANITY.

BY ARCHDEACON FARRAR.

Archdeacon Farrar preached to a dense throng in St. Edmund's, Lombard-street, last week, on the subject of "Fraternity," based upon the text, "Am I my brother's keeper?" (Gen. iv. 9). We make some extracts from his powerful address:—

We each of us ask, in words and in our lives, Am I my brother's keeper?" God answers to each of us, "You are!" The world, with all its might, answers, "No; I am not." Vast multitudes of merely nominal Christians—all those who are content with the dead Judaism of a decent, functional, and superficial religionism—or the vast army of the compromisers and the conventionalists—while they say, or half say, with their reluctant lips, "Yes, yes, I am my brother's keeper," yet act and live in every respect as if they were not. There is little practical difference between their conduct and that of the godless world. Did not Christ indicate this when He described the two sons of whom the bold rebel said, "I will not go into the vineyard"; and the smooth, respectable hypocrite said, "I go, sir," and went not? Alas! we ordinary Christians are a very poor lot indeed. We have preached Christ for centuries—

> Until at last men learn to scoff,
> So few seem any better off.

And some may, like the sneering lawyer, interposing an excuse, ask, "Who is my neighbour?" The answer is the same as that which Christ gave in the parable of the Good Samaritan. All men are our neighbours; all who sin, all who suffer, all who lie murdered like Abel, sick and wounded like the poor traveller—where they have been left by the world's thieves and murderers, where they lie neglected by the frosty-hearted priest and the unscrupulously sacrificing Levite on the hot and dusty wayside of the world. Yes, all men are our neighbours; and when we injure them by lies which cut like a sharp razor, by sneers, by innuendoes, by intrigues, by slander and calumny, by hatred, malice, and all uncharitableness, by want of thought, or by want of heart, by the lust of gain, by neglect, by absorbing selfishness, we are inheritors of the spirit of the first murderer.

But let us confine our thoughts to those who most pressingly need our services—to the great masses of the poor, the oppressed, the wretched, the hungry, the lost, the outcast. I will enter into no disquisition to account either for their existence or our responsibility for it. I will only say that among them lies, in some form or other, a great sphere of our duty, which, if we neglect for our pleasure, we neglect also at our peril. I esteem far higher the burning desire to help their fellow-men, the strenuous effort to carry that desire into effect, which actuates men who are the common sneer of worldlings, than I estimate the thin respectability of smug decorum of thousands of commonplace Churchmen. These lovers of their brethren have not only criticised and sneered, they have rescued the perishing, they have cared for the dying, they have healed the brokenhearted, wrought and fought, and toiled and prayed, and suffered. James Russell Lowell was a poet, a statesman, a man of the world. You know his poem "A Parable":—

> Said Christ our Lord, "I will go and see > How the men, my brethren, believe in Me."

The chief priests, and rulers, and kings welcome Him with state and with pompous services:—

> Great organs surged thro' arches dim
> Their jubilant floods in praise of Him;
> And in church and palace, and judgment hall,
> He saw his image high over all.
> But still, wherever his steps they led
> The Lord in sorrow bent down his head:
> And from under the heavy foundation stones
> The Son of Mary heard bitter groans.
> Have ye founded your thrones and altars then
> On the bodies and souls of living men?
> And think ye that building shall endure
> Which shelters the noble and crushes the poor?

In vain they pleaded their customs and their religious rites:—

> Then Christ sought out an artisan,
> A low-browed, stunted, haggard man;
> And a motherless girl whose fingers thin
> Pushed from her faintly want and sin.
> These let He in the midst of them,
> And as they drew back their garment hem
> For fear of defilement, Lo! here, said He,
> The images ye have made of Me!

The lesson is full of warning. That there is an almost shoreless sea of misery around us, which rolls up its dark waves to our very doors; that thousands live and die in the dim border-land of destitution; that little children wail and starve, and perish, and soak, and blacken soul and body, in our streets; that there are hundreds and thousands of the unemployed, not all of whom, as some would persuade us, are lazy impostors; that the demon of Drink still causes among us daily horrors which would disgrace Dahomey or Ashantee, and rakes into his coffers millions of pounds which are wet with tears and red with blood—these are facts patent to every eye.

Now God will work no miracle to mend these miseries. If we neglect them they will be left uncured, but He will hold us responsible for the neglect. It is vain for us to ask, "Am I my brother's keeper?" In spite of all the political economists, in spite of all superfine theories of chilly and purse-saving wisdom, He will say to the callous and the slothful, such as glance on and pass Gehazi with his leprosy, and Simon Magus with a curse—"What hast thou done? Smooth religionist, orthodox Churchman, scrupulous Levite, befringed and phylacteried Pharisee, thy brother's blood crieth to Me from the ground!"

Nor are they excusable who disclaim their responsibility to the world of anguish in the spirit of indifferent despair. How many find an excuse for doing practically nothing by saying, "What good is it? Of what earthly use is it?" And then, perhaps, they triumphantly quote the words of Deuteronomy, "The poor shall never cease out of the land." Ah! why do they invariably forget the words which follow: "Therefore I command thee, saying, Thou shalt surely open thy hand unto thy brother, to thy needy, and to the poor in the land. Thou shalt surely give him, and thine heart shall not be grieved when thou givest unto him, because that, for this thing, the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thy work, and in all that thou puttest thine hand unto." This despair of social problems is ignoble, and is un-Christian.

There is a serious danger to us all lest our narrow domesticity should gradually enervate many of our nobler instincts by teaching indifference to the public weal as a sort of languid virtue. "I live among my own people." Yes; but God made me also a citizen of his kingdom. Many a man, in his affection and service to his family, forgets that he belongs also to the collective being; that he cannot without guilt sever himself from the needs of his parish, of his nation, of his race, of the poor, of the miserable, of the oppressed. If he is to do his duty in his life, he must help them, he must think for them, he must sympathise with them, he must give to them. We must not be like Dives, arrayed in purple and fine linen, faring sumptuously every day, while Lazarus lies neglected—and, in all but vain words, unpitied — at our doors. The meanest position of all and the commonest is to stand still and do nothing but chatter and criticise. Worst and wickedest of all is it to stand still andcall those fools and fanatics who are bearing the burden and heat of the day. The best men suffer with those whom they see suffer. They cannot allay the storm, yet, since the cry knocks against their very hearts, they would at least aid those who are doing more than ourselves to rescue the perishing.

Of this we may be sure, that character, not creed; service, not form, is the test, which alike in the Old and New Testament, God invariably requires of us. It is love which is the fulfilling of the law. It is only by keeping the commandments that we can enter into life. We may come before God in the bluest of orthodox fringes and the broadest of Pharisaic phylacteries; we may belong to the only right organisation, we may hold to the only right opinions about priests and sacraments, we alone may be lawful in keeping the rubrics with the most scrupulous accuracy; but all this will be as valueless, nay, as hateful, in the sight of God if it be unaccompanied by charity and service as were the mint, anise, and cummin of the arrogant and exclusive Pharisees and priests who murdered the Christ for whom they professed to look. There is but one test with God of orthodoxy, of catholicity, of membership of the kingdom of heaven. It is given in the last utterance of revelation by the beloved disciple. It sweeps away with one breath nine-tenths of the fiction and falsities of artificial orthodoxy and fanatical religionism. It is: "He that doeth righteousness is righteous," and, "He that doeth righteousness is born of God."

REV. J. DE KEWER WILLIAMS has intimated that he intends shortly retiring from the pastorate of Old Gravel Pit Chapel, Hackney, where he has laboured for fifty years.

"TRUE CHURCHMANSHIP."

One of Archdeacon Sinclair's Lenten sermons was on "The Church and True Churchmanship." Christ came, said the Archdeacon, to form a society of persons loving God and doing good, of which He was the head and they the members. He appointed Apostles by whom Christian societies were formed in various places. The term Church was applied to a single society, or to a collection of societies, the church "in a house," in a city as Corinth, the churches of Asia, etc.; and there might be few members or many. Christ Himself was present. "Where two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I." The first church numbered three—Simon, Andrew, and Jesus. At Jerusalem the first organised church had one hundred and twenty members.

The Church of England defined a Church as a "congregation of believers, where the Word of God is faithfully preached and the sacraments duly administered." In the Lord's Supper, what alone were essentials were the bread and wine, and the inspired words of the institution. All real believers throughout the world were one Church, spiritually united in love to the one Head. All churches need not have identical regulations and methods. Each might prefer its own, and regret that others had not their superior advantages, but the non-essential should not alienate from the essential.

There were at one time as many as a hundred different liturgies in the one church, various bishops adopting methods in their various dioceses which seemed to them best, and not forcing their own on others. Such variety did not destroy unity. Methods must not be confounded with fundamental principles. Methods are only means to ends. Buildings, forms, music, etc., are only helps towards the true purposes of the Church—the salvation of souls, and welfare of mankind, in which every member should take a share, denying self, imitating the example and obeying the Word of Christ—"Heal the sick, preach the Gospel." Many are perplexed when they think of great sections of the Christian Church ignoring each other, There are the Roman, the Greek, the Anglican, the Lutheran, the Presbyterian, and the other Protestant Churches. The Church of England includes about half the population of this country; the other half comprises other bodies.

In America there are still more numerous subdivisions. How, then, can we recognise the unity of the Church? By recognising agreement in the fundamental principles of Christ and the Apostles, and not by insisting on the arrangements and methods adopted by any particular Church. He is a bad Churchman who is not loyal to his own Church's laws and own authorities, but tries to imitate some other; to introduce other ceremonies; to exalt inventions of men and mechanical methods above the grace of Christ; to be ruled by mediæval traditions rather than primitive practice and the teachings of the Reformation; to put unnatural meanings on plain instructions; to alter and shape his own Church according to the customs and laws of some other Church; adding to the teachings and institutions of Christ and the Apostles as necessary what cannot be proved from Scripture, but is only based on the authority of man.

Very often the question is asked, "Is he a good Churchman?" He is a good Churchman who thinks more of purity of doctrine than majesty of organisation; of the Word of God than vague tradition; of the essentials of all true Christianity than the special arrangements and methods in reference to which Christians may differ; who holds the Article of his own Church, which teaches that every congregation is a church where the Gospel is faithfully taught and the sacraments duly administered; who acts on the broad teaching of Christ, "Where two or three are gathered together in my Name, there am I in the midst of them," and "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out."

He is a good Churchman who, instead of aping some other Church, is faithful to his own; and who, instead of making ceremonial his standard, and multiplying altar-cloths, abounds in love to all who love Christ, and regards as the essential sign of Church membership, "whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, and of good report." Christ is the greatest Teacher of true, universal Brotherhood. The Church is not a sacred class, but the general company of all believers banded together in his Name to teach the ignorant, liberate the enslaved, help the poor, save the lost—"The salt of the earth," the "light of the world."

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, MARCH 18.—ISAIAH XIX.

From Judah's enemies the prophet turns to Egypt, which had often been its ally.

Internal Discursion (1-15).—In Hebrew Egypt is Mizraim, a plural form, denoting its division into Upper and Lower. (2) Sevechus, or So, the ally of Hosea, was driven into Lower Egypt, and Sethos, one of the priestly caste, remained supreme at Memphis. (3) When men have left the true God they abandon themselves to superstition and idolatry. Credulity is the shadow and curse of unbelief. (4) This may refer to Nebuchadnezzar, but it has often been Egypt's fate. (6-8) The river of Egypt is her mainstay. This is no doubt a metaphor for the destruction that was imminent. The sixth verse should be read in the R.V. (9) The flax and cotton crops were also a great source of maintenance to the population. "Networks" should be white or cotton cloth. (10) "Her pillars," i.e., the "nobles, are broken down, all labourers for hire are grieved at heart." (12) The wisest counsellors avail little when God hides his purpose from them. Noph is Memphis. (14) Can the present scarcity of work through England be the consequence of God's controversy with us as a people?

Symptoms of Repentance (16, 17).—Fear of approaching judgment has often been the precursor of repentance, as happened in the case of Egypt.

A Blessed Reformation (18-25).—Struck with terror, Egypt would turn to Jehovah for mercy. "To speak the language of Canaan," indicates the adoption of the custom and worship of the people of God. "The city of destruction" might be rendered "the city of Heres," and some think that this prophecy was fulfilled when a temple was erected at Heliopolis, on the model of that at Jerusalem, but it seems better to take Egypt as being an extreme case of the enemies of God becoming humble subjects of his reign. (23-25) These three had been perpetual foes, but such would be the effect of their commom adherence to God, that days of amity and unity would follow, and a beginning would be made of that great international commonwealth which is the dream of the present day.

MONDAY, MARCH 19.—ISAIAH XX.

Alarmed by the rapid successes of Assyria, a small section of the people of Judah advocated an alliance with Egypt. To arrest this movement, and lead to single-hearted trust in God, Isaiah foretells by a symbolical action the speedy subjugation of Egypt.

(1) Sargon, having completed the capture of Assyria, sent his general, Tartan (2 Kings xviii. 17), to attack the Philistine cities preparatory to the invasion of Egypt. Ashdod was one of the chief of these. The Assyrian inscriptions confirm each step of these prophecies. A memorial tablet of Sargon has been found in Cyprus, showing that he carried his conquests to that island.

(2, 3) The prophets wore mantles of sackcloth. Of this Isaiah divested himself, wearing only the dress next the skin. This he did for three years. Those who utter the word of God must not dispute any command of his on the ground of its discomfort. And, indeed, our lives must witness to the truth of what we affirm. (4) The captivity of the Egyptians.

(5) The disappointment of Judah in the failure of their boasted ally.

(6) "Of this isle," i.e., the coast bordering on the sea. If so strong a state as Egypt could not withstand the onset of the victorious host of Assyria, how could the Jewish State hope to survive? Those who trust in man will be ashamed of their trust. But disappointment in creature-confidence should drive us to God, who cannot disappoint, and who will never fail those who trust Him, however weak.

TUESDAY, MARCH 20.—ISAIAH XXI.

This chapter is filled with predictions against Babylon, Dumah, and Arabia.

Babylon (1-10).—The prophet speaks as though he were a watchman beholding its destruction by the Medes and Persians. The south is the great Arabian desert, the whirlwinds that sweep over it are peculiarly terrible, and break on Babylon with terrific force, and Elam is Persia. The treacherous dealer may refer to the stratagem employed by Cyrus in the capture of Babylon, when he diverted the water from the bed of the Euphrates. Ah, what sighing had been caused by the oppression and tyranny which was exercised within those walls. (3, 4) It is as though Babylon herself is speaking with one voice from the banquet hall of Belshazzar. (5) These are the orders of the king, that a banquet should be prepared, and the watch tower manned, and that the princes should feast, prepared for battle. (6-8) "Horsemen in pairs, a troop of asses, a troop of camels." The Persians used all these beasts. The watchman's cry is like the voice of a lion. It is so that we should stand continually to watch for the advent of the Lord. (9) This is the second part of the watchman's reply. The word "answer" is constantly used of the resumption of speech. The Persians were monotheists, and great destroyers of idols. (10) What a tender address is here! God describes the Jews as his threshing. He gives the flail into no other hand. His people are the corn of his floor, and He will not always be threshing.

Dumah (11-13).—This is a tribe or region in Arabia (Gen. xxv. 14). A voice asks if the night would soon pass. The question is addressed to the watchman already referred to. 12.—Morning for God's people, night for his foes. But there is more to be said which cannot be uttered, which will be disclosed to them who come again with their inquiries. God's answers are never final, they always suggest more to follow. This question is answered Rom. xiii. 11. Arabia (13-17).—The caravans of Dedanites would be driven into fresh districts for fear of the invader. (14) Tema, another tribe, would succour them, preventing—i.e., anticipating—their needs. (16) The hireling exactly counted his days of service. So exact would be the withering of Kedar's glory. (17) Kedar here represents the wandering tribes of the children of Ishmael, who should become few.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21.—ISAIAH XXII.

A prophecy of the siege of Jerusalem, called "a valley," because though seated on hills, it was surrounded by still higher ones. It occurred in the fourteenth year of Hezekiah, whose preparations for water supply are described (2 Chron. xxxii. 4, 5, 30).

The Commotion and Preparations of the Besieged (1-14).—(1) The watch of the populace from the flat balustraded roofs. (2) The frenzied excitement, and the corpses of the slain by famine. (3) The attempts made by the leaders to escape from the city, and their capture by the light-armed troops of the enemy. (4) The anguish of the patriot prophet. (5) The mournful cry of the people which reaches the mountains as a breach is made in the wall. (6-7) The assault of the foe, the quiver of Elam representing the light-armed troops, the shield of Kir the heavy-armed troops. (8) The dismantling of the fortresses. (9) The repairing of the walls and stopping of the Brook Kedron from flowing outwards, so that it might accumulate for the benefit of the citizens. (10) The numbering of the houses to see which could be most easily spared for the repairs of the wall. (11) The eager endeavour of human wisdom to make all possible preparation, to the ignoring of God, through whom these defences had been made, and this fountain given long ago. (13) The reckless revelry of the people in spite of God's call for mourning on account of sin (Jer. xviii. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 32). (14) The inveterate sin of the people. All these points graphically described the condition of Jerusalem under the pressure of Sennacherib's attack.

The Denunciation of Shebna (15-25).—Shebna was probably a foreigner, prefect of the palace ("over the household"). He led the irreligious party that resisted the prophet's warnings. (16) This solemn denunciation was uttered on the spot where he was building a grand sepulchre for himself and his family. (17) He was to be carried into captivity, and covered with confusion. He was to be whirled round and round as a stone in a sling, and then cast away. (18) "There shall be the chariots of thy glory, oh thou shame of thy lord's house!" (20) Eliakim is afterwards described as occupying Shebna's place (ch. xxxvi. 3-22; xxxvii. 2). (22) The phrase is figurative, and indicates the sustaining of government. Eliakim is obviously a type of Christ, who becomes the stay and support of his people. Jesus has the key of David opening all doors before us (Rev. iii. 7). (24) Every believer is a vessel great or small, and all hang on Him. (25) He shall never give way. None of them that trust in Him shall be disappointed or fall.

THURSDAY, MARCH 22.—ISAIAH XXIII.

Destruction of Tyre (1-14).—Ships of Tyre returning from Tartessus (coast of Spain), would be unable to enter the harbour, because it was choked with the rubbish. They would learn this at Chittim (Cyprus), where they touched. (2) Instead of the din and murmur of a great city, the isle on which Tyre was founded would be still. (3) There was much traffic between Tyre and Egypt, from the corn crops of which nourished by the Sihor (i.e., Nile) the Syrian merchants derived great revenues. (4) The sister city of Sidon is bidden to listen to the complaint of Tyre, the stronghold of the sea, at the sudden failure of youth and maiden. (5) Egypt is horror-stricken when she hears the story of Tyre's fall. (6) The remnant of her people is bidden to emigrate to Tarshish. (7) The majority will have to go on foot to sojourn in the land of captivity. (8, 9) None had dared to do this against the city which had given crowns, many of her colonies being kingdoms, except the Lord of Hosts had willed it. (10) It would seem as though Tyre had originally sprung from Tarshish, and now she was to revert to her mother city, as a river without restraint. (See margin.) (11) "Jehovah gave commandment against Canaan," R.V., i.e., the northern part of Palestine. (12) Even though the people should escape to Chittim, there would be no rest for them. Her colonies would repay her former tyranny. (13) Chaldea, a tribe of mountaineers, worse than even the Assyrians; Nebuchadnezzar more terrible than Shalmaneser.

Its Restoration (15-18).—This seventy years refers to Nebuchadnezzer's assault. Babylon's overthrow by Cyrus brought the same deliverance to Tyre as to Judea. As a forsaken courtesan will try to win back love by her songs, so would this great commercial centre seek to attract her former commerce. (18) Commerce a servant of the Gospel, consecrating its gains to the service of God.

FRIDAY, MARCH 23.—ISAIAH XXIV.

This and the three following chapters form a single prophecy, describing the calamities that were to desolate the world, by which the people of God were to be chastened and purified. It primarily referred to the desolations wrought by Nebuchadnezzar, but it also describes the course of the world's history.

Calamity (1-12).—(1) Man's sin reacts upon nature. 2. God makes no exceptions. (3-6) There is a mysterious sympathy between man and creation which groaneth and travaileth until the manifestation of the sons of God. (7-9) The lament of the vineyards, where desolation reigns. (10-12) The silence that reigns over a great city when plague and war have decimated its population.

Mercy (13-16).—There is always a goodly remnant which in time of harvest remains upon the topmost boughs. The survivors from the Divine judgments, who had escaped across the sea, should adore Jehovah for his greatness and mercy. (15) The fires may be the East in contradistinction to the isles of the West; some of the fugitives would go thither. Or the fires may stand for tribulation. May God give us grace, to glorify Him there! (16) To whatever part of the earth the fugitives went they would celebrate the glory of the righteous, or perhaps better of the Righteous One. The dispersion of the Church in the early days carried the music of the Gospel everywhere. Wherever we go, to the farthest lengths of sorrow or distance, let us carry songs with us.

The Instability of all Worldly Things (16-23).—"I pine away," Jerusalem cries. The treacherous dealers are foreign nations. (17) Imagery of hunting. Fear is the shout driving the game into snare and pitfall. (20) The "cottage" may be rendered "hanging couch," or hammock. Ah, how insincere is the reliance of those who have no other hope or trust but the transient things of time (Heb. xii. 28). Let us set our minds more stedfastly on the Kingdom that cannot be moved. (21, 22) Days are coming when Christ shall put down all rule and authority and power, when the greatest shall stand before Him, as a file of prisoners waiting for the dungeon. (23) After the overthrow of the world-kingdoms, that of Israel, God's ancient people, shall be set up on Mount Zion.

SATURDAY, MARCH 24.—ISAIAH XXV.

A song to celebrate the triumphs recorded in the preceding verses.

Praise (1-5).—(1) All prayer should include adoration. Let us review the past. Bethlehem, Calvary, Olivet, can each tell of a wonderful thing. (2) The traveller on the plains of Babylon has every reason to appropriate these words. (3) The greatest peoples shall yet glorify God. Not only because of his strength against the strong, but because of his tenderness and mercy to the distressed and poor. (4) See how God suits Himself to our need. Art thou poor, needy, storm-driven, oppressed beneath the heat of temptation? Thou shalt find the appropriate help in God. (5) The cloud draws its veil over the burning sun, and mitigates its heat, so does God relieve the sufferings of the oppressed. "The Branch," i.e., the "exulting song" of the terrible ones, their song of triumph, would be hushed.

Salvation (6-9).—Mount Zion, identified no less with the new covenant than with the old, is the symbol for Gospel privilege, and it shall literally be the centre of attraction for the whole world. There, in the latter days, the Gospel feast shall be spread, and thither shall nations converge in a mighty Christian confederation. (7) The veil of mystery covers the future. We peer into the unknown in vain. Mankind is largely ignorant as to the future life, but all this shall be at an end. The resurrection of Jesus Christ and of his saints will solve all problems and answer all questions. (8) There shall be no more of the anguish that now attends the dying moment. The tear of the mourner shall be wiped, God's people be justified, and the Word of God will be fulfilled. (9) Oh, happy day! When it dawns, the children of God will be triumphantly vindicated. Through long centuries they have waited for Him, bearing obloquy and reproach, but now they shall shine as the sun.

The Unsullied Future (10-12).—Moab personifies the enemies of God. They shall never raise themselves again in triumph over his people. The hand of the Protector shall rest on Mount Zion. The destruction of the foe shall be effected by Jehovah-Jesus, spreading forth his hands on the cross. Then for a thousand years the world shall celebrate her long, unbroken peace.

ST. PAUL'S MUSIC LESSON.

Notes of an Address to Children.

Making melody in the heart.—Eph. v. 19.

This text is taken from St. Paul's music lesson, all of which thoughtful and musical boys and girls would do well to study. Nor can they begin too soon, for music is an art which must be begun early in life, if proficiency is to be attained. Especially is this the case with heart music. Those who put it off till they have grown up seldom become good players.

There are two ways, as you may know, of producing music—one by the voice, and one by an instrument.

A fine scholar—Dean Alford, who translated the New Testament from the Greek language into English—made this text read thus: "Singing and playing is your heart." There is no doubt that Paul meant this, for we well know that the heart is a musical instrument, intended to make melody for God. No boy or girl could have a nobler aim in life than to produce such music; no life on earth could be more useful and more blessed than theirs who diligently practise this gracious attainment day by day.

You may have already begun the study of music, perhaps you play on the piano a certain set time daily, and you may have discovered that your friends did not think that your earliest attempts were very melodious. But that did not discourage you; you persevered; and now it may be your happy experience that others, as well as yourself, derive pleasure from your playing.

Here is another instrument which you would do well to study—the Apostle Paul presses it upon your attention, the heart. If you produce sweet music from it, you will not only be pleased yourself, your parents also will share in your pleasure; God Himself will be well pleased. Ah! to do this you will require to study diligently, and practise every day.

When one wishes to begin to play a new instrument perhaps the first thing to be done is to purchase it. If you consult the advertisement you will see that they say, "Buy of the best maker." But a heart you have already, made by the best maker—God. When it came from his hand it was a perfect instrument, not a note was out of tune. But it met with dire disaster; it fell, it was broken, and now it is all out of order. No one can bring music out of it. Plenty of discord if you like, that you may hear any and every day. Nothing will do but it must be taken to the Maker. He who made it, He knows how to renew it. Nothing can please Him better than that his own handiwork, out of order, should be taken to Him to be made new. Do not be afraid, the voice of a little child asking a favour is to Him well-pleasing. Will God answer your prayer? you ask. Of course. He is more willing to do it than you could be to have it done, eager though you may be. No one can say that He has ever said "No" to such a prayer.

With regard to your piano at home, when it came from the maker it was in perfect order and tune. But it did not keep in tune. A man whose profession was a tuner had to be sent for, and now he comes at set times to tune it. And so it is with the heart; it does not keep in tune. There are evil influences never very far away, and they cause discord in the human breast.

What, then, is to be done? God, who made the heart, and who renewed it, has also provided a tuner for it. His name is the Holy Spirit. He needs not to be sent for to come at stated times. He loves his work so well that He is willing to live with you always, so that the heart never may get out of tune. He has a gracious power; with his aid the owner of the heart grows in favour with God and man. How good God is! The strings of the instrument are so many, and so delicate, so liable to go wrong, that to produce sweet music in the heart we need to live in the presence of the Holy Spirit.

There is a string—the will—let self but breathe on it, and it is out of harmony. Listen, do you hear that murmuring! Because mother did not give you your own way, the music died out. The home has lost its sunshine. Why? Just because a certain self is asserting itself against the decision of a wise and loving mother. What will bring the music back? What is that whisper which you and you alone can hear? "Children, obey!" The tuner is at the work He so much loves.

There is another string—desire. Through the eye, or perhaps the ear, some temptation comes, and stays. Straightway there is discontent and discord. I pray you beware! You are on dangerous ground. Follow desire, and it will lead you to the land of sin and sorrow. How much the heart needs the tuner now. He sends the message, "Abstain from every appearance of evil." Put away these thoughts that spoil the music, and yield yourself to do the duties of the day with a whole heart. So the power of the temptation will die away, and the heart will regain its sweetness.

But you may say, "My father has provided me with a teacher for the piano; is there no one from whom I may learn this heart-music? Your Father in heaven is not less thoughtful than your earthly father.

There was One whose heart was always in tune, and who produced a delight to his Father in Heaven.

His name is Jesus. You may remember how on two occasions God made it shown by a voice on high that He was well pleased with Him. No one could make heart-music like this. You will never attain to his skill. But do not be discouraged; the better your teacher, the better you will learn.

Is it possible, you ask, that Jesus can be a music teacher? Not only that, but He is advertising Himself all over the world to-day in these words, "Learn of Me." So the very best thing you can do is to be one of his scholars. If you do not, cannot, play as well as He, at least it will be the same music.

There is one saying with which great teachers love to encourage their pupils—art is long, life is short. Well Jesus knows how short life is, even at its longest. But He opens up to all who study under Him, knowledge of a life beyond the grave for the study and practice of Heart Music. What is impossible on earth will be easy in heaven. There every heart will be in harmony; there the storms of temptation will never ruffle the strings. What grand music there will be!

Besides the sons of men, God has other choirs. There are angels to whom music is a delight. But surely the noblest music God can hear must come from human hearts. For they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb.

MR. NEWTON JONES.

This Sunday-school Union evangelist has just completed a week's meetings at Norwich. The attendances at both the young people's meetings at 6.30 and the adults and senior scholars at 8 increased nightly, till on the last two nights the Prince's-street Lecture Hall was filled. The Bible readings also were largely attended and proved a time of great blessing. Throughout, the power of God was greatly manifested, and many have given in their names as having professed conversion. This has been another proof of what united effort and believing prayer can accomplish. Prayer is asked that the work begun may continue, and that those having professed to have received blessing may become grand witnesses of the truth of the Cross.

The following are Mr. Jones's future engagements:—March 17 to 22, Downton, near Salisbury; March 25 to 26, Chesham; April 1 to 5, Poole; April 7 to 12, Leytonstone; April 14 to 19, Woolwich (Y.P.S.C.E. United); April 21 to 29, Bridgend.

THE CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICE MISSION.

Mr. H. Hutchinson, Woolwich, March 17; Friesland, near Greenfield, March 29; Mr. J. S. Tyler, Castle Gresley, Burton-on-Trent, to March 16; St. Michael's Hall, Old Radford, Nottingham, March 18 to 20; Clifton, Bristol, and neighbourhood, March 30 to April 18; Mr. G. Goodman, Leyton Congregational Church, to March 19; Highbury Quadrant, with Mr. S. J. Hewlett, April 1-7.

THE CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

Anniversary meetings, Thursday, April 5; Rev. E. A. Stuart, M.A., at 3; Dean Lefroy at 6.30, in Exeter Large Hall, Strand.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Sun., March 18, Mark xiv. 17-31; Mon., 19, xiv. 32-45; Tues., 20, xiv. 46-59; Wed., 21, xiv. 60-72; Thurs., 22, xv. 1-15; Fri., 23, xv. 16-32; Sat., 24, xv. 33-47.

THE MISSION TO FLOWER GIRLS.

This extremely interesting and rapidly-increasing class always seems to need some extra help at the end of winter, which is a more or less trying season to them. The girls are of the poorest class, a large proportion being young, inexperienced Irish lasses who are making an effort to earn a livelihood in London. In any time of exceptional distress, through wintry weather or sickness, their sufferings become very great, so that the Mission properly makes a point of helping the more deserving cases in the manner best suited to their need. In some cases the trials of winter will have seemed to exhaust all resources, when absolute ruin can only be averted by some small capital being supplied for a basket or for stock-in-trade.

An exceedingly hopeful sign about the work among adults is the very full attendance at the Sunday evening services at the Foresters' Hall, Clerkenwell-road, the preacher being Mr. Groom himself. The Gospel, as preached in this place, has proved its power by its far-reaching effects. Many go from there to join the various Christian guilds which Mr. Groom has founded in connection with his headquarters at Clerkenwell-close. A large Sunday-school is maintained in addition to the more ordinary work, and this is supplemented by cocoa breakfasts to starving children, which entails a large outlay in the aggregate, although each breakfast costs only three-farthings.

In such a neighbourhood the terrible problem of how best to deal with the starving little ones becomes increasingly pressing. Unless someone cares for them large numbers will be sent breakfastless to school, and in that perishing state will distress their teachers by vainly trying to master lessons for which their strength does not suffice. Anyone who attempted to visit all the lanes, courts, and alleys which abound in Clerkenwell would soon turn heartsick at the scenes of misery and wretchedness which present themselves, for though each may represent so small an outlay, all the available tickets soon become exhausted. Subscriptions are sorely needed for this service.

The Orphanage Homes at Great Clacton, Essex, have now about eighty inmates, and are full, the little girls being generally rescued from surroundings too terrible to be described. Educated in a Christian manner, and industrially trained, these girls will find some useful positions in the world, instead of growing up into a moral curse, as must inevitably have been the case if they had been left to themselves. The Flower Girls' Brigade has withdrawn some 900 older girls from the streets; and, after learning artificial flower-making, these have gone into useful situations. Those who remain to sell flowers in the streets have the club or the guild provided for them—the guild centres in different districts of London being virtually so many branches of a Flower Girls' Christian Association. The work Mr. Groom and his committee have undertaken is thus one which grows in magnitude and interest, the taste for flowers being such that the sellers seem to be continually increasing. These girls have much claim on the sympathy of Christian people, and of all lovers of flowers. Mr. J. A. Groom, 8, Sekforde-street, Clerkenwell, will answer inquiries.

MR. THOMAS EDWARD MURPHY closed a Gospel temperance campaign in Bridgeport, Conn., Sunday evening, February 18, after four weeks of earnest and enthusiastic labour; and he leaves, as the result of thirty meetings, an army of nearly 8000 blue ribboners, who are banded together in a permanent organisation, determined to continue the work so earnestly and faithfully inaugurated by him. It is a source of joy to the good people of the city that Thomas Edward Murphy ever came there. Countless homes brightened and purified, a general quickening of the spiritual life of the churches attest the value of his labours.—N.Y. Independent.

PALAMCOTTAH BOYS' SCHOOL.—This work began in 1844, and hence this is its jubilee year. During the progress of the school much good has been done. Mr. Satthianadhan, for example, who lived and laboured so long in Tinnevelly and Madras, was many years ago a student in this school. The Scripture teaching of his blind schoolmaster was the means God used to bring him to Himself. It has been thought that many who are interested in education as a means of evangelisation among the youth of India would gladly help by contributions towards a jubilee fund proposed to be devoted to supplying the school with suitable furniture and apparatus and books. Communications may be sent through Mr. H. W. Breed, Ravenscroft-road, Beckenham, Kent.

CHINA AND OPIUM.

Much has been written and said during recent years about the opium traffic, and the subject has been treated from various points of view. The Royal Commission regarding the trade in India has of late almost monopolised attention and interest. The commission, however, has taken no account of the fact that the bulk of the Indian produce is exported to China under treaties which were forced upon that country; but the Christian public must not overlook this phase of the subject. While some, through a perverted sense of public duty, might condone the Indian traffic, few would venture a word in justification of one nation, from motives of sordid gain, coercing another to import a drug which can only demoralise and poison those who use it.

Just at a time when this international aspect of the anti-opium question seemed to be dropping out of view, a Chinese gentleman has come among us to call attention to the moral obligations of Great Britain as regards China and opium.

REV. YUNG-KING YEN, M.A.,

is a Presbyter of the American Protestant Episcopal Church Mission in China. He was educated in the United States, and speaks English with deliberation and clearness. He gives personal testimony as to the curse that has fallen upon China and her people through the opium vice; but he speaks in a spirit of love, and with no trace of acrimony or censoriousness. He is regarded by the foreign community in the Empire as a fair-minded and cultured exponent of their views and feelings.

Mr. Yen has refused lucrative appointments to become a preacher of the Gospel to his own countrymen. He is greatly beloved by all who know him for the sincerity and consistency of his Christian life and conversation. He was the trusted representative of his own people at the great Conference of Missionaries held at Shanghai in 1890, when his wise and thoughtful addresses were always listened to with the greatest respect and enthusiasm. He has laboured in connection with his own Mission as teacher and preacher in Wu Chang, the capital city of Hupeh; and latterly has had charge of the native church of "Our Saviour" in Hong Kew, a suburb of Shanghai, and has been a Professor in the Divinity School of St. John's. He occupies the position of vice-president of the Chinese Prayer Union: and enjoys the confidence and respect of the whole native Christian community of Shanghai. He is also vice-president of the Chinese Religious Tract Society.

On Thursday evening last a meeting was held in Exeter Hall to give Mr. Yen a public welcome in England.

SIR JOSEPH PEASE, BART., M.P.,

presided, and, in the course of a brief address, said he had reason to believe that when the official report comes out, of the evidence given before the Commission in India, it will be found that the newspapers have published only one side of the case, and have not taken account of the cross-examination of the pro-opium witnesses. The proceedings in India will shed a flood of light upon the manner in which India is governed; and he was convinced that it will appear that in more instances than one the Indian Government has set the House of Commons at defiance in its course of action. From the very beginning of the agitation against opium, the Chinese trade has been the keystone of the situation. The amount of opium consumed in India is comparatively small, being only about 8000 chests a year; whereas as many as 80,000 chests are exported to China. Into this part of the question the Commission has not inquired; but it is the question which must be patiently agitated.

The speaker adverted to the circumstances under which the opium trade was forced upon the Chinese, and maintained that the rulers of the Empire do not yet feel themselves free to do as they would, because they are afraid of British resistance. Nine-tenths of the opium sent to China is used for the debauchery of the people, and it is important that the Christian public should realise the character of the traffic, and therefore declare it contrary to sound political economy.

Sir William Wedderburn, M.P., pointed out that in estimating evidence, it is customary to consider the personality of the witnesses. It cannot but appear that the anti-opium party are unselfish; whereas the Government officials have great interests at stake, and the bias they have shown sufficiently demonstrates the undesirability of Government having a vested interest in a trade. Mr. T. Snape, M.P., emphasised the same facts.

Mr. Yen followed with an impressive address, in which he described some of the many evils attending the opium habit. He said he appeared to speak for nine missions in China, and many non-Christians who are opposed to the trade; he produced a long document signed by Christian workers, and a bundle of books and pamphlets against the trade by non-Christian Chinese. From his earliest days he had known the evils of opium. Among the incidents he related was that of a family into which desolation entered through the father taking opium. The moral sense was corrupted, and humanity of feeling cast aside; and the little daughter who should have brightened the home was given away, because if she had to be fed and clothed the father's craving for opium could not be satisfied. By and by a little boy was added to the family, but was such that his love for his child must give way. The little one was sent off to a neighbouring mission school. The sad story was simply told, and not without emotion; and in conclusion, Mr. Yen said, "The boy, who was sent to that school, now speaks to you."

God brought good out of evil, and made of the cast-off son of heathen parents a minister of Christ to the million-peopled empire. "In other respects," said Mr. Yen, "my father was a good man, but opium brought him to bad deeds, and broke up our home. This story I have never told in China; and to my own sister, who, in course of years, after I returned from America, came under my care, I have only told a part. I tell you British people, because you ought to know the truth as to the opium vice."

Mr. Yen further told of neighbours and schoolmates who had gone wrong through opium, of great men who had been reduced, and of good men who had been ruined. In Japan, the importer, manufacturer, and trader in opium is put under banishment; and imprisonment is the penalty for encouraging its consumption, or possessing utensils for its use. The Chinese regard it as and, although apologists may say it is a boon, the Chinese, as a people, say, "We do not want it." The merchants of China have said this, and so have the women, who have suffered untold grief through its introduction.

The conduct of the British Empire in the matter is contrary to the law of nations, and contrary to the law of Christ. Britain would not treat France or Germany, America or Russia, as she has treated China. The excuses which have been made by the pro-opiumists would excite British shame if made on behalf of any other nation. Moreover, if pro-opiumists go on saying that the drug is a boon, Britain may one day find herself deluged like China, and her people may be pronounced a nation of opium smokers.

Mr. B. Broomhall moved a resolution declaring that the Royal Commission on the Opium Traffic is an acknowledgment on the part of the Government of the essentially dangerous character of the trade; deploring the absence of any direct reference to the export of opium to China, though that is the central and worst feature of the Indian trade; and inviting the Government to recognise that any action short of the complete abandonment of the opium trade with China will be altogether unsatisfactory. This was seconded by Rev. Thomas Bryson, of Tientsin, who referred to the representative character of Mr. Yen's visit, and commended him to the warm sympathy of British Christians.

TEMPERANCE MAYORESSES.

The Mansion House was crowded out (a daily contemporary describes it as "besieged," and the term aptly sums up the situation) on Friday afternoon by members and friends of the Women's Total Abstinence Union. Long before three o'clock the Egyptian Hall, capable of holding a thousand persons, was crammed. Hundreds in the corridors within and on the footways outside were invited to constitute an overflow meeting. On the platform were many provincial Mayoresses, several of whom are total abstainers. The Lord Mayor having offered his guests a hearty welcome,

Mrs. W. S. Caine gave the opening address. The National Federation of Women's Temperance Associations was formed to extend total abstinence among the masses of the nation at large. Their object, they believed, might be best attained by organising total abstinence among women without regard to other reforms, though many of them were engaged in religious, benevolent, and political work. Over 6,000,000 people, old and young, were pledged to total abstinence, and were free from the evils associated with intemperance.

Canon Barker said the immense gathering was an indication of the enormous interest taken in the cause they were gathered together to promote and advance. The country should congratulate itself on having so many ladies engaged in this great crusade, for whenever a cause was taken up by the womanhood of this country, that cause was in a fair way of gaining the victory.

Miss Ewart, Mayoress of Brighton, in the course of a brief address, remarked upon the fact that women of all classes and denominations had arrived at the conclusion that no other question so deeply affected the interests of the nation as the drink question.

Miss A. W. Richardson said the friends of temperance reform might well congratulate themselves on that afternoon's great gathering. She had been addressing a magnificent overflow meeting in the corridor of that great house, so had Sir Wilfrid Lawson and Miss Docwra. A great impetus had been given to their work by their grand meetings at the Mansion House. As belonging to the "second stage," let them be worthy of the good men and women who had gone before, and had endured obloquy in connection with the temperance movement. No doubt the charge that they were enthusiasts was true; without enthusiasm no cause could prosper. She also spoke of the fading away of scientific fallacies on the use of alcohol, and dwelt on the hideousness of female intemperance in this country.

Mr. Whittaker, M.P., held it to be very suitable for temperance people to hold such a meeting in the centre of a great city, the centre of the greatest empire the world had ever known. The people of London spent every year in drink a sum which, properly applied, would go far to solve the question of the unemployed.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson said the Lord Mayor must be surprised and gratified at such a meeting. He regarded as most satisfactory the interest taken in temperance by women, and dwelt in his own racy style on the present prospects of the temperance cause. The speaker concluded by rejoicing in the advance of temperance teaching.

The Lord Mayor said he had seen a good many meetings in that hall, but that exceeded in number any he had ever seen, which was a proof that the cause was good.

THE NEEDS OF VILLAGEDOM.—An aged tract distributor writes, urging that Christians in villages might do much good by securing and circulating tracts in their districts. If they cannot preach they can, at least, prayerfully give away papers and tracts.

REV. JOHN STOUGHTON, D.D.

THE publication by Dr. Stoughton of a goodly volume, entitled "Recollections of a Long Life,"* is a noteworthy crown to the literary labours of one whose career has been almost coeval with the century. This will be a fitting occasion on which to furnish our readers with a portrait of the venerable and distinguished divine, and with a few particulars of his life-work. Though he has now for some eighteen years been released from the active and arduous responsibilities of the stated Christian ministry, our friend has by no means been idle. This singularly interesting volume (in the preparation of which his daughter has greatly helped him) is one that the biography-loving public would not willingly have missed. Its autobiographical character is less pronounced, we think, than many would have liked; the worthy author has been more anxious to record the many interesting memories he had stored up of notable men who were his contemporaries than to give a detailed history of his own life, whether in its inner or outer aspects. The circumstances of his public life, as well as the bent of his mental constitution, brought him into intimate friendships with many who were outside his own ecclesiastical orbit; so that we have in these "Recollections" many a pleasing glimpse of social life, of Christian fraternisings, and of the public movements that bore on the well-being of all the churches. The recital of the following facts will, we trust, send many readers to the book itself, a perusal of which has been to us a very enjoyable experience.

(From Photograph by Mr. E. C. Porter, 2, The Mall, Ealing, London, W.)

The subject of our sketch was born of godly parents in the city of Norwich, November 18, 1807. His father was a highly-respected lawyer, and was connected with the Wesleyan body; his mother, before her marriage, belonged to the Society of Friends. The management of the boy was in his mother's hands, for the father died when the son was only four years old. He received careful training in his boyhood, and, being intended for his father's profession, was articled to a solicitor in his native city.

Being a child of many prayers, we might reasonably expect that his conversion would resemble the upspringing of good seed, rather than the uprooting and replanting or regrafting of a tree; and it was so. His mind and heart had been imbued in his boyhood with Divine truth, but the distinct development of soul which marked a crisis in his spiritual history occurred when he was about seventeen or eighteen years of age. The overt means of his deciding for Christ were the reading of a discourse of Dr. Chalmers on Rom. v. 10, and a sermon which he heard the same day from a Wesleyan minister on John iii. 16. There was no half-heartedness in his surrender to his Saviour, and this was proved by a speedy determination, if it were God's will, to give up the legal profession, and to devote himself to "the ministry of the Word."

He entered Highbury College as a theological student in the year 1828. At the conclusion of a four years' course, he was enthusiastically invited to take, at Windsor, a co-pastorate with the aged Congregational minister in that town, the Rev. Alexander Redford. The association of the two men was singularly happy during the eight years that the elder survived. It became necessary almost immediately after Mr. Stoughton's settlement in the Royal borough to build a new and much larger chapel. This was soon filled with attentive hearers and earnest worshippers. A great impetus to religious life in the neighbourhood followed, and the pastor was so beloved by his people that great were the lamentations when he decided to accept an invitation from the Congregational Church in Kensington, to become their minister. He left behind him at Windsor large numbers of people who had received the truth into their hearts through his ministry, which had extended over eleven years. A few members of his first church yet survive, and still regard their former minister with feelings of Christian reverence and affection.

It was in the year 1843 that Mr. Stoughton entered on his second and only other pastorate. He speedily gathered round him a crowded congregation and an earnestly working people. He promoted the building of a chapel at Notting Hill, in the hope of relieving the congested condition of his own place of worship. This proved a measure of a merely temporary nature, and it speedily became necessary, in the eyes of his deacons and leading members, to erect a large and commodious place of worship in place of their Hornton-street Chapel. The building was completed in 1855, and almost immediately its large number of sittings were occupied Sabbath after Sabbath through the long subsequent ministry of the pastor. Many were added to the church, especially from the young people of the congregation, and much Christian work of many kinds went on. A hearty spirit of missionary zeal sprang up, and large sums of money were annually raised for the spread of God's truth in the world.

Mr. Stoughton's mental energy was such that, in addition to the diligent discharge of his pastoral duties, he found time for much literary work. For many years he was editor of The Evangelical Magazine, the special organ of the Congregational body. He was a frequent contributor to religious periodicals, especially The Sunday at Home, The Leisure Hour, and The Sunday Magazine. Many books of interest were written by him, among which some are doubtless familiar to our readers. We may mention, among these, "Spiritual Heroes," "The Light of the World," "Stars of the East," "The Song of the Flock," "Philip Doddridge," "Church and State Two Hundred Years Ago," "The Pen, the Palm, and the Pulpit," and "Homes and Haunts of Luther."

The great work, however, which has placed the subject of our notice in the first rank of Nonconformist writers has been his "Ecclesiastical History." The exceeding fairness with which controversial topics were treated, and the love of moderation and Christian feeling pervading these volumes, secured most cordial approval from men of different religious bodies, and many dignitaries of the Church of England sought the acquaintance of one who, while firmly holding his own opinion on ecclesiastical matters, was prepared to see good in other organisations than that of Congregationalism and the various forms of Dissent from the Episcopal Church.

In 1869 the University of Edinburgh gave emphasis to the general verdict concerning Mr. Stoughton's literary work by conferring on him the degree of Doctor of Divinity—an honour which many thought had been too long delayed on the part of bestowers of such distinctions.

In 1865 he was enabled, by the liberality of his people, to carry out a long-cherished desire to visit the Holy Land. The associations and results of that tour gave a powerful impetus to his further insight into Scripture, and to the vividness with which he could picture Bible scenes and histories.

In 1873, Dr. Stoughton went by invitation to the United States as one of the English representatives of the Evangelical Alliance. He received a most cordial welcome from his brethren across the Atlantic, and came home greatly refreshed by the spirit of Christian affection and earnestness of word and work which he had met with in America.

It was not till the year 1876 that Dr. Stoughton resigned his pastorate. He had always had a horror of continuing the oversight of a church till such a time as his people should become wearied of his ministry, or he should begin to feel a failure in mental power. When his determination to retire from Kensington Chapel became known, his friends there and throughout the country determined to mark their high appreciation of him, and he was presented with a handsome pecuniary testimonial, accompanied by expressions of the warmest admiration and deepest respect from Christians of many denominations. His ministry had always been characterised by fidelity to Evangelical principles, by the most tolerant regard for those who differed from him in opinion, by earnest and persevering effort in many departments of Christian work, and by a blameless reputation in public and private life.

There are two points worthy of special notice in this brief sketch. The first is, that our venerated brother has often been heard to say that, as he has grown older, his attachment to simple Evangelical truth has become increasingly strong, and that amidst the endless modern discussions on Biblical doctrines, he is content to rest on those fundamentals of revelation which have been the themes of his discourses for so many years.

The second circumstance is one for which he has sometimes been blamed by over-enthusiastic people. It is that, since the very early days of his ministry, he has refrained from taking a prominent part in the public discussion of political questions. Though a distinctly pronounced Liberal of the John Bright school, the judicial quality of his mind, coupled with the habit of weighing carefully historical problems, would in themselves have rendered him too cautious and independent for a good "party" man. But in addition he has always seemed to shun the heated atmosphere of political excitement, lest it might unfavourably influence his pastoral and religious usefulness.

Dr. Stoughton now resides at Tunbridge Wells, and is, we are glad to say, in the enjoyment of good health, though at such an advanced age.

THE STRANGERS' REST.

On Friday last at the usual workers' meeting, Mr. J. E. Mathieson presided. Mr. McCall (in the absence of Mr. J. Theo Isaac, the hon. sec., on his way home from Egypt) made an appeal for bags for the sailors, of which pattern can be had on application.

Rev. Jas. Stephens gave a well thought out address on "Well pleasing to God." Dr. Neatby followed with a few words, in which he pointed out the desire of the Lord Himself to do his Father's will.

It may be noted that Mr. J. T. Isaac had been expected last week, but has, in the providence of God, been led to delay his return a week. He comes by the Valetta, timed to reach London on Wednesday this week, and we hope the extra week will have made him stronger. He writes with much pleasure of his visits to Mr. Stephen Burrows at Naples, to Mr. Eoll, of Port Said, and several missionaries at Cairo.

DUBLIN VISITING MISSION.

The Dublin Visiting Mission, in connection with the Society for Irish Church Missions, exists for the express purpose of evangelising Roman Catholics. The work of the Mission is of a varied character, and includes visiting from house to house meetings in several centres, and gatherings for mothers. The schools for the poor destitute children have been fairly attended. The report for last year says:—

"To have brought many of these children from the streets and lanes of our city into contact with the Word of God, and not only so, but to have stored in their memory, if not as well in their hearts, many of the '100 texts,' is no small gain to the community at large. We believe that the public little know the good these schools are doing to keep crime from many a home, as these children are often rescued from the haunts of sin and vice, to lead a respectable life, instead of one of vice and danger to the community, which they would probably have done had they not been laid hold of by the Mission.

"As to the reality of the work done, we have the testimony of both friends and foes. The following is a extract received from one of the Professors in the Divinity Schools of T.C.D.—'I have now, and for years have had, great admiration for the organised, aggressive, and successful work in the city; more especially on account of the outcry which is made by "the other side," which is always a sure concomitant of work.' The outcry from the other side may be expressed in the words of a priest in the city. He writes, 'The evil has assumed such gigantic proportions, that our entire strength will have to be put forth for its suppression. Its sleepless activity, and our supine sluggishness, have already reduced nearly every Catholic interest in the city to a state of peril.' This was written in 1883 (Freeman's Journal, March 21st). Since that day, the work of the D.V.M. has largely increased, and the means of reaching the attention of the Roman Catholics enlarged beyond anything we expected at the time.

"Since the last report of the Mission was issued we have had the joy of admitting many adult Roman Catholics into the communion of the Church of Ireland, all of whom had been brought out of the Church of Rome, by the instrumentality of the Mission, either directly or indirectly. It is our belief that the majority of them have become not merely nominal Protestants, but true followers of the Lord."

Efforts are also put forth among sailors and cabmen. The secretary of the Mission is Mrs. Smyly, 35, Upper Fitzwilliam-street, Dublin.

THE SUNDAY OPENING of museums, libraries, and art galleries (says the secretary of the Lord's Day Observance Society) has failed to arouse any interest in five-sixths of the places possessing such institutions. It has failed absolutely to maintain its ground in a fourth of the few places where it has been tried. It has failed to satisfy the crowds who can be attracted by any novelty that is presented to them. It has excited the distrust of the more thoughtful of the working classes, who can see on the Continent, and even nearer home, the close connexion between Sunday amusements and compulsory Sunday work. It has been condemned utterly by the Christian sense of the nation. It has repeatedly been rejected in Parliament. It is a movement which owes half its vitality to unbelieving hatred of all Divine institutions, and the other half to unbelieving distrust of the Divine methods of raising men from their fallen condition to renewed fellowship with God.

ENCOURAGEMENT IN ROME.

Mr. F. A. Freer, of Bristol, in a deeply-interesting letter from Rome, published in the March issue of The Missionary Herald, the organ of the Baptist Missionary Society, tells the story of the conversion of Francesco Prisinzano, formerly a Roman Catholic priest.

Born at Cefalu, in Sicily, of well-to-do parents, young Prisinzano was from childhood destined for the priesthood. Without any personal inclination for the office, or faith in the doctrines or ceremonies of the Church, he was in due course ordained, and became parish priest in his native place. Through the letters of a young man who studied with him in the Seminary, and the study of an Italian New Testament received from him, Prisinzano acquired a knowledge of Gospel truth, and became eager to escape from his ecclesiastical position. Here he encountered a great difficulty, as he was surrounded by friends who had no sympathy with his feelings.

At length, when he had been a priest nearly two years, he determined to act in some way so as to incur the censure of his bishop, in the hope of being called to Rome. With this view he omitted to maintain the tonsure, persisting in the omission after more than one peremptory order. The bishop then suspended him from his functions, and Prisinzano thereupon came to Rome, ostensibly to plead his cause before the ecclesiastical authorities. This was in September last. On his arrival in Rome he asked the cabman who took him to his hotel to give him the address of an Evangelical minister, and the man told him of Mr. Campbell Wall, in Via Urbana. Without loss of time he called upon Mr. Wall, and had the first of a series of interesting colloquies on the subject of Evangelical truth, he urging the arguments upon which he had been taught to rely in opposition to Protestants, and Mr. Wall showing their weakness or falsity.

After overcoming severe temptation to remain a priest, in order mechanically to discharge his functions as a means of getting a living, the young man decided upon a bold confession of Christ. Having procured from Sicily satisfactory testimony as to Prisinzano's character, Mr. Wall baptized him on February 4, in company with another convert, in presence of a large congregation. In the course of an eloquent address, he made a clear confession of his personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and a fervent appeal to those present who had not already done so to accept the offer and obey the precepts of the Saviour.

AN OPIUM EXPERIENCE.

My Dear Sir,—I feel it my duty to state what I know of the effects of opium, which some medical men pronounce "harmless." My husband, General Colin Mackenzie (then Brigadier), was desperately wounded by the mutineers, so that his recovery was despaired of by four medical men. All the Christians, far and near, united in praying for him, and the Lord raised him up, and spared him to those that loved him for twenty-six years longer.

He was a man of exceptionally healthy and vigorous constitution, but when the wounds were nearly healed he was attacked by painful spasms, for which the doctor recommended a little opium. The Brigadier represented that he was unaccustomed to medicine, and was assured the dose was so small it could not possibly do harm. It gave relief, but in a day or two had to be slightly increased. In about a week or ten days, he found it had no effect unless constantly increased, and, with his usual decision, said: "This will never do. I'll take no more." He kept his resolution, but what he endured for the next eight or ten days cannot be expressed. He lay in silent misery; "a horror of great darkness" was the only description he could afterwards give of it, and, as he said, "Death would have been a relief."

He did many heroic things, but I have always thought this was the most heroic of all. So much for this "harmless drug," which we are told "ought to be in every house."—Faithfully yours,

St. Margaret's-road, Edinburgh. H. C. M.

THE CROYDON MAGISTRATES have refused nine new applications for licences, but renewed all the existing ones, with the exception of three adjourned for further consideration.

A KANAKA'S LETTER.

Your letter make my heart very glad. I think about you every day, and all the boys [Kanaka labourers]. Me like see you. But soon we altogether meet in heaven. Then we see everyone belong Jesus, and we will see the face of Jesus too. Himself who died for us. That will be good, when no more pain and no more die. That's what me like. Now we know Jesus only a little bit. Then we will know Him altogether. Supose we work for Him now, and always do what He say, and what He likes. Then by and by our hearts very glad. Every day I think about you. Me think very good we love Jesus more and more every day. Becouse He so good. He love we first time. We love Him becouse He first love us.

I know plenty boys pray for me. Becouse God hears and answers your prayers. He makes my heart so glad all the time. I do think some people here like leave Satan and come to Jesus and trust Him in their hearts. Plenty men here do wicked things. Satan strong here. He all same make men fast with chains. But Jesus can break the chains and save them. This place very hard, all same stony ground. Now me like you pray for me all time. You ask God make plenty Christian boys tell about Jesus to others. So plenty men like trust in Jesus in their hearts. You savee [know] what me talk along you now. When we come to Jesus Christ, and trust Him in our hearts, then God give we the Holy Spirit to stop in our hearts. He help us and teaches us to savee more about Jesus. Supose we no have Holy Spirit, we all same dead. But after He has come into our hearts, He makes us to be born again. Then God tell us something more. He say—we new altogether inside, and we no like do any more what Satan says—you savee what me talk to you?

Our body all same house. Supose Satan stop inside in heart; men like do wrong things. But supose we come to Jesus, Holy Spirit come and live inside—all same master belong house. We don't want do more wrong, we no want to speak our own words any more—only what He tell us to say. Jesus put words inside our mouths. All the time we speak for Him, Jesus He very good Master. Becouse it is true that Jesus who knew no sin was made sin for us, that God might be just, and the Justifier of those that believe in Jesus. Now supose every boy's heart full of Jesus. Then very quick plenty boys and plenty white men too like belong Jesus. He fill your heart with his love. Then we all same river, when big flood come, take everything away. Then we strong all same locomotive when plenty steam inside; he strong plenty, pull along train.

Now, me tell you one thing more. You no teach'im boy before you ask'im Jesus teach you first time. How you savee talk? you ask Jesus put word into your mouth. Word of men no strong; word belong Jesus, strong, plenty. You ask God make his Word all same spear in people's heart. Me pray for you all. Me very glad to hear you try to catch men for Jesus. Tell all the boys me no forget them in my prayers. By and by we all meet in heaven. Talk belong me finish. God bless and teach you much more about Jesus.

NEW HALL MISSION, WELLINGTON.

This Shropshire Mission, founded by the late Dr. J. E. Cranage as the outcome of the Irish Revivals, 1859-60, in a hall which is believed to have been the first erected in this country specially for undenominational evangelistic work, is being carried on under the superintendence of Mr. Robert Weston. The report just issued states that "the work during the past year has gone on steadily in all its branches. We commenced with special services, conducted by Mr. John B. Rochfort, of the Evangelisation Society, and we believe many found help from them. In May we held our Children's Anniversary Services, when Miss Rouse, of Blackheath, gave two very earnest addresses to the young people and their friends."

The operations include mission services, children's services, mothers' meetings, Scripture Union, Band of Hope, Bible classes, prayer meetings, and a special weekly meeting for young men. During the summer open air work is actively carried on, and in the winter cottage meetings by a band of earnest and hearty workers. The address is Mr. R. Weston, Carlton House, Wellington, Salop.

THE GOSPEL IN MEXICO.

Mr. Eglon Harris, of Orizaba, Mexico, continues to send encouraging accounts of his work there. He writes that as a possibility of doing much good work is daily impressed upon him, he thinks it is not premature to ask the Lord to fit and thrust forth into the country some true soul-winners. He writes:—

"There is a need of some of the more highly-gifted young men in our English gatherings, who could cast forth the net in these waters and bring in a good haul. The experience of any one of the days we spend now in the villages would decide a soul-lover to leave all to follow Christ here.

"A fortnight ago Brother Vicente was distributing tracts and seeking to speak for the Lord in Barrionuevo, and a well-to-do Indian listened to a talk about the Ten Virgins. Afterwards, wishing to buy a Bible, he offered a costly sword as a pledge, as he had no money with him. Vicente said that he could not carry the sword, as the Lord of the Bible says, 'Thou shalt not kill,' and the sword is carried to kill people with. He then read what is said of murderers, and of their portion in the lake of fire. The man's conscience was touched, and he said he would on the morrow be at a place agreed, in order to buy a Bible. For some reason he was unable to keep his engagement, but as he could not forget what he had heard, he set himself to search out 'the man that sells Bibles.' When our brother arrived home yesterday he found this man waiting with another whom he had brought to hear the same story. After some hours of conversation, they went off to their village, each with a purchased Bible in the hand, and, we trust, the freely given grace of God in the heart. 'I shall never,' said one, 'carry that sword again.' I mention this as it is the latest, but it is only one of many such encouragements we have.

"I spent last week at the coast. Going and returning we passed through Vera Cruz, where each time we had preaching in a private house. The Lord gave much liberty in speaking the truths of the Scriptures, and afterwards all as one expressed deep thanks. Two days were spent in Kacotalpans, but two whole weeks would not suffice to go over the town in the same house-to-house way of evangelisation. We had not been at work two hours before the 'cura' was aware of it, and he immediately went to the schools and ordered the children to go home and tell their parents that two heretics were selling bad books and teaching bad doctrines, and to say that he forbade them to buy or to listen. Some obeyed, but on the whole this advertisement was good for us. From early morn till night listeners to the 'buenas nuevas' were not wanting.

"Recently the Lord gave us cause for a special thanksgiving meeting. While we were gathered around the Lord's Table on Sunday evening some men outside set fire to the house. In a few moments we were surrounded by flames and smoke. We set to work, and with the Lord's help saved the house by tearing down the burning part. My clothes were burnt, and some of the things, but we were thankful to be able to get the room in order by Tuesday night for our usual meeting. For some time we have been annoyed by throwing of stones, filth, etc., breaking of windows, and robbing of books, chairs, and curtains. Now, I trust, they have done their worst. We are in the Lord's hand, and we have his promise that 'Nothing shall by any means harm' us.

"I have this week been written to from three places, each over eighty miles from here, and a still greater distance from each other, asking me to been 'Come and help.' To each I have unwillingly forced to reply, 'I cannot come at present.' Besides, they do not want a flying visit such as I might give them if funds would allow, but they need and ask for 'one to live among them to care for their souls.' From Harotalpam I have received a letter from twenty-five men, asking 'Help and protection,' ready, as they say, to 'at once form themselves into a Protestant congregation.' This would be a good centre for a grand work up and down the River Papaloapan."

Communications for Mr. Harris may be sent to the care of Mr. John Mercer, "Rufford," 143, Dickenson-road, Rusholme, Manchester.

MR. GEORGE BLAIKLOCK has concluded a very successful week's mission at North Walsham. The town hall was crowded out each evening, and during the week 105 pledges were taken.

THE BRUSSELS CITY MISSION.

This mission was begun in 1880 under the direction of Pastor N. de Jonge, with the assistance of a small committee, consisting of Lord Radstock and others. From a report received from Pastor de Jonge we glean the following facts. Brussels is a city full of godlessness and immorality. The population (about half a million) is nominally under the Roman Catholic Church, but the greater proportion of them are utterly without any religion. The result is that spiritually and materially there is great misery.

The Belgian Missionary Society has been actively engaged for more than fifty years in evangelisation and forming churches, but the darkness in Brussels and throughout Belgium is great. Concerning the Brussels City Mission Pastor de Jonge must tell his own story. He says:—

"God has blessed the work abundantly. He has heard our prayers. Sometimes, it is true, the way is rough and dark, but God's faithfulness is as great as his strength. In the course of time our work has greatly extended. We began in a tent, and now we have several buildings where the Gospel is preached, as so many tokens of God's faithfulness.

"The Lord has given us the Shiloh Chapel in the Suburk Laeken, with several adjoining meeting-rooms and the home of the doorkeeper. In this chapel there is room for 500 people. The Bethlehem Chapel is in the suburb Anderlecht, with adjoining meeting-rooms. In this chapel there is room for 150 or 200 people. The City Mission Printing Office, with its adjoining book-binding office, is situated behind Shiloh Chapel, and works with two fly-presses. It is of great blessing to many in Belgium who have never before read or heard the Gospel.

"All these buildings, with the ground on which they stand; belong tax-free to the City Mission. every evening the Gospel is preached in the Shiloh and Bethlehem Chapels. There is not one day in the year that these buildings are not used. In the first (besides the public meetings) are gathered a women's meeting, a Young Men's Association, a Young Women's Association, a friends' circle. Five times a week religious instruction is given, and every evening a sewing class is held there. In the second (Bethlehem), besides the public meetings, there is a social circle and a Y.M.A. Grown up people and children have here besides their classes for religious instruction.

"In both chapels the Sunday-schools are well attended by not less than 200 Roman Catholic children. At the City Mission printing office three weekly papers are published, i.e., 'Christian Popular Papers,' 2700 copies; 'Glad Tidings for the Dutch,' 18,000 copies; 'Glad Tidings for Belgium,' 1600 copies. Besides these, larger and smaller writings are printed in Flemish and French, and spread by ten thousands in Belgium. Five evangelists (converted Roman Catholics) are our faithful workers. They each have their fixed salary, and up to this day the Lord has enabled me to pay it to them.

"Besides the above-named mission houses we have some gatherings in the surrounding hamlets and suburbs. All this God has given us and provides for. We have many friends in England and in the Netherlands who help us not only by their gifts, but also by their prayer of faith."

WILLING TO WORK.

A little while ago, writing in our pages on South America, Mr. C. F. Bright emphasised the great value of tract distribution on a large scale. A lady now writes:—

"I wonder if the words of Mr. Bright on 'Methods of Work' have taken such a hold upon any reader as they have upon me. Day and night they are with me. God has not given me money, but He has given me health, strength, and desire to undertake this special work. Things might not always go smoothly. But whether in toleration or opposition, the promise of the Lord standeth sure. Is there any lady possessed of means, and willing to go out to Canada, or elsewhere, for six months, bearing the expenses of a companion (as well as her own) for the Master's work? Or are there others willing to bear the expenses of two persons? A very large quantity of tracts, portions of Scripture, and papers would be required. I am willing to offer myself, if supported. Who will help? Who will be a companion?—Address, A. W., 12, Paternoster-buildings, London, E.C."

POSTAL & TELEGRAPH EMPLOYÉS.

In connection with the anniversary of the Postal and Telegraph Christian Association a series of meetings, extending over two days, was held last week in the City Temple. These meetings were largely of a spiritual character, including conferences on "Soul Winning," work in "The Junior Branches," "Intercessory Prayer," and "Power from on High," led by Mr. W. Sloan, Revs. J. A. Bevan, Gregory Mantle, E. W. Moore, and Gelson Gregson.

The report states that: "One of the chief points of interest in the past year's history has been the very real work done by the members themselves. The revival of two branches in South Wales and the opening of a Midland branch came to pass through the prayerful efforts of one London and two Bristol postmen during their holidays; the origin of the Young Women's Christian Endeavour Band, which is a growing power, wherever it has been started. The earnest prayerful efforts of the members, both men and women, are valuable signs of true progress, and a sure promise of yet further advance in the future."

The London headquarters are now removed, it should be observed, from Little Britain to 4, Goswell-road, E.C. The report contains interesting accounts of the work in France, Austria, Germany, as well as in Canada, Cape Colony, New Zealand, New South Wales, and Tasmania. Details are given of the branches in these lands, and the secretaries conclude thus:—"In reading this report many will desire some statement as to the spiritual results of this work, feeling it to be, as it is, the only real test of true service. We praise God He has vouchsafed to use the meetings, members, and workers, in the most blessed of all services—the winning of precious souls, the true extension of his Kingdom. May many more be won to live lives redeemed from all iniquity for his own possession, in this present world, for is it not in such Christ sees of the travail of his soul and is satisfied? In closing, we should like to add a few words about future work; we believe and are sure the work will not only continue but extend and grow, because we believe it is of God. There are yet untouched centres for us to possess in the Name of our God. There are yet many for whom Christ died. It may be our privilege, through his Spirit, to win to his side; let us therefore go forward into those fields where He himself leads and according to his purposes and plans."

The Mass Meeting was held on Tuesday evening at 8.30, this late hour being fixed to suit the convenience of many

Rev. E. W. Moore gave a practical exposition of Eph. i. 17-19, being Paul's prayer for those whom he loved in the Lord. What the Apostle desired for the Ephesian Christians is exactly what we need—growth in knowledge and understanding of the hope of his calling, the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and the exceeding greatness of his power to us-ward who believe. These thoughts the speaker pressed home with much earnestness and intensity of purpose.

Rev. Gelson Gregson, who followed, took as his starting point Gal. vi. 17; and the chief burden of his address was the crucifixion of the flesh as described in Gal. v. 24. He would have all who confessed themselves followers of Christ sink more deeply into the significance and fulness of this truth.

On Tuesday evening the P.T.C.A. Messengers' Conference was held. No one could complain of dulness at the P.T.C.A. Messengers' Conference. It was certainly a lively affair. Lieut.-Colonel Russell made a capital chairman. Messenger-delegates from metropolitan districts, Brighton, Bournemouth, Reading, Sheffield, Bristol, etc., gave short, pithy accounts of the P.T.C.A. work in their various branches. "On our ordinary days we have about fifteen messengers at our meetings; then on our extraordinary days we get larger numbers—ninety boys of a force of ninety-three." Another: "I am a Christian, and jolly glad I am." Another: "A year ago I joined the P.T.C.A., and I am getting on grand." Another: "I have been doing the devil's work in the office, but now mean to serve Christ." These are a few specimens of the messengers' remarks.

The P.T.C.A. secretary from Africa told of the work among the Cape messengers, and of how one named Peter, who, fearful of showing his colours in the office, was standing outside an open-air meeting when suddenly he seemed to hear the words, "Peter followed afar off." Instantly he rushed to the centre of the meeting and sang lustily, not caring for any onlookers. He has since written: "Peter is not following afar off, but as near to Christ as possible."

One messenger from the Eastern district said: "We have no P.T.C.A. secretary in the E.D.; if we had one, lots would come from Stratford."

If any lovers of boys should read this and be willing to help in the messengers' work in London or elsewhere, will they kindly communicate with the hon. secretary, 4, Vanbrugh Park-road, Blackheath, S.E.?

IN AND AROUND GLASGOW.

I would like to give your readers an account of what the Lord is doing here, through the simple preaching of his Gospel. For some months back, we have had encouraging manifestations of his power in many of our centres of Christian work. Great numbers have professed faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, while believers have received light and blessing.

The Free Churches in Glasgow, that unite every winter for special Gospel work among the masses, have finished a most wonderful campaign. The evangelist called to help this winter was Gipsy Smith. Wherever he went the people thronged to hear him, and under his simple, clear graphic preaching, combined with his sweet singing, many hearts were moved and won. The farewell meeting in the City Hall, when about 4000 people gathered to say good-bye to the evangelist, was a clear proof of how the simple Gospel had gripped the hearts of the people. At that meeting not a few of our best evangelical ministers testified to blessing in their congregations.

THE UNITED EVANGELISTIC ASSOCIATION

is also being made a great channel of spiritual blessing to the lapsed masses of that great city. This association keeps Bethany Hall, James Morrison Street Hall, and the Mizpah Hall, constantly open. The poor people pour into these Bethesdas to hear the sweet story of Jesus and his love, and get healed. Many a poor, weary, broken heart we have seen comforted in those centres of rich blessing. This association ought to have the support and prayers of the whole Christian community for the deep practical sympathy it manifests for the perishing thousands in the city. Hundreds have cause to praise God for the blessing they have received through this mission of mercy.

Y.M.C.A.

Then we have Mr. William Oates, of the Y.M.C.A., with the power of God resting upon him, and winning young men for Christ. This is a most important work, and ought to call forth the earnest prayers of all God's remembrancers.

At Grove-street Hall, we have Mr. E. J. Mitchell preaching, and superintending for the Lord. Apart from the great work he and his colleagues carry on in Grove-street, Mr. Mitchell takes charge of the Scottish branch of the London Evangelisation Society, which has a number of evangelists scattered over Scotland preaching the Word of Life. In my journeys I often meet the fruits of the labours of these brethren.

A LARGE FIELD OF LABOUR

AT GARSCUBE HALL

Mr. D. J. Findlay and his large band of consecrated helpers have been greatly used of God in winning souls. Mr. Findlay has long been cramped for room to carry on his aggressive work, but he is soon going to remove into a splendid new building to be called the George's Cross Tabernacle, where he will have plenty of scope for his energies.

The Gorbals Tabernacle has been a place of rich blessing these last three years through the preaching of

REV. JOHN ROBERTSON.

Thousands upon thousands have heard the simple Gospel preached from his burning, loving heart, and the day of our Lord alone will reveal what has been accomplished through this faithful ministry. On Sunday evening, February 25, Mr. Robertson entered upon a fresh piece of labour in the City Hall. The Lord gives him great grace to ring out with no uncertain sound the doctrines of the cross.

In the Tolbooth Hall we have Mr. A. P. Anderson seeking to rescue the very worst of our city, and many of those poor lost ones are being saved from a life of sin and shame through our brother's earnest efforts, for which we praise the Lord, and pray for continued blessing. All the other missions in our city which I have not mentioned, we wish every blessing.

When we leave the city and go out into round about, we find the same manifestations of divine power, and rich blessing flowing in upon the people. In Motherwell we have Provost Colville doing a wonderful work in the Gospel. The largest hall in the town is crowded every Sunday evening to hear the Word of Life, and many trophies of grace are being won for our coming Lord. At Coatbridge, Colonel Buchanan is taking the Gospel to the perishing masses there, and God is saving the people. At Bishopton, Lord Blantyre and his earnest evangelist are hard at work seeking the lost for Christ. At Scotstoun, Lieutenant Crosbie has two halls open and the Gospel is constantly being preached in them, and the Lord is saving souls.

In Kilmarnock, where we have recently been preaching the Word, the people have flocked to hear, and many have been finding the Lord. Time fails to speak of much faithful work in the stated churches, but I believe that Scotland is ripe for a wonderful harvest of blessing; the Holy Spirit is moving upon the hearts of the people, preparing them for the message of the Gospel. All that is needed is God-anointed men to go forth and tell the multitudes the way of life. "Brethren pray for us." W. D. Dunn, Evangelist.

THE CANADIAN NORTH-WEST.

There must be among English readers of The Christian some, and perhaps many, who have sons or friends in the Canadian North-West engaged in horse or cattle ranching, and living during most of the year on some one of the numerous ranches, more or less remote from the town of Calgary, which latter is the principal centre of this industry, and to which the young men so engaged very largely resort when business calls them or when work is not pressing on the ranch.

There are so many temptations to evil in Calgary, and so many places of resort which have an evil tendency and influence on such young men, that I have pleasure in asking you to allow me to call attention to a resort of a better kind, where a hearty welcome is always assured, and where young men may spend pleasant hours without the prospect of any future regret—I mean the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association. During a recent stay in the town I had reason to rejoice in the many-sided usefulness of the Association, the influence of which extends far beyond Calgary itself. There are frequent lectures, and one of these occasions at which I was present, I noticed that all the Protestant ministers of the town were present. On another evening, during an interesting debate, I observed that four-fifths of the young men who took part in it, including the secretary, drew the illustrations to enforce their arguments from cases known to them when living in England, thus showing that young men from England are largely represented, and that persons coming from that land may almost certainly meet with others from their own neighbourhood if they so desire. The difficulties of the Association are chiefly financial, in consequence of the prevailing depression, but the secretary, who is exceedingly well suited for the post, has endeavoured to dispense with all but absolutely necessary expenditure.

The Christian is already received regularly. Readers who may wish to send books or papers should address them to care of Mr. Ball, secretary, Y.M.C.A., Calgary, Canada. Allow me to add that parents and friends of young men in this North-West generally would do well to send them a frequent supply of wholesome publications. In lonely places these are appreciated far beyond their intrinsic value, and often have a much greater influence for good than at home. I am indebted to a lady in England, whom I have only once seen, for a regular copy of The Christian, which is passed on, after reading, to others, and I am also indebted to another reader of your paper for occasional publications.—Yours sincerely, James Parsons.

NORTH AFRICA MISSION.

On Monday, March 5, a well-attended meeting was held in Rome, under the presidency of Mr. John Coldstream, of Edinburgh, to hear a lecture by Mr. Henry G. Harding, of the North Africa Mission, on Tripoli and the Lord's work there.

The lecturer spoke of the special claims of Northern Africa—the wide diffusion of Christianity in these countries during the first few centuries, the martyrs whose blood had consecrated the land, and the utterly dark and neglected condition of the people since the Moslem invasion 1300 years ago. He told of the fruitless attempts made by the Moravians, the French Protestants, and others to found missions in these lands, and finally of the formation of the North Africa Mission in 1881 and the occupation of Tripoli in 1889.

The speaker and his colleague, Mr. G. B. Michell, were sent to Tripoli with many misgivings, and he attributed their success where others had failed mainly to their deep sense of their own helplessness. A medical mission was established soon after their arrival, as apparently the only means by which the people could be reached, and round this all the work centred.

Several typical cases of personal dealing with the natives were narrated, some of which showed that the Gospel is the power of God even among Moslems. Among others, the first Tripolitan martyr of modern days was mentioned, the Imaum of a village mosque, who, converted by the reading of the Word, began joyfully to tell out the good news to his assembled congregation, and for his faithfulness was so severely stoned that he died in a few days.

At the present time the Mission staff in Tripoli consists of two married men with their wives, and one single man, but these are all too few even for the work of the Medical Mission, which reaches about 4000 patients per annum. They are confining their efforts entirely to the Mohammedans, though there are several thousands, both of Jews and Roman Catholics, who are just as needy. It is their earnest desire to extend the scope of their work, especially to do more among the women, but with the present staff it is impossible. The same cry comes from all the stations of the mission. The speaker closed with an earnest appeal for more workers to carry the glad tidings to the perishing millions of Islam.

PROGRESS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

My Dear Sir,—Allow me to thank the unknown person who so regularly sends me, through the office of The Christian, a copy of that valuable paper. After it is read here I regularly post it every week to a lady who, after having spent a good many years in the mission field, has retired through ill-health, and is spending the remaining years of her life in one of the towns in this colony. Thus the "good news" spreads.

Last year my own work here showed progress in all its departments. We found a new out-station in Tembuland among a tribe that has hitherto been scarcely touched. A new branch of our W.C.A. was established, and likewise a new branch of our Y.W.C.A.

The work of evangelising among the heathen was carried on vigorously by our four native evangelists and our six Bible-women (natives), helped by a considerable number of our native Christians. The Lord blessed the efforts put forth, and over a hundred precious souls were during the year won for our Saviour; in one evangelist's district no fewer than forty-five.

There is a strong undercurrent towards Christianity observed among some of the heathen tribes. In heathen homes now are found some, though still wearing the garb of heathenism, who ask a blessing on their food, and even pray before retiring to rest. These "praying ones," as they are called, have been known to meet together by themselves for praise and prayer. That cry which they offer up, "Lord take us and make us thy children. Wash us and make us like a ball of snow," arising as it does out of dense darkness, will surely be answered by our heavenly Father.

As many as forty-nine converts, after spending some time in classes for instruction, were during the year admitted into full communion. Among these were a chief and his wife, both in the prime of life; a man, a cripple from his birth, who had to be brought to the church door in a wagon, and thence carried inside on another man's back; a grandfather bent with age, and his grandson, a young man between twenty and thirty years old. At the close of the year we had 506 members in full communion, and 200 candidates for membership.

Our schools have increased in number, and the attendance has risen to over 600. In the industrial class, where shoemaking is taught, twenty names were on the roll. They made forty-eight pairs of boots, and repaired eighty-seven pairs, while numerous "odd jobs," in connection with saddlery, etc., were attended to.

During the year we had a visitation of locusts, and a devastating deluge of rain. Churches and houses, lands and crops were destroyed. One of our churches at an out station has been blown down, and has to be rebuilt from the foundation. The temporary church at the principal station also gave way, and had to be taken down. Thus we have had to go in a great deal for building, even though the losses sustained by our native people have been such as to render them unable to do much in the way of paying for the buildings. But we look to Him "whose is the silver and the gold" for help. Will your readers plead for the workers and the work in this dark corner of South Africa?

Yours in Christ,

D. Doig Young.

FAMINE IN ASIATIC TURKEY.

We are already well ushered into quite a rigid winter, though snow held off pretty well; but as is its wont here among the Taurus mountains when once it begins, it has piled up rapidly since, aggregating nearly five feet. We may expect ten more at least to follow, early years having seen twenty, twenty-five even!

We are afflicted with famine in parts of our Mission field, owing to partial failure of crops, followed by spoliation through locusts in some villages, and pretty generally by human harpies, certain ones being of rank among the "powers that be." Speculation of grain-dealers proper is bad enough in civilised lands, where the people may realise some money or credit; but how indescribably sad it is here, where, misrule running riot, the grossest poverty settles like a pall over the people, and, worst of all, the peasantry, crushing the very life out of them! If such a state of things could be referred simply to their indolence or incapacity, that would be dark enough for a branch of humanity; but when we have to refer much of it to environments quite beyond their control, that is quite another question, though one not prudent to treat of in public print. Already small distributions are being entered upon by certain parties.

Following the speculations, bribery, etc., of the autumn months, now the Pasha seems aroused somewhat, and in commendable methods working to forestall death from starvation here in the city. But naturally the worst state of things is in the villages, more especially on the Moush plain, where the greatest poverty prevails. There, and in another province eastward, are found those who are seeking to subsist on bread made of bran and flax seed, the oil having been expressed for lighting their dismal houses at night. We have seen with our own eyes certain of them who have had no bread of any kind in the house, but had to subsist on the plainest soup for more than two months.

Added to a living death, there comes such terrible oppression from tax-gatherers as beggars description. Of course the Government is in desperate need of money, and this leads soldiers to ignore such respect of woman as obtained in earlier years. If they are widows, or wives of husbands absent in distant parts labouring, as so many are, in most desperate efforts to send on money, then they are sometimes beaten and insulted most shamefully!

One Who Knows.

[The foregoing statement, which comes to us from an esteemed and responsible correspondent, reveals a sad state of things, and it will, we trust, awaken sympathy that will take a practical form. Any sums contributed for the relief of these famishing people will be forwarded to the proper quarter. —Ed.]

SEAMEN'S CHRISTIAN FRIEND SOCIETY.—The monthly muster of the Christian Harbour Lights was held in the large hall, Ratcliff Highway, on Thursday. Testimonies were given, and pledges taken.

THE ZANZIBAR REST.

Dear Sir,—Having recently returned from a three months' stay at the Strangers' Rest for Sailors at Zanzibar, it may be of interest to your readers to hear of the work. The conditions of life are so different in the East from those at home that it is no easy task to convey an accurately detailed impression of Christian work there. The main thing is to adapt your methods to the existing requirements.

The Rest is situated in as healthy a position as Zanzibar has to offer, midway between the French Roman Catholic Hospital, where our invalided sailors are received, and the prison, free access being accorded to our workers for visitation. The natural beauties of Zanzibar and the surrounding district resemble those of Ceylon. There is the indescribable Oriental charm about it, and but for the insidious, health-destroying character of the climate, I can conceive of no more attractive sphere for Christian effort. There is, of course, the Swahili language to be acquired, to say nothing of Arabic for more advanced linguistic scholars.

The sailors who frequent the Rest are mostly from our men-of-war, and a more interesting class of men to work amongst it would be difficult to find. I consider that lady workers are very desirable at these foreign Rests, as it is often requisite to gain the confidence of the men by sympathetic chat about home and wife and child. It is also necessary to furnish sources of recreation.

At the present time the fort is held by Captain Agnew, the port officer, and his wife, who aim successfully to keep Gospel truth before the minds of those with whom they come in contact, both among the natives and the sailors. But, in a place like Zanzibar, additional means and workers are required to develop the organisations and increase their usefulness. If it were only for Christian sailors, the work needs and asks the practical co-operation of friends at home.

In earlier accounts there have been cheering records of conversions at the Rest, and it is noticeable that those who attend most frequently are confirmed in Christian life and principles. On an average about two hundred visits a month are made at the Rest by the sailors, and there is scope for more. It is proposed to raise funds by means of collecting-cards for five pounds, to be contributed in shillings. Those interested in sailors are asked to communicate with the honorary secretary, Mr. J. T. Isaac, Strangers' Rest, Ratcliff Highway, E., from whom cards may be obtained.—Yours truly,

Ellen Everett.

ON THE TIBETAN FRONTIER.

In The Monthly Record of News and Notes of the Baptist Mission at Darjeeling, Mr. A. E. Shoberg has been describing a tour in Sikkim. At Lachung, on the Tibetan frontier, he met the head-man and other villagers in council, and proposed to send two ladies, able to give them medical aid, to reside among them. They replied that they would give the ladies a hearty welcome, and provide them with a house as long as they wished to stay. Mr. Shoberg proceeds:—"I returned to Cheong-tong and went up the Lachen Valley where Miss A. R. Taylor had been. Many still remembered her with pleasure. Except in two valleys, whose inhabitants are Tibetans, the bulk of the people are Lepchas. Exceedingly few can read or write. On religious topics they are quite indifferent, saying Labes, labes (Yes, yes), to every thing, and then not able to tell you what you have been talking about. If any can be drawn to conversation with any intelligence, they give you to understand that they consider Jesus and Buddha, and the rest of them, as either the same being, or at least one as good as the other.

"As yet there is no prospect of any opening into Tibet. Are we not possibly mistaken in waiting for the opening, whereas the opening may be waiting for us, if we will but go forth in the name of the Lord as Miss Taylor did? Surely the heathen priests never will extend an invitation, and say 'Now our country is open to you, come along!' In capturing a city the besiegers do not wait for the doors to swing open to them, but go forward and make their own way."

On this the editor of The Monthly Record well remarks: "David said, 'By my God have I leaped over a wall.' May not that be the way for evangelists to enter the closed land?"

ORPHAN GIRLS AT BRIXTON.

Among the many and varied forms of charity exercised in this great London, we think that the care of orphaned girls is on many grounds about the most praiseworthy. The Brixton Orphanage for fatherless girls has this added distinction—that it is carried on, so far as its management goes, as a pure labour of love. The excellent lady, Mrs. Montague, who founded it eighteen years ago, and who superintends it still, not only gives time and thought and care, but contributes of her substance; while the secretariat is also voluntary and honorary. "Office expenses," therefore, is an item conspicuous by its absence in the balance-sheet, and the only salaried officials are the matrons and teachers.

There are three hundred girls in the institution, and these formed a pleasantly conspicuous feature at the annual meeting on Monday evening in the Brixton Hall, Acre-lane. They nearly filled up the whole of the spacious platform, and looked very neat and comely in their dark dresses, white neckerchiefs, and blue-ribboned straw hats. The Lord Mayor, undeterred by the wet evening, came all the way from the Mansion House to preside, and discharged his duties with geniality and evident heartiness.

The report for the year, read at the meeting, has some interesting points. Many of the inmates, it was stated, are quite young. The work is unsectarian, and the annual cost of a child is £12. Mental and religious training is earnestly cared for, and the girls are started in life as domestic servants. The many ways in which different friends contribute in kind to the maintenance and comfort of the children are really wonderful, and we are not surprised that the report warmly acknowledges "these ministries of mercy that have brought sunshine into the lives of the bereaved little ones."

The presence of the children was the best possible plea for the Orphanage, but the addresses delivered during the evening were all in the line of sympathy. The Lord Mayor was blunt and businesslike, and gave an interesting little personal touch to his remarks, by informing the company that he began housekeeping in the very road in which the Orphanage is now situated. He read a letter from his old friend and chaplain Rev. R. B. Ransford (who was present), in which the work was described as "a bit of practical Christianity, and a credit to Brixton." Rev. D. Herschell pitied the poor rich who die and leave their millions, while there are so many excellent institutions in want of help. Rev. J. Reid Howatt in a lively speech told how care for the orphaned is a certain "means of grace" to the Christian. Rev. R. B. Ransford sounded the praises of the Brixton Institution; and so did Rev. R. W. Mowll in a much-applauded speech. Mr. Mowll took occasion to declare his total abstinence principles, slyly adding the hypothetical query, addressed to the Lord Mayor, "I do not know, my lord, whether you are one?" The Christian teaching in the institution was highly commended by Mr. Mowll.

The only minor note in the evening's music was a deficit of £170 or thereabouts in the balance-sheet. The collection, and the amounts promised by various tried friends, did not cover that deficit; if any reader, therefore, is languishing for lack of the "means of grace," according to Mr. Howatt's version, they can secure the blessing by a donation to the exchequer of the Brixton Orphanage.

THE PROPOSALS OF THE C.E.T.S. to be discussed at a conference in London, are (1) the gradual reduction of the number of licensed houses, the holders of licences which are refused during the next five years to be compensated by a tax (or higher licence fee) on the remaining houses; (2) public-houses to be closed on Sundays, the licensing authority having power to exempt any district; (3) the licensing and registering of clubs; and (4) a properly-elected licensing board.

A COMMISSION was appointed by the State Legislature of Massachusetts to study and report on the Gothenburg system of dealing with the liquor trade. That commission has reported favourably on the system, and has recommended that it be submitted to the popular vote in Massachusetts. In South Carolina, where, through the energy of a new Governor, a modified Gothenburg method, by which the ordinary liquor trade is put an end to and the State itself dispenses alcoholic drink under rigorous conditions, is declared to be so successful that the State is not likely to go back to the old licensing régime. In both cases the principle adopted is that of popular ownership and control.—Daily Chronicle.

MANCHESTER REFUGES AND HOMES.

The report presented, on Wednesday last week, at the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Manchester and Salford Boys' and Girls' Refuges and Homes, and Children's Aid Society, told of a year of mingled success and anxiety:—

"The figures are larger in almost every department than they have ever been before. The buildings in Frances-street are at length completed, though not yet all paid for. The period of extension seems to be at an end. We are possessed of excellent and roomy premises, with appliances and machinery admirably adapted for the purposes of the institution. It is hoped that the work may now enter on a time of consolidation, and that there may be opportunity for perfecting the organisation in every direction.

"On the other hand, the health of the honorary secretary, Mr. Leonard K. Shaw, who has been the heart and soul of this work from the very commencement, has been such as to cause us much anxiety. Mr. Shaw cannot give so much of his time and strength to the Refuge as he has done hitherto, but we are thankful to say he continues to be our honorary secretary, and to supervise the Orphan Homes at Chectham Hill, the Cripples' Home (Bethesda), and Rosen Hallas, the Girls' Training Home.

"The other anxiety which has pressed upon the committee has been the state of the finances. The deficits are:—On the general account for 1893, £1948, of which £683 has been added during this year; and on the extension account £2721 5s. 4d. These are serious deficiencies, occasioned, no doubt, partly by the depression in trade, which has affected directly or indirectly nearly every class of our friends and supporters, and partly by the removal of old and large subscribers, whose places we trust others will step in and fill. The demands of the extension, to meet which we have set apart most of the legacies that have fallen in of late, will, we trust, ere long be satisfied, and then we may hope to see the general account improve its position."

By means of the various agencies, 2595 children were last year received and dealt with. The fresh applicants for admission numbered 497, of whom 378 were boys, 119 girls.

Mr. W. J. Crossley, who presided over the annual meeting, said that an effort was being made to form auxiliaries in other towns, and so to widen the area of interest in the work of the institution. Sir Forbes Adam remarked that, taking into account the various agencies of the institution, 16,000 cases had received sympathy and help of some sort during the year. Figures such as these were a proof that the Society deserved the support of every good citizen and patriot. Lady Henry Somerset followed with an eloquent appeal on behalf of the Society, and the noble work it is doing among the poor outcast children of the city. The Mayor of Salford also spoke some sympathetic words.

"NOT NOW."

We only felt the winter wind blow chill,
We only knew the cold December sleet,
We looked not for the snow upon the hill,
But only saw the mud that marr'd the street.
We only saw the flower-lined, tiny tomb,
And felt the heartache as we questioned "Why?"
Until He stood beside us in the gloom,
And we knew angels sang her lullaby.

Yes, there are dim, mysterious windings of the ways
By which He leads us—drear, and dark, and long;
We almost falter in the closing days,
Yet are we guided by the angels' song.
Until the snows the sunny looks caress,
Till feet grow weary, and till eyes wax dim,
And we grow restful, in our restlessness,
Longing to hear the dear old evening hymn—

"Sun of my soul, it is not, is not night,"
For in the glory of that wondrous day
The piercing radiance of his fadeless Light
Shall melt for ever every cloud away.
And in the noontide, his own nail-mark'd hand
Will ope the volume of the sacred past,
And what was dim and strange by his love plann'd,
He will explain, and we will know, at last.

CROSSING THE ATLANTIC.

Dear Friend,—After a somewhat stormy but pleasant passage we are just nearing New York. Head winds have delayed us a good deal, but we shall still be in time to reach Boston for Sunday. The comparative rest of ship-board life has been a great refreshment to Mr. Hudson Taylor, who always enjoys being at sea. He is already feeling much better than when we left England.

It has been a great privilege on this little journey to have the companionship of Pastor and Mrs. Stockmayer, Mrs. M. Baxter, and Miss C. Murray, going to the United States for meetings. We have enjoyed several delightful Bible readings together, and much happy fellowship. The presence of the Bishop of Honduras, also, on his way to Belize, has been an unexpected pleasure. We have been deeply interested in all that he has told us of this important sphere. It is his desire to see an earnest Evangelical ministry developed in many places in Central America at present sadly neglected. He will much need the sympathy and support of the Lord's people.

In all the parting from home and loved ones, as well as in looking forward to the meetings to be held in America, and to resuming work in China as the Lord may appoint, one great soul-satisfying word has been much with me, from Gen. xvii., 1 "El Shaddai" (Revised Version, margin), "The God that is enough." From his inexhaustible fulness may we all receive grace upon grace.—Yours in his love and service, M. Geraldine Guinness.

BASTAR'S FIRST FRUITS.

For centuries Bastar has been almost unknown to the world at large. But its fields and jungles, hills and valleys have all along echoed and re-echoed with songs and praises to Ram and Devi. Benighted intellects, souls and bodies, have been (and still are) so given over to the prince of the power of the air, that vileness and flagrant sin seems the normal state of affairs.

Gospel messengers entered its capital city in May last; "in his name" we set up our banners. The language being a mixture of Hindi, Oriya, Halba, Marathi, etc., we found great difficulty in communicating with the people, but faith grew stronger and Christ drew nearer. Two weeks ago our cook—who knows English, as well as all the native dialects—came in tears over the burden of his sins, and that day found the One who is to be desired above all others. His joy and peace have been unbounded, and his mouth speaking "from the abundance of the heart" has since been busy telling the "old, old story."

This week our hearts were gladdened by seeing three other natives realise the joy of salvation, and yesterday, for the first time, our compound resounded with that song of Zion, "Yishu Masih mero prana bachaiya," i.e., "Jesus Christ [is] my life—Saviour."

Let each reader praise God for Bastar's new-found joy, and some friends avail themselves of the privilege of supporting our first convert as their native evangelist in this new field of labour.

A CAMP MEETING IN CHINA.—Rev. E. S. Little, of Kiukiang, China, described a camp meeting held in Han-kia-hin, a place near Kiukiang. While the preparations were in progress the people thought that a theatrical performance was intended, as the stage seemed built for the very purpose. At length their curiosity was set at rest, and throughout a whole week, for several hours daily, the Gospel was preached by missionaries and native helpers. The occasion afforded fine practical training in field work for the young men of the Kiukiang Institute. Some days 1500 or more people attended, and many who had never heard the Gospel before were among the listeners. Mr. Little says: "There were many interested listeners who came day after day, and seemed to be impressed with what they heard. Many, too, said emphatically that what they had heard was true, and they believed it. At the close of the outdoor preaching we held every night a consecration meeting in the church, which was always well filled. There were seasons of great joy, and preachers and members have been praising God for blessing received."

Letters to the Editor.

OUR LORD'S RETURN.

My Dear Editor,—I have seldom read in your pages anything more misleading or more mischievous than "A Letter to a Friend" in this week's Christian, calculated as it is to discourage special conventions for the consideration of our LORD'S Second Coming. The writer grounds his objection upon the plea that it is the person of our blessed Master that we ought to gather round and dwell upon. Why, that is just the main purpose of Second Advent Conferences! Who were the best Christians in the Apostolic age, for whom the Great Apostle has nothing but commendation? The Thessalonian believers, who were so much occupied with the joyful hope of Christ's re-appearing. As I ventured to say in Edinburgh in the October Convention, 1888, our modern Christianity is a very lop-sided affair. The Romish Church limits itself very much to the consideration of the dead and buried Christ, the Reformation Church to the contemplation of a crucified, risen, and ascended Christ; but a full-orbed Christianity goes further, and rejoices in a crucified, glorified, and returning LORD (1 Thess. i. 9-10). There is a shameful silence in most of the Churches to-day upon this great and inspiring theme; and one did not expect in your pages to see discouraging remarks about its discussion and its claims to widespread attention.

I have already challenged the references to this question in the columns of "Evangelical Christendom," and I dispute the accuracy of the inference that the Mildmay Second Advent Conventions of 1878 and 1879 developed such divergences in the teachings on this great question that such conferences were abandoned. The reply to that is that similar conventions were held in 1886 and 1893, as well as one specifically concerning Israel in 1889. In all of these gatherings details were avoided, and the grand outline truths were chiefly dwelt upon.

It does not fall to me to be the champion of Holiness Conventions, few of which I have enjoyed the opportunity of attending. But my firm conviction is that these also have proved the means of rich blessing to a multitude of believers, and of awakening to mere professors. I may be permitted to add that no doctrine of Holy Scripture is so much fitted to produce unworldliness and holiness of life as the true realisation of the blessed hope of our Lord's appearing.—Yours sincerely, James E. Mathieson.

I scarcely think that my beloved and esteemed friend is quite in accord with the facts of the case in characterising the "Letter to a Friend" as peculiarly "misleading and mischievous." I did not "discourage special conventions for the consideration of the Lord's Second Coming," though I did say that "the more discussion there is about the detail of the Lord's coming the more division there is." Mr. Mathieson practically admits the truth and the importance of this remark, when he says that at the Mildmay Second Advent Conventions of 1878 and 1879, of 1886 and 1893, "details were avoided, and the grand outline truths were dwelt upon." So far as this was the case the hearers were comforted, strengthened, and edified. But the meetings which I had in my mind were not of this character. They were such as dwell upon the details more than upon "the grand outline truths."

A circular letter, addressed "To the Conveners of Christian Conferences in the United Kingdom," was published in The Christian of Jan. 5, 1893, and in other journals, as well as sent privately to those for whom it was specifically intended.

That circular emphatically set forth the coming of the Lord Himself as "the blessed hope," and was signed by brethren whose views as to details of his coming widely diverged. The "Letter to a Friend" was written in perfect accordance with that circular, and with the conviction that Conventions advocating one particular view, to the exclusion of and in antagonism to others, would turn attention away from "the blessed hope and appearing of the glory of our great GOD and Saviour Jesus Christ," to arguments about the circumstances of his coming and the experiences of his people in relation to it.

During the past forty years such speculations and discussions have done more to divide those who have held the hope of the Lord's coming than to draw other Christians to set their hope on the appearing of HIMSELF. It is true that a very great change has taken place during that period, and that pre-millennial views have made a wonderful advance. But to hold the doctrine of the Lord's pre-millennial coming is not the same thing as to have "this hope set on HIM," which was the great object expressed by the circular. The brethren who signed it said in the last paragraph: "We appeal to you, therefore, beloved friends, to take into your prayerful consideration the value of a united testimony to the imminence of the stupendous events which attend and follow our LORD'S appearing" [the italics and capitals are their own].

I fear the effect of "Special Conventions for the consideration of our LORD'S Second Coming," whose platform is confined to one school of interpretation, while those of another school, who also signed the circular, are studiously left out, and opposition to their views forms a chief subject of address.

There was a controversy forty years ago which was characterised by great personal bitterness; and in such as remember those days, and took part in that controversy, its resuscitation is calculated to revive feelings which ought, for love's sake, to be for ever buried. Even the world's wisdom says, "Let sleeping dogs lie."

We affectionately appeal to our beloved brethren not to identify the hope set on Him, which leads him that hath it to purify himself even as He is pure, with a discussion or a controversy which may obscure the hope far more than the expectation of dying or of passing through "the great tribulation."

Let us earnestly endeavour to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Let us try to place ourselves at one another's point of view. Let us, with the love that hopeth all things, hope that others may be true at heart even though they may differ from us; and, with the love that seeketh not her own, be willing to admit that our vision does not take in the whole circle of truth.

The Apostle who, in the immediate prospect of death by the executioner, loved the appearing of the Lord, the righteous Judge, has left us his peace-making exhortation: "Let us, therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded; and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God will reveal even this unto you. Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing."

The Writer of the "Letter to a Friend."

Dear Sir,—Allow me, as a constant reader, to thank you for the very wise words, on page 9 of your last issue, contained in the "Letter to a Friend." Many years of Christian work in England, and wide acquaintance with the Lord's people, lead me to endorse every word. At no epoch during the last twenty-five years has there been more to grieve over. In our "associations" disintegration is rife, and until the Lord Jesus is again the centre, his Gospel the theme, and "old paths" the rule, we shall see division and worse evils.—Yours, Viator.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

Dear Sir,—In connection with some remarks on the Acts of the Apostles, by a "Bible Student," in The Christian, of March 1, allow me to present to your readers the following extracts from a course of sermons preached thirty-six years ago, before the University of Oxford, on "Christ manifested in (1) the Gospels, (2) the Acts, (3) the Epistles, (4) the Revelation."

"The special object of the Acts is, that it should be a permanent record of the Apostles witnessing or proclaiming Jesus Christ to men. Or rather, as in the Gospels Christ is held out to us performing his own work, speaking and acting as if personally present; so in the Acts the same Christ is held out to us as proclaimed and certified to the world by those who had been personally acquainted with Him."

"Thus, then, in the Acts of the Apostles, we see principally the solid foundations laid for the spiritual temple of the Christian Church, not the superstructure fully reared, or the last adornments of the edifice completed. The Christianity of this Book is pre-eminently objective. There is little or no logical development of systematic divinity, not much formal theological doctrine, but plain matters of fact, and only the most simple and obvious deductions from them. There is not much description of Christian feelings, motives, or duties, but a most prominent display of Jesus and his work, the great sources from which such duties, motives, and feelings spring."

"Such allusion to the full expansion of systematic and doctrinal Christian teaching as that contained in the words of Paul—'To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgive ness of sins, and inheritance among all them which are sanctified, by faith that is in me'—show that the great doctrines which we find developed in other parts of the New Testament, were not here ignored or contradicted, or may at any time be trivially esteemed—but the purpose of this Book was of another and even more important character—to set forth those primary truths, without which the doctrines thence derived could not have been; in short—to proclaim Jesus Christ to the whole family of man as the one only remedy for lost and suffering humanity." G. A. Jacob, D.D.

JUSTICES' JUSTICE.

Dear Sir,—A notable prisoner came under my notice in Holloway prison, thanks to the Governor, who, having children of his own, no doubt considered that the infant would be best off under the care of the doctor in the infirmary. It was there I saw and questioned him. "Where have you come from?" I asked, "and what is your age?" 'I came from Beckenham," was the reply, "and I am seven next birthday."

Would it not have been better by far that the boy should have been punished, if he deserved it, by his parents, or even by the schoolmaster? If he had been chastised in the presence of his fellow scholars it would have deterred him from offending again, but to send such an infant to prison is bad in every way. The evil influence of those of older years is likely to be brought to bear upon him, who can tell with what evil result? Even suppose he escaped in this matter, he might naturally think in after life, that having been so kindly treated in prison (for who could possibly treat such a child harshly?) he would try prison life again. His punishment, instead of acting as a preventive, may not unnaturally have a directly contrary effect.

I am glad that Sir William Harcourt many years ago called attention to the committal of children to prison, and now all governors of prisons acquaint the Home Office directly they receive such.

No doubt the Home Office officials have communicated with the learned magistrate who sent this child, for I find that he has now seen his way clear to accept bail, but he could not extend this privilege to two other boys who were charged with him, as they had already passed the mature age of ten. I sincerely trust that measures will be taken to prevent the recurrence of such proceedings in the futuro.—Yours faithfully, Wm. Wheatley, Superintendent St. Giles' Christian Mission.

DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES.

Dear Sir,—In your kind notice of the March number of Night and Day, which appeared on page 28 of your last issue, a slight error arose which I beg you will allow me to correct. You speak of "4571 trained boys and girls as having been sent to Canada and the Colonies" from these institutions. The number should have been 6571 up to December 31, 1893. —Yours faithfully, Thos. J. Barnardo.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION IN AFRICA.

Dear Sir,—I have been working hand to hand with Rev. Andrew Murray for twenty years in Christian educational work and mission work. This work has extended rapidly, especially during the last five years. We have now four different centres in different parts of South Africa for educational work, and six for mission work, where those who have been under our training are engaged as missionaries, and there are still openings for further extension.

We believe the time has come to make this work known among God's people, and to ask for their prayers, sympathy, and co-operation. I expect to be in England about May 1, and shall be glad of opportunities to speak in behalf of the Lord's work in South Africa. Letters may be addressed to me, care of Mr. Albert A. Head, Corrie Lodge, Longfield-road, Wimbledon, S.W.—Yours in the Master's service, (Miss) A. P. Ferguson.

Rev. Andrew Murray writes from Wellington, Cape of Good Hope:—

Miss Abbie P. Ferguson is the principal of our Huguenot Ladies' Seminary at Wellington. She has now for twenty years been at the head of this institution, and by the blessing of our God has been enabled to do a most blessed work in training the daughters of this land in the fear of God, to devote their lives to his service. The school has become one of the most prominent centres of Christian influence in spreading a truly Christian education and fostering a missionary spirit.

Miss Ferguson is now on her way to America for a year's rest. She purposes during that time doing something towards procuring funds for very large extensions of our work which we purpose undertaking. She will be glad to avail herself of the opportunity of meeting friends to give some account, not only of what God has done with us, but of all that concerns the extension of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ in South Africa. I take the liberty of introducing her to all God's children, both those who may have heard of us and those who are still entire strangers to us, in the assurance that the welcome and the God-speed of Christian love will not be withheld.

GOSPEL WORK IN THE VILLAGES.—For some time a few friends have been doing good work in villages near Liverpool, of which Mr. E. Cleaton, 3, Chapel-street, Liverpool, has issued a deeply-interesting report. Some stirring incidents are given.

ESSENTIALS FOR CHRISTIAN WORK.

The annual Convention of the Y.M.C.A. of the State of Ohio—some sixty in number—was held this year at Youngstown, a city of 25,000 inhabitants, situated in the north-eastern part of the State. This year's Convention has just closed, after three days' meetings. The purpose of these yearly gatherings is to discuss the work of the past and plans for the future.

At the recent Convention, State Secretary Gordon named the following as essentials for Christian work :—

1. Deep-seated love for and constant study of God's Word.
2. Regular habits of prayer.
3. The enduement of the Holy Spirit.
4. A passion for winning men for Jesus Christ.

Most of the Associations have a training class for personal workers. The classes for Bible students, which branch of work was started in 1889, now number 1728 members. A feature of the Ohio Associations is evening educational classes for instruction in certain of the secular branches. The Association at Springfield (Clark County) has a successful class for manual training.

BRIEF NOTES.

The Associations at Middlesbrough, Wednesbury, and Falmouth are being reorganised.

The Young Men's Era maintains the high level of excellence for which it is now so well known.

The annual meeting of the Ballymoney Association was largely attended, and was addressed by Mr. B. D. Wise, C.E., and Mr. David A. Black, of Belfast.

Redruth annual meeting attracted an overflowing audience to the Druids' Hall. Much blessing has followed the past winter's work of this Association.

The American Y.M.C.A. International Committee is inviting Associations in the United States to observe the Jubilee in June next by special services and meetings.

Over 1000 persons attended the Eastbourne annual meeting the last week. The Mayor presided, and Messrs. W. Hind Smith and D. A. Black were the speakers.

At Taunton, the names of nine young fellows who have decided for Christ have been recently registered. Times of revival are also reported by the Wakefield Y.M.C.A. and Stafford Rooms Association, Edgware-road.

Progress is reported from many parts of France. An Association has been formed at Sedan, under the presidency of Pasteur Loux. The members of the Association at Bordeaux are very friendly to the McAll Mission.

The first annual meeting of the Harlesden Association, which already numbers thirty-five members and seventy-five associates, was held on Thursday. Addresses were given by local clergy and ministers, and by Mr. J. H. Putterill and Mr. B. Hewer.

The Kilburn Association has secured for its future work excellent premises, situate at the top of Willesden-lane, and formerly known as Brondesbury College. A warm interest in the Association is being evinced by ministers and workers of influence in the neighbourhood.

The Mayor has become president of the Stratford-on-Avon Association, in connection with which a successful mission has just been held by Mr. F. C. Bennett, travelling secretary, who has also co-operated with Major Seton Churchill in a mission at Shrewsbury.

The Belfast Association, which has now a membership of nearly 3000, has had a successful year, and many conversions took place among its associates. Its annual meeting, which was held on Friday evening last, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, passed off very successfully

The Brighton Y.M.C.A. Magazine says: During the progress of Mr. McNeill's mission we were glad to observe the active help rendered in a variety of ways by workers from the Y.M.C.A. We trust that a reflex effect may be experienced in an accession of life, and also of membership, in our Association.

Mr. R. Henderson Smith met the members of the Ballater Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening in the Albert Memorial Hall. After briefly reviewing the work of the Y.M.C.A.'s during the past year, Mr. Smith gave some advice as to how the work of the Association could be better extended amongst young men.

Successful and well-attended annual and other meetings have just been held by the Yarm, Morpeth, Darlington, York, and Keswick Associations. At Doncaster the mayor and mayoress held a reception and conversazione at the Mansion House. There were over 500 present, and an excellent address was given by Rev. J. Carnegie Brown, of Hull.

In connection with the Totterdown Association a conference of open-air workers was held on Thursday in the Gospel Hall. The subject was, "Open-air Preaching: What to Say, and How to Say It," introduced by Mr. F. Cockrem, whose address will doubtless be fruitful in many ways. A discussion followed, experiences being given, suggestions raised, and questions asked.

The thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Bath Y.M.C.A. was held on Thursday afternoon. There was a large attendance, and an excellent report was presented by Mr. A. H. White, the secretary. The chair was occupied by Rev. F. la Trobe Foster, M.A., and addresses were delivered by Mr. Robinson Souttar, M.A., B.C.L., president of the Oxford Association, and Mr. G. Holmes.

An advice from Chefoo, North China, dated January 23, states: "Native Y.M.C.A. work opened last evening; good attendance. Dr. Corbett, of the American Presbyterian Mission, presided. Four or five Christian natives spoke. We open a second place this evening (off the great street), and at present it is hoped to work the two, three nights a week each. Please gird us with prayer. We mean to uplift Christ. Satan will rage, but we fear not."

THE Y.W.C.A.

The Watford branch continues to prosper under Miss Ella M. Smith as hon. secretary, and Miss Robinson as superintendent. New rooms have been secured in the High-street, and the attendance at the Bible classes is increasing; £35 12s. 9d. was raised for the work during 1893.

The Association at Lille, France, which was founded three years ago, has twenty-six members, and by the kindness of a friend of the work, has been provided with a hall in which to hold meetings. The Associations at Nancy and Saint Quentin have nearly twice as many members, and are doing work which is highly appreciated in the Protestant community.

An eight days' mission to women and girls, in connection with the Y.W.C.A., has been held in the Shaftesbury Hall, Dawlish, by Mrs. Dorin, of Clapham. At each meeting it was felt that the Spirit of God was not only giving the right message, but causing it to reach the hearts and consciences of those present, and at the closing meeting many rejoicingly testified to blessing received.

On Thursday, March 1, between forty and fifty of the members of the Shrewsbury Branch were entertained to tea at Sandford House Y.W.C.A. by a gentleman of the town. After tea a very interesting description of her recent tour through New Zealand was given by Mrs. Townsend, and a most enjoyable evening was brought to a close by an earnest and pointed address on "Knowing Christ," by Miss E. Thiselton, of Berwick. Mrs. Sandford, the donor of the house, was present. L. M. Forrest, Hon. Sec.

A social gathering of traders in connection with the "Only One Penny" scheme has been held at the Morley Halls, 316, Regent-street. About 300 attended from the various London branches, and Mrs. F. A. Bevan, who gave the invitation, presided. Amusing accounts were given of the ways in which the pennies had been converted into larger sums in aid of the London work. The whole result was £223 13s. 10d. The Hon. E. Kinnaird, Miss Wingate, Miss A. R. Habershon, Col. Scott, and others took part in the meeting.

The first annual report of the Upper Clapton and Stoke Newington branch is interesting reading. A little more than a year ago it was laid on the hearts of a few friends to start a branch, and in a providential manner they found a room in which to meet. Then, in answer to prayer, furniture was obtained and a piano. Funds to pay rent, etc., have been sought and found in the same way. Several have been led to Christ, and the secretary is hopeful for a good work in the future. The meetings are held at 74, Fountayne-road, where any young women in the neighbourhood will receive a cordial welcome.

CANTERBURY.—On Easter Sunday, March 25, 4000 Volunteers will be located in Canterbury. Evangelistic services will be held for them in the Odd Fellows' Hall, Canterbury, at 3 and 6.30. Should there be any who would assist in the meetings I would be pleased to hear from them. Tracts and books for distribution amongst them will be thankfully received. Geo. Heath,

Ethelbert Villa, Roman-road, Canterbury.

A LABOURER WANTED.—Miss Robinson, who has been working at Ballycastle Quay, co. Antrim, since November, would be thankful to hear of any lady or gentleman who would take up the work of the mission in Ballycastle. She herself is going out to aid Miss Reade in India. She remarks: "The people are warm-hearted and greatly enjoy the singing and the Gospel addressess." Miss Robinson may be addressed, care of Miss Boyd, Ballycastle Quay, Co. Antrim.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

The Farsley Endeavour Society has now a membership of 106.

The Lenton C.E. Society has just held a very successful eight days' mission. Ministers of the town conducted services on each week-night, with the gratifying result that many young people, four of whom were already Sunday-school teachers, decided to consecrate themselves to Christ.

One great object of the Y.P.S.C.E. is to lead youthful Christians to lay hold promptly of every opportunity of engaging in service for Christ and the Church. Opportunity is defined as a "fit or convenient time; a time favourable for the purpose; suitable time combined with other favourable circumstances." The Christian Endeavourer's opportunities are those fit and convenient times that he has, as a Christian, for receiving good or doing good.

The first annual united Convention of the Leeds and District Endeavour Union was held on Saturday week, in South-parade Chapel, the report presented showing progress, distinct and definite, all along the line. The society, which began in March, 1893, with five societies, now embraces twenty societies and 1003 members. The chairman, in his remarks, gave emphasis to the benefits and prospects of Christian Endeavour. Two-minute reports were read respectively from the different societies, and then followed a general roll-call.

The Three Counties C.E. Union held its annual meeting at Luton on March 6. The report showed twelve societies, with a membership of 550. The president's address was "Nehemiah, a Type of Christian Endeavourer." Rev. C. M. Hardy, of St. Albans, was elected president, and Rev. F. J. Flatt secretary. A paper was given by Miss Locke on "The Children's Mission." A united consecration service followed. At the public meeting, Revs. F. Thompson, F. J. Flatt, C. M. Hardy, W. Knight Chaplin, Alderman Belsey, Miss Gilfillan, and Miss Millard took part.

The first C.E. Convention in West Central London has been held in Tottenham Court-road Chapel. Papers were read by Messrs. A. Norris, Leeming, and Wright, upon "The Work of C.E. Societies in the Church," "Socials," and "How to Interest our Young Men in C.E. Work," followed by a very animated discussion. In the evening the large chapel was well filled with earnest young Endeavourers. The pastor (Rev. G. A. Suttle) presided, and in his address of welcome spoke of the good work done by Endeavourers. Mr. A. Newstead read a paper, "How to Promote New Societies." Rev. Knight Chaplin spoke of the great advance the cause had made in one year, and impressed upon all the members the necessity of whole-hearted service. After a paper read by Mr. Legg upon "How the C.E. has Helped Me," the meeting was closed with a consecration service, responded to by forty societies, places such as Chingford, Woodford, Croydon, and Norwood being represented.

BARNWELL MISSION, CAMBRIDGE.

The fifteenth annual report of the special work carried on for so many years with delightful results, states that the services have during the year been chiefly conducted by local friends, and the preaching has been with power. Gipsy and Mrs. Smith have again conducted services for the Mission. The annual tea meeting was again a great success, and the public meeting was once more presided over by Rev. W. R. Mowll, who was supported by Revs. J. G. Dixon, T. G. Tarn, and others. These meetings were followed by a mission conducted by Mr. Richard Weaver, whose earnest appeals and striking illustrations from his own experience riveted the attention and secured the largest audiences witnessed since the commencement of the work. Much fruit has been found resulting from this mission. The work has been carried on during the year in the most economical way, but at the same time additional pecuniary assistance is necessary during the coming year. Those who are interested in the spiritual welfare of the masses are asked to render all the assistance possible. The superintendent is Mr. W. K. Vawser, 38, The Cury, Cambridge.

SAILORS' WELCOME HOME.—Cheering accounts from the various branches were given at the monthly muster of the "Christian Lifeboat Crew" at its headquarters in Ratcliff Highway. A letter has been received from Mr. Falconer, who has been working among the sailors for over twenty years at Port Chalmers and Dunedin. He tells of the progress towards the establishment of a "Rest" at "The Bluff," which was initiated through the efforts of Miss Child. Mr. A. Mordant Smith, travelling secretary of the Stirling Tract Society, addressed the meeting, and related how he owed his conversion to one of the members of the "Christian Lifeboat Crew" on board ship. The text for the month is, "Surely I come quickly."

UNIVERSITY NOTES.

OXFORD.

The visit of Dr. Paton last week had been eagerly anticipated, and was keenly enjoyed by those who heard his address. It was a great cause of regret that the exigencies of Oxford life combined just then to prevent a larger meeting-place being obtained, for numbers were compelled to go away without any chance of getting in. Coming so soon after Bishop Tucker's visit, Dr. Paton's words will deepen the missionary spirit among Oxford men.

On Wednesday week Rev. C. Merle-d'Aubigné gave a most interesting account of Protestant work in Belgium to a meeting in Balliol Hall. The account was quite a revelation to those present of what God is doing in that land.

The terminal conversazione of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union was held on Thursday at Wycliffe Lodge, when Colonel Macgregor gave an address, which was much appreciated by the large body of men present.

The Oxford branch of the Great Western Railway Temperance Union held its fourth anniversary meeting last week at the Y.M.C.A. rooms, when Rev. J. Knight (Newton) and Rev. H. H. Gibbon gave addresses. This society, with the station-master as president, is doing admirable service among the men.

The cause of the London City Mission is annually pleaded in Oxford, and three meetings for this purpose were held last week, addressed by Mr. David Haxton, missionary to public-houses in Bermondsey, who gave a graphic account of his arduous but not unsuccessful work. The society has several tried friends in Oxford, who may always be relied on to further its valuable objects.

The Oxford Refuge at its recent annual meeting was able to report a year of distinct blessing. The two Mildmay sisters who conduct this difficult work are labouring with great zeal, and not without encouragement. They need constant support and prayer.

The claims of foreign missions are being constantly brought forward in Oxford, both in the University and the city. Last week at the Y.M.C.A. Rev. F. A. Cassidy gave a lecture on his seven years' work in Japan.

CAMBRIDGE.

On Monday week a most interesting meeting was held in connection with the children's special mission in the Guildhall, under the presidency of Rev. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence. There was a satisfactory attendance of undergraduates. Mr. E. Arrowsmith dwelt upon the possibilities and importance of the work; three undergraduates—two of whom were from Oxford—also gave personal reminiscences of labours in connection with the C.S.S.M.

On Thursday evening an enthusiastic meeting was held in the Guildhall in support of the "John G. Paton Mission Fund." Professor Macalister presided, supported by Principal Moule, Professor Lumby, and local clergy. Dr. Paton, in his own graphic way, gave a thrilling narration of the marvellous success that has attended missionary efforts in the New Hebrides. Dr. Paton again spoke on Friday evening to members of the University only in Emmanuel Chapel schoolroom.

The University sermon was preached on Sunday afternoon in great St. Mary's by Rev. W. Bellairs, vicar of Margate.

Dr. Mathews lectured on Sunday evening on "Catholic Presbyterianism" in Downing-street Presbyterian Chapel. The University is fairly well represented among its congregation.

On Sunday last sermons on behalf of the Irish Missions and Roman Catholics were preached in the various churches of Cambridge. On Monday evening Rev. J. Hough presided over a meeting in the Henry Martyn Hall.

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, the inter-University Conference of the Oxford and Cambridge Inter-Collegiate Christian Unions was held. On Monday a conversazione was held at Ridley Hall. On Tuesday morning reports of the work will be given. In the afternoon and evening conferences will be held. On Wednesday morning there was a missionary meeting, arranged by the Students' Volunteer Missionary Union. Principal Moule presided at the conferences, the subjects being: "Christ's claim upon us as his witnesses in relation to (1) Christian work among University men; (2) Personal consecration." Cambridge undergraduates entertained the deputation from the sister University, an arrangement which has resulted in the most cordial and brotherly relationship.

LADY HENRY SOMERSET was in Liverpool last week addressing a gathering of temperance workers.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

The venerable Rev. W. Andson, the senior minister of Kirkmahoe Free Church, in Dumfriesshire, has attained his jubilee. He has acted for forty-seven years as clerk of presbytery.

Mrs. R. W. Barbour, of Bonskied, and Dr. Barbour are to present an institute to the villagers of Pitlochry, Perthshire, which will provide them with a dining-room, reading-room, baths, and gymnasium, etc. The Bonskied family are known far and wide for their large-minded philanthropy.

Rev. E. J. Brailsford, of Claremont Street Wesleyan Church, has proved a great acquisition to Glasgow. His ministrations on Sabbath are much appreciated by a congregation which is steadily on the increase, while his platform appearances in connection with Christian and philanthropic work are always effective.

The annual social meeting of the Gaelic-speaking young women connected with the Glasgow Y.W.C.A. was held last week. Mrs. Oatts, who presided, referred to the work of the Association, and their joy at having so many Highland girls associated with them. Dr. Blair's address in Gaelic was much appreciated.

The annual meeting of the members of the class conducted by Lord Overtoun in connection with the Free High Church, Dumbarton, was held last week. The total number on the roll is 511, and the average attendance 298. The collections for the year amounted to £26, which has been divided between the Mission to Deep-Sea Fishermen and Rev. J. G. Paton's mission to the New Hebrides.

In one of his "Chalmers Lectures," at Glasgow, Dr. Norman Walker dealt with the subject of Presbyterian Reunion. He said the conviction seemed to be growing that the necessity for finally deciding whether or not the State should use its resources for the support of the Church, or whether the Church should accept such support, was not urgent. Another view of the case was presented by a recent speaker in St. John's Parish Church, Leith, who said it had been calculated that as a result of reunion 750 ministers could be spared to go to the mission field.

Dundee is determined to be in the forefront of the movement for the union of the Churches. At the largest meeting of Free Church office-bearers ever held in the city a proposal in favour of an incorporating union between the Free and U.P. Churches was enthusiastically approved of, and it was resolved to take the necessary steps for the promotion of an agitation. Dundee, by its resolution in favour of united action, will do much to quicken public opinion in the direction of renewed negotiations towards union.

IRISH NOTES.

The trustees of the late Mr. McQuiston have decided to hand over to the Presbyterians a bequest of nearly £3000 towards building a new church at Willowfield, Belfast.

Four new parishes and as many churches, involving an expenditure of at least £15,000, are about to be established in Belfast in connection with the Protestant Episcopal Church in that city.

The late Mr. Mathew Anderson, J.P., of Whitehill, Dromore, co. Tyrone, has left the half of his estate to the Methodist Foreign Missionary Society and the other half to the Presbyterian Orphan Society.

Mr. J. B. Wookey addressed two meetings last week in the Metropolitan Hall, Dublin, on behalf of the work of Dr. Barnardo's Homes. Much interest has been created in Ireland by Mr. Wookey's present visit, and a substantial contribution sent to the funds of the Homes.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—Miss Annie R. Taylor requests prayer that she and her band of fellow-workers may be kept very low at her Master's feet, that it may be seen that the work is of God.—That Mr. Fred. Arnot's message may be with power, and bring blessing to the mission in Central Africa, and to those who listen at workers' meeting, Home of Industry, March 21.—That Miss Lowe, the first lady, thirty-three years ago, who came to live and work among the poor in East London, may be restored to her wonted health. — For blessing on mission at Terling, Essex, by J. Neech.—For special blessing on meetings being held in Hauxton and Newton, near Cambridge, March 18th to 25th.—For God's blessing on the open-air work of the Stratford Mizpah Band, commencing Good Friday.—For blessing on mission services for the young at Downton, Salisbury, beginning Saturday, March 17. —For blessing on a ten days' mission in South Kensington Presbyterian Church, Emperor's Gate, Gloucester-road, by Captain F. L. Tottenham, from March 19 to 28. PRAISE for much blessing at the mission held in Tolleshunt D'Arcy.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

The London Temperance Hospital has received £2000 from the trustees of the late Mr. George Sturge.

The hundredth anniversary of the birth of Mr. Joseph Livesey was celebrated on Monday week in Preston and other places.

The Scottish Baptist Total Abstinence Society reports eighty-nine abstaining ministers, while in eighty-five churches unfermented communion wine is used.

The Australian Christian World states that in connection with the recent opening of the N.S.W. Parliament, "a disgraceful and humiliating scene," arising from drinking, took place.

A London coroner, holding an inquest on the body of a woman who had often sold up the home for drink, said he hoped that a law would be passed to put under restraint habitual drunkards.

A very successful week's temperance mission has been held at the Drill Hall, Nuneaton, under the auspices of the Nuneaton and District Temperance Federation. It resulted in about fifty persons taking the pledge.

A French professor recently wrote on the blackboard, "Sobriety, propriety, regularity," declaring them the conditions of health, and of more importance than the much-boasted "Liberty, equality, fraternity."

The Mayor of Leeds and the Mayors of Southport, Bootle, Ossett, and Pontefract appeared on Tuesday week on the platform of a public meeting, convened by the National Temperance League at the Town Hall, Leeds, to advocate total abstinence.

Mr. George Garlick, agent C.E.T.S., has held most successful meetings during the month of February in the following places: Southampton; High Beech, Essex; Shottermill; Andover; Penge; Forest Row; Horsted Keynes; Kelvedon Hatch, and Pattiswick.

On the motion of Canon Rawnsley, the Cumberland County Council has memorialised the Home Secretary in favour of a Bill which applies to places of 20,000 inhabitants, and under, power to prohibit the sale of intoxicants to persons of drunken habits.

The last memorial received by Mr. Gladstone, as Prime Minister, asking him to use his influence to get the Irish Sunday Closing and Early Saturday Closing Bill passed into law at an early period, was signed by over 300 representatives from all parts of Ireland, including twenty-eight bishops and the heads of other bodies.

A very successful temperance mission was held at the Forest Hill Baths, S.E., last week, which aroused a considerable amount of interest and enthusiasm. The large hall was filled every night, and about 200 pledges were taken during the week. So great was the success, that it has been resolved to hold another mission shortly.

A seven days' Gospel temperance mission has been held in the north of France by M. Ludwig, of Paris. Professors in the technical colleges were present at several of the meetings, being in sympathy with the movement. The McAll Mission Hall's rooms have been placed at the disposal of the Temperance Society of the Blue Cross.

Rev. W. R. Thompson, of Old Calabar, addressing a missionary meeting in the U.P. Synod Hall, Edinburgh, said the gin trade was doing great harm to the progress of mission work. He was sorry that their own countrymen were spending so much money in this traffic, and even Presbyterians were not free from it. He had often seen canoe after canoe going up the rivers laden with nothing but gin barrels, the contents of which the poor natives were induced to buy.

It is stated that during the past nine months no fewer than 220 new branches have been added to the B.W.T.A. The annual meeting of the Leeds branch of the B.W.T.A. was held on Wednesday in the Friends' Meeting House, The annual report read by Mrs. Whiting stated that the ordinary bi-monthly meetings had been well attended during the year, the number of pledges taken averaging about twenty at each. At Grimsby Miss Gorham has conducted a Gospel temperance mission, which appears to have been attended with success.

Rev. J. Scott Lidgett, Farncombe-street, Bermondsey, S.E., writes: "A public-house in Bermondsey has lately been purchased by a gentleman who is anxious to make it in the future a centre for promoting temperance instead of intemperance. With this view, he has himself accepted a considerable pecuniary loss, and the offer is now made to me of leasing it at a greatly reduced rent for temperance work. The house is situated just where multitudes of dock labourers hang about during the intervals of work, being driven into the public-house because they cannot find either shelter or refreshment anywhere else within reach. The club itself can be made to pay ordinary expenses, but we need at least £100 for alterations and furniture, and £50 yearly for rent and taxes."

PERSONALIA.

Miss Ida B. Wells, the advocate of the civil rights of the negroes of the United States, is about to visit Great Britian again.

Mr. Philip Gough, who has been far from well lately, is staying at present at Cotleigh, Grove Hill-road, Redhill, Surrey.

Mr. R. Scott Moncrieff has again left this country for Palestine, to take part in the work of settling poor Jews in the land.

Dr. Murray Mitchell, we hear with regret, is invalided, and has been compelled to resign his pastoral office at Nice.

Rev. Jas. Cargin, of Belfast, who was seriously hurt last October by falling out of a train near Londonderry, is now restored to health.

Rev. J. K. Nuttall, of Great George-street, Liverpool, has recovered from the effects of his recent throat affection, and since his return from the Continent has been able to undertake his pastoral duties in the pulpit.

Rev. W. B. Selbie, of Highgate, under medical orders, is about to take a complete rest for several weeks, owing to a throat affection. He purposes visiting Algiers, and expects to resume his duties early in April.

Mrs. Cleveland, wife of the American President, with other ladies highly placed in society, recently attended one of Messrs. Moody and Sankey's meetings at Washington. The mission continues to excite great interest in the city.

Rev. John Pyper, of Belfast, the well-known writer on Bible wines, is giving temperance addresses in London. He spoke at a drawing-room meeting at Blackheath last week, and will address a meeting in the Exeter Hall parlour on the evening of March 21.

Mr. A. F. Gault, a merchant in Montreal, has donated 100,000 dols. to the Diocesan College, the Anglican Institution in affiliation with McGill University. Several of the Montreal merchants during recent years have given princely sums for educational purposes.

Mr. William Smith, who has been working some years in connection with the Irish Evangelisation Society, and who is spoken of by Revs. Dr. H. M. Williamson, Henry Montgomery, and other well-known ministers, as a very successful evangelist, is open to engagements in England. His address is 10, Canada-street, My Lady's-road, Belfast.

Lady Lathom is stated to be amongst the most active lady workers in connection with the Church of England in the North. She gives herself specially to work amongst young girls, and takes an active part in preventive and rescue work in the city of Liverpool. She is a most graceful speaker, and often visits Liverpool to plead for the Homes she is so interested in.

Mr. J. C. Lanphier, who was the means under God of starting, in 1857, the Fulton-street Noon Prayer Meeting in New York, has at length been compelled by advanced years to retire. A warm tribute of love and respect has been signed by Dr. Talbot W. Chambers on behalf of others setting forth the story of the famous prayer meeting, and showing how marvellously it has been blessed of God.

Mr. A. J. Swann, who has spent many years in Nyassaland in the service of the London Missionary Society, has resigned his connection with that body, having accepted a post in the British administration of Nyassaland, under Mr. H. H. Johnston, Her Majesty's Commissioner in that region. Mr. Swann, from his long and friendly intercourse with both chiefs and natives in Nyassaland, has gained a wide experience in native affairs.

Mr. W. Hind Smith, who was first general secretary at Exeter Hall, but has been better known in recent years as one of the organising secretaries of the National Council of Y.M.C.A.'s, has, our friends will be glad to learn, been invited to resume his former position in the direction of the work at Exeter Hall, consequent upon Mr. Kennedy's retirement, and pending the making of permanent arrangements for carrying on the work there.

Mr. D. C. Joseph, of the Evangelical Mission to Israel, Jerusalem, has had a Rabbinical curse fulminated at his mission, and the Jews of the city, especially the youthful members of the community, have been warned against attending his meetings, which are described as snares wherein the unwary are caught! Ecclesiastical penalties of a severe order have been pronounced against all who shall transgress the command of the Rabbis, and listen to the missionary.

Dr. T. B. Stephenson says in The Children's Advocate:—Acting under medical orders, I must surrender some part of my work. Obstinate sleeplessness, with the usual attendant symptoms, indicates an overstrain, which, if continued, would incapacitate me for any work. On the other hand, the medical opinion is equally clear, that with some rest and some limitation of my work, I may hope for many years of vigorous activity. I have carefully considered at what point I could find the necessary relief, consistently with my duty. I cannot think it would be right to withdraw to any extent from the work of the Children's Home, which has peculiar claims on me, and which needs, within the next two or three years, important development in several directions. The Deaconess Institute is so successful, and promises such important service to the Church in the future, that I dare not at present surrender it. And my Circuit brings to me so much happiness, and is so closely associated with the Home, that I cannot abandon it. And, after all, the preaching of the Gospel "with signs following," is the greatest and most blessed work a minister can do. It only remains, therefore, for me to ask relief from the chairmanship of the First London Synod.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Rev. T. B. Robertson, of Newmarket-on-Fergus, opens an evangelistic mission at the Kingstown Y.M.C.A. on the 31st inst. He will be glad of prayer on his behalf.

Leominster.—A three weeks' evangelistic mission, held under the auspices of the Leominster Y.M.C.A., by Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh, has been accompanied by much that is cheering and encouraging to the workers.

Lower Kingswood, Surrey.—A ten days' mission has been held here. The services have been well attended, and God's presence has been felt and manifested. Prayer is desired that the work may go on and deepen. A. H. L.

Rye.—Mr. James Gillam has held a fortnight's mission at Beckley. Interest increased from the first. Many persons and children professed conversion. At a social meeting cheering testimonies were given to God's saving and sanctifying power.

Mr. Robert McLean, an agent of the Evangelisation Society, began a fortnight's mission in Paisley on Sabbath. Although quite a young man, his style of address draws crowds. The meetings are held in a Mission Hall, which is in connection with the Free High Church.

Mr. Sidney Vivan has been conducting evangelistic services at the Bible Christian Church, North Lew, North Devon, during the past fortnight with great success. Large congregations assembled each night to hear the Word of Life, and not a few found peace in believing.

Malvern.—The Lord has showered his blessing upon us with a bounteous hand. Messrs. Payne and Coultar have held a mission in Malvern for the Deepening of Spiritual Life, the Promoting of Christian Union in Home and Foreign Mission Work, and for Preparation for our Lord's Second Advent. E. T.

Skegness.—An eleven days' mission has been conducted by Rev. Thomas Dargue. The mission was preceded by a week of special prayer and a house to house visitation by the workers. The services were well attended, the Spirit of God being present, and much good done. Several came out on the Lord's side.

Tolleshunt D'Arcy, Essex.—At the Congregational Church a sixteen days' mission has been held by Mr. James Neech. The mission has exceeded all expectations. Many were the expressions of regret when the mission terminated. At the closing evening about eighty took tea in the schoolroom, when Mr. Neech was thanked for his faithful work. J. H.

Frankwell, Shrewsbury.—Mr. R. Jones is having tokens of blessings in visiting from house to house, and conducting Gospel meetings in a cottage. The people are getting a blessing. One woman returned after the service on Thursday night, requesting prayer to be brought fully out for the Lord. Will God's children remember this work in their prayers?

Miss Smith and Miss Bax closed a fortnight's mission in the Methodist Church, Ballymena, on March 9. The meetings were well attended by all the Protestant denominations in the town, notwithstanding much local prejudice against women evangelists. Many gave heed to the word preached and sung. Sinners have turned to the Lord, and believers were much edified. W. N.

New Cross.—A successful eight days' mission has been conducted in the Wesleyan Chapel by Rev. J. Smith Spencer. Preparatory prayer-meetings were held, and every house in the immediate neighbourhood was visited at least twice. The congregations on the Sundays were large, and during the week very fair. The people of God have been stirred up, and souls have been saved.

Evangelistic Services have been held in Dublin by Rev. Thos. Waugh, English Methodist Conference evangelist; in Cork by Rev. J. B. Robertson, rector of Newmarket-on-Fergus; in Sandy Row Methodist Church, Belfast, by Messrs. Beech and Griffin, "Out-and-Out Band" evangelists; in Ballymena, by Miss Smith and Miss Bax; in Portarlington, by Rev. Thos. Greer, and in Ballydehob, co. Cork, by Rev. Jas. Kirkwood, Methodist Conference evangelists.

North Ormesby.—Mr. Richard Howton has been holding a successful five weeks' mission at North Ormesby, Middlesboro', and Spennymoor. The Central Hall, Spennymoor, has been crowded on Sunday nights, and the meetings have been largely attended, not only by Christian people, but also by some of the roughest characters in the town, many of these latter not having entered a place of worship till then for sixteen or eighteen years. The afternoon Bible readings have been times of great blessing.

Mr. T. W. Canning, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a fortnight's mission in connection with the Free and U.P. Churches, Inveraray, N.B. The meetings were largely attended. There was evident manifestation of the Divine Presence in connection with the preaching of the Word. Many of God's people received a very special quickening, while not a few profess to have experienced a saving change. Altogether the interest awakened by Mr. Canning's powerful, fresh, and clear Scriptural addresses has been productive of much lasting good.

Newport, Mon.—A successful ten days' mission has been conducted at Commercial-road Chapel by Mr. Raymond Preston. The mission was preceded by a week of special prayer. On the first Sunday a special service for children was held in the schoolroom, when a large number of the senior scholars decided for Christ. On the second Sunday a meeting for men only was held, when a large number signified their intention of living for God. During the whole of the mission the chapel was well filled, and Mr. Preston's singing of the Gospel was an especial attraction.

The Brothers B. and F. Weaver commenced, on Sunday week, a united Gospel mission at Newbury, arranged by the Y.M.C.A. From the first meeting there has been a manifestation of the Spirit's presence, and much anxious inquiry. The congregations have increased and, on Sunday evening, the Town Hall was packed, many souls remaining under deep conviction for conversation as to the way of salvation. The mission will be continued during this week and the prayers of God's people are asked for an increase of the blessings which have been manifested. A. W. N.

Mr. James Wharton, of Barrow-in-Furness, has closed a successful series of Gospel service at Plymouth Congregational Church, Washington, D.C. (Rev. Sterling N. Brown pastor). From the first there were tokens of blessing both to Christians and others. Mr. Wharton's plain Gospel talks—simple, scriptural, and earnest—were powerful and convincing. A number of conversions were recorded. Mr. Wharton and the pastor also conducted a series of meetings at Howard University, and quite an interest was manifested among the students. The earnest prayers of the Christians of Washington go with Mr. Wharton to the South.

Sandown, Isle of Wight.—A fortnight's mission has been conducted by Mr. Thomas Calder, Scotch evangelist. From the first the services proved successful, as the church seemed prepared for the blessing. The final service was one of overwhelming power, and many family circles were that night made complete in Christ. Sisters brought up their brothers, and fathers and mothers their sons and daughters, and knelt beside them in thankfulness to God. Several who had secretly yielded their hearts to God embraced the opportunity for public confession. The genuineness of the work is seen in the number who have joined the church, and in the large attendance at week-night services.

MR. WM. NOBLE AT BRIGHTON.

The Mission in the Brighton Dome, held throughout last week by Mr. Wm. Noble, was marked by continuous and increasing interest. By his earnest and eloquent advocacy of the total abstinence cause Mr. Noble drew large audiences which were evidently impressed. A number of pledges were taken. At the closing meeting on Friday evening Mr. Noble gave some deeply interesting reminiscences of the late J. B. Gough, and recited some telling pieces from his orations. He is now conducting meetings at Hove.

The friends of temperance throughout the country will learn with much pleasure that Mr. Noble's health is now fully re-established, and he is able to undertake occasional missions in the country in addition to his work at Hoxton Hall.

MISSIONARY DOLLS AND FREE HOLIDAYS.—An interesting offer is made by Mrs. Lunn of a free ten-guinea ticket for the Young People's Gathering at Grindelwald this summer, five tickets at half price, and twenty-five tickets at a reduction of three guineas, for those who send in the best-dressed dolls to be sent out to mission schools in India and China. Any who desire further particulars can obtain them by writing to Mrs. Lunn, 5, Endsleigh Gardens, N.W.

OBITUARY.

MR. L. H. BURLEIGH.

South American Missions have suffered a serious loss in the death of Mr. Burleigh, a devoted labourer of the South American Missionary Society. After eleven years' work on Keppel Island, he opened in 1888 a new mission on Chilian territory, near Cape Horn, in a wild and inhospitable climate, and among a savage and ignorant people. Aided by his devoted wife, he laboured there with some success, until suddenly called home by drowning. As one writes: "In this age of heroic missionaries, Mr. Burleigh, for faith and courage, is entitled to occupy a very prominent place." A full account of him will appear in the April issue of the Magazine of the Society, published at 1, Clifford-inn, E.C.

MRS. MACNEILL, DUBLIN.

With much regret we record the recent death of Mrs. MacNeill, Dublin, widow of Rev. John Gordon Swift MacNeill, M.A., and mother of Mr. Swift MacNeill, Q.C., M.P. Mrs. MacNeill was well known throughout Ireland for her zeal in forwarding philanthropic work. Upwards of thirty years ago she established in her husband's parish in Dublin a fathers' and mothers' meeting, to which she soon added a benefit society. Great numbers of the working classes attended these meetings. She also placed herself at the head of a Sunday-school class for young women employed in the large business houses of the city, which was very largely attended and much appreciated by them.

The Irish daily papers have borne a very unanimous tribute to her memory, and the large attendance at her funeral proved the affection with which she was regarded by rich and poor alike. Mrs. MacNeill was singularly original in mind and had great administrative talents, which she absolutely devoted to the service of Christ. In recent years Mrs. MacNeill's bodily health was much impaired, but she was in full possession of her great intellectual and social gifts, and was very brilliant in conversation. Her kindly sympathies endeared her to those with whom she came into contact, and she was much beloved. Her death, which took place somewhat unexpectedly, resulted from an operation to which she submitted with unflinching courage and patience, stating that she was more than ready to go to her blessed Saviour, but wished to make every effort to prolong her life for the benefit of those to whom it was so precious.

GATHERED GOLD.

A SIMPLE RULE OF DOCTRINE.

Just before God by faith,
Just before men by works;
Just by the works of faith,
Just by the faith which works.

Let God be our trainer in the race of life.

A nation's wealth consists in her account at the Bank of Virtue.

Let the produce from your sowing be worthy of God's storehouse.

Would that the Sovereign of every realm could stand the test at God's bank.

The tears of the child of God have more of the element of happiness than the laughter of the ungodly.

Christ is the password to the fields of joy, where are the fruitful trees of peace, the fresh brooks of love, and work of truest worth.

Will everything that you call beautiful bear God's powerful glance and still in his eyes be lovely? Will not some things you admire be as dross to his sight?

How easy is the thought, in certain moods, of the loveliest, most unselfish devotion! How hard is the doing of the thought in the face of a thousand unlovely difficulties!

Youth is like a tender plant which is liable to be broken, or parched, or frosted; but which, kept by a careful hand, under the Master's guidance, will bloom long and sweetly after the summer days of life are over.

"Without the way, there is no going; without the truth, there is no knowing; without the life, there is no living. Christ is the Way which thou oughtest to follow, the Truth which thou oughtest to trust, the Life which thou oughtest to live."

Sin in our hearts has the power of concealing itself from our notice, as the cuttlefish colours the water about it so that it cannot be seen. It makes us deaf to the heavenly voice, so that, like the Jews of old, we look stupidly about and say, "it thundered"—the Divine message to us nothing but a noise.

AN EX-MILLIONAIRE, who became a homeless and penniless outcast through drink, lately poisoned himself in the streets of Chicago.

The Book World.

A HANDY GREEK TESTAMENT.

The Resultant Greek Testament, edited by Dr. Weymouth, whose new translation of 2 Corinthians is now appearing in our columns, is an edition which we heartily commend. It is named "Resultant" because it exhibits the text in which the majority of modern editors are agreed, and contains the readings given by Stephens (1550), Lachmann, Tregelles, Tischendorf, Lightfoot, Ellicott, Alford, Weiss, the Bâle edition (1880), Westcott and Hort, and the Revision Committee. The plan presents a text which, beyond any other that has been constructed, carries the weight of authority in the minutest details. The book is printed in beautifully clear type, and with such care that quite remarkable accuracy has been attained. Various readings are given at the foot of the page, with indications of the editors who accept them, and by attention to this department the student may readily estimate the value of competing readings. For scholars, such an edition as this cannot but be of peculiar interest and value; for students in general no manual edition offers such useful features. (Cheap edition, 5s. Elliot Stock.)

DR. CAVE'S NEW BOOK.

The Spiritual World. By Alfred Cave, D.D. (5s. Hodder & Stoughton.) This is a work worthy the high reputation of the Principal of Hackney College. Though in a sense made up of fragments, it is a connected study, and from first to last related to the origin and essential nature of religion. The first part of the book is entitled "The Spiritual World the Last Word of Philosophy," and includes lectures delivered in 1892, at the Mansfield Summer School of Theology. Here it is shown that as surely as man has a vision for the world of sense, so he has a vision for the world of spirit, and power to perceive the supernatural, the divine, the spiritual, the supernal. This being so, the Agnosticism of England and the Ritschlianism of Germany are unphilosophical as well as illusory. Closely reasoned and lucid, this series of lectures is an important and valuable contribution to modern speculation as to the genesis of religion. The second part of the book deals more definitely with revealed truth, but even here the author is a philosopher as well as a theologian. This section contains, with other lectures, the five which Dr. Cave delivered in October last, under the title "The Gospel for To-day" as the Ancient Merchants' Lectures. Fundamental Scripture teaching is presented in a fresh and striking setting; and there is substance and stimulus in this division, as well as the former. This is a book for thoughtful people, and they will do well to read it.

A STRIKING BIOGRAPHY.

Fra Paolo Sarpi: The Greatest of the Venetians. By Rev. Alexander Robertson, of Venice. (Sampson Low, Marston & Co.) This is a remarkable story, ably told. For three hundred years Paolo Sarpi has been before the world, and he still deserves the designation which serves as the sub-title of this compact little volume. As we read of the man, so wise and brave, so energetic and ready to act, we are tempted to wonder whether hero-worship has not done a little to help his fame. But no, he was, indeed, a wonderful man, and the Venetians of the present generation, in giving effect to the decree of the old republic that a monument should be erected in his honour, have rightly styled him a man "miraculously learned, honourable, and righteous." The book should be read by young and old, for it not only indicates the gigantic intellectual acquirements of the Servite monk, but his statesmanship, nobly disinterested and bold, even to opposing a tyrannical Pope of Rome. The contest between "Paul the Pope and Paul the Friar" is admirably described, and it does one good to read the story of the victory of the cause of purity and the defeat of Papal intrigue. The schemes of the Pope to have the monk assassinated show what a Pope may do; and the wolf-like hunt for the very remains of Fra Paolo—for over two hundred years his body had no secure resting place—reveal an undying hatred of civil and religious liberty on the part of Pope and Curia.

The Story of Isaac Levinsohn, told by himself, has reached a third edition. (1s. Holness.) It is a very readable and instructive little book.

Sir Samuel Baker: His Life and Adventures, by Alfred E. Lomax, is a very attractive volume of the "Splendid Lives" series (1s. Sunday School Union). The story of the famous African explorer is brightly told, and there are a number of illustrations.

Round the Empire, by G. R. Parkin, M.A., has reached its thirty-fifth thousand. It is a capital book, designed for school uses, but containing information with which old and young should be familiar. It is well planned, attractively written, and fully illustrated. The Earl of Rosebery contributes an appreciative preface. (Cassell & Co. 1s. 6d.)

The Bible by Modern Light. The new edition largely rewritten, of Dr. Cunningham Geikie's "Hours with the Bible," is being issued with praiseworthy expedition. The third volume of the series, "Samson to Solomon," amply justifies the expectations raised by its predecessors. Scripture history is opened up in a very instructive manner, innumerable side-lights being thrown upon it. A large amount of reading and research is here condensed into a volume which will be useful for the scholar as well as the ordinary reader. (6s. Nisbet.)

Our High Priest in Heaven; or, the Present Action of Christ as High Priest in its Relation to the Worship of the Christian Church. By Thomas Thomason Perowne, B.D., Archdeacon of Norwich. (Elliot Stock.) This little book, a valuable contribution to a great controversy, has reached a second edition. It shows the unscriptural character of that view—Romish and Ritualistic—of Christ's intercession, which regards it as consisting in the continual re-presentation of his body and blood as a priest before God. On the other hand, it demonstrates that, "having once offered on earth and presented in heaven his one sufficient sacrifice for sin, Christ ever lives and reigns, a Priest upon his throne, to apply the virtue of that sacrifice to his Church below."

A Retrospect. By J. Hudson Taylor. (1s. and 2s. Morgan & Scott.) Most of this has been given in Miss Guinness's book, and all of it has appeared in the pages of China's Millions; yet its issue in separate form is warmly to be welcomed. From first to last it is full of profound instruction as to the leading of God, when his people are willing to follow and obey. Some of the incidents and facts recorded may well seem marvellous to any who have not learned by happy experience the inner secrets of fellowship and simple trust in God. The book is deeply interesting as a story of the events which led to the formation of the China Inland Mission; but, as we have hinted, it has besides a peculiar value as a testimony to the love and faithfulness of God and the joy of living in close communion with Him.

Mr. George Kelsey has penned two useful and pointed booklets, The Blessing of the Lord and The Feasts of the Lord. (Drummond Tract Depot, Stirling. 6d. doz.) These ought to be widely circulated.

In an Open Letter to Mr. Sydney Gedge, Rev. William Adamson, vicar of Old Ford, E., severely criticises the policy of "the New Evangelicalism," which would fight with, and not against Ritualism. (1d. David Macdonald, 42, Hanover-street, Edinburgh.)

A Song of Love is a hymn well conceived and expressed by E. P. R. With the music, it is printed on tinted paper as a leaflet. Copies are being sold at a penny each, for the benefit of the Aleppo Dispensary, by Rev. E. P. Riddall, 30A, St. Thomas's-sterrace, Canterbury.

Uniform with Dr. Whyte's edition of the "Holy War," recently issued, Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier will publish this week a new edition of "The Pilgrim's Progress," the text of which has been carefully compared with that of the editions published during the author's lifetime. Mrs. Traquair has furnished a sketch for an allegorical frontispiece to this volume.

"He is Nigh at the Doors." In a recent notice of this little book, by A. M. Barbour, we spoke of the division of the Lord's people into different classes, as sheep and bride and body, as "unscriptural and mischievous." We observe that the precise distinction set up in the booklet is "the sheep, the servants, and the bride," these being "grades of Christians," which the author thinks she finds in Matt. xxv. (1d. "Christian Herald" Office.)

PIONEERING IN MANITOBA.

I am in charge of a large mission in Manitoba, over 300 miles in extent. I have five points of work, which involves thirty-five miles driving one week, and twenty-five the other, with three services every Sunday, and one or two during the week. Somerset is about the centre of this mission. We have no building here for services, and have to hold them where we can. Our people are very poor, and cannot afford to build.

We have opened a room in our house, which is but small, as a reading-room, etc. I have supplied it as well as I could with the means at my disposal; a week night service is held in connection with it. Any books, magazines, etc., for use of room, are always welcome.

During the past year several have signified their desire to become members of the Church of Christ, and have given in their names without our asking them to do so. But we need a church, where our work would be very materially helped forward. Our people can't give money, but they will give work, and as soon as the roads are good will draw in, and give their time and labour in so doing, the material for a church 36ft. by 24ft. This means a great deal of time and work, as the material will have to be drawn about three miles from where they will get it to the site which has been kindly given to us for the purpose of building a church. I have had the promise of £10 towards the £100 needed, on condition that the remainder is raised by May 1 of this year.—Yours, etc., (Rev.) A. Tansey.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

There are twenty-two branches of the C.M.S. Gleaners' Union in three western counties.

It is announced that after Bishop Tucker's meeting at Sunderland, four offers of service for the Mission-field were made.

Rev. J. McCall Marshall has been appointed to the Rectory of Croft, and Rev. Joseph N. Lee perpetual curate of Cowling.

A general mission is being arranged for the Isle of Man. It is proposed that Rev. H. C. G. Moule should hold some preparatory meetings in June.

Prebendary St. Aubyn, a devoted Evangelical, has been compelled by failing health to resign his charge at Stoke Damerel, where he has done useful work for many years.

Rev. Norman Campbell, having been compelled to relinquish his work as Warden of the Trinity College Mission, Camberwell, will be succeeded by Rev R. Appleton.

On Sunday Rev. T. P. Ring, rector of Hanley, who has accepted the charge of Rawmarsh, preached his farewell sermons to large congregations at the old Parish Church at Hanley.

The annual meeting of the Harrogate Church Institute was held on Thursday. The report presented was of a satisfactory character. The Dean of York delivered an address upon the work of the Church.

It is announced that the publication of the "Revised and Remodelled Prayer-book of the Protestant Church of England" has been entrusted to Mr. C. J. Thynne, Wessex-house, 1, Great Queen-street, and that the book will be issued about the end of April next.

We gladly learn that Rev. G. C. Daw has accepted the vicarage of St. Mary's, Spitalfields. For many years Mr. Daw was one of the most active and trusted workers of the band which Bishop Billing gathered round him in Spitalfields. From the first, Mr. Daw warmly interested himself in Jewish work, and for some time he held a position under the London Jews' Society.

Rev. W. Carlile, Rector of St. Mary-at-Hill (near the Monument), writes us that he will be very grateful if any earnest Christian workers, capable of dealing with souls, would assist in the after-meetings, which take place every Sunday night at 8 o'clock. He would also welcome them at his free breakfasts and teas, which take place in his rectory, Sunday mornings at 8, and Sunday evenings at 6.

Bishop Tucker addressed a great meeting in the Albert Hall, Sheffield, on Tuesday week, on the work in Uganda. The Archbishop of York presided, and he was supported by the vast body of the local clergy. The Albert Hall was packed to overflowing, the attendance not being less than 3000. The Archbishop spoke of Uganda as one of the most hopeful fields of Mission labour ever opened up.

Evangelical Churchmen will hear with feelings of thankfulness that the Bishop of Norwich has appointed a thorough Evangelical and Protestant to Outwell, near Wisbech. For five years Rev. Venn Ellis has been Vicar of Stowmarket, and by his indefatigable labour both in pulpit and parish has won the respect not only of Churchmen, but also of Nonconformists, with whom he has always worked on the best of terms. The Romanists made great efforts to establish themselves in Stowmarket, but their efforts have been a failure, and the convent is now closed.

Rev. Percival Smith, the new minister of Portman Chapel, preached there for the first time on Sunday last. In the course of his address he said: "I am coming amongst you to uplift, by God's grace, that Cross of Christ of which I daily see more deeply the peace and power; and to preach that Gospel which is old indeed, but yet as fresh every day as the dew of the Pentecostal morning. I am coming with the hope of being your minister, and that in no conventional sense of the word; but to do you spiritual service, and to find my Master's will and my own joy in spending and being spent for you."

The Spring Conference of the Church Association opened in Bradford on Thursday. The most prominent feature of its work during the past year has been the sending forth of Protestant vans for the distribution of Protestant literature. Mr. A. S. Lamb presided, and Rev. A.A. Isaacs read a paper on "Evangelical Trustees," which led to a long discussion on the manner in which these trusts use their influence for the preservation of Evangelical truth. Mr. J. W. Taylor, of Buxton, spoke on the subject of "Does the present attitude of many of the Bishops in encouraging the Roman propaganda within the Established Church call for any united action on the part of the Evangelical clergy and laity?" He answered the question in the affirmative, and said that the shape such action should take was the reform of worship.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. W. J. Wintle, assistant to Mr. Meyer, has been compelled to rest awhile.

Lowestoft Church reports 262 members. In the Sunday-schools are 804 scholars.

Mr. W. Forbes has finished a week's mission at Innerleithen Congregational Church.

Ebenezer Church, Chatham, reports 380 members, 1503 children in the Sunday-schools.

Grange Church, Sunderland, reports 464 members. In the Sunday-schools are 839 scholars, with 62 teachers.

Rev. A. R. Goddard, of Saffron Walden, has undertaken a temporary charge at Grauf Reinet, South Africa.

Rev. J. Twidale, of Melton Mowbray, has resumed his duties after nearly two months' absence through illness.

Rev. William Muirhead, of Shanghai, China, has received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith have seen much blessing in a mission held at New Court Chapel (Rev. Wm. Pierce), Finsbury Park.

Rev. W. M. Arthur, Bamford, Rochdale, having been granted two months' leave of absence, has started on a Mediterranean trip.

Nine young men were received on Sunday week, on confession of faith, at York-road Chapel, Lambeth. The work there is prospering much.

For the last three Sundays, Dr. Harrington, of Concord (U.S.A.), has been preaching in Claremont Chapel, Pentonville, to the great delight of the congregation.

Rev. W. G. Lawes, who has visited the out-stations in the Port Moresby district, New Guinea, has baptized 125 candidates at Saroa, where the whole village has abandoned heathen practices.

The annual meetings of the Lancashire Congregational Union were held last week. Foreign missionary meetings were discussed by Revs. C. A. Berry and Stanley Rogers, while Principal Scott and Mr. Mansergh dealt with work in the villages.

Last Lord's Day morning, Rev. W. Roberts announced to the congregation at Norbury Chapel, Notting Hill, his intention of resigning, at the beginning of June next, the pastorate which he has held for forty-four years. It was explained that this painful step was proposed to be taken, not on account of any unwillingness or unpreparedness to continue pastoral work, nor from any want of friendly feeling between the pastor and the flock, but from the conviction, produced by prayerful consideration of all the circumstances of the case, that another servant of God with suitable qualifications would be able to meet more effectually the wants of the present neighbourhood.

Calls.—Rev. T. H. S. Perfect, of Dover, to Teddington; Mr. J. Stephenson, London-road, Newark; Rev. James Wylie, of Queen-street, Arbroath, to Donegal-street, Belfast (accepted); Rev. J. W. Burn to Surbiton.

Resignations.—Rev. J. Sidebottom, of Brightside, Sheffield; Rev. R. G. Hughes, of Milton, Widnes (Lanc.): Rev. E. L. Morris, of Dundee Chapel, Ramsbottom; Rev. T. Mann, of Trowbridge.

BAPTIST.

Queen-street, Peterborough, reports 658 members.

A new chapel has been opened in High-street, Lewisham.

At Welland, Malvern, a new mission hall has been opened.

Good missionary meetings have been held at Walkley, Sheffield.

A special mission has been successfully held at York-road, Battersea.

After a prolonged illness, Rev. G. W. White, of the Enfield Tabernacle, has resumed his duties.

The re-opening of Werter-road Chapel, Putney, after repairs, has been accompanied by interesting services.

At Parson's Hill, Woolwich, on Sunday week, nineteen were baptized in the morning, and thirty-four were received into the church in the evening.

Rev. T. Bentley, who has completed twenty-five years' pastorate at Chipping Norton, has been granted six months' leave of absence to recruit his health.

The "Text Union," formed by Revs. C. Spurgeon and D. Tait, of those who undertake to commit to memory a text daily, now numbers over 600 members.

Rev. George Dana Boardman, D.D., has given notice of his intention to resign the pastorate of the First Baptist Church, Philadelphia, on May 15, when he will have completed a pastorate of thirty years.

The forty-fourth anniversary of the Berean Class, Cotton-street, Poplar, was held on Wednesday. Rev. F. B. Meyer and Mr. Luther Hinton, superintendent of the Sunday-school for nineteen years, took part. The average attendance of members is now about fifty.

Pastor George Freeman, who entered in December, 1892, on the pastorate of the Gracey Memorial Church, New Southgate, has been much blessed in work. This month's Sword and Trowel gives details of the new chapel now building, and makes an earnest plea for liberal aid.

A series of meetings in connection with the Notts Missionary Auxiliary was held last week, concluding with a young men's missionary supper. During the past year the district, with 4375 members, has raised £660, or 3s. per head, for the ordinary income of the society, and £1332 for the Thanksgiving Fund.

The report of the Metropolitan Tabernacle for the past year shows that the present membership is 5078, being a decrease of 340 on last year's figures. There have been eighty-three deaths and 200 baptisms, while fifty-nine others have been received into communion with the church. There are twenty-one schools and mission stations, having a total of 3785 sittings, 8078 scholars, and 658 teachers. It is stated that there are nearly 2000 sittings in the Tabernacle itself to let, and the weekly offerings have been about £400 less than last year.

Calls.—Rev. C. Deal, of Millom, to Middleton: Rev. H. E. Sadler to Raunds, Northants; Mr. John Griffith to Bridgnorth; Rev. J. G. Scott, of Stogumber, to Dartmouth.

Resignations.—Rev. Dr. Aldridge, at Waterburn, Rossendale; Rev. J. B. Wise, of Princes-row, Pimlico; Rev. G. H. Lemon, at Highbridge; Rev. W. G. Hooper, at Longford.

METHODIST.

A stirring mission has been held at St. Ives.

A cheering work of grace is reported at Barony, near Nantwich.

The new Wesleyan chapel at Guildford has made a most encouraging start.

At Viaduct-road Chapel, Brighton, Rev. W. Dinnick has been warmly welcomed, after two months' absence through illness.

The growth of the Primitive Methodist work in and around Crewe has of late been very remarkable, and in every way encouraging.

The Friday morning weekly prayer meeting at the Mission House, Bishopsgate, has taken hold, and is being accompanied with much interest.

A remarkable revival has resulted from a series of special mission services, conducted by Rev. G. Ayre, at Wallsend, Newcastle-on-Tyne. Many persons have professed conversion.

So many appeals have been made in the Antipodes for a visit from Mr. Thomas Cook, that application is being made to the Wesleyan Conference to grant leave of absence for an additional year.

At Gateshead a successful nine days' mission has been conducted by Rev. W. H. Allen, one of the circuit ministers. The earnest appeals of the missioner have been instrumental in leading many to decide for Christ.

Rev. J. Travis has returned from Madrid. He had a cordial interview with the British Ambassador. It is hoped that a satisfactory settlement will yet be reached in respect to the Mission schools at Fernando Po. So far as religious work is concerned, the same liberty is allowed as is allowed to Protestants in Spain itself.

Miss Buck, once of The Joyful News Home, Halifax, has been conducting mission services in and around Penrith for two winters, six months each time. The services have been mainly in the country places. Night after night the village chapel has been full, and scores who have seldom been in a chapel have come to hear her.

A ten days' mission has been commenced in the Brunswick Chapel, Bramley. On Sunday, for the first time in the experience of the church, a brass band paraded the street, causing quite a commotion. A crowd followed the procession into the chapel, which was fairly filled when Mr. Pawson opened the evening service. Before closing souls were crying for mercy.

The Deptford Wesleyan Mission is a Mission within a circuit, and is doing good work among a population of 100,000, of whom 40 per cent. are very poor, and 90 per cent. attend no place of worship. Its greatest need is stated to be a sister of the people. The hall and other rooms are open daily, and about forty services are held every week, while during one year the lay agent pays 12,000 house-to-house visits.

Under the title of "The Free Methodist Church of To-morrow, and How to Shape It," a number of ministers in the North have issued a pamphlet containing a series of proposals for the establishing of a connexional system of religious instruction and examination of young people. It is claimed for this new movement that it will bring the denomination into organic and helpful relation with the Sunday-schools.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. J. G. Train is visiting congregations in the West of England.

Rev. A. Connell preached in Gaelic, on Sunday afternoon, in Regent-square church.

The Synodical Committees (of the English Presbyterian Churches) meet in London March 19-21.

At Sefton Park, Liverpool, Rev. John Watson now reports 666 members, and vigorous all-round work.

Under the pastoral care of Rev. W. B. Macleod the work at Jersey has been deepening and widening.

The annual meeting of the St. Andrews, Birkenhead, congregation shows a very decided advance in numbers and vigour.

Principal T. C. Edwards, D.D., of Bala College, is preparing a memoir of his father, the late Dr. Edwards, of the same college.

It is announced that Rev. J. Evans, Abermeurig, has in the press a volume of reminiscences of deceased Calvinist c ministers of Cardiganshire.

At a recent meeting of Presbyterians in Fulham, a memorial was sent to the Presbytery asking for the opening of a work in that growing district.

The Belgrave congregation have decided to repeat their call to Rev. J. E. Somerville, of Mentone, son of the late Dr. Somerville, of Glasgow. Six years ago, before the settlement of the minister who is now leaving, the congregation unsuccessfully approached Mr. Somerville.

Rev. James Blythe, of Branton, one of the oldest and most respected Presbyterian ministers in the county of Northumberland, passed away last week in his eighty-fifth year. He has been minister of the Branton Presbyterian Church since 1835, and, in conjunction with his father, whom he succeeded in the pastorate, has been closely identified with the extension of Presbyterianism in the county.

It is stated that the committee of the London Presbytery (North), to which the overture on Ritualism had been referred, have agreed to recommend that the Synod should be approached and asked to renew its testimony in favour of those doctrines of the Reformation that are most impugned at the present time, and also to issue a doctrinal manifesto with the view of warning people against Romish and Ritualistic error.

Calls.—Rev. W. Michael Smith, of Bow, to Swindon: Rev. John Rutherford, formerly a missionary in China, to Lewes; Rev. R. McClenhan, of Millfield, Sunderland, to Coleraine; Rev. W. S. H. Wylie, to Westmoreland-road, Newcastle; Rev. T. P. Rankins, to Waterbeck; Rev. R. Asher, of Paisley, to Chapel Hall, Hamilton; Rev. J. R. Jones, to Brycraig, Merionethshire.

Resignation.—Rev. T. Phillips, of Cairo.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

On Saturday evening also, a well-attended and lively social meeting was held in the Central Hall, Acton, for the purpose of inaugurating an adult school for men, to be followed, it is hoped, soon by one for women. After an excellent tea and meeting, about forty promised to attend on Sunday at the first session of the school. The number that came greatly encouraged local Friends, and the school may be considered fairly launched. The "Working Man's Church," as adult schools are called, has a fine field in Acton.

London Friends have been unusually active during the last few days. On Saturday last, the Bedford Institute, Spitalfields, was reopened after being entirely rebuilt, and is now a splendid structure, at once an ornament to East London, a credit to the Society of Friends, and excellently adapted to the extended work of the mission for which it was built. Between 300 and 400 Friends assembled to participate in the service, and, with J. Bevan Braithwaite in the chair, and list of able speakers, the scene was inspiriting and hopeful. Great progress was marked in every sense since the erection of the previous building about thirty years ago. On Sunday the attendance reached high-water mark, especially in the evening, when the large room was nicely filled, and justified the wisdom of the enlargement.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

A Buddhist has given up his "toga" and joined the Army. He says that he finds more satisfaction than in the materialistic Buddhism practised to-day.

Two deaf and dumb girls have sought and gained admission to Mrs. Bramwell Booth's knitting factory, and seem delighted at the prospect of earning their own living.

Proposals are now under consideration for establishing food depots and shelters in six provincial towns. In one of these a friend has offered to pay all initial expenses and supply deficits for the first three years.

Major Alice Lewes, who has seen service in India and Ceylon, is, at present, on a tour in Scotland in behalf of the Social Scheme. She has a thorough knowledge of her subject, and speaks with great ease and power.

Two days' meetings have been arranged to take place on the 9th and 10th prox. in Queen's Hall, Regent-street. Special interest will be attached to these meetings, it being the celebration of the General's sixty-fourth birthday.

The Salvation Army last week had a monster meeting in Boston. The Music Hall gathering was said to be the largest Army gathering ever held in that city. Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth were the principal speakers.

A telegram from Mexico says:—The Salvation Army has large colonisation schemes preparing for Mexico. A syndicate of capitalists interested in the work of the Salvation Army has concluded the purchase from the Mexican Government of two hundred thousand acres of land in the state of Chiapas, in Southern Mexico. It is expected that plans will be speedily perfected by which five thousand families will be put on the great tract for colonisation purposes, operating under the direction of the officers of the Army. Chiapas, is on the extreme southern border of Mexico, on the Pacific coast, and is a state of much promise in the way of agricultural products.

DR. PARROTT left Hankow, Central China, and proceeded with his wife and two boys and Miss Farwig up the Han river. They reached Lao-ho-keo, their destination for the winter, on November 19. "Goodness and mercy have followed us all the way. We find many people here had heard of our coming, and are urgent in their requests for us to stay and attend to their ailments." Dr. Parrott keeps Si-ngan before him, as the goal to be reached, if the Lord will, in due time.

The Christian.

Notes and Comments.

We purpose next week to give portraits and sketches of the late Sir Harry Verney, Bart., and Mr. Oscar Snelling, of Swansea.

An evangelist of much experience asks:—Ought not a word of caution to be given to young girls who, with little knowledge and experience, are sometimes too ready to be thrust forward as public speakers to their own spiritual loss? Modesty, humility, diffidence are not always so conspicuous as one might hope and expect.

Many of our readers will learn with sorrow that the various missionary societies and great philanthropic institutions are likely to close their financial year at the end of March with heavy deficits. The Baptist, Church, London, and Wesleyan Missionary societies will, it is feared, all be behind to the extent of thousands of pounds; in some cases five figures may represent the adverse balance. Of home mission institutions we may specify Dr. Barnardo's Homes, the receipts of which have so fallen off that it is doubtful if it will be possible this year to continue the emigration work. We trust that the mention of these regrettable facts will induce many to lend a hand at the present time.

We have frequently contrasted the religious privileges of Great Britain with the overwhelming needs of the heathen world. Thousands upon thousands of Christian workers in our land testify for God in the presence of a perverse generation, while tens or hundreds struggle to evangelise the millions of India or China. The disproportion of labourers is painfully striking, and sometimes it appeals very strongly to lonely missionaries abroad. A friend in China recently wrote us a letter, penned while oppressed with this thought. He said:—

It is high time that much of the effort made and money spent on the Gospel-hardened sinners of England were directed to other channels. Here millions are perishing every month with no one to tell them of a Saviour! Little England is overstocked; big China is dying for want of labourers.

The Lord told his disciples to make the harvest field a matter of specific prayer. We join our brother in the petition that God may send forth many more labourers into his harvest.

The Victoria Institute is to be congratulated on having brought together, on Monday evening last, some of the acknowledged leaders in the Geological world to consider a paper by Dr. Prestwich on "The Deluge." After presenting the results of prolonged observation throughout Europe and the coasts of the Mediterranean, Dr. Prestwich concluded that the phenomena are only explicable upon the hypothesis of a widespread and short submergence, of continental dimensions, followed by early re-elevation. Six other Fellows of the Royal Society and distinguished Geologists took part in the discussion, and those who attended must have been forcibly reassured of the agreement of science and the early chapters of Holy Writ.

The protest against vivisection is growing in strength and volume. When doctors of eminence are gravely declaring that scientific medicine has received no material or reliable contribution from the repulsive practice, there is every reason why humane people should question the need or value of painful experimentation on dogs, rabbits, and cats. In the Christian mind moral considerations also must have place: the torturing of helpless animals must be linked to the brutalising of those who, in the name of science, alas! effect the pinioning, cutting, poisoning, and so forth. It has frequently been urged in extenuation of vivisection, that the animals are first put under the power of anæsthetics; but, as a fact, the days of suffering are spent subsequently, and under no such ameliorating conditions. In a recent interview, Canon Wilberforce said:—

Take the experiment of opening the back of a rabbit and inserting there a thin glass tube, laden with croton oil. This operation is performed under anæsthesia, if you please—one of those that are trumpeted everywhere as being carried out under chloroform; but when the wound is healed, the thumb of the operator breaks the glass tube and lets that terrible corrosive substance loose in the body of the unfortunate rabbit, and there for days and days and days it eats its way, putting the poor little animal to unspeakable torture. Remember, it is not under chloroform when it endures the after agony induced by the operation.

God has made nothing in vain. Mr. Frank E. Beddard adds in Blackwood a short chapter on "The Newest on Worms," which will increase the interest which Darwin created in the study of these once despised creatures. Further discoveries have been made as to their habits and characteristics: that some of them can make a noise; that they are grouped in colonies; that they are more vigorous in northern than southern latitudes; that there are marked differences, which separate them into distinct families. The reverent study of the lowliest of the Creator's works never fails to find fresh reasons for wonder and worship.

The custom, now becoming more common than ever, of holding great political demonstrations on Sundays, is much to be regretted. The feverish excitement and hard work of the day—for it is very hard work to march in one of these processions and to stand in one of these crowds—are disturbing to the quietness with which the day should be observed. The objects set before the mind are distracting, and draw it away from the great themes of redeeming love. Even if they are right in themselves, they are not of the importance which can be claimed for things eternal; and in the neglect of eternal things temporal things always suffer in the long run. The Kingdom of God and his righteousness must be sought "first," or the other things will not be added. Moreover, if professedly Christian men join these demonstrations they can hardly fail to receive damage in something; "the simplicity that is in Christ" will not be kept intact in a noisy Sunday crowd among men who do not call Jesus Lord. If teetotallers can organise enormous and successful demonstrations on a Saturday afternoon, so also, we should imagine, can working men, who generally cease their work early.

A short sentence which fell last week from the lips of a working-man Member of Parliament in the House of Commons had great meaning in it as to our foreign peace policy. He denied that the working classes did not take an interest in foreign affairs; but he affirmed that their interest was not in a policy of defiance, but of defence. This care for our relations to foreign nations should be directed by Christian teachers and leaders into the highest conceptions of duty and privilege. The Divine idea of the unity of the race, that "God made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth," should be sedulously inculcated, because in the light of it national jealousies and animosities will decrease.

With all our heart we wish well to the new departure of some masters and men in different parts of the country who are seeking to form a strongly organised union of both sides with these objects:—

1. To promote harmony between employers and employed by affording opportunities for each side to obtain a better understanding of the other's aims and difficulties, and to realise in larger measure their common interests. 2. To discuss means by which, without detriment to business, the conditions of labour and the opportunities of workmen may be improved; and to make known, by a monthly journal and otherwise, the results of experiments in this direction. 3. To foster the establishment, as the way opens, of local branches in the different industrial and agricultural centres.

"The eye cannot say to the hand, I have no need of thee." So are we learning that we are not separate classes with separate interests, but one body politic with the same interests. The more the Spirit of Christ prevails, the easier will it be to form and to work common unions of masters and men.

Music is becoming "too ornate" in some High churches even for one who, in writing to a High Church paper, describes himself as "a musician and a hearty sympathiser with every step of a great Catholic revival." He refers especially to the increasing use of adaptations of Latin masses, which, he says, are now looked upon with marked disfavour in the Roman Church itself. He gives an example from the great gathering at St. Paul's last year, when in the mass sung "there were frequent opportunities for scale practice by the organist." We fear that the organ too frequently hinders rather than helps devotion. It should never be obtruded. No skill in playing can ever compensate for hearty devout singing by the congregation, such as we heard from an East-End congregation of working-men, some of whom sang with closed eyes, others with eyes that seemed to be gazing upon an invisible Saviour, and all with a warm unaffected sincerity. Such singing was a sacrifice to God and an inspiration to man.

"Village Life in France" is the subject of a paper in The Contemporary Review by "A French Official." Of those parts relating to the economical condition, and also to the education of the peasant and the farmer, we need take no notice here. But it is worth remarking that the writer believes that the generation which has grown up under the Republic is more markedly indifferent to religion than those who have preceded it. Yet it is not markedly hostile to religion. The forms of religion are observed at the beginning and the end of life: the women are expected to be religious. From political motives sometimes, as much as from religious ones, the Church is powerfully supported by noble families and rich families of the middle class. "As a rule, the new generation of Frenchmen object to what they regard as the absurd dogmas and superstitious practices of the Church of Rome. The Protestants are only a small proportion of the population; they are mostly Calvinists and are generally more cultivated, but few are found in the country districts. The form of belief which is gaining most ground in France is Unitarianism, which is professed already by many of the intellectual élite of the French nation." From which we infer, that an intelligent and vigorous form of Evangelicalism would probably supplant both the religion of superstition and the religion of mere reason.

It is strengthening to faith in the resurrection of Christ to go back to the unbelief of the disciples at the first, for over that unbelief the fact that Jesus was risen again had to triumph. As Lange says, and as the simplest-minded reader of the New Testament may see for himself, "They had a threefold prejudice against the thought of the real resurrection of Christ. The risen Lord had to break through and remove their fear of spectres, their comfortlessness, and their spirit of doubt, before He could get a quiet hearing from them. If the disciples had been inclined to impose upon themselves by fancied visions (which as fancied would have been far from equal to real visions) for the purpose of asserting the resurrection of Christ, they would not have held the message of the women to be idle tales. Mary could not have believed that she saw the risen Saviour in a gardener, or conversely, the gardener in the risen Saviour." The testimony of the disciples is clearly against themselves, an evidence of unbelief which nothing but the most definite and indisputable reality could remove. Unbelief has, in this as in so many other cases, ministered to faith.

There are few more comforting words at a funeral for those who have watched their dear one fade and change from day to day, and go down to the grave broken with disease, than the assurance that Christ, who is the First-fruits of them who are asleep, shall change the body of humiliation which is then being laid to rest, and fashion it like unto the body of his glory. The pain and destruction of the familiar "earthly house" are things of the past, and now faith and hope can take this sweet comfort home, that there will be a spiritual body, immortal and glorious as that of the Lord's Himself. He came to be like us, so that we might become like Him. The humiliation of the Son of God is really more wonderful than our exaltation; and once there is a crucified Saviour, we see that He cannot be holden of death; death hath no more dominion over Him; and we see also that because He lives, so must all who know and believe in Him live also.

Bishop Westcott says:—

It is evident from our ignorance of the forces at work in the outer world, of which we can observe only some effects according to our limited powers of perception, that we are quite unable to form any notion of a new heaven and a new earth. Yet the fact of the resurrection of the body suggests more forcibly the literal truth of that restitution of all things which was announced from the first by St. Peter. The ennobling of our material organisation contains, as it were, the promise of a more complete transfiguration of Nature. It is possible that the change lies nearer to us than we are apt to imagine. It may, perhaps, be the case that what appear to us to be imperfections and evils in the physical or animal world may derive the character which we attribute to them from the incompleteness of our own faculties, and that this transfiguration (relative to us) may lie within us and not without.

When we shall be made like Christ, heaven and earth will look to us as they did to Him; yet it is clear also that heaven and earth have to undergo a renewing. Then what glory shall be manifested!

Expository preaching is a subject deserving all the consideration which is at present being accorded to it. In the last issue of The Primitive Methodist we read:

Whatever leads to a better and more general understanding of the Scriptures will have a good effect on the spiritual life of the Church. It is surprising how comparatively little the vast bulk of professing Christians know about many parts of the Bible. Amid the thousands of volumes that annually come from the Press, the Book itself is too frequently buried and forgotten. We should endeavour largely to obtain a first-hand knowledge, by going directly to the Book ourselves; and it is because we believe that expository preaching will help to lead us to do so, that we are thankful this method of preaching is becoming increasingly popular.

Scripture story is a ground on which preachers may be understood by learned and ignorant; and to "open the Scriptures" is the best way to set forth God's purpose and work among men. As Christ is the Alpha and Omega of the Word, there is no better way of preaching Christ than by expounding the Word.

AN EASTER HYMN.

1 Cor. xv. 20.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen."
Tell it far o'er sea and land;
Throned 'midst circling rainbow brightness,
Jesus reigns at God's right hand.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen."
From the manger, cross, and grave;
Unto honour, power, and glory,
He who died now lives to save.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen,"
Nature wakes her King to greet;
Strewing her fair fragrant treasures
In the pathways of his feet.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen."
Victor over death and hell;
Crowned in love's majestic beauty,
Radiance all ineffable.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen."
Over woe, and want, and sin;
Simply trusting in his merit,
Shall we, too, the victory win.

"Christ has risen," "Christ has risen."
Found in Him, we, too, shall rise
To the everlasting fulness
Of the life that never dies.

GIPSY SMITH hopes to sail for Australia on April 13 by the ss. Rome. He has several times visited America on evangelistic tours, and intends now to take the Antipodes. Mr. Smith anticipates openings in Adelaide, Melbourne, Sydney, and other centres, and expects after a few months to cross the Pacific to Vancouver, and make his way home to England through the United States. His recent missions in Lancashire have been greatly blessed, and many are following his movements with interest, and with prayer that God may signally use his efforts in preaching the Gospel.

Day of Thanksgiving,

On Wednesday, April 11, 1894, at 11, 3, and 7.
At the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End, E.,
Kindly lent for the occasion.

The extracts on page 23 from letters received may be taken to indicate a very deep desire to return and give glory to God for the stream of blessing which has flowed from the Revival of 1859. Comparatively few of the present generation have personal recollection of those days, but all have been the receivers of its gracious results.

It has been suggested that before meeting for thanksgiving we should assemble for confession and humiliation. This had been considered; but, in the prayer the Lord taught his disciples, glory to God precedes the prayer for forgiveness; and Psalm cv. recounts the wondrous works of the Lord before, in cvi., the confession is made, "We have sinned with our fathers, we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly." And even this Psalm begins with "Praise ye the Lord! . . . who can show forth all his praise?"

The more his glories strike our eyes
The humbler we shall lie;
So, while we sink, our joys shall rise
Immeasurably high.

As there will not be time in these large meetings for many speakers, the conveners will be much obliged if friends who have interesting reminiscences will write them as concisely as possible, addressed to me, marked, "Thanksgiving." This request applies equally to female workers, as it will be necessary to confine the speakers to men, few women's voices being equal to so large a hall.

It is particularly requested that notice of these meetings may be given in places of worship, and at evangelistic and other meetings. Clergymen, ministers, superintendents of missions, and Christian workers of every kind, are warmly and affectionately invited; and as the evening meeting is likely to be a crowded one, it is hoped that those who can possibly do so will come in the morning and afternoon, which, if the gatherings are not so large, will have an enjoyment peculiar to themselves. Arrangements will be made for rest and refreshment between the meetings for friends from a distance.

IT IS A GRAND THING to save men and women out of depths, but it is a nobler, higher, and more hopeful work to save the children before they become corrupted and degraded.

A CHILD rarely fails to see whether what parent and teacher order or forbid, comes from themselves—personally, arbitrarily—or is the expression of universal and necessary truth, speaking through them.

UNLESS THE MOTHER is a Christian lady—a God-fearing, God-serving, heavenly-minded, unworldly, praying woman—her unhappy daughter will grow up to womanhood in utter ignorance of what the religion of Jesus Christ really is, and what a Christian lady really is.—Dr. Alexander Whyte.

JAPAN.—In December, we gave an account of suffering in Matsuye, through floods and a disastrous tornado, in the district in charge of Rev. Barclay Buxton. Mr. Robert Wilson, who undertook to receive and forward funds, writes that he has been able, so far, to send out £82 10s. for the relief of distress. Mr. Buxton, in acknowledging this aid, remarks, "It has shown us how closely the members of Christ's body are knit together, so that as we were suffering here, you could not but suffer with us."

"A Letter to a Friend."

Two communications have reached me in somewhat emphatic terms of disapproval of my letter a fortnight since.

One of them is based upon the supposition that I intended to attack or depreciate "Keswick." This is quite a misapprehension. "Keswick" was referred to as an illustration, because it is the most important and at the same time (as I think) the least questionable and most Scriptural of the various exponents of what is called "holiness teaching." Its most reliable and its best instructed representatives are foremost in deprecation of limiting their platform to "Keswick lines" or "Keswick teaching," or to anything narrower than the whole counsel of God. With the bulk of the letter before me, as with the purpose and the substantial teaching of "Keswick," I am in heartiest accord. Nor am I, as the deservedly esteemed writer supposes, one who has no acquaintance with such conventions, or is entirely misinformed as to their teaching.

The other communication is from "A Lover of Holiness," who, after quoting one or two of my sentences, says:—

I hope you will not think me wanting in proper charity when I say frankly that the assumption of superiority in the interpretation of Scripture underlying this and much else in your letter is extremely painful.

If my words justified this remark I am sorry for it. I was not conscious of any such assumption. My readers can judge. The writer proceeds:—

The teachers of holiness have many shortcomings, and, in common with their brethren, need daily the guidance of the Holy Spirit; but they certainly extol the power and grace of God and the Lord Jesus Christ beyond many, if not all, other teachers. For what is the main feature of their testimony? Why, that Christ, and Christ of his own sovereign grace, will do more for the human soul than others admit to be possible. That He will effect a work of actual purifying and practical deliverance from evil which others declare He does not purpose to do in his people. Who best honours and extols the physician, the man who contents himself with referring to his character as a healing person, or he who in urging sufferers to hasten to him adds a constant testimony to the thoroughness and "uttermost" character of the cures he has effected?

I will not charge my friend with "assumption" in the comparison here instituted: but I am bound to confess that on two points I am not in agreement with his view, though for himself I entertain sincere Christian affection and respect. I cannot concede the term "teachers of holiness" exclusively to one form of teaching. There are, and have always been, holy men, not connected with what is termed "the holiness movement," whose one business it has been, and is, to live and preach and teach the Good Tidings of the Kingdom of God (using that term in its largest sense); and their testimony to its sanctifying truths has been, and is, abundantly owned of God.

And this leads me to my second remark upon the above extract. I cannot concede to those who claim to be called "holiness teachers" that "they extol the power and grace of God and the Lord Jesus Christ beyond many, if not all, other teachers." So far from limiting what God of his own sovereign grace will do for the human soul, we teach that the way by which God effects the work of "actual purifying and practical deliverance from evil," is by making us new creatures (a new creation) in Christ; and that Jesus the Son of God, our Great High Priest, saves to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him. We believe that Christ dwells in our hearts by faith, and that our life is hid with Christ in God; that we died together with Him, were buried, quickened, raised together with Him, that we are seated together with Him in the heavenlies, that as we suffer with Him we shall be also glorified together. We believe that this is the normal Christian life, and that it is realised according as we present our body a living sacrifice to God, and are transfigured by the renewing of our mind, that we may prove what is the holy and acceptable and perfect will of God; and that this is wrought by the Holy Spirit sanctifying us through the Word of truth.

This and such like is, we believe, doctrine according to godliness, the Scriptural way of holiness, and this it is our endeavour to enforce.

I will not enter further into this discussion here, because I do not wish to be turned aside from the purpose with which my letter was published, viz., to urge upon my beloved brothers and sisters in Christ, that while the differences of view as to doctrines which divided our fathers into denominations have lost their significance, other doctrines are being pressed into prominence which are as effectually dividing us into little coteries as Predestination and Free Will divided our fathers into the greater denominations.

Is not the same principle at work which the Apostle deprecates: "Everyone of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation"—sometimes a very private interpretation? I very respectfully and without assumption, ask that present tendencies may be considered in the light of 1 Cor. xii., xiii., xiv., especially 23-33 of the latter chapter.

It was not that Predestination or Free Will was untrue, but that they were so discussed as to create division. Holiness and the coming of our Lord are great truths: surely it is possible so to teach them, as to gather together in one the children of God who are scattered abroad—at least to unite those who are of one heart and of one soul to make Jesus King.

Truth must be ministered as we are able to bear it: "I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." It may be laid down as an axiom, that any doctrine which divides spiritual men into opposite camps is either in whole or in part untrue, or is truth stated out of proportion with other truth.

Truth is profitably ministered as it edifies the body of Christ—that is, as it builds up its members into one, and enables each one in his place and measure to fulfil the function allotted to it. To hold the Head is not only to be true to Christ, but to be true to Him as the Head of the body, which is the fulness of Him who filleth all in all.

My spirit has rejoiced in God my Saviour, while the Holy Spirit has recalled to remembrance these precious truths, in which we all agree, and which bind us together in one. And they are written here with deference to all my fellow-Christians, at any of whose feet I gladly sit to be taught the things of God.

The Writer of
"A Letter to a Friend."

"FRIEDENHEIM," so well known to our readers, as a monument to the loving labours of Miss Davidson, on behalf of a pitiful class, was on Tuesday week the scene of a pretty ceremony, the occasion being the naming of another ward by the Duchess of Albany. Before the ceremony, Mr. John Langton and Dr. A. T. Schofield explained the object for which Friedenheim had been founded and the principles on which it was conducted. The Duchess of Albany proceeded to the new ward, the beds in which were already occupied by patients, and named it the "Leopold Ward." She then went through the other wards of the hospital, and addressed a few cheering words to each patient.

Do We Believe in Prayer?

By Rev. J. H. Cartwright.

"Nineteen-twentieths of us are infidels in the matter of prayer," says Thomas Champness, one of the most devoted of Methodist preachers, in his Plain Preaching for Plain People, just published. And Rev. William Cuff, one of the most earnest of Baptist pastors, in a brotherly letter, seems to agree with him. Thank God there are many hearts, in spite of prevailing indifferentism and blatant unbelief, right on this matter. As in the dark days of Elijah, there are still the thousands who have not bowed their knees to Baal.

Mr. Champness gives a prophetic sketch (in a sermon delivered at Manchester), startling perhaps to some, of what he believes will happen some day when the churches really believe in prayer. "If, in to-morrow's Manchester Guardian, we read as follows:—'We hear that arrangements have been made for cheap trips to Birmingham on an early date. Some thousands of people, Christians of various churches, have sent word to the Christians of that town to say that they are coming to spend some hours with them in prayer. The Birmingham Town Hall and other large buildings have been engaged, and arrangements made for united meetings for prayer to take place. We also hear that the Christians of Leeds have arranged for similar meetings. . . . This is a new era in Christian enterprise, and although we cannot endorse the extreme doctrines taught by these people, we cannot but feel that they are in earnest, and mean what they say, and certainly act as though they believed the doctrines that they teach.' If we read that, I say, it would open some people's eyes, would it not? Yet it is going to come to pass some day. Listen! 'The inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of Hosts. I will go also' (Zech. viii. 21)." There are many readers of The Christian who will say with all their hearts, "God hasten the time when that prophetic vision shall be fulfilled."

Church of England and Free Church Congresses arouse widespread interest, and when they are held there is a gathering of the clans from far and near. Doubtless they have their place in the religious life of to-day, but how much more glorious would be gatherings throughout the land for united prayer to God for blessing upon the hosts of His spiritual Israel! Prayer is the mightiest weapon in the Church's armoury. When will she rise in her strength, and, wielding it, rout the armies of the aliens?

But do the members of the churches have any real faith in prayer? It is to be feared that many nominal professors and lukewarm believers dishonour God by the unreality of their prayers. On the other hand, there are many earnest faithful souls who do not ask in vain, whose hearts are brimful of an earnest longing, and to whom the door swings wide open as they knock. They pray in faith, and receive answers of blessing. Give God the glory for the miracles of grace He works in these our days, in answer to the prayer of faith. Mr. Champness gives an illustration from his own experience, of a distinct answer to definite prayer. It was at a Conference prayer-meeting at Nottingham. Months before it was laid on his mind that he would be called upon to pray on that occasion. Nobody knew who would be president that year. So he besought the Holy Spirit to reveal to him what His will was. "And it was told me," he says, "that I must pray that Charles Garrett might get well and William Arthur might have his voice back again." The day came, the president was elected, and called on Thomas Champness to pray. He prayed as the Spirit guided him. Charles Garrett recovered, and has been doing valiant service for God ever since, and William Arthur, whose "Tongue of Fire" has been a blessing to thousands, spoke at the next Conference. Well may the devoted evangelist say, "It was before the Lord."

A few years ago a week of special prayer was recognised throughout the Methodist Church. It was the writer's privilege to conduct some prayer meetings in one of the suburbs of Bristol. Among the requests for prayer that were sent in, was one for the conversion of a man then in prison. He had been committed for theft. The letter containing the request was ill-spelt and poorly written, but it was the pathetic outpouring of the heart of a fellow-workman that yearned for the salvation of his friend. We prayed earnestly for the poor fellow in gaol. Soon his term of imprisonment ended, and at the prison-gates to meet him was his old mate, who took him to his home. The frugal meal over, they knelt side by side to pray, and the sinner found pardon. When I last heard of him he was leading a new life.

Yet another instance of answered prayer. A dear old colleague, Rev. Joseph Rhodes, was conducting an after-meeting in the Stonehouse Wesleyan Chapel. While singing the hymn beginning—

> Why should I till to-morrow stay,
> For what Thou wouldst bestow to-day?

a sailor's wife accepted Jesus and cried aloud for joy. Still kneeling, with passionate earnestness she entreated, "Pray for my husband at sea! Oh, pray for my husband at sea!" The request was immediately granted. Every head was bowed, and amid solemn stillness preacher and people pleaded for "the husband at sea." More than a year afterwards, my friend was sent for to visit a sick man in the Royal Naval Hospital. He was soon by the sufferer's side, and asked, "My friend, are you happy in Jesus?" "Blessed be God, I am," was the reply. In answer to questions he told his story. Hundreds of miles away at sea, on board H.M.S. Salamis, he began to have concern about his soul. Without any human instrumentality, the Bible had become a new book to him, and he began to loathe himself as a sinner. Gradually he was led by the Spirit into the light, and was now rejoicing in the Saviour. Further inquiries elicited the fact that he was none other than the "husband at sea" for whom they prayed that night in the Stonehouse Chapel. He died in the hospital, and on the night of his death Mr. Rhodes told the story in the King-street Chapel, Plymouth, and gave to an immense congregation the dying message of the husband saved at sea. The day of miracles is not past. Believer, rouse thee, lay hold of the weapon of "all-prayer."

THE SPEZIA MISSION.—A drawing-room meeting was held at Hyde Park Gardens last Thursday, Mr. F. A Bevan in the chair. Rev. E. Clarke gave an account of his work. Various friends spoke very warmly of the importance and value of the work which Mr. Clarke and his helpers are doing in Italy.

FRANCE.—There is a revival in spiritual concern in the department of Basses Pyrenées. With special reference to Bellocq and Puyoo, a correspondent writes: "Young people especially have been exercised, and a spirit of prayer is animating the hearts of Christians, and binding them together regardless of denominational distinctions. The meetings for worship and evangelisation have been spontaneously multiplied, and the churches are being built up."

World-Wide Evangelisation.—6.

In my last word on this subject it was stated how the persecution of the Stundists in Russia might become a practical example to American and European missionaries amongst the heathen and Mohammedan populations of the world.

It is an ancient saying that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church. It was so in Europe, it was so in the religion of the United States of America.

Most emphatically it was so by the persecution in Jerusalem as described in Acts viii. 1, and for generations afterwards, in the general and bloody persecutions of the converts from heathenism to Christianity.

The duty and happy joyous privilege of every male and female convert was to spread the glorious tidings; in fact, joyously, from the day and hour of conversion, to comply with the Saviour's imperative command to be as salt, and to be as a lighted reflecting lamp, in short, not to resist the given Holy Ghost, but gladly by his power to render willing obedience in boldly confessing Christ before men. He that confesseth Me before men, him will I confess before my Father in heaven. This, I apprehend, is what the poor persecuted Stundists are now doing in Russia to the glory of God.

This, oh this, is what we want; or rather a recurrence of this in Britain, in Europe, in America, and especially amongst the heathen and Mohammedan populations of India and China and of the world. And what a splendid sight to see, thousands more of the converted children of Israel, utterly unpaid, spreading the Gospel amongst their own race in Berlin, in Paris, in London, and in New York, and wherever Israelites are scattered.

Again and again have I known my fellow-labourers and myself, when working in the open-air, to be withstood by the question, "How many bob a day do you get for this job?" My brethren, these things ought not so to be, and these things would not be so if whole companies of believers came together and "lifted up their voice to God with one accord," and prayed the prayer of those persecuted Israelites in Jerusalem, "Grant unto thy servants," mark, not thy apostles only, but the whole company of believers, old and young, male and female, "that with all boldness they may speak thy word."

Note well, they did not fall into the modern mistake of praying for orators or public speakers, or even for missionaries. No, no, no! their own mouths were not half shut, but opened wide, so that they with one voice cried like an expecting babe, "Grant that thy servants," i.e., every converted woman and girl, and every converted man and boy, should (in spite of the Satanic endeavour to shut their mouths about the Heavenly Father's gift of his well-beloved Son) "speak thy word with all boldness" (Acts iv. 30). Whereupon they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and, driven by persecution, they started to speak the glad news of God with boldness, not only in Jerusalem, but in Europe, Asia, and Africa.

How I should like to listen to a missionary meeting like that unanimous one in which, in deep humility, we should acknowledge and confess that we have not so prayed, and of course have not so done. We are like the fish we read of, born in the dark-cave waters of America with no use for their eyes, so that their eyes even when they are brought out to the daylight cannot be used by them. Have not we become like these poor fish, not blind, but tongue-tied, in the mid-day sunlight of 1894?

But these poor fish were born and lived where no sunlight ever pierces the darkness.

And Satan "hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them. But God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ."

Are we fair to the heathen? Are we fair to our devoted missionaries to handicap them thus? Surely it is unfair to our missionaries, and surely it is cruel to the heathen, and, I would venture to add it is fundamentally opposed to the course taken by the young converts in the glorious missionary meeting in Jerusalem, who, without going through the form of passing a resolution, came to the unanimous conclusion that every one of them would hasten away to spread the glorious happy tidings that the Father's gift was not a sham, and as the Greek Church in Russia emphasises annually, "He is risen," "He is risen indeed."

It is true the disciples were scattered out of Jerusalem and into Europe, Asia, and Africa, but they went everywhere exclaiming, or singing, or affirming, or proclaiming, "Christ is risen indeed."

Let us start once more this old Jerusalem train, and let every believing brother and sister of the whole Church take his seat in it for the evangelisation of the world, singing with one accord:—

> Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
> And looks to God alone;
> Laughs at impossibilities,
> And cries, It shall be done!

Reginald Radcliffe.

RESURRECTION HYMN.

AT THE FUNERAL OF BELIEVERS.

To Thee, the Resurrection,
Eternal Life! to Thee
We raise glad Hallelujah,
From sin and death set free;
Although with mournful memories,
We gather round the bier,
The hope thy word enkindles
Illumes the falling tear.

Not rent—more firm the column,
Not quenched—the torch more bright;
More fragrant fair the lily,
The day dispels the night,
They are not dead nor distant,
But loving, serving more;
Such friends are never parted,
But only gone before.

With dear ones reunited,
They bend before the throne,
With angel-choirs their voices
The Lord of Glory own;
In holiness made perfect,
In rapturous tones they sing,
With angel-choirs in chorus,
The praises of their King.

We join in adoration,
Though gathered round the grave,
To Christ the Resurrection,
Who life eternal gave;
We glorify, we bless Thee,
Their Saviour Lord and ours,
With angels and archangels,
And all the Heavenly Powers.

A New Translation

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

4. Therefore, being engaged in this service, mindful of the mercy shown us, we are no
2 cowards. Nay, we have renounced the secrecy that marks a feeling of shame: we practise no cunning tricks; nor do we adulterate the message of God; but by full clear statement of the truth we commend ourselves to every human conscience under the eye of
3 God. If, however, our Good News is veiled, the veil is on the hearts of those who
4 are on the way to destruction, in whom the god of this present Age has blinded their unbelieving minds to shut out the sunshine of the Good News of the glory of the Christ, who
5 is the image of God. (For it is not ourselves, but Christ Jesus, that we proclaim as Lord, and ourselves as your servants for Jesus'
6 sake.) For the God who said, "Out of darkness let light shine," is He who has shone in our hearts to give the illumination of the knowledge of God's glory, effulgent in the face of Christ.

7 But this treasure we have in a fragile vase of clay, that the surpassing greatness of the power may be seen to be God's, and not to
8 originate in us. We are hard pressed, yet never in absolute distress; perplexed, yet
9 never hopelessly so; pursued, yet never left unsuccoured; struck to the ground, yet never
10 slain; always, wherever we go, carrying with us in our body the putting to death of Jesus, that in our body it may be clearly shown
11 also that Jesus lives. For we, who are nevertheless living, are continually delivering ourselves up to die for the sake of Jesus, that in our mortal body it may be clearly shown
12 also that Jesus lives. So that we are in a dying state, while you are in full enjoyment of life.

13 But possessing the same Spirit of faith as he who wrote, "I believed, wherefore I have spoken," we too believe, and therefore 14 speak. For we know that He who raised the Lord Jesus from the dead will raise us also to be with Jesus, and will cause us to stand in 15 His own presence together with you. For everything is for your sake, in order that grace, more amply bestowed because of the thanksgivings of the increased number, may abound to the glory of God.

16 We are no cowards therefore. Nay, even though our outward man is wasting away, yet our inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For this our light and transitory burden of suffering is achieving for us a transcendent, and still transcendent, and eternal weight of glory;
18 while we regard not things seen, but things unseen; for what is seen is temporary, but what is unseen is eternal.

3. Is veiled: wherever in this translation a word is printed in italics this is intended, as in all modern English books, to show that the word is emphatic, and not that it is inserted to bringout more clearly the meaning of the original.
5 Servants: lit., slaves.
14 Raised the Lord Jesus: some authorities omit the Lord.
15 Everything is: or all these sufferings are.
17 Our: omitted by some authorities.—A transcendent, and still transcendent, and eternal: lit., by way of transcendence, into transcendence, an eternal, &c. In most cases a satisfactory literal rendering will be found (in more or less archaic English) in R.V. and in Mr. Darby's excellent version. On this passage see Miss Havergal's "From Glory into Glory."

INDIAN MISSIONARIES AND DRINK.

Dear Sir,—Since I last wrote to you from Calcutta, the Opium Commission has made the circuit of Northern India, and has visited Patna, Benares, Lucknow, Umballa, Lahore, Delhi, Agra, Jeypore, Ajmere, Ahmedabad, and Bombay. The time spent in each place until Bombay has varied from one day to five. We have always travelled by night; in some cases the journey has occupied a considerable part of the day as well. Except for two days last week, one of which was entirely spent in travelling, we have had no weekday without a sitting of the Commission, though occasionally the sitting has lasted only half the day. It has been no holiday task that the Commissioners have performed; and they, as well as those who, like myself, have been in attendance on them, are looking forward with relief to the close of this arduous labour this week at Bombay.

The exigencies of such a journey have left but little leisure for the study of those missionary problems which are of absorbing interest to all who long and pray for the advancement of the Saviour's kingdom. It would ill become me to express an opinion on most of these. One point, however, has come before the Commission so constantly, and is so closely connected with its work, that I should fail in discharging my duty did I not express the very decided views I have formed with regard to it. Everywhere, from English officials and from natives of India, from pro-opiumists and from anti-opiumists, from Christians, Mussulmans, and Hindus, the Commission has heard of the alarming progress of drinking habits amongst the people of India, and especially amongst that class of Indian society which is being permeated with Western thought through English education.

The reasons are not far to seek. An influential Mohammedan witness the other day stated them in terms precisely similar to those in which I have heard them put by experienced Christian missionaries. The great religions of India, Hinduism and Mohammedanism, both expressly forbid the use of alcoholic drinks, and until within the last few decades indulgence in these liquors was practically unknown, except among the aboriginal tribes. But the intelligent youth of India are now receiving an education which frees them from the restraints of their own religions, whilst it puts no new restraining force in their places. Following the example of their rulers and teachers, they take to intoxicants, and having a weaker physique and less power of self-control than men of Anglo-Saxon race, they fall

EASY VICTIMS TO INTEMPERATE HABITS.

A well-known missionary educationalist at Lahore told me of a conversation he had had with an intelligent Sikh gentleman, whom he asked why he was not sending his son to college. He replied that, whilst very sensible of the benefits of English education, he would rather his boy should grow up in ignorance than that he should go to college and run the risk of learning drinking and other bad habits that are there acquired.

I am sorry to say that drinking is far more universal amongst Englishmen here than at home, and in a form that would not be tolerated in any but the most thoroughly worldly circles in England. During our first week in a hotel in Bombay I was amazed at seeing everyone around us, even ladies, drinking "whisky pegs"—that is to say, whisky and soda-water. At Calcutta I was given the reason that very few people can drink beer in India without upsetting their digestion, and so spirits are almost universally drunk at meals. Even missionaries, where they are not teetotallers, generally drink the inevitable "peg."

This brings me to my point. I am convinced that non-teetotal missionaries are a terrible scandal in the eyes of the thoughtful natives. They are too polite to say so outright. It has been amusing, once or twice, to note with how much careful circumlocution native gentlemen (giving evidence before the Commission) have referred to the fact that European example has led to this deluge of drinking in India.

Is not the moral obvious? Surely poor India has enough bad social customs to keep her from rising amongst nations, and to hinder her acceptance of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, without this additional hindrance of the drink, which we know so well at home, being brought to her from the West. Do not the chains of idolatry, the fetters of caste, the seclusion of the zenana, form a sufficiently grievous yoke for India to throw off, without having the slavery of drink superadded? Yet what can be looked for but a steady increase of the drinking habit in India, so long as the leaders of society, and even the of indulgence in alcoholic stimulants? Does the spirit of the Apostle Paul animate missionaries who can calmly witness the scourge of strong drink destroying the souls of men to whom they are seeking to bring the knowledge of Christ's salvation, and yet continue to take the intoxicating cup that is a snare to so many of their would-be converts? "If thy brother be grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably (in love). Destroy not him with thy meat for whom Christ died. . . For meat destroy not the work of God. . . It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby their brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak (Rom. xiv. 15, 20, 21). And again, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend" (1 Cor. viii. 13). Would to God that every missionary in India might see it his duty to make a similar declaration as regards strong drink!

Paul says in the same passage: "He that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God and approved of men" (Rom. xiv. 19). In my journey through Northern India it has been my privilege to meet with many missionaries and other workers of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, and I hope I shall not be thought to cast a slur on the many devoted missionaries of other bodies when I say that these good men and women appear to me strikingly to exemplify the inspired words. From their noble-hearted bishop down to the humblest worker they are all free from participation in these habits, which are causing so many weak brethren in India to stumble, and no mission in Northern India is winning converts from heathenism on the scale that they are privileged to do. They are also doing splendid work amongst the Eurasian community—a body in whose hands some believe that the future of India will largely rest. I believe that the other American missionary organisations working in India—certainly the American Baptists, the Canadian Baptists, and the International Missionary Alliance—are similarly free from all connection with strong drink, and that they are all peculiarly

SUCCESSFUL IN AGGRESSIVE WORK.

It is a pity that some of our British societies are in this respect lagging behind—the three Scottish Presbyterian bodies, the Irish Presbyterians, the Wesleyan, and London Missionary Societies, are none of them, I fear, quite clean-handed in the matter. I would suggest that the committees of these societies would do well to address to their workers in India, not a scolding or dictatorial letter—that would be wholly contrary to the spirit of the passages I have quoted—but a loving, earnest appeal, inviting them prayerfully to consider the great principles of Christian self-sacrifice inculcated in the fourteenth and fifteenth chapters of Romans, and the eighth and ninth chapters of the First Epistle to the Corinthians, and to ask themselves whether they would not do well to imitate the example of Him who for our sakes "pleased not Himself" (Rom. xv. 3), by giving up this indulgence. And for the future I think these societies would do well to refuse to send out to India any fresh worker who does not agree to abstain from a habit which scandalises the heathen, and causes both Christians and heathens to err from the right way.

P.S.—With regard to Mrs. Dyer's letter in your issue of Jan. 4, I may be allowed to say that I was not aware that Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter had any connection with the Luchminia case when I wrote my last letter. Had I known it, I should certainly not have singled out his name for honourable mention.

GOOD FRIDAY THOUGHTS.

In Northern Europe there is an ancient church marking the resting-place of William of Normandy. Over the central porch of the building is a cross. Upon the four limbs of this cross one may read four Latin words, and each of them ending in the letter x, which forms a cross. The words are Lux, Pax, Lex, and Rex. The meaning of this piece of mediæval art from the eleventh century is this: Lux is light, and Christ is the Light of the world; Pax is peace, and Christ gives peace, even the peace of God, to rule in the human heart; Lex is law, and to Christ we are indebted for the law of the Spirit of Life that makes us free from the law of sin and death; Rex is a king, and as such Christ must reign. And all these—the light and the peace, the law and the sovereignty—are connected with his cross, which is a living revelation of God.

Christ is the Light of the world through his cross. Anyone who has watched a sunrise among mountains will know how light opens out depths of beauty and life, where but lately the eye rested on a cold monotony of gloom or mist. Now all this represents in a figure what is the effect of the presence of Christ in the world, when the eye is opened to see Him. Let the thought of Christ, and Him crucified, rest on anything about us, great or small, and it will forthwith reflect on the awakened soul some new image of his power and love. He shines forth upon us in the Gospels, in the life of the Christian Church, in the life of the individual soul, and we feel that God has made light to arise to us. When we are united to Christ by faith, so that He lives in us and we in Him, we gain a deep insight into the marvels by which we are surrounded.

Set in this white light of God, we know where we stand, we see things as they are, we can tell with whom we have to do, and what it is He will do with us. We get rid of misconceptions, our horizon grows wider, we have an outlook into the clear heaven. In the light of the cross we see this world of ours girdled with a zone of light, that shines out clearer and brighter as the years roll on and the mists melt away. It quickens dead souls with a new power, and makes them live again with the life of sons of God. In the new day that is begun, a warm, human love breathes like an air out of the heart of God, so that sad, lonely lives begin to live with a new hope and a new possibility of joy. And this light cannot mislead us, and cannot fail us, for it is the light of life. It is a sun sent of God to rise upon our night, to shine for ever in our sky.

Peace also comes from Christ's cross. It pleased the Father, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself. And it is worthy of remark that when Christ promised the gift of peace to his disciples, He meant a great deal more than the absence of disturbance. The Hebrew root-word for peace means whole or entire. It is applied to a person or thing which is as it should be according to its origin or capacity. And by his gift of peace, Christ meant not merely tranquility, but that which leads to it. He meant well-being, and well-being not in any of the contracted and earthly senses, which limit it to the things of this life, but well-being in its larger sense, as affecting the highest interest of man as a moral and spiritual being.

When a man looks to the cross, and clings to the Person of the crucified Son of God, he is able to say: "Therefore, being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." And entering thus into fellowship with God through Christ, he has the peace that Christ experienced. After we are thus reconciled, the enmity and the separation being ended, Jesus has a gift for us from his own treasures; and this is its special and wonderful value, that it is his very own. "My peace I give unto you." In the world we may have trials, but in Christ we have peace. This peace is no more touched by the troubles of life than the depths of the ocean are stirred by the wind which sweeps its surface.

Thy reign is perfect peace,
Not mine, but Thine,
A stream that cannot cease.

Christ is also a Law, inasmuch as He gives the law of love and life to those whom He has delivered from the curse of the law. By salvation a man escapes from a law that punishes, only to come under the authority that fixes award and reward. He who receives Christ as a Priest, receives Him as a Lord. He who comes for justification, comes also for sanctification; and therefore obedience to the call to put our trust in Christ as our righteousness, implies obedience to his whole revealed will. And in obeying Christ's law, the Christian acts as he desires to act; he acts in accordance with the highest law of this life. His inclinations are in accordance with his highest duty; that which emancipates him is itself a law. "The law of the Spirit of Life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." And do not men, in their best moments, feel that they have found the true ideal of life when they accept the righteousness of Him who died to satisfy the law, and come under law to live for Him.

The Divine King rules for ever by dying. He is crowned with glory and honour as the result of his propitiatory suffering. "We see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man." In the figures sculptured on the walls of ancient temples in Egypt, we have an illustration of John's vision, in which Christ, who died, is seen crowned with many crowns. Egypt is separated into two great divisions, Upper and Lower Egypt. The two divisions were at times governed by rival sovereigns, and the crowns they wore were distinct in form; but in the period of Egypt's greatest glory, the whole country was united under the same king, and on the head of a great monarch like Rameses the Second may be seen the crowns both of the Upper and the Lower country, symbolically declaring his sovereignty over both.

And when in vision John saw many crowns on the head of Christ, it was a symbolic revelation of the extent and variety of the kingdoms over which He rules. Heaven and earth, angels and men, are included under his glorious sovereignty; He is not only Lord and King, He is King of kings, and Lord of lords, and He is represented as moving forward to the subjugation of the empire over which He has been enthroned, making war against all the powers that are in revolt against his authority. We see not yet all things put under his feet, but we see Jesus crowned with glory and honour, and, as He tasted death for every man, so in his exaltation He is prophecy and pledge that the grand old words shall one day be fulfilled in all their height and depth: "Thou hast put all things under his feet." Because Christ humbled Himself, and carried his obedience to death, even death upon the cross, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth."

DUBLIN CITY MISSION.

The Dublin City Mission, founded in 1828, continues to seek the lonely and lost, in the densely-populated lanes and alleys of the city. The latest report states that there are now more openings than ever before among all classes of people, and the number of agents is quite insufficient for the work in hand.

There are at present eleven workers in connection with the Mission, but unless friends come to the aid of the languishing funds, some of these will shortly have to be discontinued. The report says: "It is neither profitable or wise to attempt to tabulate results, but we do say that the hearts of the workers have been again and again cheered by seeing the Lord's hand in our work, drawing souls to Himself, through the sweet message of peace, pardon and reconciliation for the lost, through the atoning sacrifice offered by our Great High Priest, when He offered up Himself. There are many hidden ones of the Lord, away in lonely rooms and garrets, pining for a visit, and scarcely ever receiving one, save from the agents of this Mission, and many a home is opened to the agents, where no one else has access with the Gospel message, and where, probably, if the visits were traced this access would be cut off."

The hon. sec. of the Mission is Mr. Thomas Pakenham Law, Q.C., 48, St. Stephen's-green, Dublin.

JUVENILE EMIGRATION TO CANADA.—A Reuter's telegram, dated Ottawa, March 18, says:—"In the annual report of the Department of the Interior, Mr. A. M. Burgess, the Deputy Minister, states that according to his observations the results of Dr. Barnardo's work in Manitoba are admirable, but that in view of the conflicting reports the Minister has ordered a thorough investigation of the whole subject of juvenile immigration."

AN EASTER EXPOSITION.

By Rev. T. F. LOCKYER.*

"How are the dead raised, and with what manner of body do they come?" (1 Cor. xv. 35.)

In the beginning of this chapter the Apostle has been defining and summarising the Gospel which he preached, and which his readers had received. It was very brief, but big with meaning; "How that Christ died for our sins; and that He was buried; and that He hath been raised on the third day." It was evident that the significance of the death and burial depended on the reality of the resurrection, and an event so stupendous in itself, and so full of significance for the world, must be adequately tested, if men were to believe. The Apostle then reminds his hearers of the ample and unquestioned evidence of Christ's resurrection. "He appeared to Cephas; then to the twelve; then to above 500 brethren at once; then to James; then to all the apostles; and, last of all, He appeared to me." This truth, thus certified, he and the rest of the apostles had preached, and the Corinthians and other disciples had believed. Wherever he went "he preached Jesus and the resurrection."

And yet, said some, there was no such thing as a resurrection of the dead! Then, said the Apostle, Christ is not risen; for to deny broadly the possibility of any such event, is to deny its actuality in this instance. But if Christ is not risen, then the great theme upon which He and his fellow apostles descanted was a huge delusion, their witness-bearing was false, and the faith of their hearers was vain. These Corinthian believers were still in all the ruin of their sin, and their dear ones that slept not only slept but had perished.

But no, the sleeping ones had not perished, the faith of the believers was not vain, and the witness-bearing of the apostles was not false, nor their cherished theme a fancy and a shadow. Christ was risen! Then what follows? If one Man has been raised, other men may be raised also; grant the instance in the case of one, and you will allow the possibility for many. Nay, more; of such as believe in Him it is true not only that they may but that they must be raised from the dead, "Christ the First fruits—then they that are Christ's."

The objection, however, is not silenced. Prove it, he says, as you will; how can it be? How is it possible that the dead can ever live again? This is the question that the bereaved heart also asks in its despair. The life was so strong, so beautiful, so full of promise; but all at once it was struck down, and the beauty was broken into nothingness, and all the promise of the life was gone. And death—it is so ghostly in its mockery of what once was, and of what still might have been; it vaunts its own undoing; it presses upon us its message of despair. Nevertheless, though the broken heart must fain listen to these whisperings of unbelief, and is sometimes helplessly dumb when doubt asks: "How are the dead raised?" the dread reality of death seeming to bid defiance to the suggested possibility of newness of life; yet in other moods the same broken heart asks, not, How can it be? but, How is it possible that it should not be? For there is again the remembrance of all that has been, the pure faith, the lofty purpose, the quenchless love, the undying hope; and can all this have perished? Did not that life carry within itself the witness and pledge of its own immortality?

But these objectors are too scientific to take account, either of the heart's despair or of its high hopes. Look at the matter of fact, they say; look at it coldly and unbiassed. Was it ever heard that a dead thing came to life again? Ah, if it is logic that they want, they shall have it; but not from the Apostle's indignant heart. How he retorts upon them their own words! Has it ever been known that a dead thing came to life again? Fool, look around you while you ask the question. What is the meaning of the little flower that smiles up winsomely at your feet in the very place of death? and of all the new spring beauty that clothes the earth? What is the meaning of the fairy-winged creature that flits from flower to flower? And what mean the broad fields of springing corn? It is life that you look upon—life in the flower and verdure, life in the gay butterfly, and life in the growing grain.

But it is life from death, and life that could not have been, in its newer form except through death. For "except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." So then, says the Apostle, you have the test of the possibility in your own hands; "That which thou thyself sowest is not quickened except it die." And so, with the circling of the seasons, every year the world dies, and every year the world rises from the dead.

There is, therefore, certainly no à priori objection to the fact of a resurrection of dying man, but all analogy would rather point the other way. Nature teems with hints, suggestions, prophecies of renewed, more beautiful, and ampler life. There are inferences of reason, not contradicting, but blending with the eager longings of the heart; and the focus in which they meet glows with the hope of the resurrection. It is to this hope, then, that the message of the Gospel appeals when it tells that Christ hath risen and man shall rise.

For, since the Living One Himself has led the way in the path of life, the hope becomes faith, and our hearts are strong and comforted. . . . .

The objectors still urge that it is so gross to think of any body at all in the resurrection life. Nay, says the Apostle, how infinitely various are the bodies of corporeal creatures—some gross, others refined. Not only are there striking differences, thus, in the organisms of living creatures here, but what is more to the purpose, "there are bodies on earth, and bodies in the heavens." The angels of light are not to be thought of as incorporeal, but rather as possessing a vesture and vehicle of life, so delicately beautiful, so swift, so incorruptible, that it would seem hardly to be classed with flesh and blood at all. And yet it is matter, however, etherialized; it is a body, however, instinct with spirituality. Even among inanimate things, indeed, there is the same vast variety—from stones to stars. So that the fact that some bodies are "gross" is no sort of argument against a resurrection to such corporeal life as shall be exactly suited to the requirements of the new order and mode of existence. It shall not be what it is now. Corruption—dishonour—weakness, now; incorruption—glory—power, then. Now a natural body, the fit vehicle and expression of this grosser life of sense; then a spiritual body, lending itself wholly to the needs, and subserving the will of the informing and quickening spirit. Thus, though "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God," nevertheless the body, old but still new, the same and yet not the same, shall be reconstituted on that day, and thus the children of the Kingdom shall be children of the resurrection.

So, therefore, death shall not conquer us, but we shall conquer death. And, with one hand on the bier and one foot on the brink of the grave, we may raise the pæan of victory and exult in Christ our Lord.

We learn, then, the sanctity of the human body, which may not be defiled, if it share so great a redemption and have hope of so glorious a testimony; and also the sanctity of those relationships, as well as of the more transient work and pleasure of life, in which the bodily life participates, and of which it forms here the essential condition and instrument. For this bodily life shall be only suspended, not destroyed, by death, to be renewed and perfected in the resurrection. Be it ours to have our eyes turned always towards the future—waiting, watching, and working, "until the day dawn."

CO-OPERATION IN TRAVEL is one of the remarkable features of modern social life. Probably nothing that has been attempted or achieved in this line can rival the fifteen-day trip to Switzerland, which is being arranged for by the Woolwich Polytechnic, to leave London on June 22, and to cost in all eight guineas, with an addition of a few shillings to non-members. Those of either sex who desire to take advantage of such a remarkable opportunity should communicate early with the Secretary, Young Men's Christian Institute, William-street, Woolwich.

"THE HAVEN," SHEFFIELD.—During the time the Home, or "Haven" as it is called, has been in existence, a goodly number of girls and young children have been raised from the depths of vice and degradation. By the kind words and untiring efforts of the matron of the Home, Mrs Smalley, in conjunction with Mr. and Mrs. Corbridge and Mr. Smalley, they have been prepared for lives of usefulness. The work is a noble one, but the worthy superintendent feels his hands tied somewhat through lack of funds. Jno. Wilson, Hon. Secretary.

REV. E. N. THWAITES IN INDIA.

My Dear Sir,—I feel that I owe some short account of my tour in India to your readers, as I know that many of them have been praying for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon my visit to this great country. I wish your readers to join in praising the Lord for all the blessing He has given. I had a safe and happy journey from the time of leaving my home at Salisbury, on December 19, until I landed in Bombay on January 7, with my dear partner in the work, Rev. Martin J. Hall, full of health and vigour. We have visited Agra, Lucknow, Benares Calcutta, Krishnaghar, Chupra, Allahabad, Jubbelapore, and Madras. We hope to visit Tinnevelly-Colombo, and Kandy, and to be in England once more on April 18.

In every place we have met with some of the Lord's servants, who are holding out the Light in the midst of the darkest of heathen gloom; but while this is true of those centres of missionary work, my heart is saddened with the thought that there are hundreds of towns and villages in India where there is not a single Christian man or woman to testify of God's wondrous love. Oh, for more God-sent labourers! Oh, for a true missionary awakening amongst the Christian churches at home! Oh, for more obedience to our Lord's command, "Go"! Oh, that more parents would "let go" their sons and daughters that the dear people here might at least hear the Gospel! Oh, that more beloved Christians would "help others to go," and give down £1,000 or £100! Will anyone respond?

I have had no difficulty in preaching and speaking to large numbers of persons, sometimes by interpretation and sometimes in English. I stood in one of the public squares of Calcutta and began a hymn; a few young Baboos (young gentlemen) and others assembled. I then began to preach Jesus in English; in five minutes there gathered around an eager crowd of 250 men. As my voice was spent, I invited the men to follow me to a mission hall; upwards of 100 followed me across the square, through one street, and filled the mission room that was prepared for us. At Krishnaghar, the resident judge took the chair at a lecture I gave, "The Door was Shut," and here we had all the leading pleaders and educated men of the town, all Hindus, listening attentively for an hour.

I should like to know that next winter 100 consecrated men were meeting to come to India and spend three months in preaching the Gospel to the unconverted, and in holding conferences amongst the workers and Christians of India. The doors here are all wide open: the people here are losing faith in their heathen gods, and are ready to listen to the Gospel. Each man who comes should get the congregation amongst which he worships to pay his expenses, and send him out as their own representative, and it should be borne in mind that it is no use sending out men whom God does not use at home; we must have men full of the Holy Ghost and power. It would be an immense joy to me if, when I get home to Salisbury, I should find awaiting our return £1000 to be spent in defraying the expenses of five of six godly men for India next winter. I know two men of God now who would gladly come out if all their expenses were paid; they are too poor to defray their own.

In the numerous mission services we have held, a great many profess to be converted; only yesterday morning upwards of fifty persons rose wishing for salvation at once, and all over the church the prayer ascended, "Lord save me." The welcome that the dear Christians of India give to an English brother is most pleasant; so that from the moment we put foot on Indian soil till now, we have met with most loving welcomes and generous hospitality. Still asking for the prayers of your readers, believe me to rest, in the loving bonds of the King and of his service, your faithful brother in Christ Jesus, Edgar N. Thwaites,

Rector of Fisherton, Salisbury.

HOME AND HOSPITALS FOR THE BENEFIT OF GENTLEWOMEN is the title of a valuable pamphlet, briefly describing a large number of institutions, at home and abroad. In addition to lists of permanent and temporary homes, there are particulars of societies giving annuities and money help. The matter seems to have been got together with great industry and care. # NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, MARCH 25.—ISAIAH XXVI.

This song was prepared for singing after the fall of Babylon, and shall be sung by the restored people when, instead of being wanderers in the world, they are reinstated in their own country.

The Contrasted Cities (1-6).—The proud city is Babylon, and Babylon the Great, the rival and foe of the people of God in every age, as contrasted with the New Jerusalem. The people righteous; the city strong; the walls salvation. (3) "Peace, peace." (R.V. marg.) Like a double window keeping out the noise of alarm. Oh for the stayed mind, which looks away from circumstances to the personal Friend and Lord. (4) Jehovah the Saviour is tender and strong as an everlasting rock. Trust finds a cleft for itself where it may hide. (5, 6) The weakest foot may trample on the foe when God has laid it low.

The Contrasted Citizens (7-15).—Of the just these things are true. (7) Their way is right, and their path levelled. (8) They wait for God, and their soul desires Him. (9) They seek Him diligently. (12) God gives them his peace, and works their works for them (R.V.) (13) In Him they make their boast. As for the ungodly (10) they will not behold God's majesty. (11) They care not to see God's uplifted hand. (14) They perish. (15) They are diminished and brought low while the people of God prosper and increase.

The Contrast between the Past and Present (16-19).—Let us pour out prayers, as a vessel its contents, though, as the Hebrew suggests, those prayers are but whispers. How often do we despair of all our efforts just when they are about to be crowned with success. And it is true that, apart from God, we can work no deliverance in the earth; but, when He speaks, the dead live. (19) Surely our Lord, as the anti-typical Israel, is speaking here. His resurrection is the pledge of ours; and all who are in graves of sorrow, sin, and death, may hear his voice and live.

A Contrasted Fate (20, 21)—To the people of God an invitation is issued to enter a place of safety, as Noah the Ark, and as Israel the blood-sprinkled door. In Christ we may behold, without alarm, the overflowing wrath. The time is coming when God will avenge all innocent blood shed and other wrongs done (Rev, xvi. 9).

MONDAY, MARCH 26.—ISAIAH XXVII.

The judgment of ungodly nations as representing the world powers of every age, and so ultimately of Anti-Christ. Throughout these chapters we must remember that the doom of Babylon, which is their immediate theme, and the restoration of God's people, are symbolical of other events for which the world is waiting.

The Destruction of the Foe (1).—Leviathan is a general term applicable to every great water animal. Piercing, may be rendered gliding or darting. Crooked, winding. Egypt and Babylon were primarily intended, the one with its Nile, the other with the Euphrates.

The Vineyard and its Keeper (2-6).—Side by side with the destruction of our foes, is God's care for his own. The Church is his vineyard. We do not keep Him, but He us. Not for a moment does He relax his care. (4) Those who oppose Him are trampled underfoot, as briars before the armed foot. (5) Even the foes of God's people may find peace in Jesus. (6) A charming anticipation when the Jew shall be the evangelist of the world (Rom. xi. 12).

The Difference between Chastisement and Punishment (7-11).—There is a great difference between these two. (7) God has not smitten Israel as severely as He punished their oppressors. Chastisement is always in measure. The stroke is tempered to the strength of the sufferer. The rough wind is always stayed in the day of the east wind. (9) The result of chastisement is not destruction, but the purging out of sin. After the Captivity, altars, groves, and images were never revived in Israel. (10) The prophet turns to the fate of Babylon becoming as a wilderness, calves feeding on the branches of the trees amid its ruins.

Restoration (12, 13).—As the husbandman gathers his olives from the trees, so will God his people, from the river Euphrates to the stream of the Nile. Note God's individual work. He gleans us one by one. The trump of jubilee shall summon the outcasts to their land (Lev. xxiii. 24).

TUESDAY, MARCH 27.—ISAIAH XXVIII.

A new series of prophecies begins here, which extends to the end of xxxii. Its burden is the approaching destruction of the ten tribes, the sins and follies of Judah, and pressing warnings against departing from God.

Ephraim (1-4).—Samaria is here compared to a crown or garland on the nation's head. Drunkenness was the national sin of those degenerate days (Amos iv. 1). (4) The Assyrian Shalmanezer would not only conquer but destroy her, as a man eats a fig.

Judah (5-13).—To the remnant, i.e., Judah, the Lord would be a crown, not of pride, but of glory; his beauty, not a fading flower, but a diadem. (6) What some men find for the flesh in wine, that God will be to the spirit that trusts Him. Compare what God is to his own, with what He will be to his foes (v. 2). (7) Drunkenness was rapidly infecting Judah also, and even the religious leaders. (9-10) These are the questions put by the drunkards. They thought he took them for babes, and mimicked the repetition with which he enforced his words. (11) Isaiah replies that God would speak to them by the stern lips of the invader, whose foreign tongue would seem like stammering. (12) God offers rest before He sends storm. He talks to us in broken syllables intelligible to childhood, before addressing us in wrath.

Denunciations of an Assyrian Alliance (14-22).—The leaders of Judah, in the beginning of Hezekiah's reign, had made an alliance with Assyria, on whom they relied, as guaranteeing their safety, whatever might befall the ten tribes, and even though the Assyrian armies should pass through on their way to punish Egypt (2 Kings xvii. 4). (16) No foundation will resist the stress of the storm but God's. The full meaning of this verse has been revealed by the Holy Ghost (Matt. xxi. 42; Eph. ii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 7). Christ was well tested by man and devil; He is precious, and He unites. (19) Outside of Christ is no safety. (20) All excuses and efforts are unavailing when God enters into judgment. (21) Perazim (2 Sam. v. 18); Gibeon (Josh. x. 10); in each God fought for Israel against their foes.

Means Adapted to Ends (23-29).—The husbandman ploughs and harrows with a view to the harvest. God has a reason for his stern discipline. (25) In the furrows of sorrow He casts his seed. (27) Vetches or dill are so delicate that they must be beaten with a staff, not with the heavy corn-drag used to cut straw. Bread corn can bear a severer process; so with Christ, the corn of wheat which fell in the ground to die; but there is a limit beyond which God will not pass. He will not send more suffering than we can bear. He will not be ever threshing. "Christ, being raised from the dead, dieth no more."

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 28.—ISAIAH XXIX.

The invasion of Judah by Sennacherib and its deliverance. The Siege of Jerusalem (1-8). Ariel means "the lion," or "the hearth" of God. Jerusalem would be reduced so low that her voice would seem to come from the dust. (5) Her foes should be many, but their invasion would pass as chaff before the wind. This tempest may really have broken on Sennacherib's hosts on the night of their destruction, or it may be a metaphor. (7) None that rise against the people of God shall prosper. They shall pass away as a dream. (8) The dreamer wakes at the moment he expects his appetite to be appeased, and is disappointed, so would it be with the Assyrian in the moment of expected triumph.

Blindness of Heart (9-14). When men refuse to obey God's voice they become blind and stupid. The natural result of disobedience is obtuseness. (11) Obey the Bible, and you will find it no longer a sealed book. (13) The source of ignorance is not intellectual but moral. St. Paul quotes this passage to show that God gives up the disobedient to judicial blindness (Rom. xi. 8.; 1 Cor. i. 19).

God's Deliverance (15-24).—The Jewish statesmen sought to form secret alliances, but God knew their plans, and would counter-work them. (17) God was prepared to come to the immediate aid of his people in such way as to bring about a great revival of religion, as much as if the woods of Lebanon should be suddenly turned into pasture-lands. (19, 20) The meek and poor in spirit are the first to rejoice when the accuser is cast out. (22) We need never fear the waxing pale of our faces, if only we sanctify the name of the Holy One of Jacob. Fear Him, and you will have no other fear. (24) If you have erred, you may yet return to understand God's ways, and if your life has been full of bitter murmuring, it may yet learn the loving kindness and wisdom of God.

THURSDAY, MARCH 29.—ISAIAH XXX.

The Egyptian Alliance Denounced (1-9). — In the year 714 B.C., the Jews sent ambassadors to seek help from Egypt against Assyria, in distinct defiance of God's repeated commands. This course was vigorously denounced by Isaiah, as adding sin to sin. Though the Jewish Ambassadors should reach the capital cities of Egypt, and conclude an alliance, it would not help them. (6) The beasts of burden might traverse the deserts with presents and bribes, but it would be in vain. (7) Little did the people of God realise that their strength was to keep still and trust Him.

The Fear of Hearing the Truth (8-11). — Men do not care to know the truth. They like the prophet to fall in with their whims. They entreat the Holy One to depart from out their coasts.

Returning and Rest (12-18).—All sin recoils on the sinner. At first it is slight as the bulging of a tottering wall, but it is utter and terrible. When the clay is ill mixed, the pottery flies. (15) The true policy would be to recall the ambassadors, and wait on God for help. How true this is for us all. Come back from your wanderings, and rest in the embrace of the Father's love. (16) This they refused, and preferred to trust in the Egyptian cavalry. (17) We may do our best to make ourselves strong without God's help, but the attempt is doomed to failure. (18) And yet God waits to be gracious and forgive. He is always on the outlook for symptoms of penitence.

The Riches of God's Grace (19-26).—In the restored city God shall wipe away all tears; and all his children shall be taught of the Lord. (21) This teaches us that if we hear nothing to the contrary, we must go straight forward. Trust God to stop you if you are wrong. (22) No more idols. (23) Good harvests and rich pasture lands. (24) The dumb animals will benefit by man's repentance. (26) Oh blessed light of the millennial dawn; when shall we behold thee break? For there are depths of meaning here not to be exhausted by the return of Israel from Babylon.

Judgment (27-33).—Jehovah is represented as coming to avenge his people, and judge the Assyrian. (29) Their welcoming gladness is compared to the songs of the Hebrew festivals. (30-31) What a magnificent description of Jehovah as a man of war, arising in battle against Assyria! (32) Every stroke of the appointed staff that the Lord shall lay on him shall be with tabrets and harps (R.V.) i.e., should awaken the songs of the redeemed. (33) Tophet was the place, outside Jerusalem, where refuse was burnt. Israel's foes, their weapons and their pride, would be for fuel to the flame.

FRIDAY, MARCH 30.—ISAIAH XXXI.

The Alliance with Egypt is still unsparingly denounced, as in the previous chapter.

1. This sin is common to us all. We put means in the place of God, and trust in an arm of flesh. Alas for this trust in horses and chariots, which blinds our eyes to the Holy One!

2. This should be read in R.V. He also is wise, as though the idolaters had forgotten this, and needed reminding. "He will not call back his words."

3. We are apt to forget the futility of human help, and the reality of divine.

4. As a lion defies a company of shepherds, so would the Most High treat the might of Zion's foes.

5. The mother-bird hovers over her brood to protect her young from the kestrel, so would God gather his own under his protecting wing. There is also an allusion to the passover, God passes over to defend.

6, 7. Cast away all creature-aid, and turn to God; you shall certainly be delivered by Him against whom you have deeply revolted.

8. When the chivalry of Sennacherib's host (his young men) were laid low, he fled homewards from the sword, but met it in the precincts of his own palace (xxxvii.).

9. The Shekinah of God's presence with the people strikes panic into those who would hurt them (Psa. xlvi.).

SATURDAY, MARCH 31.—ISAIAH XXXII.

The King (1-8).—Christ must reign. His princes shall be his saints (Luke xxii. 30; Cor. vi. 2). The Man Christ Jesus alone is many-sided enough to meet the varied needs of men. There is no ill that He cannot cure. Not his gifts, but Himself. (3, 4) Seer and audience, prophet and people, shall alike be made right. (5, 6) Flattery shall no longer hide men from themselves. Each shall stand unveiled in his true character, the evil in each being revealed, as the noisomeness of a stagnant pond by summer's heat. (7) The means adopted by the fraudulent to increase his property are evil, and however honorable the poor may be, he has no chance of withstanding him. (8) But the princely in heart shall stand approved in the presence of their King.

An Appeal to Israel's Women (8-13).—When those blessed days come they will bring dismay to the poor children of fashion. (10) "For days beyond a year shall ye be troubled" (R.V.). 12 The smiting on the breast was a sign of lamentation. (13) This desolation rests on Jerusalem even to-day, and probably will do so until the Lord come.

The Outpouring of the Spirit (15-20).—This prediction includes Pentecost, but looks on to the era with which the present age is to close (Ezek. xxxvii. 26; Zech. xii. 10). What is now reckoned a fruitful field shall be reckoned as a barren forest in comparison with what shall be then. (17) Our Lord is first King of Righteousness, then King of Peace. We must be right before we can be happy and peaceful. (18) Such is the result of the Spirit's work, and the result of a living in Jesus. (19) God's judgments shall heavily descend on the alien hosts that have gathered against his people; and the proud city from which they came shall fall. (20) When the waters of the river were out over the land, it was customary to send out oxen or asses to make furrows for the seed. Let us sow wherever we find opportunity.

ONE BLOCK AT A TIME.

A very old friend of mine, one who hardly ever fails me when I go to him saying "Can you give me a good true story?" has just given me the following little anecdote, and as it is a piece of his own bright boyhood, you will read it with interest.

One day when I returned home from school I saw outside our door a large pile of wood blocks. My father was going to build an additional room at the back of the house, adjoining the parlour, and these oak blocks were to form a solid flooring for the new room.

"Shall you have to take in those blocks?" asked Ted Hume, one of my school companions, "I call it a shame if you do! My mother says you do too much at home, and that you don't have time for play. She says play means good health."

"Stop that," I cried, for I knew why he spoke as he did. It was Saturday afternoon, and we had a little cricket match on, and I was bowler. "If I have to do it, I shall not be very long."

"I would not do it," persisted Ted, "your father ought to hire a man." Something inside me leaped up at this. I saw the pile of blocks getting higher and higher, and by the time Ted had left me, and I was going dejectedly indoors, I felt that I was indeed a very badly-used boy, and how fine a thing it was to be Ted.

As if to rebuke my unworthy thoughts, my gentle mother gave me a bright smile as I loafed discontentedly into the kitchen. "Willie, my boy," said she, "the wood has come, so on Monday father will be able to begin the new room."

"I saw it; I couldn't help seeing such an enormous pile as that," I said, with a grunt. I went and looked out of the window, and appeared to be studying the size of the wood pile.

"How long do you suppose it will take a man to get in all that, mother?" I asked, guilefully. "Will Trounce do it?"

"No; Trounce will not do it, my son," was my mother's reply.

In my heart I knew why. My father had just begun business for himself by starting a chemical factory, and he now needed all his available capital, so that for some time my mother and he had resolved to live as economically as possible, that it might be the better for us all by and by.

Dinner was now ready, and our dear parents took their places at table with grateful thanks to God for his mercies, and with smiles for my two sisters and myself. My mother was so bright.

"I hope, Willie," said she, when she had helped my father, "that you have brought three things to table with you?"

"What are the three things, mother?" asked father.

"Gratitude, hunger, and cheerfulness," said dear mother.

But I made no reply. My head was hung sulkily over my plate, and I would not smile at any of the pleasant and cheerful talk around me. I was half-choking over my carefully-prepared meal, and no wonder, for I felt all the time that I was trying to swallow the pile of wood-blocks! My father stood in the entry after dinner. He called me.

"Now, my boy," said he, "make up your mind to get in that wood before I return. You have a long, fine afternoon."

"But, father," I grumbled, "I shall get no play. There's a match on this afternoon at four. What shall I do?"

"I have told you what to do, my son," said father, taking no notice of my objection.

I sought out my mother, hoping to find a weak spot in her.

"Mother," I said, dogging her footsteps as she went actively about her duties in the house, "why does not father hire a man to get all that wood in? You should hear what Ted Hume's mother thinks: she says it is too much for a boy to do."

Suddenly I saw a flash of pain cloud my mother's dear face; she turned away, but there were tears in her eyes. I knew she never spared herself for us; ashamed, I hurried out of her presence, and stood before the wood-pile. I took off my jacket, and went round the side of the house to put it in a little arbour there; on my way I passed mother's room, and looking in, saw her kneeling with hands clasped and head bowed.

I rushed out to the pile of blocks, but again the words Ted Hume had spoken came uppermost. Everything looked black. I began to chip the bark off one of the blocks with my penknife, while I whistled my discontent.

"I wish it would take fire!" I said to myself over and over again. I saw my mother coming, and I began to bustle over doing nothing. She spoke; "Willie, my son, had you not better begin to stack the wood at once? It will not take you long, then."

"Mother," I cried, "it is such an immense pile. Just think of doing it all this hot afternoon! I shall be for ever at it, and then when it is done I shall be nearly dead."

My mother smiled sadly at my exaggerations.

"Willie," said she, "come with me and look at the wood; I must not have you 'nearly dead,' and if by three o'clock you have not taken in all the logs I will finish it."

"That you shall not!" I exclaimed, stung by her gentle words. "I don't mind doing it, but how I am to do so is the thing."

This was talking nonsense, as I quite well knew.

"Dear," said mother, taking the first block off, "it cannot hurt you if you carry in one block at a time."

I seized the block she held, and ran with it round the house.

"Only one block at a time!" I cried. "The pile will soon grow small, mother; you go in and rest. I never thought of it that way. I might have had it in by now"; and I ran back and forth with one block at a time, and was so intent on my work, so ashamed of the unworthy thoughts I had fostered all through Ted Hume's foolish speech, that I forgot to think, until I was carrying in the last block. I heard the chime for a quarter to three o'clock, and I rushed into the house, crying out:—

"Mother, mother, all the wood is in, and I want to know if I can do anything else? I feel as strong and as fresh as a lion." I coaxed my arms round her neck. "Mother, how patient you were, and I so naughty and rebellious!"

She drew me to her in an embrace I shall never forget.

"My dear son, my happy son!" she said, "you will enjoy your cricket after this; and remember, it is 'with such sacrifices God is well pleased.'"

I do remember. Her words have been with me ever since that day, and often when work has looked difficult, and there have been obstacles in the way, I have jogged my memory with "One block at a time, remember; begin at once, and go on to the end."

My life has been one of successful effort, and I owe it to my mother that I am what I am to-day.

What became of Ted Hume? Ah, poor fellow, he made a bad job of his life; enlisted as a common soldier after several failures, and then deserted!

"One block at a time" and St. Paul's words, "This one thing I do," will help us to surmount the difficulties of life as they meet us, even on the threshold. There are many conflicting duties; calls from both sides; urgings on the right hand and the left; but we children of God have only to see the work He sets before us, and to carry it out patiently, perfectly, "one block at a time."

SUNDAY, APRIL 1.

JACOB'S PREVAILING PRAYER.

Gen. xxxii. 9-12, 24-30. Golden Text.—Verse 26.

Twenty eventful years have passed (xxxi. 38-41) since Jacob beheld the vision at Bethel. He has spent those years at Haran with his uncle Laban. In spite of the promises made to him at Bethel, he has continued to meet craft with craft, and has been as successful against Laban as he had formerly been against Esau. But present success, purchased by a policy of craft, is a doubtful blessing. From such sowing Jacob had afterwards to reap a bitter harvest.

In chapter xxxi. we have the account of his departure from Haran, the command which led to it (3), the secret manner in which it was effected, the pursuit of Laban, and the vain search for the idols, and the setting up of Mizpah as a witness.

Two things are in this lesson:—I. Jacob's Prayer (9-12). It was prompted by fear (11). A meeting with Esau is inevitable. It is twenty years since the two have met, yet the wrong committed so long ago causes Jacob the keenest anguish still. How soon the pleasure of sin departs; but how long the pain of it continues! What if Esau still remembers his threat (xxvii. 41), and takes vengeance now, not on Jacob alone, but on all those whom he loves? Was it for this that he was coming to meet his brother with 400 armed men with him (6)? God is the only refuge for a conscience distressed by sin.

It pleaded God's promise, first, as it accompanied the command to take this journey (9 with xxxi. 3), and next, as it had been given twenty years before at Bethel (12). He can draw no argument from his own conduct, but can recall what God has said.

It expressed great humility (10). The contrast between what he was now and what he had been twenty years before, humbles him with a sense of his deep unworthiness. While in Haran it seemed as though he was winning his prosperity by his own scheming. Now he attributes it all to God.

It looked for deliverance from God. "Deliver me, I pray thee" (11). What of the plan he had already adopted (7, 8), and renewed even after his prayer (13-31)? Did this count for nothing? Might he not expect that "the present" would appease his brother? It may be that in these things he proved the weakness of his faith, yet in his prayer he looks to God alone, whether He works according to these plans or not.

II. The Midnight Wrestle (24-30).—The lameness that resulted from this experience proves that the story is to be understood literally. Visionary conflicts do not make men lame. Yet the outward and physical was symbolical of what took place in the soul of Jacob, and this change may be represented by the time the incident occupied. It was midnight when it began (22); it was daybreak when the angel smote the hollow of Jacob's thigh (26); it was sunrise when the patriarch passed over Peniel (31).

The scene of the wrestling was the banks of the brook Jabbok, a stream which intersects the mountain range of Gilead, and runs into the Jordan. Here Jacob was "left alone" (24), with recollections of the past which filled him with shame; with fears for the present; and with anticipations of the future not unmixed with dread.

The "man" who suddenly appeared to Jacob was at first unrecognised. As he did not recognise Bethel to be the house of God until after the vision had passed (xxviii.), so he did not know this wrestler until the struggle was over. And then he knew him not because he had declared his name, but because of the victory he had obtained over Jacob (30). Many a man has been the subject of similar wrestling without knowing that it was God who had wrestled with him. Do circumstances seem to oppose and thwart and defeat you? Recognise God behind the circumstances, and yield to Him.

The "man wrestled with Jacob," to get something from him: not Jacob with the stranger. It is a mistake to present Jacob's wrestling as an example to us. While he wrestled he was resisting the Angel, and hindering his own blessing. The scheming, crafty, deceitful spirit he has shown through all his previous life, needs to be taken away before God can do all he desires for, and with Jacob. The struggle continues until daybreak (24); for Jacob is unwilling to let himself go.

But there came a change: Physically, the change was the loss of his strength (25), and his consequent ceasing to struggle and beginning to cling. But this was symbolical of the inward change represented by Jacob confessing what he is—a suppliant (27), and becoming henceforth Israel—a prince with God. He has learned that victories come, not by resisting, but by yielding; that true power consists not in the strength that can wrestle, but in the weakness that can cling. Have we learned the lesson? "When I am weak, then I am strong" (2 Cor. xii. 10).

PETITION OF THE W.W.C.T.U.

TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE WORLD (COLLECTIVELY AND SEVERALLY).

Honoured Rulers, Representatives, and Brothers,—We, your petitioners, although belonging to the physically weaker sex, are strong of heart to love our homes, our native land, and the world's family of nations. We know that clear brains and pure hearts make honest lives and happy homes, and that by these the nations prosper, and the time is brought nearer when the world shall be at peace. We know that indulgence in alcohol and opium and in other vices which disgrace our social life, makes misery for all the world, and most of all for us and for our children. We know that stimulants and opiates are sold under legal guarantees which make the Governments partners in the traffic, by accepting as revenue a portion of the profits, and we know with shame that they are often forced by treaty upon populations either ignorant or unwilling. We know that the law might do much now left undone to raise the moral tone of society and render vice difficult. We have no power to prevent these great iniquities beneath which the whole world groans, but you have power to redeem the honour of the nations from an indefensible complicity. We therefore come to you with the united voices of representative women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the law to that of Christian morals, to strip away the safeguards and sanctions of the State from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilisation throughout all the territory over which your Government extends.

This petition is now being circulated in the United States and Canada, Great Britain, Switzerland, Scandinavia, India, China, Japan, Ceylon, Australia, and Sandwich Islands. Five million names of women, and endorsements of men and women are to be secured. It is to be the great polyglot petition of history, asking legal protection against the greatest curses that afflict humanity. When the full list of names has been secured, it will be presented in its completeness to all the governments of the civilised world by delegations of representative women appointed for that purpose. When as many names as possible have been secured it is to be returned to the Office Secretary of the World's W.C.T.U., Miss Alice E. Briggs, Evanston, near Chicago, Illinois, U.S.A.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN.

The work of the seven homes and open-all-night refuge has been carried on vigorously thus far during this year. Nearly 300 applications for admission have been received, and every suitable case has been promptly assisted to the utmost. The spiritual work has been regularly carried on by a large staff of approved voluntary workers, who have conducted nearly 1000 Gospel services, Bible, temperance, and other classes. Special cookery classes have been held in the Jubilee Home, where fifty young girls are in training for domestic service, and it is contemplated extending the classes to other branches of industrial occupation, such as needlework, etc.

The work is both preventive and reclamatory, and the different cases are grouped together in distinct family homes. 240 inmates can be accommodated at one time, and no empty beds have been kept while suitable applicants have sought admission. The open-all-night refuge has been visited every morning by Mr. W. J. Taylor, the secretary, with a view to afford permanent help, as far as possible, to all new-comers. About 11,000 free meals have been provided in the homes this year, in addition to which the inmates have been clothed, instructed, and suitably provided for when ready to be placed out. Further particulars of the work of the homes will be sent upon application to Mr. William J. Taylor, 200, Euston-road, N.W.

THE MANX DRINK BILL has reached the annual sum of 14s. per head, and is being much discussed. In Douglas there is one licensed house, including grocers' licences, for every twenty-eight inhabited houses, against thirty-six in London.

GENERAL NEAL DOW.

This week the friends of General Neal Dow, and of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, are celebrating the ninetieth birthday of the famous temperance reformer. About four years ago we gave, in these columns, a portrait and sketch of the career of this veteran; we may take the present opportunity of furnishing some additional facts of a very interesting kind, as related by a writer in The New York Independent. The great lesson for to-day of Neal Dow's life seems to be that strong conviction as to the rightness of a cause and undaunted persistency in the advocacy of it must win the day. We trust he may have many imitators in our own land in this good year of grace, when an English Government purposes to submit to Parliament a measure enabling localities to regulate or veto a trade which works such misery and ruin to men, women, and children.

"The event which fired Neal Dow's hatred of the saloon, is, perhaps, not generally known. An impulse was given in this direction even while he was a boy in his teens, as he witnessed the universal desolation wrought by the free use of New England rum and cider brandy. But a specific incident stirred his soul to its profoundest depths and made him from that moment the apostle of reform. A respected friend and neighbour, a man of splendid abilities and high social standing, had become a dipsomaniac. He held office under the United States Government in Portland. He was informed that it would be impossible for him to retain so responsible a position unless he gave up drink. It was ascertained that reform would be possible if a certain saloon would refuse him liquor. Neal Dow visited the proprietor and laid the case before him. The tempted man had a beautiful home, a cultured and noble wife, a large family of children, a fair salary, the loss of which together with the ruin of his manhood was bringing untold misery and danger to all. The saloon keeper was urged to desist. He replied: 'It is my business to sell liquor. I will sell to anyone who wants to buy, whoever he be or whatever the circumstances. I am licensed to do this.' Burning with wrath and indignation Neal Dow went forth from that interview a reformer. In his inmost soul he vowed that it would yet be impossible for any man in Maine to purchase of his State a permit to ruin his fellow-man and desolate his home. He saw that in order to put down the grogshop there must be a change in the law, and in order to a change in the law there must be a change in public sentiment. The outcome of this was a personal campaign that lasted ten long years. At his own expense the young reformer traversed the State as opportunities for public address presented themselves. Temperance tracts were sown broadcast. These excursions into outlying townships sometimes lasted two, three, five, or even ten weeks. The interest awakened in these rural communities often surpassed expectations. Farmers frequently transformed haycarts, by means of evergreens, into booths in order to carry the ladies of the neighbourhood miles to these temperance meetings. Through persistent efforts of this kind Neal Dow educated the people and brought the entire State to his way of thinking.

"Few men are permitted to enjoy so completely and for so long a period the public fruitage of their own labour. Neal Dow is blessed with a vigorous, happy, quiet, useful old age. His ninetieth birthday finds his natural force somewhat abated, though his eye is not dim, nor that brightness of intellect which has given to his personality its peculiar charm. His is a beautiful old age, amid beautiful surroundings."

EASTER.

St. John xiii. 23; Rev. i. 17.

O Life, O Resurrection,
We hail thy risen power,
We kneel around to render
To Thee, thy rightful dower;
All thanks, all praise, all honour,
Our grateful spirits pour,
For Thou hast died, Lord Jesus,
And liveth evermore.

O Life, O Resurrection,
Thy majesty is great,
That while our hearts adore Thee,
We tremble at thy state;
Thy voice, like many thunders,
Through earth and heaven peals.
Till o'er our listening spirits
A far-off feeling steals.

O Life, O Resurrection,
To Thee, when first we came,
In sorrow, on thy bosom,
We sobbed our sin and shame,
And Thou wert, ah! so gentle,
To soothe each feeble moan,
Thy voice was soft and tender,
And had a human tone.

O Life, O Resurrection,
We drew so very near,
That, as we wept our anguish,
We felt thy answering tear;
Thy loving face bent o'er us,
We dared our eyes to raise,
And thine were full of sorrow,
And had a human gaze.

O Life, O Resurrection,
Thou art so glorious now,
With many crowns resplendent
Around thy sacred brow;
And eyes of searching brightness,
And feet like burnished gold;
Our spirits fail within us,
And faint as they behold.

O Life, O Resurrection,
To every trembling heart
Reach out thy hand of mercy,
And bid all fear depart;
With thy dear hand upon us,
We shall not feel estrang'd,
For we shall see the nail-print,
And know Thou art not chang'd.

O Life, O Resurrection,
Transform us by thy grace,
Till we behold with gladness,
The brightness of thy face;
Uplift us from the fetters
That fret us here below,
Grant us to bear thy glory,
As Thou hast borne our woe.

Caroline Tickner.

YOUTHS FOR CANADA.—The Noon Prayer Meeting at 186, Aldersgate-street, was on Monday last attended by fifty lads, about to leave for Canada in connection with Miss Macpherson's work. The party included two young Jews, also two boys from Mrs. Smyly's Homes in Dublin. All the lads, most of them orphans, have been well trained, and they seemed capable in body and of bright intelligence. They had received sound religious instruction, and the Irish lads were said to know by heart the hundred Scripture texts selected by the Irish Church Missions in disproof of Romish teachings. Miss Macpherson, in the course of an address, said that a thousand applications have been made for the lads to enter the homes of Canadians. The little emigrants were commended to God in prayer, and some stirring words were addressed to them by Mr. Henry Varley.

The Late DR. C. F. DEEMS,

PASTOR OF "THE CHURCH OF THE STRANGERS," NEW YORK.

AMONG the many remarkable institutions in the city of New York the Church of the Strangers is one that cannot fail to be interesting to the Lord's people. It is a church as unique as its name, and its history has well been called "A Romance of Providence." No one knows exactly how it originated; its pastor did not plan, nor devise it, neither did the congregation; but it has, for twenty-six years, distinctly met a long-felt need in a whirlpool of life where many strangers are gathered together, and where so many, alas! have been lost for want of a helping hand.

The Rev. Charles F. Deems, the pastor of this church, was born in Maryland, educated in Pennsylvania, and spent his early life, from twenty years of age, as a minister of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Connection in North Carolina. There he had been general agent for the American Bible Society, Professor in the State University, and President of the Greensboro' Female College. In consequence of the disastrous results of the civil war, which closed in 1865, the church in North Carolina became so much impoverished that, in order to support and educate his children, Dr. Deems was obliged to resign the pastorate, and went to New York as editor of a new weekly paper called The Watchman. This paper was not a success, but invitations to deliver addresses began to reach the doctor; these finally culminated in the announcement to the effect that at the "Strangers' Sunday Home," in the chapel of the University, Washington-square, strangers would be welcomed every Sunday, and any visitors to the City, if sick or needing a pastor, could have the services of Dr. Deems.

The year 1867 was a struggle for existence, as the Strangers' Sunday Home had no church organisation to support it. In the autumn of that year many persons came to Dr. Deems offering their church letters, and these offers led to much thought and prayer. Consultation was held with the authorities of the denomination of which Dr. Deems was then a minister, and the result was the foundation of the Church of the Strangers. For some time the small congregation continued to meet in the University Chapel, but in the summer of 1870 the late Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt presented Dr. Deems with 50,000 dollars to purchase the Mercer-street Church, a commodious and suitable building. It was duly opened with the motto, "All for Jesus." This motto, in large letters behind the platform, is the first thing that strikes the eye on entering the place, and the spirit of it is observed in all that is carried on within the walls.

The plan of the Twelve Tribes is an important part of the Church work. These tribes correspond to the months of the year; each one comprising those members who had been admitted to the Church during that month in any year. Each tribe elects a patriarch and a scribe, and these two persons have the general oversight of the membership, visitation of the sick, etc., of their own tribe, thus greatly assisting the pastor. Every tribe has an annual meeting at the pastor's house, and one in the chapel, besides various other meetings according to the time and disposition of the members.

The pastor's weekly receptions were happy memories to many connected with the Church of the Strangers. The object of these receptions was to enable the pastor to become more intimately acquainted with each member of his congregation, in order that he might minister to them more efficiently from the pulpit. They were held at his private house. The callers assembled in the front parlour, where they had an opportunity of social intercourse while waiting their turn to see Dr. Deems.

There is in connection with the church a Chinese Sunday-school, where the scholars assemble in all the glory of pig-tail and gaily-coloured robes to hear the old, old story—not children, but grown-up men to learn with the simplicity of childhood. A weekly French service is held. The Sisters of the Stranger minister to all, regardless of nationality, creed, age, sex, or colour.

The American Institute of Christian Philosophy was organised to create and distribute a literature on the lines of the relation of religion to science and philosophy. It has monthly meetings at New York, and a Summer School, at which lectures are delivered and papers read by competent scholars. These were published in a bi-monthly magazine, entitled Christian Thought, which was edited by Dr. Deems. In addition to the important work of editing this paper, which was one of the foremost magazines of the country, Dr. Deems's pen produced many able and valuable books and pamphlets.

Among the many activities of the church there was a Students' Loan Fund, established to aid students by loans rather than by gifts. By this means, many have been enabled to obtain their degree who otherwise could not have finished their college course. The Rest for Convalescent Men was founded for the purpose of assisting those discharged from the hospitals in New York, until they were able to obtain employment. This work was specially near to the pastor's heart. The Christian Giving Society was formed in order to propagate Scriptural views as to the right use of property, partly by means of a monthly magazine and a series of tracts, to which Dr. Deems contributed. In each of these societies the pastor did not merely signify his approval, but he was an active participator in the service connected with them.

Dr. Deems had a paralytic shock on December 16, 1892, from which he never recovered, though he rallied somewhat, and was able to ride out occasionally during the spring and early summer of last year. About the middle of November last he passed away, having served his generation faithfully as Bible agent, journalist, author, college professor, college president, preacher, philosopher, and philanthropist. Through all the coming years the chief name associated with the American Institute of Christian Philosophy will be that of Charles F. Deems. The family circle, the Church of the Strangers, the University of the City of New York, the pulpit of the country, the city in which he dwelt, and a score or more of societies—social, literary, benevolent, and religious—have suffered a great loss, which it will be difficult indeed to make good.

Yet the Master whom he so devotedly served will not allow the work to come to nought.

"BUSY HERE AND THERE":

AN EASTER THOUGHT FOR OUR DAUGHTERS.

Only the waters that in stillness lie
Give back a faithful image to the sky.

It was the Sunday before Easter, and, as usual, Squire Ellworthy's large, old-fashioned pew in Withenden Church was filled from end to end.

A London cousin, Edith Crawford, sat by the side of Gladys, the Squire's only daughter, and from time to time she made little restless movements as she waited before the beginning of service. There was to be a special preacher that morning, and Edith and Gladys had greatly wondered between themselves whether he would preach "an interesting little address, or a long, drowsy sermon," as they phrased it.

When Mr. Perceval gave out his text from 1 Kings xx. 40, "And as thy servant was busy here and there, he was gone," the two girls looked at each other disappointedly (our judgments are often so premature!), as much as to say, "There! It is as we thought; he is going to preach a dismal sermon, all about missions and rushing off to the heathen."

The little couplet above was his first word, and then he added:—

"It is remarkable how frequently God associates, for us, rest with strength or knowledge. 'Be still, and know that I am God,' is but one of many exhortations and invitations to come apart and rest awhile with Christ, in the green pastures, and beside the still waters of the love and teaching of our Heavenly Father."

And then he spoke of the various trusts God has committed to our keeping: "Life, love, time, friends, intellect, each as plainly given into our keeping as Ben-hadad was given into the keeping of Ahab. And often, what account do we render of our stewardship but failure and excuse!

"'What have you done with the talents I entrusted to your care—your life, friends, energy, affections, all the years, money?' may be taken as the question of the Great Giver of all, in the day of reckoning, and the unfaithful servant replies, in bitter failure, 'Gone!'

"'What excuse can you offer?'"

"Alas! as thy servant was busy here and there ——'"

There was a pause—many hearts were asking themselves questions, and as some were thinking it were better to be busy than to be idle, the preacher voiced the answer for them:

"Busy about nothing; busy in trifling; busy at play; busy about anything and everything but 'my Father's business'!"

"Lord, I was so occupied with so many things, that I had not time or opportunity for that charge of thine. I was busy here and there, and I did not notice how the morning was going by, and when I remembered, Lord, and looked, 'he was gone'!"

Edith was no longer restless. Every word of the preacher's simple sermon went straight home to her heart, and she sat as one receiving a message from God. Not a word was lost, not a reference missed. Gladys saw that her friend was deeply touched, and forbore questioning her when they left the church. But that Sunday evening Edith opened her heart to her friend, to whom she had never before spoken on such subjects, Gladys disliking, she said, all talk about, or allusion to, the Christian life and its responsibilities.

"It was a portrait of myself I saw in Mr. Perceval's sermon. His voice was weak, his manner unimposing, and his words very simple, but he delivered his message truly, and it touched my heart," said Edith. "I can never feel the same again about my time and talents. I have wasted both; I am ashamed!"

"Why, dear Edith," Gladys said, in surprise, "I hear from everyone that you are never idle, that you are always busy about something, that you have no time for the pleasures that some girls enjoy. What can you mean, then?"

"Just this, I have trifled with my Master's business, and I have been busy about trifles. I know now what the author means in 'The Crown of Wild Olive' when he speaks of life, time, talents being 'elaborately thrown away.' That is what I have done—thrown away great opportunities and little in fussy idleness."

"My dear Edith," responded Gladys, "how do you know you have done this? You are growing morbid, I believe."

"My conscience tells me I have been wrong," said Edith, "and conscience is the voice of God speaking within us. I have rushed about to meetings and services, instead of being about my Father's business, and I don't wonder I am a fruitless bough."

Then came to Gladys' mind the words: "Be still, and know that I am God; in quietness and confidence shall be your strength," and she slipped her hand into Edith's, and presently said:

"I think I begin to understand what you mean, dear." That was a very eventful morning for the two friends, for by the grace of God's Holy Spirit, Edith was instrumental in helping Gladys to behold Him as she had never done before, and the two girls decided to devote the days before Easter to prayer and thanksgiving; and in the stillness of their souls to inquire of God, with one of old—"Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" They became "strong in the Lord," and before the year was ended, both were accepted as workers in a large and important sphere of work for their Master.

Gladys wrote to a friend, the other day:—

"I think it would help you, standing on the threshold of another year, to remember all the way the Lord has led you, and to 'stand still' for awhile that you may see the glory of God. As a young Christian, one of my mistakes was being 'busy here and there' before I was prepared for it?"

"Must I, then, remain idle in my Lord's vineyard?" you ask. "Can I know Him, and not seek to serve Him?" No—but hear first from Him that the busiuess you are doing is the Lord's business, else like Ahab, you may lose the "charge of the Lord," and your brightest opportunities may be "gone." Christ said, "Come ye yourselves, apart, and rest awhile." An old man, dying, said to inquiring friends round his bed: "No, I don't hear the voice of Jesus—I want to; but the gods of this world—business, cares, and gold—still keep up their clatter." Let nothing, no one, drown God's voice; let it speak to you now, in the silence of your chamber, as you gather strength for another year "in the secret of his presence."

He will commission you, only, "Be thou strong, and very courageous" in the quietness and confidence of his strength. Be much with Him in thought—nearness produces likeness—and, like Edith, you will be able to say, This has been my brightest year."

THE AINTAB ORPHANAGE.

Rev. Haroutoun Hovhannessian, founder and director of the Orphanage at Aintab, Turkey in Asia, is still in Great Britain, seeking opportunities to make known the work in which he has for many years been engaged. We recently told his story, and are glad to learn that one result has been to bring him some cheering letters from friends of missions in Turkey.

The region in which the Orphanage is placed is, from a natural point of view, a very "garden of the Lord." The Orphanage grounds, about an acre in extent, are planted with fifteen kinds of useful trees—figs, olives, apples, pears, plums, etc., the work having been done by the orphans, who in turn partake of the fruit. It is hoped to purchase some additional acres of land, and plant it with mulberry and other profitable trees; and to raise thereon corn and other cereal products, which are a pressing need, if the institution is to be properly sustained.

Mr. Hovhannessian hopes friends in England will help on this enterprise. He will be glad to give information to inquirers, and to address drawing room meetings. Letters may be addressed to him at Williams's Temperance Hotel, Montague House, Montague-street, Russell-square, W.C.

AFRICAN MISSIONS VISITED.—24.

By Mr. D. A. HUNTER.

On Monday morning we were up betimes, and after bidding good-bye to Philip Charles, and wishing him God speed on his journey, I started for Isolo, with a young native evangelist as my guide. Somerville, the Free Church of Scotland station, called after the late Dr. A. N. Somerville, is built near the site of the old Isolo residency. It was here that, during the native rising in 1880, the resident magistrate with his family, the assistant magistrate, several other whites, and some loyal natives, had to take refuge in the little stone prison, from where they could see the insurgents enter the residency, rifle wardrobes, pull the wires out of the piano, and generally destroy or carry away all they could lay hands upon. Not until a rescue party arrived did they dare to come out of their prison.

Rev. M. Erskine is the energetic missionary in charge. He has planted a network of out stations all round the district, which have now become so numerous that some of them are to be taken over and a new station formed under Rev. M. Mathieson. At Somerville, as at several of the stations I have visited in this district, many of the heathens are first reached through medicine.

From Somerville, I rode over the mountains to Buchanan, a station of the U.P. Church of Scotland. It is situated near the graves of Mr. Hope and the other two white men who were murdered at the commencement of the 1880 rising.

Mr. Davis, the son of a Wesleyan missionary, had a wonderful escape at that time. He was accompanying Mr. Hope and the other two unfortunate men, but when they were murdered, the chief threw his blanket round Mr. Davis and shouted to his men that they must not kill the son of his missionary.

Rev. Mr. Stirling is in charge of Buchanan, and here, as at Somerville, a sub-division has become necessary, and the new station about to be formed will be in charge of Rev. John Soga.

My next visit was to Shawbury, a station of the Wesleyan Mission. The District Synod was in session when I arrived, so I had the good fortune to meet a number of Wesleyan missionaries, both white and native, and also representative men from many of their native churches. Shawbury had to be vacated during the 1880 war, but it is now in full swing again, and the girls' boarding school is training some of the future Christian mothers of South Africa.

I returned to Buntingville on Saturday, and spent a quiet Sunday there, before resuming my drive southwards.

On Monday evening there was a missionary meeting in Umtata, for which I waited, starting early on Tuesday for the Baziya. Here the Moravians are at work in their quiet earnest way. It will interest many old boys and girls of Neuwied to know that Mr. and Mrs. Bandert have charge of this station. They related to me encouraging incidents in their work, which give cause for much thankfulness.

Between the Baziya and Engcobo I had to cross two rivers, neither of which was bridged. The Bashee I got through easily, but when I reached the Xuko it was up to a tall man's shoulders, and swift withal. Some natives carried my luggage through on their heads most cleverly, for it was no easy matter to resist being swept down by the current. I outspanned, and they took my buggy through next, only the hood being seen above water. They then led the horses through, and I crossed in a box suspended on a wire rope, which reached from bank to bank. The remainder of the journey was made through a terrible rainstorm, which rendered Dr. Weir's hospitable roof and pleasant reception all the more welcome.

As the rivers in front of me were full, I left my cart and horses at Engcobo, and rode on horseback to Clarkebury, a Wesleyan station some twenty-two miles distant, where I had no rivers to cross. Here is a boys' boarding school, with about 100 boarders, several of whom are learning shoemaking.

A fine new dining-hall, which has been built by a native contractor and native labour throughout, was opened on Tuesday.

THE BIBLE READING AT CANNES is continued every Friday at half past two o'clock at Mr. and Mrs. Cheyne Bradys, Chalet des Syrphes, Chemin du Petit Quai. Christians visiting Cannes are invited to call.

The Evangelist.

JUSTIFICATION BY FAITH.*

By Jonathan Edwards.

You that trust to your own righteousness, arrogate to yourselves the honour of the greatest thing that ever God Himself did; not only as if you were sufficient to perform Divine works, and to accomplish some of the great works of God; but such is your pride and vanity, that you are not content without taking upon you to do the greatest work that ever God Himself wrought, even the work of redemption. To work out redemption is a greater thing than to create a world. Consider what a figure you would make if you should attempt to deck yourself with majesty, pretend to speak the word of power, and call a universe out of nothing; yet, in pretending to work out redemption, you attempt a greater thing.

You take upon you to do the most difficult part of this work, namely, to purchase redemption. Christ could accomplish other parts of this work without cost or difficulty: but this part cost Him his life, as well as innumerable pains and labours, very great ignominy and contempt. If all the angels in heaven had been sufficient for this work, would God have sent his own Son, the Creator of angels, into the world to have done and suffered such things? What self-righteous persons take to themselves is the same work that Christ was engaged in when He was in his agony and bloody sweat, and when He died on the cross. Their self-righteousness does, in effect, charge Christ's offering up Himself in these sufferings as the greatest instance of folly that ever men or angels saw, instead of being the most glorious display of the Divine wisdom and grace.

Is it any wonder, then, that a self-righteous spirit is so represented in Scripture, and spoken of, as that which is most fatal to the souls of men? Or that Christ was so provoked with the Pharisees and others, who trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and were proud of their goodness, and thought that their own performances were a valuable price of God's favour and love?

Let persons hence be warned against a self-righteous spirit. Ye who are seeking salvation, and taking pains in religion, take heed that you do not trust in what you do; that you do not harbour any thoughts that God ought to accept of what you do, so as to be inclined by it in some measure to forgive you, and have mercy on you; or that He does not act justly if He refuse to regard your prayers and pains. Such complaining of God, and quarrelling with Him, for not taking more notice of your righteousness, plainly shows that you are guilty of all that arrogance which has been spoken of, thinking yourself sufficient to offer the price of your own salvation.

When Christ rose from the dead, and was exalted from that abasement to which He submitted for our salvation, the purchase of eternal life was completely made, so that there was no need of anything more to be done in order to it. But now the servants were sent forth with this message, "Behold, I have prepared my dinner; my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage" (Matt. xxii. 4). Therefore, all things being ready, are your sins many and great?

Here is enough done by Christ to procure their pardon; there is no need of any righteousness of yours to obtain your justification. No, you may come freely, without money and without price. Since, therefore, there is such a free and gracious invitation given you, come, come, naked as you are; come as a poor condemned criminal; come and cast yourself down at Christ's feet as one justly condemned, and utterly helpless in yourself. Here is a complete salvation wrought out by Christ, and through him offered to you. Come, therefore, accept of it, and be saved.

For Christ to reject one that thus comes to Him would be to frustrate all those great things which you have heard that God brought to pass, from the fall of man to the incarnation of Christ. It would also frustrate all that Christ did and suffered while on earth; yea, it would frustrate the incarnation of Christ itself, for all these things were for that end, that those might be saved who should come to Christ. Therefore you may be sure Christ will not be backward in saving those who come to Him and trust in Him, for He has no desire to frustrate Himself in his own work; neither will God the Father refuse you, for He has no desire to frustrate Himself in all He did for so many hundred years to prepare the way for the salvation of sinners by Christ.

Come, therefore, hearken to the sweet and earnest call of Christ: "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light" (Matt. xi. 28-30).

Is Anything too Hard for the Lord?

BY T. J. BARNARDO, F.R.C.S.E.

In these latter days everybody can talk of the power of heredity or the influence of atavism in determining character. Such power or influence is undoubted and enormous. Even from a remote or indirect line of ancestry there may be clearly traced physical and moral traits, for good or bad. No bit of scientific truth constitutes to my mind a more powerful incentive than this in favour of saving at all costs the Children of the Streets, who may in their turn be the progenitors of multitudes yet unborn. Numbers of these poor Waifs come into life, as has been said, "six thousand years old," heavily handicapped at the outset with tendencies which are all downward, and that continually.

But there is a bright side to the subject. Many of Nature's laws counteract each other, and we can as it were fight heredity with environment. I do not hesitate to say that properly-selected environment, in which the influence of the Gospel of the grace of God plays a prominent part, is a much more potent life-factor than heredity. What is bred in the bone will, no doubt, come out in the flesh, and if an evil tradition has been established in the ancestry of a child, fresh environments will have a hard struggle to neutralise the evil, while these better surroundings should be persistent even to the second and third generations in order to prevent a lapse. This I have had conclusively proved to me in numberless instances. What a powerful argument then is here for the rescue of the children of the slums? And how bright is the ray of hope that thus illuminates the sad life-story of many a Waif! For although we cannot root out or un-create hereditary influence, we can give and maintain a new environment, and so neutralise the former. Perhaps the instance I am about to furnish is as good an illustration of this as could be selected.

The case of Martha Jamieson was dragged into an unenviable notoriety some few years ago. It may be remembered by many of the readers of these pages that I got into serious trouble through my forcible endeavours to retain a little girl of this name against an attempt made by her abandoned and profligate mother to recover possession of her. I was able to rescue the child in the first instance from an infamous house in one of the most notorious haunts of vice in London. She was then six years of age. A servant girl then in the house who was filled with pity for the poor child, was the means of directing my attention to the case and of assisting me to do what the law then termed "kidnapping," but which it now justifies under a recent statute! I obtained possession of the child and retained her until she was nine years of age. Then her whereabouts became known to her mother, who thereupon put the machinery of the law in motion with a view to recover her. I had a hard stand-up fight in defence of my little protégée; but ultimately I won the day, continuing to keep the child under my care and custody.

In the course of the proceedings the following amazing, and indeed alarming, facts emerged; Martha, my little protégée, was, it turned out, the illegitimate child of a woman leading an abandoned life, who was likewise illegitimate, and whose own mother and grandmother in turn (that is little Martha's grandmother and great-grandmother) had also been born out of wedlock, and had alike lived profligate careers. Three generations of Martha's ancestors had been nurtured in vice, and the surroundings of all of them had been profligate and bad. It was from such an ancestry that Martha, representing the fourth generation, was descended, and her own environment was likewise evil until I got possession of her at six years of age.

No case could better exhibit the influence of an evil heredity. Here was a child whose mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother had all and severally been addicted to vicious courses, and the blood of this latest descendant of theirs; if there be anything in heredity, must have been thoroughly tainted at its very source. If ever a child was fated to go wrong through the operation of the law of descent surely it was poor Martha Jamieson!

When she came into my care I placed her, for obvious reasons, apart from all my other children. Indeed, as I had to keep her for the first three years almost in hiding, I sent her away to the country, into the household of good Christian folk who were living a simple agricultural life in a healthy rural district. There she remained until she was nine, when, as I have said, her mother traced her whereabouts, and I had a severe struggle to retain her. Then I removed her to London, where she was placed under careful instruction, and continued to be educated and trained in such simple household duties as her age permitted.

Six years elapsed. I still kept possession of Martha. At fifteen years of age she had developed into a well-grown girl, not by any means pretty, but pleasant-featured. In her character great commonsense and candour predominated. She had, however, meantime, come under very real religious influences, to which she had responded with her whole heart, and this new and powerful factor came in to complete and crown the transformation which her changed environment had begun to effect.

Ultimately, when ready to leave the Homes, Martha went abroad in the service of a devoted Christian lady who undertook her charge, and who really behaved towards her in the most admirable and motherly fashion. Her mistress latterly settled down in the Western States of America, and the household, with Martha in it as a trusted dependant, found a home in California. Here a young medical man, whose father was an elder in the Scotch Church, fell in love with Martha, and after he had obtained my consent as her guardian he married her. I advised Martha to make her lover aware before marriage of the fact that she was illegitimate, which accordingly she did, without however in any degree altering his purpose.

All that is now an old story. But the record of this young wife and mother, whose career as a true-hearted servant of Christ continues unblemished to this day, points the moral I have drawn, and attests the victory of the Omnipotent Grace of God in neutralising evil tendencies inherited through many generations. Some years have now passed since I heard of the arrival of Martha's third baby. Husband and wife are both respected members of the community, both of them undoubtedly earnest Christian workers, and they are bringing up their children in the fear of God. They have as happy a home life and home circle as one could wish for. I am writing this with the photographic group of the family lying on the table before me, and its evidence is enough without the aid of the accompanying letter to assure me that "old things have passed away and all things have become new." Thank God! Thank God!

But I must not close without adding the information that long ago both Dr. and Mrs. ——— (Martha and her husband) have more than repaid the whole amount expended on the care and training of the former, ungrateful forgetfulness being no part of their character.

THE GOSPEL IN TUNIS.

M. Jocelyn Bureau, Pastor of the Reformed Church in Sfax, Tunis, writes:—"I am especially engaged in preaching to Protestants, but, of course, I am also very happy to spread the knowledge of Christ among people of other religions. I am hoping soon to be able to build a little church on a piece of ground granted to us by the Tunisian Government. Already £208 has been given or promised towards it, and we only need some £32 to secure our building free of debt. Doubtless some friends in England would consider it a privilege to aid us in our undertaking, and so have a hand in raising in the south of the Regency the first Evangelical Church since the time when the Arabs destroyed all the Christian places of worship.

"Mr. Leonardi, the British vice-consul out here, although not belonging to our church, has been a real aid to me in my work, acting as treasurer, and showing me sympathy in many other ways. Receive my hearty thanks for The Christian, which, as soon as read, I pass over to an English lady, the wife of an Italian resident here; she also reads it with pleasure, and joins her thanks to mine."

STUDENTS AND MISSIONS.

The Conference held at Detroit, U.S., under the auspices of the Student Volunteer Movement, from February 28 to March 4, was an occasion of the deepest interest and importance. The attendance of delegates was large and representative, and much local enthusiasm seems to have been awakened. Most of the larger meetings were held in the Central Methodist Episcopal Church. The president of the Conference was Mr. J. R. Mott, of New York, international college secretary of the United States and Canada Y.M.C.A.

At the opening session on February 28, a long and important address was given by Mr. Robert E. Speer, on "Paul, the Great Missionary Example." In the course of it he argued that the object in all missions ought to be to make self-propagating organisations.

On the second day the subject of "Intellectual Preparation" was dealt withby Dr. Judson Smith, who maintained that on different grounds the highest mental equipment is indispensable to the foreign missionary. The greatest missionaries have always been men of trained intellects, and education did not hinder their spiritual power. An address on "Practical Preparation" by Rev. H. P. Beach brought out the need of general capacity in the worker; he has to touch humanity at so many points that he cannot be too well furnished so as to meet every emergency. Rev. J. Hudson Taylor, speaking on "Spiritual Preparation," magnified the devotional study of the Bible, and said that the fullest equipment for the missionary field is close communion with God. Among those who joined in the succeeding conversation were Dr. A. T. Pierson and Mr. Spencer Walton.

Several afternoon meetings were held, when reports were presented from different parts of the field, and their specific needs dwelt upon. The primal importance of the evangelistic element was insisted on. At a meeting specially on behalf of women's work Mrs. Wishard, Miss Geraldine Guinness, and other lady missionaries spoke of the wonderful opportunities now open to consecrated and qualified Christian women. One of the subsidiary meetings was for the advocacy of medical missions.

At a great meeting in the evening, "The Needs and Claims of China" were most impressively enlarged on by Mr. Hudson Taylor and Miss Guinness. The latter made graphic reference to the evils of the opium habit. Early in the evening the lady delegates had a social reception at the Y.M.C.A.

On the third day the afternoon was largely devoted to sectional gatherings, when some of the main mission fields of the world were described, and their special needs pressed home. In the morning the Student Volunteer Movement was the topic of a very interesting session. It was stated that 680 missionaries are now known to be at work in different parts of the world as a result of the movement. Many who gave in their names as volunteers have from various causes been prevented from carrying out their purpose. It was urged that those who experienced difficulties in going out should be very careful that the hindrances were real ones,and not those placed in the way by friends, or self, or sin, or Satan.

Mr. Donald Fraser, the travelling secretary of the British branch of the movement, had a cordial reception as he described the progress of the work in the old country. He said that from 80 to 90 per cent. of those British volunteers who had completed their educational course last year had already sailed for their fields of service.

At the sectional meetings held simultaneously, reports were given from China, India, Papal lands, Africa, Japan and Corea, and the Levant. Such a comprehensive and impressive array of missionary facts is seldom brought together in one convocation.

The chief speakers at the evening mass meeting were Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, and Mr. L. D. Wishard, of New York. The former said experience had shown that the heathen must first be converted and then civilised. Mr. Wishard referred to the breaking down of caste barriers in India, and said that the young men of Japan, China, and India were now ready for a similar volunteer movement in those lands. There were evening meetings also held in two other churches, when missionary addresses on the work in Japan and China were much appreciated.

The closing day of the Convention (Sunday) was largely given up to church services, with some additional special meetings. Many of the city pulpits were occupied by delegates. Mr. Hudson Taylor had an immense congregation in the morning at the Central M.E. Church, and his discourse was on "Abiding in Christ." A testimony meeting in the afternoon was largely attended, and had much interest for the students proper. Another meeting designed specially for members of young people's societies connected with the churches was a noteworthy occasion. Mr. R. E. Speer, who presided, said there were ten times enough societies to support all the missionaries who would be needed for the next few years.

The farewell meeting was one long to be remembered. The solo singing of Mr. Geo. C. Stebbins, who conducted the praise throughout, was a pleasing and enjoyable feature. More than a dozen friends took part in the speaking during the meeting, and some sixty students rose as indicating a purpose to go on foreign service within the coming year. Over thirty rose who had decided during the convention to enrol as volunteers. It is confidently believed that the conference will be a most fruitful one.

THE NEGLECTED CONTINENT.

SALVATION ARMY WORK.

Much was said in your issues of last year with regard to the spiritual destitution of the South American Republics, and nowhere were the strictures read with more interest than in Buenos Ayres itself, the centre of the Argentine province, and the most enlightened and advanced of all the various States comprising this vast southern continent. The facts are unquestionable, the figures heartrending. It is not too much to say that they came as a revelation to many, if not to all, and acted as a quickening, vital incentive to the few workers, who are labouring at such fearful disadvantage in the spread of knowledge, light, and liberty so freely given and manifested in Christ Jesus. It may interest your readers to know a little of the work now being done by the latest arrival in the way of Evangelical organisations.

The Salvation Army landed in Buenos Ayres in the year of the revolution, 1889, and has practically completed four years' service. The force consisted of four officers, not one of whom could speak or had studied Spanish, the language of the country; there are now thirty-eight officers, all of whom are preaching in the vernacular, twenty-two of these being converts who have offered themselves for the salvation of the South Americans.

In addition, we publish a Spanish War Cry, which has a circulation of nearly 4000 per month, nearly all the literary work of which is done, and creditably, by an editor and contributors, or translators, amongst the ranks. Our stations stretch from Mendoza, at the foot of the Andes, to Rosario, Santa Fé, and already prospective visiting has been done in the provinces northward, where we hope to commence operations very shortly.

Our halls have seating capacity for 1400, are open nightly, nearly always full, and our congregations for the month of November total up to 16,000, with 320 services, or more than 200,000 for the year, with nearly 4000 meetings.

Our latest opening at the Ondine base has been a wonderful success. During the past four months the hall (seating 400) has been crowded almost every Sunday, and the week-night congregations have been substantial. Thirty converts are registered, many of whom publicly testify what God has done for them, and witness to complete transformation of character, habits, and life. Several are offering for evangelistic work. We hope to accept them for training shortly. Our converts include Italians, Spanish, Argentines, Swiss, French, and others. Truly there is no distinction of nationality in the wonderful scope of God's saving and keeping grace.

Major Clibborn, late of Belgium and Switzerland, is now in command. His continental experience and knowledge of the French and Spanish languages are invaluable. Already plans are being considered which will lead to the advancement of the Gospel, east, west, north, and south. We shall not be satisfied until every town and village in the Argentine and neighbouring Republics have heard the messengers of the Gospel of Peace.

Buenos Ayres. J. Bedford, Staff-Captain.

TIDINGS FROM PERU.

Messrs. Stark, Peters, and Jarrett, it will be remembered, left Harley College last spring for work in Peru. After holding meetings in the States the two former proceeded to South America viâ Panama, on December 30, with Dr. Wood (of Lima) and his party. They were eight in number, all going to Peru to teach or to preach. Writing from Callao in January last, after arrival, our English brethren say:—

"Our first impressions of Peru as seen in Callao and Lima are different altogether from our former ideas; we had expected to see crudely-built houses of mud, but many of the buildings are very superior. Callao has a population of 30,000, but small as it is many nationalities are represented. After the Spanish element, the English is predominant; in fact, English capital is the backbone of the country. All the railways without exception are owned by an English company, which company also owns certain large tracts of the interior now under colonisation. If only it had the pure Gospel, it would become one of the finest countries in the world.

"Señor Penzotti, the hero colporteur of Peru, whose name has become famous through his imprisonment for preaching the Gospel in this country, is here at present. It was our privilege to converse with him on his work, and to be present at one of his Spanish services. His labours in South America have been extensive and fruitful, at present his Bibles are confiscated, so greatly are the Government officials biassed by the priests."

Mr. Jarrett, writing from San Bernardino, California, on January 23, refers to the departure of his companions, Messrs. Stark and Peters, and says:—

"I have held meetings in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, and now in California, where I hope to continue for about a month, and then sail from San Francisco. The Lord has encouraged us much. The prevailing financial depression is affecting the missionary societies very much, and I fear that there will be very little progression this year. Yet it seems that there never was, and perhaps never will be, a better opportunity to take possession of the Western States of South America for Christ. Our hope is in God. Pray for Peru, to which we add Bolivia and Ecuador."

DIFFICULTIES IN BRAZIL.

Rev. Solomon L. Ginsburg writes from Caixa 57, Campos, Brazil:—

Our membership is now over 110, and our little upstairs hall only holds about seventy persons. Many would like to come to listen to the good news of salvation by faith, but we cannot offer them a place in our hall, and so many have given up coming. I also have given up writing, for I've no room to offer. Besides, our hall is so uncomfortable. Below works a carpenter, and on Sunday morning you can hear him hammering away, while we are trying to hear each others' voices. Opposite our hall they have a piano, and nearly every Sunday night they so drive away at the poor instrument that I've to give up preaching as soon as they begin.

If we had the money just now we could have bought a good site for little money. The believers here are poor, but are doing their best. With the present exchange, £500 would help us on a good deal. What would be wanting we could try and do ourselves.

PORTSOY, N.B.

Miss Gow, Zenana missionary in Rajpootana, Indiа, recently gave an address on Missions in the U.P. Church, Portsoy, N.B. There was a very large attendance. Her address was most interesting. Miss Gow possesses the gift of touching the hearts as well as instructing the minds of her hearers; and all felt with new force the claims of Zenana missions as a great power in the evangelisation of the world. She also addressed an evangelistic meeting in same place at a later hour.

Mr. Marshall, evangelist, Glasgow, is conducting successful meetings in Portsoy. Every night the hall of the Christian Institute has been filled, and now they have had to be transferred to one or other of the churches. Wm. Simmers, Minister.

U.P. Manse, Portsoy, March 15.

MR. WM. NOBLE'S mission at Hove Town Hall last week was a source of blessing to many, and the meetings will be long remembered.

A RIDE TO LITTLE TIBET.*

The last published work of Rev. Dr. Lansdell, the renowned Christian traveller, is, like its predecessors, full of life and vigour, research and adventure. It is a vivid portrayal of the life and customs of many nationalities of which comparatively little is commonly known. His journey covered no beaten track, and as an important contribution to missionary as well as geographical literature, the volumes are highly to be prized.

Of the entrance of Christianity into Manchuria, the author says:—

"Efforts to Christianise Manchuria were begun, according to Mr. Ravenstein, in 1838, by Roman missionaries, one of whom, M. de la Bruniere, in 1845 descended the Amur, alone, to the Gilyaks. He went on shore, and at the White Village was murdered.

"When passing the spot more than thirty years afterwards, the bay was pointed out to me where he met his death. I came across a man whose father, he said, had told him about the missionary, and an elderly Russian officer who affirmed that, going to the place in the early years of Russian occupation, the people still had in their possession some of the missionary's effects, which the Russians bought.

"After my distribution of Scriptures along the Amur in 1879, I heard of a colporteur being subsequently sent over the same ground by the American Bible Society, but I suspect that both he and I touched only the Russian population.

"In the south of Manchuria, the B. and F. Bible Society have a depôt at Mewchwang, under the direction of Mr. Robert Turley, who, with his colporteurs, has circumambulated a large portion of the country, his sales being chiefly, I think, among Chinese.

"At Hsi-wan-tze, eight days north of Peking, there are, M. de Deken tells me, a bishop and sixteen missionaries, with nine Chinese priests; and, farther east, north of the barrier of stakes, at Gehol, Heihsui, etc., there is another bishop with eleven Belgian missionaries and seven Chinese priests.

"There are also Scotch and Irish Presbyterian missionaries at Newchwang, Mukden, Kirin, and some few other stations, but none of the Church of England. There still exists, therefore, an extensive field for missionary effort in this little-known country."

Another section of his journey he thus describes:—

"On my previous visit to Kuldja I had found sixty-five Chinese Roman Catholics, who had been deprived of their missionary for seventeen years. They were still holding on, however, and asked me for a service, which I gave.

"I did not gather that the number of adherents had much increased, being still less than a hundred, but their chapel was so enlarged that I should not have recognised it. I dined with them, and received much kindness at their hands in the way of interpretation and help in making local purchases. I was, therefore, the more glad to ask their acceptance of some copies of the Gospels in Kalmuk for a small mission I understood they had in the upper part of the Ili Valley, as well as to help the expected recruits in the study of the language. I added also some maps, fancy biscuits, and quinine.

"They found it very desirable, it seemed, to know a little of medicine, since they were not infrequently applied to in cases of Chinese women who had attempted suicide by an overdose of opium. In such cases they invariably administered a dose of strong coffee, and with success in most cases. Nor were these the only cases in which their interference was sometimes sought, since during our stay they were sheltering one of their female adherents from a man who claimed her as his wife.

"It was an instance of child-marriage. The woman was the daughter of a most respectable Chinese Christian, who was acting as secretary at the Russian Consulate. This man, who remembered my first coming, and now did some Chinese writing for me, had betrothed his child to a boy who was then a professing Christian, but had since lapsed and become a disreputable character. Her parents did not now wish to give him their daughter. Unfortunately, however, in China the law of child-marriage obtains, and, provided the agreement be duly registered, the contract holds when the parties come of age.

"In the present instance the affianced husband threatened to come with a rabble, worthless as himself, and take the girl by force, in anticipation whereof, and with the sanction of another odious law in China, he had sold his wife to a mandarin. The missionaries, therefore, had been asked to interfere, and were giving the girl asylum, so that the mission-house was in a minor state of siege.

"I cannot, however, extenuate another practice among Roman missionaries that has come under my notice, who, when mothers bring to them sick children for medicine, ask whether the parent would not also like a good prayer said over the child. Consent, of course, is given without knowing what is to be done, the child is baptized, and an additional name entered on the register, which, even if in keeping with the opus-operatum view of the sacrament, is hardly consistent with Christian straightforwardness.

"The Roman mission-house is situated on the outskirts of the town. The road to it goes through the Chinese quarter, in which is a Buddhist temple with an entrance of brick, through an arched gateway carved at the top and ornamented with dragons. There is also a Chinese bazaar, with abundance of water near and numbers of ducks, with which the Chinese are delighted. In this quarter I made acquaintance with several features of Chinese life and manners that were new to me.

"On my second day in the town there passed through the streets the local magistrate, preceded by his retinue, the foremost of whom carried gongs or musical instruments. Next came lictors with whips to clear the way, and executioners carrying their instruments of punishment. Then came several secretaries and attendants, one of them carrying a sort of umbrella which had been presented as a mark of appreciation by the people; and lastly, the great man himself, in a little bird-cage sort of cart, the procession being closed by one or two mounted guards. The instruments of punishment attracted my attention, and set me longing for additions to my prison curiosities.

"Upon communicating my wishes to M. Borneman, and requesting that he would ask for a set on my behalf, he replied, 'Oh, no, no; that is not the way here! If you merely ask, you may wait long enough; the better way is to command.' Whichever he did, in a day or two there were ready for me three Chinese batons or staves and a whip, facsimiles of those in local use."

DEPTFORD RAGGED SCHOOL.

A fifteen days' mission was held from February 25 to March 11 by Mr. Geo. Hefford, of the Evangelisation Society. Deptford has long been known as "dark Deptford," and though the neighbourhood was visited room by room with personal and printed invitations, yet the majority loved darkness rather than light. About 350 came one evening to tea, and listened with much attention to the Gospel, so earnestly, lovingly, yet forcibly, set before them by Mr. Hefford. Other evenings the attendances varied from sixty to 150, and much blessing is believed to have resulted besides the known cases.

This is the jubilee of the Deptford Ragged School, having been established in 1844. There are 1500 attendances weekly of children and adults. No appeals are made for funds outside the surrounding districts, as a rule, but there is now a balance due to the treasurer we should like to see cleared off.

E. Dodd, Hon. Sec.

9, Wickham-gardens, Brockley.

IT IS SAID that during the past two months five men connected with the liquor traffic have died, leaving the enormous aggregate of three and a-half millions sterling.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING of the National Temperance Federation, Mr. W. S. Caine was re-elected president. Resolutions were passed expressing disappointment that the promised Temperance measures had not become law.

JEWS IN MILE END.—The fifth anniversary of the Mile End and Stepney Mission to the Jews was celebrated a few days ago, when about 500 Jews and Jewesses sat down to a bountiful tea at the Great Assembly Hall. The work is connected with the London City Mission, and Rev. R. Dawson, one of its secretaries, presided over the public meeting which was afterwards held. The missionary, Mr. D. J. Neugewirtz, presented an interesting report of the year's work. He said that some twenty thousand Jews of all nations reside in the district, the greater part of them natives of Russia and Poland. In house-to-house visitation he had found a great deal of distress. Several friends followed with brief addresses.

AMONG PARSEES OF BOMBAY.

Mr. M. H. Mody, Parsee missionary, has published an attractive little report of his work in Bombay. He says: "It is now more than fifteen years since my wife and I began work together on strictly undenominational lines, among various classes, especially among my own people—the Parsees. It is difficult to get them into a Christian building, and I, as a convert, am not welcomed into their homes; still, they will readily stand and listen to open-air preaching.

"On my conversion, twenty years ago, I began to preach thus in concert with the American Methodists, and on my return from England, in 1878, after studying in Dr. Grattan Guinness's college, I resumed the work single-handed, taking my stand on the steps of the lamp and fountain in front of the C.M.S. Robert Money School on the esplanade. Here evening after evening, all the year round, I seek, by the Lord's grace, to make known the Light of the World and the Water of Life. As others besides Parsees stop and listen, I generally speak not only in Gujerati, their language, but in other vernaculars, and sometimes in English. My other work is to gather very poor heathen boys into a day and Sunday school.

"Mrs. Mody's work, from her landing in 1878, was Zenana visiting among Mohammedans, and she also taught some European and Eurasian girls in the hope of their becoming missionary teachers. In 1891 she commenced the first Jewish girls' school in Bombay, being helped to canvas for it by two Jewesses whom she had taught in former years. We both take a deep interest in the Lord's ancient people. There are now nearly forty children on the register."

With reference to the school work, Mr. Mody says that it has to counteract the bad influence of the heathen homes. He hopes some day to found an orphanage for destitute lads. A suitable house with a large compound is available, and the purchase money would be about £2000. Communications to Mr. Mody should be addressed Falkland-road, Bombay.

WORK IN SOUTH TRAVANCORE.

In his report of work last year in the Neyoor, Mission District, South Travancore, Rev. I. H. Hacker, of the London Missionary Society, mentions the arrival of Dr. and Mrs. Fell, to take up the work which was previously in the hands of Dr. and Mrs. Sargood Fry. He proceeds:—

"The work in this district has, in the main prospered. I am surprised, at times, how much real blessing God gives to our wavering and sometimes unfaithful service. We have a large Christian community. They number, including children, 10,580. These are divided into church members, 1310, who are supposed to be really converted men and women. Baptized 5248—many of whom are truly converted; and 3842 adherents, who, leaving their demon worship, have placed themselves under Christian instruction. Many of these are only nominal Christians, among whom the knowledge of Christ has to be given as much as among non-Christians.

"Established amongst these nominal Christian people we have sixty churches; some eighteen of these churches have been formed into three pastorates, which have been self-supporting for many years. These self-supporting pastorates ought to be self-governing and aggressive, but while they manage by strenuous efforts to support themselves, we do not see so many signs as we could wish that they are widening their borders and increasing their usefulness. The other churches are worked in circles, four or five weak churches grouped round a fairly strong one, supported by an evangelist, and four or five catechists for each circle. Much earnest work has been done by these teachers during the year; work in some cases necessarily hidden, but owned, I believe, by our Master.

"There is a very wide and varied field for service opened up amongst the women. Perhaps one of the most remarkable signs of progress during the past ten years has been the opening of doors of the homes of non-Christian women. All the ladies of the station have their hands full of pressing work, and I sometimes think they are too over-burdened. We could do well with one or two more lady workers."

Communications to Mr. Hacker may be addressed, Neyoor, Colochel, Travancore, South India.

A SUCCESSFUL BIBLE CLASS.

A Bible-class is too often considered a dry and uninteresting affair, but a visit to the Pastor's Bible-class for men held on Sunday afternoons at Albemarle Chapel, Taunton, would dispel any such idea. This class, although it has been in existence a comparatively short time, has grown by leaps and bounds until it has now a membership of nearly 400; and they are men of all ranks and all ages, from the busy tradesmen of mature years, men who drive the plough during the week, the postmen who daily deliver our letters, and such like industrious workers, to the youths who are starting life in various directions.

In consequence of the large attendance an improved system of registering had to be adopted, and it is done in this way: the membership card includes a number of perforated tickets, on each of which is printed the date and subject of discussion, and the Biblical references connected with it. This ticket is torn out and put into a collecting dish, and the number on the ticket affords the means by which he attendance may be registered. When a member is absent more than twice in succession, the President endeavours to visit him, so that in cases of sickness or difficulty none may feel themselves forgotten. There can be no doubt that the personality of Rev. Levi Palmer has contributed the largest part to the success which the class has attained, and it is a fortunate thing for the members to have such a clear-headed and straightforward man for their president. Whilst speculative and unprofitable contentions are avoided Mr. Palmer is ready to answer any questions, and this he does in a most apt and generally satisfactory manner, pointing his remarks with interesting anecdotes and telling illustrations.

The Albemarle Bible-class may feel flattered in knowing that since its success has been so marked, several similar classes have been started in the town. Whilst the men are thus engaged it was reasonable to suppose that the women ought to have similar opportunities, and so Mrs. Palmer holds a Bible-class for women at the same time in another part of the building.—Somerset Express.

NO MORE "STRANGERS."

Our sixty-seventh party of brave hopeful lads sail for the new world on Thursday, March 22. Many of them bear the mark of having been utter strangers to food or kindness in this great and rich city. Death stalks in; the home breaks up; clothes get threadbare, and who cares for the white-faced boy seeking a job in these necessitous times? As one of the results of correspondence with their friends in England, eight boys are going out to join brothers in Canada. After arrival they will feel no longer strangers, but good homes and a warm welcome will await them.

Many of the cases dealt with have been of deep interest. An orphan boy, sheltered by a young married sister living in one of our narrow streets, hears that a letter has come from Canada from an old mate, who lived in the same street, but is now doing well, finding plenty of work, food, and kind friends. The sister looks us up, and the eleven-year-old little fellow gets a winter's training in our Hackney Home, with others in like circumstances. Their sorrows are to us sacred, and we rejoice to be a link between them and bright Canadian homesteads, where their sorrows will be forgotten, and tears wiped away.

One of the first of our elder lads this past winter was a Christian Jew. He had been for seven years under Mr. Wilkinson's care. He conceived the idea of emigrating, and was placed in our training home. He boldly announced himself as one who loved Jesus; his faith was simple and real; he soon found sharp persecution in school and playground; it was almost more than he could bear, when a second Christian lad came from farther east, a member of Pastor Hazzard's church. The two began to pray for the lads, who jeered and taunted them about their faith. They persevered, living consistently, till they won the respect of all. On one occasion a lesson was given on "Death and Life," which made a deep impression upon all. They asked the use of the play-room to hold a prayer-meeting by themselves, and the gathering increased week by week. Those who had sneered became earnest inquirers. Weeks passed: each Scripture lesson drew the whole band to love their Bibles more; when seasons of prayer came round, a score of young voices would pour forth praise and thanksgiving; petitions for their kindred would rise to God, and for all the work at the Home of Industry.

We shall never regret showing kindness to the Jew. How one desires that every congregation in our land should find a zealous Christian Jew in its midst! The prayer-meeting would become on fire, and souls all around would be born of the Spirit, while saints would be led to sing songs of rejoicing even in this the time of their pilgrimage!

Annie Macpherson.

DUBLIN VISITING MEDICAL MISSION.

Dr. J. Magee Finney presided over the second annual meeting of the Dublin Visiting Medical Mission, which was held a few days ago. In the course of an address, he said that the report for the year clearly showed the need of the mission. The work brings friendship and brightness to the poor, and tells them of the love of God.

One of the hon. secs., Mr. W. R. Wigham, read the report for 1893, and the hon. treasurer, Dr. H. T. Bewley, read the financial statement, showing that over £500 had been received during the year, and that £65 was required before the close of March. Also £150 was still needed to complete the purchase of the mission premises.

Colonel Yates spoke of the great spiritual blessing resulting from the work of the mission. When we consider the sort of people who come to the mission, some brought to their present condition by their own sin and wrong-doing, others by those mysterious visitations which bring misery to their homes—people who have never heard the Gospel, and to whom it is entirely new, all effort is fully justified.

Dr. Long (mission director) said that the number of people attending the dispensary and Gospel service three times a week varied from fifty to eighty, and about twenty-five to thirty at the men's evening dispensary and service. They all show thankfulness for the help and kindness extended to them. He told of a man and wife who had been converted, and had been persecuted in consequence, being turned out by their landlord, but for more than a year they had stood firm, and their children were now attending a Protestant school.

Mr. George Williams (travelling sec. Open Air Mission) also spoke a few words.

P.S.A. AT THE EDINBURGH CASTLE.

On Monday evening at Dr. Barnardo's Edinburgh Castle the first anniversary meeting of the Edinburgh Castle P.S.A. was held. After tea, Dr. Barnardo, president of the P.S.A., took the chair, and a very interesting programme occupied the evening. It appeared from the year's report, presented by Mr. W. R. Nicoll, that this P.S.A. at the close of its first twelvemonth has nearly 900 members on its books, and that there has been an average attendance of some 600 men each Sunday afternoon. A women's P.S.A. has been established under Miss Bertill's care, which is now nearly as strong as the men's; and branches have also sprung up at Dorcas House, Carr-street, and at the Institute, Bow-road.

Mr. John Blackham, founder of the P.S.A. movement, delivered an address of congratulation and distributed certificates, and Mr. H. A. Kennedy, of the Stepney Meeting P.S.A., and Mr. George Nokes also spoke.

The Edinburgh Castle Choir rendered sacred music, and solos were sung by Madame Wilson-Osman, Madame Rich, and Miss Sheen. It was determined to establish a library for the benefit of the members of the P.S.A. Fifty volumes have already been contributed by various friends. The president promised an equal number, and Mr. Blackham also promised 100 books.

One peculiar feature of the Castle P.S.A. is the existence of a special circle, chosen from among the members, and known as "Helpers of the War," who act as a kind of executive committee, and whose efforts have during the year resulted most beneficially in favour of the movement.

BISHOP SIMPSON, of blessed memory, with almost prophetic vision, said, "I am satisfied that the day is coming when, in our church, and in all churches of the world, we shall look chiefly to the conversion of children, and, as a comparatively rare instance, to the conversion of those in mature years."

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.

The following statement has been issued:—

"Despite the great loss which the church has sustained, and the changes which have taken place in the locality, large congregations are still attracted to the services, the building being generally well filled on Sundays. The interest in the weekly prayer meetings is well maintained and the week night services well attended.

"There has been a steady influx of members, upwards of 200 having been received into the fellowship of the church during the past year.

"The church accounts as audited and presented at the last annual meeting were satisfactory, each account showing a balance on the right side.

"Of the three large institutions founded by Mr. Spurgeon, the Pastors' College is the only one where accounts are presented at the annual church meeting. The weekly offering towards the college funds, despite the general depression and the personal losses sustained by many of our friends, exceeded the average amount of the past seven years.

"The Orphanage and the Colportage Association are under separate boards, the church being in no way responsible for their management or control. The funds of the Orphanage were never in a more prosperous condition, but it is a matter for regret that the Colportage Association still finds a difficulty in commanding the amount required for maintaining its operations throughout the country.

"Signed on behalf of the Deacons,

"Thomas H. Olney, Treasurer."

THE NEW BEDFORD INSTITUTE.

The work which the Friends have been doing for so many years in Spitalfields has been greatly owned of God in blessing and helpfulness to many. The well-known building in Quaker-street, opened in 1865, has for some years been too strait for the work going on. Hence steps were taken to secure a new building, and through the liberality of the late George Sturge and other Friends, a fine and commodious structure has been erected. This has been open and in use since February 18, though the formal inaugural meetings have just been held.

The Friend thus describes the new institute:—"We have been over the new buildings, from the cellars for the free breakfasts and the Social Wing, to the class-rooms and provisions for residents on the upper story, and the whole exhibits a large amount of wise forethought, the result of mature experience; while the solidity and adaptation of the whole structure evince a liberal faith in future development as well as present need. But there is nothing speculative in the substantial and roomy provision for the many departments of service. One of the peculiarities of almost every successful mission is that, however thorough the effort to make provision for its varied necessities today, in the growth of the good work some departments are straitened for want of wider accommodation to-morrow, and it is an ill omen if no such difficulties arise.

The large central hall on the ground floor, excellently lighted, handsome and appropriate in its structure, forms the best mission hall we have seen in London, and will probably prove a model for many other similar erections.

At the opening meetings a large company assembled, and addresses were delivered by Messrs. J. B. Braithwaite, A. T. Alexander, and many other well-known Friends.

MR. JUSTICE DAY, at Liverpool Assizes, said a vast majority of the crimes of violence that were before him had been committed in drunken fury.

THERE HAVE BEEN mothers who seemed to have an ambition that their children might be beautiful, that they might shine in society, that they might have great wealth, that they might stand among the powerful of this world, who were not even willing that they should be consecrated unto God.

THE OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE BOAT RACE has for years furnished the London City Mission with an opportunity of service for the Lord which it has not been slow to utilise, especially since its evangelistic band has been formed. On Saturday last, the Mall, Hammersmith, was again the scene of this band's operations. Here, shortly after 8 a.m., some thirty members gathered, and for over three hours beautiful Gospel songs alternated with plain, loving, and earnest appeals to heart and conscience. At 12.30 a brief prayer and praise meeting was held in a mission hall close by. At 1 p.m., the workers again assembled in the Grove, where about 2½ hours' similar work was done. During the day twenty-three addresses were given, and some thousands of Gospel booklets and tracts distributed.

The Thanksgiving Meetings.

LETTERS FROM WORKERS.

I am looking forward for such a blessed time that all will exclaim, "This has been a grand time with the Lord; we must have it annually." Why not?
Great Assembly Hall, E. E. H. Kerwin.

"Praise waiteth for thee, O God." I heartily rejoice at proposed meeting. Shall pray God to grant us another great revival; and shall rejoice to mingle praises with those present. Chas. Cook.

It is somewhat uncertain if I can be with you on April 11th, at the proposed Thanksgiving meeting, but if I can I certainly will. All my sympathies are with such a gathering. The Lord be with you.—Yours ever faithfully, Jas. A. Spurgeon.

God is honoured by the acknowledgment of answer to prayer, and certainly, though sometimes in hours of depression we are apt to minimise results, the change all around us is simply marvellous, and He should have all the praise. Mary H. Steer,
"Bridge of Hope," 28, Betts-street, St. George's, E.

I am exceedingly happy to be able to co-operate in the thanksgiving meeting at the Assembly Hall, though I fear I shall be away from home on the day fixed for the meeting.
J. Pullein Thompson.
Hon. Sec. of Christian Blind Relief Society.
St. Stephen's Vicarage, North Bow, E.

I shall consider it a duty, as well as a great privilege, to be present at the thanksgiving meeting on April 11 next. Wishing you God-speed in all the arrangements necessary to be made,
H. Bristow Wallen.
National Refuges, Training Ships, etc.,
164, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.C.

You are right: we should praise God for his mercies to us in the East-end. We do not, as a rule, praise Him enough for the love and mercy so abundantly given to us. Gladly do I approve, and may the living Spirit be with us when we meet to render to Him his due, and in blessing we shall be blessed.
31, Sturry-street, Poplar, E. Anna Wilkes.

I think a united meeting for praise and prayer in view of God's work in the East-end of London during the last thirty years must be a great blessing and stimulant to all Christ's people throughout that region, and I should be heartily glad if it could be arranged. T. B. Stephenson.
7, St. Agnes-terrace, Victoria Park-road.

I am so very glad to hear of your proposed meetings for praise about the wonderful way in which God has answered prayer offered up in Sussex Hall in 1861, especially in bringing out so many women to work in the East-end and blessing their labours.
Sailors' Welcome Home. Rosetta Child.

Your suggestion of "a day of thanksgiving" has reached me here. I need hardly say how fully I am with you in the matter, being one of the chiefest debtors to East London blessing. I am sure the Tabernacle is at your service, should you wish it.
Mentone. Archibald Brown.

The proposed day for thanksgiving is most timely. Surely, with deep gratitude, we may say: "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." As the Epistle to the Hebrews in its closing chapter, so let God's people exclaim, "By Him, therefore, let us offer unto God the sacrifice of praise continually, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name." Henry Varley.

I think your proposal would do immense good to us all. Many of us are far more recent than that meeting as workers in the East-end, and yet we enter into the fruitful labours of others, to our great joy. I am delighted with the proposal, and shall do all I can to awaken a real interest in the meetings. With cordial regards, yours faithfully,
Peter Thompson.
Wesleyan East-end Mission, 242, Cable-street.

I heartily agree that God should be glorified by his people, in a united meeting for praise and thanksgiving, especially by us workers at the East-end, who have been so greatly blessed in his work during the past thirty odd years.
All Christians see the great need of having the mind stirred up by way of remembrance. Doubtless the matter proceeds from the Lord; may He fulfil all his good pleasure. James Sharpless.
14, Sidney-square, London, E.

I heartily sympathise with the suggestion, and would cordially co-operate in the movement.
I attended the meeting in Sussex Hall (1861) with several fellow-workers, and well remember the hallowed season of refreshing then realised. From that date the effects of the revival have been most marked.
Christian Community. James Atkinson.

You have done well to invite us to join with the multitude of Christian workers in praising the Lord for his great grace in calling, fitting, and sustaining us in the blessed work of winning souls from Satan's kingdom.
My memory recalls the year 1857, when dear C. H. Spurgeon's preaching touched my heart, and led me to serve the Lord in the slums in my leisure time.
Most heartily I will join with you in the meetings of the 11th prox., meanwhile praying that a rich blessing may rest upon them. W. J. Orsman.
Golden Lane and Hoxton Costers' Christian Mission.

We will unite with your welcome gathering, D.V., on April 11, to praise and testify wondrous blessing since 1859. I was one of the first of the band of workers in the East-end getting the prisoners out of captivity. What hath God wrought!
143, Clapham-road, S.W. S. Meredith.

The Lord be praised for all these thirty years of blessing in the East of London.
The Lord has done wonderful things. Marvellous have been his leadings and teachings; ceaseless have been his watchings; continuous his supplies. How true his Word! Not a moment has He left his people. He has proved Himself a God all-sufficient. How much his servants must have to tell of his goodness and his power! "Not one thing hath failed!" "Let the people praise Thee, O Lord! yea, let all the people praise Thee!" George Holland.
George Yard Mission, Whitechapel, E.

The letter calling us to Thanksgiving will meet with a deep echo from the East of Scotland as well as the East of London. True, the fruits have scattered more from East Scotland all over the earth, but the few that remain praise Him in their closing days for what was the beginning of days to so many of them.
I remember so vividly when dear Mr. Radcliffe gave us all at Arndilly the first copy of The Revival, and told us to pray over it, as it was a work of faith, a paper started in full belief that a great blessing would have to be recorded all over the earth to his glory. Has it not been so?
Inchglass, Crieff. (Mrs.) H. L. Gibbon.

On hearing date of your meeting I at once eagerly turned to my engagement book, and alas! I am booked to preach twice at —— on April 11. I am sorry indeed, and yet don't know how to alter it. How strange that you should arrange for a day of thanksgiving at the same time that I have been pleading for a day of fasting and prayer. I do wish I could join you, and will try and change the date of my visit so that I may. I should like all our workers to come too. Oh, may the Lord move all the churches.—In all love, yours very sincerely, W. Cuff.

My special recollection of the prayer meeting, held on January 23, 1861, is that of the petition offered by the Hon. and Rev. Baptist Noel, that blessing on the work to which Mr. Radcliffe was then called might not be confined to the East of London, but might extend to regions far beyond. This prayer has been answered abundantly, more than any could "ask or think," not only in the many messengers of the Gospel who have received their training in the East-end and are now far away "separated unto the work whereunto God has called them," but in the many seamen who are witnessing for the Lord by land and sea even "to the uttermost parts of the earth."
Clara M. S. Lowe.

"Praise is comely." Let me at once say how cordially I agree with your suggestion, and that I thank the Lord for having laid the matter upon your heart.
Though thirty-three years have passed since I was present at that meeting on January 23, 1861, the savour of it has not left me; again and again I have had sweet and grateful remembrances of it, and I may tell you that only this week I took down the Vol. IV. of The Revival to show to my dear wife the account of the meeting in the number for Feb. 2.*
Fervent praise indeed be given to the Lord for what He has done in East London. May He deign to do greater things yet.
Assuring you that my prayer shall be that you may be guided in every particular, and that all may redound to his glory, W. J. Lewis.
54, Swanmore-road, Rude, I. of W.

* A report of the meeting was given in our last week's issue.—Ed.

I heartily endorse the proposal on every ground. I hope you may be able to carry it out, not merely because it is our bounden duty to unite in thanking God for what He has accomplished through various instrumentalities in the East of London of late years, but also because such a meeting would draw together the workers, who are often now too busy to meet, and from lack of such opportunities become insensibly alienated in thought and heart, which alienation in its turn reacts unfavourably upon themselves and the work committed to them. I will be glad to co-operate in any way that is in my power in the attainment of such a result.
Thos. J. Barnardo.

Most heartily do I sympathise with the intended Thanksgiving Meeting on April 11. Instrumentally, I owe my conversion in 1865 to a special effort which I believe sprang out of the great time of awakening in 1859-61; and when we consider the immense variety of effort that has come into existence since that time, we can but say, "What hath God wrought?"
It surely becomes his people to come together in the spirit of true reverent humility, and with deep thanksgiving to pour forth their praises, beseeching our God to do yet greater things for his own glory.
C. Stuart Thorpe, Sec. The Rescue Society.
79, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

How good the Lord has been to us up to this present time. It did my soul good to read that you were contemplating a Thanksgiving Meeting. It took my mind back to the time when I stood in the front rank among the labourers. When I meet with men and women that were brought to Christ at those meetings it makes me pray, "Lord, take us back to those old times, when the power of the Holy Ghost was upon us and in us, and spoke through us, so that men and women were broken down before the Lord and had to shout out, 'Save, save, or I perish,' when the chains of sin were broken, and the cry of victory went up to heaven, for, through the blood of the Lamb, the power of men and devils was defeated." Oh for those times again! Why not? The Father is the same, the Son is the same, the Holy Ghost is the same, and the Gospel is still powerful.
Fallibroome, Macclesfield. Richard Weaver.

The praisers go first and then the battle—may great glory issue to God. Be strong. Fear not. "The Lord in the midst of thee is mighty. He will rejoice" at the voices of his people meeting in praise for all the blessings that have been poured out upon this poor drunken East of London. Even to be surrounded by Mr. Radcliffe, R. Weaver, Miss Lowe, Hy. Toye, G. Holland, &c., as workers in the sixties will be a sight and song of praise. Then those who were called out in the seventies would prove a goodly band. Then those in the eighties, young and strong, would be cheered by the advance army of aged praisers. Then another little company, the strangers in our midst, as Pastor Yen, Amanda Smith. Bugle sounds from such as Archibald Brown, the Drs. Guinness, Dr. Barnardo, Dr. Stephenson, &c. I would suggest that much prayer be asked for the occasion all over the land, trying who shall do honour to our God and loving Father for thirty-three years of his goodness and mercy to the land and people. Think of children alone—20,000 taken away to a land of plenty, snatched from these ghastly gin-palaces.
March 3, 1894. A. Macpherson.

We are often lacking in praise. It is "Give, give," but how little we return to the Giver!
Such a time would recall what God has wrought.
This present-day rush is not as it used to be. Then we saw ripe fruit, not this forced sort, for there was prayer of an earnest kind. Long hours of waiting upon God. The hearts of the people were prepared, and moved before we came to the meeting. I have seen, what is now termed "after-meetings," without an address at all, and I have known that "after-meeting" last till after midnight. Men and women refusing to leave till the great question of the soul was settled. I am heavy and sad, when I think of how we have fallen. How that after the address we have to plead with the people to remain to our after-meeting. Then we had to plead with them to go home. Shall we not return to the better way and make room for the blessed Spirit to work? God help us. For surely we have found out we work in vain when He is not there.
I often think the reason for the numbers of backsliders we find everywhere, is that we have forced a decision where there has been no conviction.
Liverpool Town Mission. J. Barnabas Bain.

I am so pleased to read your proposal for a meeting or meetings to "give thanks." Being an invalid, and in my eightieth year if spared till the 14th, I can scarcely hope to be often present at such meetings, but I shall be obliged if you will see that I am informed of any arrangements made, and if it is desired to obtain guarantee of funds to cover expenses, I should like to help in that at all events. "Whoso offereth praise glorifieth Me." What an easy enjoyable way of glorifying God! And what else so well worth living for?...It will give me exceeding great pleasure to be co-operating in this work, as you may suppose when I tell you (what Mr. Radcliffe probably remembers) that when he started on his evangelistic work forty years ago, more or less, from Liverpool, he took Reading Races on his way, where he was roughly handled, and I had the privilege of standing by and rescuing him from the mob, drew him into my house (then in the market place), and in the morning took him to a doctor, an eminent Christian, who gave him useful advice, he not being a strong man.

Martin Hope Sutton.

Most heartily do I go with you, for notwithstanding increasing defection and apostasy everywhere abroad in Christendom, we have abundant cause to praise God, for the gracious work of the Holy Spirit during the past thirty-five years or more, for which we should do well to come together to praise Him, who is prepared to do still greater things for his people, were they only prepared to respond to his call, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . . . and prove we now herewith," etc., etc.

I am not sure whether I was present at that meeting in Sussex Hall, though I came up in that year, and the one previous, from York chiefly for the purpose of attending special meetings by day and night, including the memorable all-night prayer meeting in the East-end, though I well remember we had previously held several most blessed all-day united prayer meetings in the city of Exeter in the years 1859-60, which were begotten by the tidings of the Revival then proceeding in Ireland, which days in Exeter will never be forgotten by the many who attended them. C. Russell Hurditch.

P.S.—I have sometimes thought what refreshing reading much that was contained in the first vols. of The Revival would prove to many. I devoured it in those early days of my Christian life and service for the Master.

It is a regret to me that I cannot join you in the meeting which you are summoning on April 11. I have for long been engaged for Leeds on that day. I wish you much success in the arrangements and control, and should like, if you name any who regret their enforced absence, to be included. I do hope that it may be the beginning of a great movement throughout the kingdom. F. B. Meyer.

In the East of London it is meet that the voice of praise should be heard, for there some of the Gospel's greatest victories have been won in the very teeth of the foe. To God be all the glory.

I warmly sympathise with your purpose. In praising our God we shall find a new call for a larger consecration to the terrible needs which still mark out that district as a continent of vice and suffering. I question whether anything in the history of the world can exceed the misery of its inner experiences of wantonness, immorality, profligacy, and crime. Of a truth, the Lord's garrison there are fighting for Him where Satan has his seat.

We are about to celebrate, to the glory of our Lord the jubilee of our beloved General, and, in view of the birth of the Salvation Army in Whitechapel, it will afford me real pleasure to arrange for some of our East End people to join with you on April 11, that we may rejoice in God and glorify Him together.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Dear Sir,—The "Expository Notes" in your paper on the Holy Spirit and his work have been most refreshing and edifying. It has shown clearly that the Spirit of God has been given to be for ever with us until the Lord comes, to convict, convert, seal, sanctify, endue with power, and all necessary work in the Christian, that he should be holy and without blemish; and He is dwelling in all of God's children.

It says of Him in Haggai ii. 5: "According to the Word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my Spirit remaineth among you, fear ye not," so in like manner He is now in the Church and in every saint, although having been much grieved so as to be but little seen by his working, but still He remains ever with his Church and in his people, as with Israel in all their waywardness and disobedience, but obedience; to his Word is the means to have Him more known and enjoyed by his people.

It appears to me there is one weighty point that neither "R. C. M.," nor any of the correspondents, has touched, namely, the prayers of the Apostle Paul in Eph. i. and iii. The Apostle addresses them as saints accepted in the Beloved, and blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ, and having been sealed with the Holy Spirit, whom they had received as a pledge of their inheritance until the redemption of their purchased possession. But the Apostle prays for them after he had heard of their faith in the Lord Jesus, that they may have the Spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, the eyes of their understanding being enlightened that they may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of his power to usward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power. All this they were ignorant of, although it was all in their possession in Christ. They were blind to it, and Paul prays God that their eyes should be opened to see their inheritance in Christ. And is not this the condition of almost all Christians in our days? and is not this the lack of power in and with them, for they are ignorant of the power given to them in Christ.

Again the Apostle prays (iii.) that they might be strengthened with might by the Spirit in the inner man, that Christ may dwell in their hearts by faith, that they, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height, and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that they might be filled with all the fulness of God. This shows that the great majority of Christians then were, as now, living in a low condition of soul. When turning among Christians (not merely professors) how very few we meet who have had their eyes opened, and have the Spirit of wisdom and understanding to know that which is given to them in Christ, and how very few who have been strengthened with might by the Spirit in the inner man, and have Christ practically and experimentally dwelling in their hearts by faith! And oh, how few of God's dear children are rooted and grounded in love, and are filled with the fulness of God! Most of God's people are ignorant of its meaning.

The Apostle closes his prayer by saying, "Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us."

Now that we have in our hands the whole of the Scriptures which they at the beginning of the Apostolic times did not have, and we have the Spirit of God as they had, we now should enjoy the blessings fully which are given unto all of God's redeemed people.

It has appeared to me that some Christians have seen this truth and had their eyes opened to see what they had been blessed with in Christ, and went in simple faith to God in the name of the Lord Jesus, and got strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man, and entered into the fulness of God, and from henceforth they became different to the ordinary Christian in their experience and even in their lives, for they are not ruffled as others are, and do not stumble as the majority of Christians, for Christ is dwelling in their hearts by faith, and they are rooted and grounded in love.

The same truth is seen in John xiv. 21-23, where the Lord says, "I will love him and will manifest Myself to him, and we will come to him and make our abode with him." This is to him, whoever he may be, that keepeth his commandments.

Sir, trusting that the attention that you have called unto this most important doctrine will be a means to stir up many to search more of the Scriptures and obey them, so as to enjoy the blessing revealed in them,—Yours truly,

Llanelly. David E. Jones.

OUR LORD'S RETURN.

My dear Editor,—I feel sure it is not intended by the writer of the "Letter to a Friend" (in his note appended to my former letter) to convey the impression that the promoters of certain conventions are men who merely hold the doctrine of the LORD'S Second Coming, but have not their "hope set on Him." Some of his sentences may be so construed, and cannot therefore be passed over in silence. I am not aware to what conventions he alludes when he refers to some which "dwell upon the details more than upon the grand outline truths." It has not been my ill-fortune to be present or to take part in conferences of that character.

As I drew up the circular letter addressed to convenors of Christian Conferences in the United Kingdom, published in January, 1893, and obtained all the signatures thereto from men of both the historical and futurist schools, I may be allowed to interpret the meaning of what I called "the value of a united testimony" on the great question under our notice. What was present to my mind and what was the desire of my heart was the summoning of a large number of conferences on the subject, whether by historicists or by futurists or by both in combination, so that public attention might be loudly called to a consideration of the Second Advent. I would call that a united testimony whether details were given or were lacking on the part of either school; and all this would be preferable to a death-like silence; but so long as there are irreconcileable differences about details between the two schools it does seem to me more to the edification of believers and warning of the careless that there should not be divided counsels. Let each school summon as many conventions as it can furnish forthwith competent speakers, and all will at least sound a note of alarm. Your friend's argument, carried to its logical conclusion, would silence Calvinists and Arminians alike and close their pulpits, lest they should present the Gospel with differing estimates of the extent of the atonement. No! Let both alike proclaim the first coming with its Gospel for sinners, and let historicists and futurists alike utter forth the imminence of the personal and premillennial Second Coming, the Gospel for the Saints.

Yours sincerely,

March 17. J. E. Mathieson,

LIVERPOOL STRANGERS' REST.

The seventeenth anniversary meetings of the Liverpool Strangers' Rest were held on Friday, Rev. Dr. Lundie presiding over a numerous audience. The annual report, submitted by Mr. T. A. Leigh, showed the excellent work carried on at the Rest in attending to the spiritual and social wants of emigrants and foreign and British sailors passing through Liverpool. The reading-room affords opportunity for social intercourse, whilst Christian literature, magazines, and illustrated papers are provided, as well as writing materials, which are supplied gratis to the visitors, who are thus encouraged to write home to their friends. The Gospel is constantly set before the visitors, and every effort made to win them to Christ. The report gives several interesting incidents evidencing the good work done, and shows that meetings have been held for Scandinavians, Frenchmen, Spaniards, and Englishmen, special attention also being devoted to Jewish emigrants passing through the port. Altogether during the year 1176 meetings were held, being eleven in excess of last year's number. Reference was made to the dilapidated condition of the premises, and the funds being raised towards the contemplated repairs and alterations. The balance sheet shows a decreased deficiency, the receipts being £391 0s. 8d., and the payments, including a balance of £94 3s. 1d. from last year, £402 3s. 2d., leaving a deficiency for the year of only £11 2s. 6d.

Mr. C. J. Proctor, in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, said that they were most encouraging. He spoke of the utility of having a place such as this for strangers to resort to, remarking on the tendency of strangers in a strange city to resort to bad places if there were no such places as this to go to. Rev. George Lord seconded the motion, and in the course of his remarks said that he felt sure that the Christian ministers of Liverpool had only to know of this work to appreciate it and help it forward. Rev. Dr. Lundie then addressed the meeting, very warmly supporting the claims of the Strangers' Rest, and dealing with the peculiar difficulties and temptations of sailors.

Rev. J. H. M. Barrow, of St. Thomas' Church, Park-lane, conducted a well-attended prayer meeting at the Rest in the evening.

MR. WILLIAM LIVESEY has forwarded a letter to the Home Secretary, urging an increased duty on licences, suggesting that a tax be placed upon the 20,000 clubs which at the present time differ little from ordinary liquor-shops.

THE Y.M.C.A.

THE CROYDON ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting at Croydon took place at the Public Hall on Tuesday week. At the afternoon meeting the chair was taken by Mr. Frederick Link. At the evening meeting the secretary read the annual report, which showed that the total membership (including associates) was 287, or an increase of 35, compared with last year. With regard to the new building which is about to be erected in North-end, the subscriptions and promises already received amounted to £4500, including a conditional gift of £2000 by Mr. Compton Rickett, gifts of £250 each by Mr. A. Pye-Smith, Mr. Fredk. Link, and Mr. F. John Horniman.

Mr. J. Compton Rickett, who presided, dwelt on the reasons which had compelled the erection of a new building. He went on to say that the Association did not injure the churches, but that the churches benefited therefrom. Scarcely a week elapsed between the conversion of a young man and his entrance upon the work of the conversion of others. The Y.M.C.A. did not keep its religion to itself, but spread it far and wide throughout the world, and was a missionary society without expenses, without professional assistance, and without coming upon the contributions at all. He concluded by appealing for funds to enable the new building to be opened free of debt.

Addresses by Mr. F. Link, Revs. J. B. Evans and J. Jeffray, followed.

BRIEF NOTES.

There are five associations in the Neyoor Mission District (L.M.S.), South Travancore. The motto is, "Every member is a Christian and every Christian a worker."

Mr. Lane commenced a four days' mission at the Ealing Y.M.C.A. on Sunday (18th). Great preparations were made, and the Association received the hearty co-operation of the local Y.W.C.A.

At Ballymena there is a vigorous Y.M.C.A., under the presidency of Mr. Wm. Young, J.P., Fenaghy. They have a good gymnasium, and do a fine Gospel work amongst the young men of the town.

The National Executive of the Young Men's Christian Associations has decided to unite with the Sunday School Union and similar organisations in promoting a bill in Parliament to lessen the facilities for gambling which now exist.

The New York State Convention has been held at Jamestown, and Dr. Munhall and Rev. R. A. Torrey were able to take profitable part. The report showed 149 Associations in the State, with a membership of 40,000. Good work is going on, and during the past year over a thousand conversions have been recorded.

The Belfast Y.M.C.A. Sabbath morning Bible-class for young men is the largest in the country. There is a roll of 480, and the attendance at 10 a.m. is 300 young men. The general secretary (Mr. Black) is the teacher, and for some eighteen months past has been giving a series of addresses on "Men we meet in the Bible."

The Belper Association, just formed, has met with opposition from Churchmen in the town. At the inaugural meeting, Mr. H. Strutt, the first president, stated that the Archbishop of Canterbury was president of the Croydon branch, and if his Grace did not consider the Association a source of danger to the Church no one in Belper need do so.

The last of a series of Bible Talks to Men, generally on the International Lessons, by Rev. F. B. Meyer, took place on Saturday afternoon (17th) at Aldersgate-street. This series has been more remarkable than any previously given, the attendance on successive Saturday afternoons having averaged 350. Mr. Meyer will resume the meetings shortly after Easter.

There are many old members and friends of the Young Men's Christian Association scattered throughout this country, the colonies, and abroad, who will be glad to know that, in connection with the celebration of the forthcoming jubilee in June next, a fund is being raised to present on behalf of the members and associates to Mr. George Williams a token of affection in the shape of a marble bust by Mr. Hamo Thornycroft, R.A. Lord Kinnaird is the treasurer, and should be addressed at the Jubilee Council Office, Exeter Hall.

The first party for this year of young men going to learn farming in the Canadian North-West, with the consent of their friends, sailed on the 16th inst. from Liverpool. They met the day before at the Manchester Y.M.C.A. to receive their letters of introduction, advice, etc., from Mr. Newett, and to be introduced to each other. They were from Glasgow, Salisbury, Cambridge, Sheffield, Croydon, Manchester, etc., numbering twenty-one, and Mr. Howard Russell, who has had some experience of farming in this country, was appointed leader. Some of them go to join brothers who are now working their own land after getting the necessary training from farmers here.

The French Y.M.C.A. (London branch) assembled in strong numbers last Friday at Exeter Hall, to hear M. Corneloup, late of the Roman priesthood, recount the story of his secession from Papal tyranny. The speaker is one of the French priests who, having revolted, was fortunate enough to be assisted by the mission formed for that purpose. Professor Bertrand, the director of the mission to French priests, said that numbers were coming to them for assistance, and that the only obstacle to a widespread revolt among the clergy of France was the utter helplessness of the dissentients to earn a livelihood for a while after leaving the R.C. Church. He proposed to use these converts as apostles for a Reformation in France. After a few words from Rev. A. L. Roehrich, of the Swiss Church, and the chairman, Mr. J. J. Stavridi, the meeting concluded with a collection on behalf of the mission.

Association Notes, published by the New York Y.M.C.A., contains interesting news of the work in Tokyo, Japan. The Association expects to occupy in April a new building. The report of last year's work in Tokyo gives encouraging details, and many incidents showing the value of the boarding-house. One case was particularly interesting. His parents were Christians. He had grown up a member of a strong Christian community. He then went to the Doshisha, where he united with the church. After graduation he came to Tokyo to study law. His faith in Christ soon became weak, and yet he was troubled by his conscience, or, as he expressed it, his "desire to lead a better life." Accordingly he took up the study of Buddhism, and following the directions of a certain sect, beat his body daily in the hope of attaining righteousness and peace. While in this state of mind he came to our boarding-house, and at prayers the reading was in Joshua and Psalms, from which he learned that he must approach God in the "child-like way" of the Old Testament, and not through philosophy. He is now restored and rejoicing in Christ.

THE Y.W.C.A.

ONLY ONE PENNY.

About a year ago a number of bright pennies, fresh from the Mint, were taken by members and friends of the Y.W.C.A. to be traded with in aid of the London funds. As the result, £223 had been received some weeks ago. This represents a great deal of patient labour and self-denying perseverance in using the odd minutes of busy days. Many who were afraid at first to undertake a penny have found that after all they have been able to do much more than they expected. One member from Morley Halls sends in £5, four of which were gained by trading with her penny in various ways, such as making crochet edging, knitting stockings, and making jam. Another worker, "a factory girl," sends 18s., earned by making artificial flowers, and in another case 14s. was made from potted bloater.

A very pleasant social evening was spent at Morley Halls on Tuesday week by those who had taken part in the penny scheme. Miss A. R. Habershon gave a short report of the scheme described above. The names of the first twenty-one who have gained the highest amounts by trading with 1d. are given in Go Forward and Our Own Gazette, the Association magazines for March.

Mrs. Frank Bevan gave a few hints of new ways of trading with the penny. Some might say that they could do so little, but it was like the little stream on the mountain forming the broad river, and she wanted the great river of usefulness not to diminish. There was no commendation so great as that given to the poor woman who broke the alabaster box of ointment over the Saviour's head—"She hath done what she could."

BRIEF NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Fulham branch was held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening. Revs. Marcus Rainsford, jun., and Monro Gibson, D.D., and Mr. George Clarke gave sympathetic addresses.

In his report for last year, Rev. I. H. Hacker, of the Neyoor Mission, South Travancore (L.M.S.), says that one of the native teachers has established an association, which is being carried on without any European assistance. "They hold their own prayer meetings, and I have already seen the good influence of the movement."

Miss Bazett, of Ealing, has concluded a successful mission in the rooms of the St. Paul's, Upper Norwood, branch. Every meeting was well attended; several souls were won for Christ, and those already belonging to Him were refreshed and strengthened in spiritual life. During the winter ambulance classes (first aid) have been held in the rooms, and it is encouraging to know that every candidate has passed the examination.—Edith Elkington, Hon. Sec.

Since last September a Y.W.C.A. branch has been started at Portland, co. Tipperary. Though quite in the country, the membership already numbers 27. A weekly Bible-class is held, also prayer meeting and working party. At present the members meet in the school-house, but before long hope to have an institute for Bible and other classes. £100 are needed to put the Institute into working order. The Sec., Miss G. M. Hurrell, is now in England raising funds.

OXFORD NOTES.

[From our own Correspondent.]

The annual sermons in aid of the Baptist Missionary Society were preached last week at New-road Chapel, and were followed by the annual meeting, which was addressed by the Rev. J. J. Fuller, a native missionary from Western Africa. New-road Chapel is privileged to have two of the pastor's sons working in the foreign field.

By the death of Mrs. Combe, a well-known Oxford lady, various High Church local and general branches of work become greatly benefited, but it is pleasing to note a legacy of £1500 for the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Dr. John Brown, of Bedford, delivered a lecture at the George-street Congregational Church last week, on "John Bunyan," a subject on which he is recognised as the greatest authority. The pastor of the church, Rev. A. R. Ezard, is doing admirable work there under specially difficult circumstances.

The cause of the McCall Mission in France was pleaded at Wycliffe Hall, last Tuesday, by Colonel Finch-White, secretary. The deficiency of last year, due doubtless to the death of the noble founder, is very serious, and calls for much practical sympathy from English Christians.

In connection with the jubilee of the Primitive Methodist Missionary Society, a special service and meeting were held on Tuesday at Pembroke-street Chapel. The Rev. J. Travis preached, and, with other speakers, addressed the meeting. The Oxford circuit is a small and poor one, but is, nevertheless, contributing £113 to the special fund.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

In Ossett the C.E. Society has an average attendance of one hundred at the weekly prayer-meeting, held on Sundays from five to six o'clock.

The New South Wales C.E. Union has arranged that the first whole week in May in each year shall be "Christian Endeavour Thanksgiving Week."

A conference of Endeavourers and Sunday-school workers was lately held at Tottenham-court-road Chapel, attended by representatives of forty societies and six schools.

A branch of the Christian Endeavour Society has been established under hopeful auspices in Hall's-road Methodist Church, Belfast, of which Rev. R. Cole is the pastor.

The Brown-street Society, Salisbury, celebrated its first anniversary by holding a series of special services, conducted by Revs. W. Evans, B. J. Gibbon, and the pastor, Rev. G. Short.

Rev. John Fleming presided on Saturday week over two large meetings of Endeavourers at Brunswick Chapel, Great Dover-street, S.E., when representatives were present from about thirty societies.

Since May, 1888, a C.E. society in Rangoon has held regular sessions every Monday evening, and carried on work among the young people. The hand of the Lord has guided it, and much good has been accomplished.

THE CONGO BALOLO MISSION had a successful meeting in the Scotch Church, Cannes, when Mr. Whytock, one of the missionaries, gave an interesting account of his pioneering labours. This was followed up by a drawing-room meeting held at Mr. and Mrs. Cheyne Brady's, Chalet des Syrphes, at which Mr. Whytock exhibited many curios from Africa, and narrated his perilous visit to a neighbouring tribe of cannibals, who had never seen a white man before. In the adjacent districts there are ten millions who have not yet heard that there is a Gospel.

ALL THAT AFRICA NEEDS from us is leadership—holy, skilful, self-sacrificing men and women, the best that we can furnish; and all that these leaders need is assistance to develop the indigenous resources of the productive soil, and the inherent capabilities of the black man. Teaching industries develops self-support, which we reach absolutely in from five to eight years, according to the location. These methods are not experiments, but are demonstrated facts in our work in Africa; and we are pleased to observe that other societies in Africa are adopting our methods, though in a modified form.—Bishop Taylor.

IRISH NOTES.

The Presbyterian Orphan Society of Ireland has now 2473 children under its care.

The Society for Home Mission Work amongst the Blind in Belfast is doing good. Last year the missionary, Miss Isles, paid 2000 visits.

A new iron hall to seat about 3000 persons is being built in Belfast for the City Mission. The total cost including site will be about £10,000.

Mrs. M. E. Black, late of Edgehill, Belfast, has bequeathed £1000 to the Sustentation Fund of the Irish Presbyterian Church; £1000 to the Presbyterian Orphan Society; and £1000 to the Belfast Royal Hospital.

Last Sunday afternoon when the street preachers appeared in the streets of Cork and opened their service, they were received with great hostility and covered with mud by the crowd mainly consisting of youths. As each evangelist commenced to speak he was pelted with mud, while others of the party were also molested. There were no policemen present, and after a continuous and determined shower of mud for about fifteen minutes the preachers had to seek refuge.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

During 1893 about 6900 men passed through the hands of the Glasgow Aid Society for Discharged Prisoners.

An influential meeting has been held in Glasgow to promote legislation with a view to the compulsory confinement of habitual drunkards in retreats. Professor Gardner, of the University, spoke strongly in favour of the proposed legislation, and declared that Scotland was ripe for a drastic measure.

Dr. Alexander Whyte's Young Men's Bible Class meeting at Free St. George's, Edinburgh, have presented their teacher with an illuminated address. Dr. Whyte said he had been always a student in his own class, and he would hear with thankfulness of his students becoming pillars in the Church and men of honour and usefulness in the world.

The Edinburgh Sabbath Morning Fellowship Union has been very successful in dealing with non-church-going young men and women. For the past three months meetings adapted to that class of people have been held in the densely-populated district of Stockbridge, and on each occasion audiences of the very class they seek to attract have filled the Albion Hall to the number of about six or seven hundred.

The "Amateur Vagrant" writes in The Daily Mail a harrowing account of the ravages of the drink in the district in central Glasgow in which the magistrates propose to introduce ten o'clock instead of eleven o'clock closing. He says: "If drunkenness is to be arrested, morality to be fostered, if our young people are to be safe-guarded, and the back of our drinking customs broken, if virtue is to get a chance and a fair field, the shutters of the publican must be put up."

Mr. William Quarrier, of the Orphan Homes of Scotland, intends to send a boys' party, numbering 140, to Canada on March 29, and the girls' band, numbering about the same, in May. Towards the outfits and passages of these he has received £1000, leaving £400 still required for the boys this month and £1400 for the girls—in all, £1800 needed before the end of May. In the beginning of November there were 1015 children in the Homes, and since then 182 needy orphans and fatherless ones have been taken in, which, with about eighty workers, makes a family of over 1200 at present. Every house finished is more than full, and Mr. Quarrier is anxious to have more accommodation by which he will be able to meet the needs of the little ones who are crying for help from the east, west, north, and south of Scotland.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a fortnight's mission at Thurso, N.B., by Mr. J. W. Moodie, commencing on Sabbath, March 25.—For a fourteen days' mission being held in Conference Hall, Mayfield, March 12 to 26.

NATIONAL REFUGES FOR HOMELESS AND DESTITUTE CHILDREN.—In connection with the jubilee of this institution it has been decided to hold a two days' bazaar in Shaftesbury House, 164, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.C., on Wednesday and Thursday, June 13 and 14, and subscribers and friends are earnestly asked to render all the help they can in making the movement a great financial success. The Earl and Countess of Jersey have consented to open the bazaar on the first day. Those who are able and willing to help should make shawls, sets of baby clothing, fine underclothing for ladies and children, shirts for boys and men, suits for little boys, aprons and pinafores for girls, and all manner of useful and fancy articles.

The Book World.

A ONE-VOLUME COMMENTARY.

It is a real pleasure to call attention to the new and enlarged edition of The Annotated Paragraph Bible, issued by the Religious Tract Society (28s. upwards, according to binding). The plan of the work is much like that followed in the edition published a generation ago, but every page bears evidence of conscientious labour in order to an improved result. The prefaces and introductions to the several books are remarkably succinct; the notes are terse and clear, and the references, and alternative readings and renderings, have been selected with judgment and care. The paragraph arrangement is an essential feature, and the exhibition of the poetical books and prophecies in metrical form is another equally important; this has been effected in a way which greatly assists in the understanding of the Divine Word. In the notes the aim has been not to discuss the many subjects raised, but rather to give the results of thought and investigation; and it is gratifying to observe, in view of modern questionings, that the chief conclusions upheld in the former edition, with regard to the age, the character, and the Divine authority of the several books of Scripture, are still maintained. The maps are good, the chronological tables complete, and the indexes very full. Hence it will be obvious that this noble volume is suitable for the fullest and freest use in the Christian home; and may be safely selected by such as desire to present a beautifully-printed, self-interpreting Bible to their friends.

PROPHETICAL EXPOSITION.

Studies in Eschatology: The Thousand Years in Both Testaments. By Rev. Nathaniel West, D.D. (2 dols. Fleming H. Revell, Chicago and New York.) This is a stout volume of over five hundred pages, expository and controversial, by a man of literary culture and spiritual insight. It was written to set prophecy in its true light as against the watering-down expositions of rationalists. First there is a general outline of prophecy in its relation to the ages and ends—dispensations and crises in God's dealings with men—in the development of the Kingdom of God on earth, from the promise in Eden to the consummation in glory. Then come a series of discussions upon symbolical numbers, the unfolding of prophecy and its interpretation regarding Israel, the Nations, the Church, and the Kingdom, as seen in the prophetic writings and utterances of Isaiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Christ, and John. This section is where the author's strength as an interpreter is shown. He seems as familiar with the theological literature of Germany as he is with that of English-speaking countries, and nothing of importance, in exegesis or theory, whether legitimate or perverse, seems to have escaped him. Daniel's prophecy of the Seventy Weeks is the subject of careful examination, and striking diagrams set forth the views elaborated. This, it is needless to say, is a pivotal theme, and one in which students of prophecy will be specially interested. Though holding very definite opinions, the author is not narrow-minded, for he finds truth in Preterism, Presentism, and Futurism. He quotes a host of expositors in support of the proposition that the age of blessedness will be introduced by the personal return of Christ, and also to show that the first resurrection must be literal and real, and is so designated because there will be a second resurrection after the millennium. We should not suppose that Dr. West expects everyone to follow him in all his positions, but he has written with much clearness and to excellent purpose; and he may be assured that his book will be read to real profit by all who are seriously bent upon ascertaining the content and trend, as well as the practical lessons, of the prophetic Scriptures.

The Christ has Come is the title of a volume in which E. Hampden-Cook, M.A., endeavours to prove that the Second Advent is an event of the past. (Simpkin, Marshall, & Co.)

Twenty-eight Years a Slave. This striking story of Rev. Thomas L. Johnson, returned missionary from Africa, is now in its sixth edition. (1s. From the Author, 83, Royal-road, Kennington Park, S.E.)

Herbert Fry's Guide to London Charities. (Chatto & Windus. 1s. 6d.) This well-known guide has won recognition as the best of its kind. So far as London is concerned its information is complete and intelligible.

The Missions of the World.—The first issue of this new monthly magazine, edited by Rev. Gavin Carlyle, is replete with readable and instructive articles. There are several illustrations. Many good things are promised for future numbers, and we trust there will be many readers. (4d. monthly. Thomas Hibberd, 128, Edgware-road, W.)

Burdett's Hospitals and Charities Annual. (The Scientific Press. 5s.) During the five years this handbook has appeared it has very decidedly gained in value and comprehensiveness. It is now a singularly complete Year Book of Philanthropy, affording a review of the position, requirements, and cost of management of charities, a record of hospital work for the year, with a guide to British, American, and Colonial hospitals, asylums, and medical schools; as well as religious and benevolent, nursing and convalescent institutions of all kinds.

Messrs. Isaac Pitman and Sons announce the early publication of a new handbook, entitled "Commercial Terms, Phrases, and Abbreviations," by Mr. W. G. Cordingley.

Messrs. Penman & Co., 33, Furnival-street, E.C., have issued a new series of tinted cards, called the York. They are folded, and bear Scripture texts tastefully printed in gold (1s. per 100 assorted).

A Transformed Life. By J. M. Hamil. (Manchester W.C.T.A. 1d.) This story of the glad deliverance of a poor inebriate from her cruel bondage will stir many hearts. The little book might well be placed in the hands of those groaning under a like slavery.

Good Churchmanship: In What does it Consist? By Major Seton Churchill. Messrs. Nisbet have published in pamphlet form (3d.) this very sensible paper, which was recently contributed to The Churchman. What churchmanship should be is set forth, as well as what it should not be. The positive side of the case is loyal to Scripture and agreeable to Christian charity.

THE MINISTRY OF TRACTS.

A lady, who has learned how wonderfully God is pleased to use tracts distributed in a prayerful spirit, wishes that the value of this form of service were more generally recognised. The following incident will, our correspondent thinks, help to stir others:—Some time ago I went with a lady down to the harbour amongst the sailors and fishermen. The first man we offered attrac to, said that his hands were too black with tar for him to take it, adding, "I am glad you are come on that orrand for the Master down here." He was a Christian from a mission, or Bethel boat lying in harbour.

We passed on, and offered a leaflet to a stout-built man. "Yes," he said, "one of those leaflets has been a message of peace to my soul, this morning." He told us the enemy had assaulted him and made him dissatisfied about his pay, which was not so large as that of some of his mates. His duty took him down the "Royal Harbour," to the Capstan, near which, sheltered by the stone rock, lay some leaflets. He did not look at them, or take one; the enemy was busy trying to vex him; but after retracing his steps the spirit of God prompted him to go and look at the leaflets. He did so, and the first he read was exactly the message his harassed soul needed. There, in large letters were the words, "God loves you;" and, looking up, he was enabled with this to "Resist the Devil" and bid him leave him alone with God in whom he trusted. He invited us into his watch house, asking us to leave some papers on the table for sailors, who came to and fro.

THE PROTESTANT ALLIANCE.

The annual report of the Shepherd's Bush and Hammersmith branch of the Protestant Alliance calls attention to the increase in population and the active extension of Romanism and Ritualism in the district. Earnest work is being done to neutralise these evils and open the eyes of the people to their dangerous issues. This report was read at the recent annual meeting by Pastor F. B. Monti, and may be had of the secretary, Miss Newcombe, 9, Shepherd's Bush-road, W.

Rev. C. Stirling, who presided at the meeting, deplored the present state of things in the Church of England, also the apathy of Nonconformists in not recognising the danger of the drift towards Romanism. Rome's political aim is the subjugation of England.

Rev. E. C. Britton dwelt with much emphasis on the objects of the Alliance, in its endeavours to stem the advancing tide of Romanism and Ritualism, and Mr. B. Nicholson denounced in very energetic terms the practices of the Romish Church, especially with regard to Confession and Absolution by the priests; practices which were being encouraged and adopted by the Ritualists.

Mr. A. H. Guinness said that the aim of the Protestant Alliance was the maintenance and defence against Romanism of the scriptural doctrines of the Reformation. Romanism was encroaching in the Church of England by Ritualism—for Ritualism and Romanism were the same thing and threatened the same danger to them all. Rome never changes; Semper eadem was her motto, and her aim was power—power to place all neck and heel under her priesthood. The speaker entered into a strong condemnation of the mass and the confessional—of ritualistic views of baptism and the sacraments.

Amongst the other speakers were Messrs. C. H. Collette and Oscar Owers.

Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portrait and sketch of the late Rev. Dr. Douglas, of Montreal.

We earnestly commend to those who have the making of our prison regulations the appeal by Mr. Charles Cook (p. 17) for more latitude in the matter of direct Gospel influence upon the inmates of our gaols. That when their term is expired few leave better, and that many leave worse, than when they entered, are acknowledged facts. When will our officials realise, what has been proved hundreds of times in the American and other prisons, that the Gospel of Christ is a far more powerful factor in regenerating men than all the hard labour and solitary confinement without it? It is time an entrée were permitted for simple evangelistic endeavour.

The forthcoming report of the Opium Commission will, of course, be based on the evidence submitted to it. Judging from much of that evidence, we fear little that is really practicable can be expected as the outcome of the Commission. However that may be, the morally indefensible character of the traffic will remain the same. Evidence continually accumulates as to the social and individual havoc wrought by the drug in China; a striking testimony on this point from a missionary in China appears in our present issue. We would direct attention to a strong utterance on the subject by our friend, Mr. B. Broomhall, in The Friend of last week. His weighty words ought to stir every Christian heart to prayer and determination.

The eyes of the world have lately been much directed to old men. All parties have vied in honouring Mr. Gladstone on his retirement from the Premiership of the Empire. Thousands have been paying respect to General Neal Dow. All the world has done homage to Louis Kossuth. They each and all should impress young men with the value of consecration to a great idea; let it be the greatest of all to do the will of God in the sphere in which they find themselves. Each of these old men achieved work which at one time seemed impossible. We know nothing about the impossible but this: if a thing is wicked and wrong, it is possible to remove it, even if a whole nation has to be aroused to do it; if a thing is right, one man may do it even if all the world be against him.

The public-house is being gradually deposed from its ancient position of respectability; in most cases it is to be feared it had fallen from the position by its own misdeeds. Yet it has continued to be the centre of much of our national life. Mirth and sadness have alike gravitated to it, all social functions have been observed under its roof. The coroner held his inquest at the public; the club met at the public; the dinner was celebrated at the public; the lodge was an adjunct of the public. This association is now being shunned; it contaminates. The greatest sign of the change is visible in the latest legislation, the Parochial Councils Act—and in the action of the London County Council, which has reduced the number of inquests in public-houses to 700, out of about 8000 held every year. Where a suitable coroner's court and mortuary are not provided, efforts are made to utilise other public buildings. All this indicates that temperance work is producing a radical change of feeling, which must result in the discrediting of the drink traffic.

How true it always is that one wrong step involves another. Our policy of allowing the drink traffic to flourish among us hampers trade, robs us of an immense amount of money, destroys tens of thousands of our people every year, and then, to compensate ourselves, compels us to look to foreign fields. So Lord Roberts informed the people of Newcastle-on-Tyne—

> If the prosperity of the United Kingdom was to be maintained, she must have fresh outlets for her surplus population and fresh markets for her private industries. And to do these she must be strong enough to hold her own in the rivalry of nations, which was becoming more aggressive and more keen every day. Therefore, whatever differences we might have in domestic affairs, we should all work together to uphold a firm and consistent policy in our dealings with European Powers and a conciliatory and comprehensive spirit in our dealings with our Colonies.

Our plan would differ from his in this respect, that by making England a sober nation the whole problem would be changed. Our home industries would immediately be revived and extended, and, what would be better still, our people would be a defence by their better character. When shall we get it into men's minds that righteousness is better than cannon and forts?

The recent troubles in Sicily are causing a flood of light to be thrown upon the life of the people in that island. The sulphur mines, situated in the inland and mountainous districts, employ some 21,000 workers underground; the sulphuric gases make them more unhealthy than coal mines. They are the absolute property of the landlord on whose land they are found; the contractor who leases the mine pays over 50 per cent. of the profits to the landlord, and keeps his workmen on starvation wages. A large proportion of the boys who carry the mineral along the mine, and up the steep incline to the surface, are under fifteen years of age, many only ten or eight, and are little better than slaves. Even little girls are employed in this way. These children are literally sold by their parents, and have to work for fifteen or twenty years for their liberty. Madame Mario, who gives these facts in an article in the Nuova Antologia, which has been partially transferred to The Review of Reviews, describes in a touching way her sight of these little white slaves. She says:—"For myself I have never seen a more depressing spectacle, not even on the battle-field, or on the banks of the Po and Adige when the victims of an inundation are flying from death."

This degrading system is, of course, economically ruinous and nationally dangerous. The miner's average earnings per day are 1.78 francs, but as he has many enforced holidays, owing to bad trade, his yearly earnings amount barely to £16. And this miserable sum does not come to him to do with as he likes. By the truck system he is compelled to spend the greater part of it in the official tally shops, where he buys poor goods at dear prices. His food consists mainly of polenta and impure water; his home is a wretched one-roomed hovel, totally devoid of any sanitation. So injurious is this hard life to health that during four years, out of 3672 miners who presented themselves under the conscription law, only 253 were pronounced capable of military service.

Brooklyn has several "Fragment Societies," which collect second-hand clothing, pay the poor to repair it, supervise the repairing, and then sell it for very small sums to those who are unable to buy good clothing at the stores. One comfortable home also takes in its keeping one poor home; the waste of the one, aided by gifts or supplies from another source, preserves the other from want. Love also goes with the gift.

One of the greatest needs of the Church is a deeper and richer experience of the redemption which is in Christ Jesus—that is, each member of the Church needs it. The dulness and slowness in service which grieve us, are both owing to a feeble apprehension, and a too faint enjoyment of the great love wherewith He has loved us, and the precious sacrifice wherewith He has bought us. There may be a keen sense of duty, an intense interest in certain aspects of human life and need, a tender sympathy with human misery, but the motive and influence which is never exhausted, and never wearied, is the love of Christ. This gives fresh impulse, and over all the dreariness of life throws softness, hope, and beauty. A richer experience would mean larger work. "We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard." Dr. Parker has rightly said:—

> The element of personal experience and testimony is essential to true preaching. No matter who else has seen Christ, if I have not seen Him myself, I cannot preach Him. A spectacle to the eyes of my body He may never be, yet He may be the daily vision of my soul.

What is true of preaching, is true also of all forms of service.

Eighteen years ago a committee was formed in New York for the Prevention of State Regulation of Vice. Its last report, published in its excellent monthly organ, The Philanthropist, is a most satisfactory record of work done, and sets forth the high moral aims of the committee in a lucid and impressive way. The committee was providentially organised at a critical point in the history of the purity movement, and has thus far prevented all direct State sanction of vice. There is, however, an unfortunate tendency in cities to adopt, without the warrant of State law, municipal regulation. Concerning this irregular method of organising the wicked system, Dr. Cuyler has written a letter denouncing the disgraceful municipal schemes of certain Western cities.

Dr. Cuyler referred in his letter to a point which we should like to see dealt with at home, though we fear that that impersonal entity called "society" will for many a year continue to go its own evil way:—

Turning from dark deeds to brighter ones, let us congratulate ourselves on the recent example of womanly delicacy in the White House, when the President's wife requested those ladies who assisted at a grand reception to "wear high-necked dresses." Such a silent protest against indelicacy of costume should command the gratitude of her sex everywhere.

So it should, and we wish any similar protest were borne in England by those who can control the fashions of the day. It is simply astounding to hear persons objecting with unmeasured vehemence to women speaking in public in favour of good and holy causes, while they can see no harm in their appearance in public in an imperfectly dressed condition.

We complain, and very justly, of the overwhelming influence of material things; but sometimes we get an impressive sight of the action and influence of spiritual things, which are by far the mightier of the two. The presence of goodness at all in a world so sinful as this is evidence enough that goodness, constantly born from above, "comes down from the Father of lights." Even in common affairs the action of the purer force can be seen. Mr. W. D. Howells has been pointing out in The North American Review that England, the leader of the nations in the worship of wealth, shrinks from making money the absolute and only power in her life. He says:—

It is the English who have finally realised, in the forms of law or in legal usage, the wrong of paying the workman the least he will take for his work, and in their imperial contracts have stipulated that the contractor shall pay his hands the trades' union rates of wages, while the War Office has adopted the eight-hours' rate without decrease of pay.

He gives other examples, and adds: "These things are the effect of a larger humanity than is yet active among us, and are a confession that business is not the supreme English ideal." We don't know about a "larger humanity"; we hold that One, Christ Jesus, deserves the honour of all these things.

Professor J. H. Hyslop, writing in The Forum, insists strongly upon the necessity of having good teachers: i.e., teachers of good principles, good spirit, good influence, if scholars are to be trained and influenced in the best way.

The moralisation of the student must begin by the moralisation of the system of instruction, and this can be accomplished only by abandoning the mercantile and economic method for a moral one. The competition in education should not be for numbers of students, as now, not for merely great scholars as teachers, but also for those who know how to win the affections of students and to command their reverence for moral qualities.

We fancy that in England a teacher, at least the head master of a great school, would have small chance of holding his post, who was not held in high esteem among his boys, and that he can only be by deserving it. Improvement in this respect is great. It is for the churches to do their part in winning the pupils for Christ, and inspiring them with a passion which is infinitely better even than love of a worthy leader.

Mr. Search, local superintendent of schools at Pueblo, Colorado, describes in the February number of The Educational Review the plan of "individual teaching" which is carried out in the industrial public schools of Pueblo. "The pupil works as an individual, progresses as an individual, is promoted as an individual, and is graduated as an individual." There is no attempt to keep pupils together in work; but, at the same time, a pupil must thoroughly qualify before passing from one lesson or subject to another. One of the best features, to our mind, is the absence of competition, and the endeavour to make the most of each pupil according to his aptitudes. "Pupils are taught to work for the love of work, no other motive being presented. There are no marks, no mechanical rewards for doing right, no rankings or discriminating honours of any kind—and none are needed." Pupils may be seen working at as many different places in Cicero as there are pupils. "The teacher, the only helper the pupil has, passes from desk to desk, assisting, quizzing, testing, and qualifying."

The moral value of such a plan seems to us to be enormous. How it must relieve poor boys who would otherwise be pressed beyond endurance. The sorrows of scholars constitute a real tragedy. The plan of study too often followed constitutes a torture for the teacher. But on this plan Mr. Search says that there is scarcely a student who has not proved almost an ideal student. There is less discouragement. Bright boys are not held back, slow ones are not pushed beyond their pace. More work is done, and, what is better, done better and more enthusiastically. Our hearts go with anyone who can aid a boy to be his best possible self and who can shed sunshine into schools.

The inquisitive intellect of this age pries into every corner of life, and in its self-confidence attempts a natural explanation of everything. For over 200 years we have been reading Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," and its original, "Grace Abounding"; and men of all schools have seen in it a supernatural history, a history of the soul as moved by the grace of God. Now a professor tells us in The Psychological Review that Bunyan carried a decidedly heavy and morbid burden with heroic perseverance, and in the end won the mastery over it by a most instructive kind of self-discipline. Bunyan would have wondered where there was room for any grace here, and least of all for grace abounding. He knew a good deal better than this modern professor how he got rid of his burden—by the sight of the Cross; and millions more know the same secret.

STRANGERS' REST, RATCLIFF HIGHWAY.

More than 200 sailors of many nationalities responded to the invitation of the committee to take tea and spend a happy afternoon and evening on Easter Monday. Several Gospel meetings were held, both in the crowded streets and indoors. The Word was evidently with power, and not a few sailors publicly asked to be prayed for, while many heartily testified to blessing received in the "Rest." One sailor present told how he passed the door a few days ago with £20 in his pocket, but, refusing the invitation to enter, he had been robbed of it all.

It would be difficult to find any Christian work more worthy of support than this, as the good secretary (Mr. J. T. Isaac) and his excellent wife make the spiritual welfare of their guests their first care.—Yours in Christ, J. S. R.

"WHOSOEVER" and "WHATSOEVER" are two precious words often in the mouth of Christ. "Whosoever will may come"; "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do." "Whosoever" is on the outside of the gate, and lets in all who choose; "Whatsoever" is on the inside, and gives those who enter the free range of all region and treasury of grace. "Whosoever" makes salvation free; "Whatsoever" makes it full.—Selected.

Day of Thanksgiving.

The attention of all Christians is cordially invited to the announcement already made of Meetings for Praise and Thanksgiving—Praise for what God is, Thanksgiving for what He has done and is doing—to be held on Wednesday, April 11, at 11, at 3, and at 7, in the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End, E. (kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. F. N. Charrington).

All who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity; all who preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified; all who worship God in the spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and put no confidence in the flesh; all to whom these or any other Scriptures apply which describe what is generally understood as Evangelical truth, are with brotherly love and confidence invited and entreated to unite in these meetings.

As there will not be time in these large assemblies for many speakers, the conveners will be much obliged if friends who have interesting reminiscences will write them as concisely as possible, addressed to me (marked, "Thanksgiving"). This request applies equally to female workers, as it will be necessary to confine the speakers to men, few women's voices being equal to so large a hall.

The subjoined reminiscences by Miss Lowe are given as from a devoted worker of many years at the East End. The few missions mentioned are, of course, only typical of many others in the East and in all other parts of London. The Conveners will be glad of many similar contributions.

It is particularly requested that notice of these meetings may be given in places of worship, and at evangelistic and other meetings. As the evening meeting is likely to be a crowded one, it is hoped that those who can possibly do so will come in the morning and afternoon, which, if the gatherings are not so large, will have an enjoyment peculiar to themselves.

The Great Assembly Hall can be reached by train on the Underground Railway to St. Mary's station, Whitechapel, or Whitechapel station. Omnibuses from the Bank pass the door, and trams from Aldgate also pass the door. The doors will be open half-an-hour before the time of commencement of each meeting.

Friends who are staying all day can be provided with luncheon at 1s. 6d., and tea at 8d., but must send post-card before the day to Secretary, Great Assembly Hall, Mile End-road, E., of their intention to be present at these meals.

Handbills, etc., for distribution in order to make these meetings widely known, can be had on application (by letter) to myself, and the help of friends in doing this is earnestly solicited.

On behalf of the Conveners,

R. C. Morgan.

MISS LOWE'S REMINISCENCES.

It is now thirty-four years since I followed Mr. Radcliffe to the East End, and first beheld the vast region lying eastward of St. Paul's. None who visit it now for the first time can form any idea of the change that has taken place. Just before leaving England for his first evangelistic tour, Mr. Radcliffe wrote to the Dowager Lady Rowley, "Now the poor East of London. Do not let the West neglect it. The Lord be praised for what you are doing in it, but, oh, how it is neglected! It is not so much buildings that it wants as living, loving labourers."

How vast was the ocean of sin and misery then to be explored. How utterly unknown to those who had the power as well as the will to help either the bodies or souls of perishing multitudes. None were living on the spot, and none came from a distance; for the need was unthought of, and no railroads above ground or under ground were then ready to bring visitors from the north and west. No centres of usefulness then existed where Christian workers could meet for prayer and counsel.

To one who had been accustomed as I had to see every ward in a West End hospital visited and every needy case relieved, the sight most overwhelming was that of the great infirmaries and hospitals filled with distressing cases, yet uncheered by visits from any who could have it in their power to help by word or deed. My heart often sank in looking up at the long rows of windows, and I could only groan inwardly. If bankers and men of business can come daily to the City for secular pursuits, why cannot Christian women come a little further on to visit the multitudes in need?

The groaning of my heart has been answered more abundantly than I could ask or think. How little did I expect that the Bible Flower Mission, begun by Miss Macpherson's sister, beloved Mrs. Merry (now at rest), would be the means of every hospital and infirmary being cheered by the "living loving labourers," that doors hitherto closed would be opened by this all-prevailing key, and that these lovely tokens of our Heavenly Father's care would be linked with written and spoken messages of his redeeming love!

There was one spot in "this vast, stunning tide of human care and crime" that seemed to me darker than any other—so many there were living on the wages of iniquity. None but those who had known that neighbourhood in its unvisited desolation can realise the feelings with which on my return from India I found a mission house, hospital, and temperance coffee-house there, established by beloved Mildmay friends.

In one of Mr. Radcliffe's appeals for the East End, he wrote: "All the tribes of the earth are there," but through the Lord's mercy they are not now uncared for as they once were. Many from far distant lands have found under Miss Child's roof a home for eternity; and I cannot forget seeing a Swede and Venetian engaged in brotherly companionship, in sorting Christian tracts at the Strangers' Rest; and well do I remember the words of a Jew from Galicia, brought to these shores against his will, but who said he had found at the Strangers' Rest "a treasure money could not buy." Clara M. S. Lowe.

WE CAN SEE by the light of modern science, that we owe pretty nearly as much to our children before they are born as we do to them afterwards. Yes! and to our children's children.

A CHINAMAN'S TESTIMONY.—Mr. Shao, a helper in Si-chuen, said lately:—"I have been a preacher of the Truth for years; but, like everybody else, I had a beginning. I was a teacher of a boys' school, a vegetarian, a fortune-teller, a sorcerer, etc. A Christian named Wu invited me to the hall at Han-chung, and he used to come and talk to me. He led me to burn my idols. I lost faith in them as I saw one after another take his idols in a basket to the hall, and there burn them. Mr. Easton, hearing of this, spoke to me. But I was all in a mist till he led me into a clearer understanding."

A NEW MEDICAL MISSION.—Dr. Grant, of the Presbyterian Missions, has been for some time at Engchhun, a large city to the north of Chin-Chew, where it is hoped soon to have a hospital, for which an anonymous donor has given £1000. There have been the usual difficulties about a site, but Dr. Grant now writes that he has obtained a site, on which at present stand two houses. One of these houses, he thinks, may be fitted up for a temporary hospital, and in the other the doctor might for a little while reside. If no fresh difficulty has intervened, it is quite likely that the medical work has been by this time hopefully begun in this great centre.

Missionary Methods.

The continual complaint from our Missionary Societies that income falls seriously short of expenditure, is matter for deep searching of heart. The one work which the Church was commissioned to undertake and to overtake is that of the world's evangelisation, and it is not too much to say that for this work she possesses ample resources. There is abundance of gift which, if it were consecrated to God, would suffice to make the Gospel message known to every nation of the earth in a very brief period. And if the gifted men and women are forthcoming, there is enough money spent annually by Church members upon luxuries alone to send out and sustain all who are willing to go. If these are facts (and who can question them?) it is impossible to read such urgent appeals as are issued by our societies every month without humiliation. Whatever else we may be doing, it is clear we are leaving undone that which our Lord specially demands of us, and for which He has equipped his people by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit (Acts i. 8, mar.).

But are our methods the best that can be devised? Are they God's methods or our own? Would not God's way secure an interest in missionary work more widely diffused, and less dependent upon the impulsive effect of annual missionary meetings? A deep and ever deepening interest in the work on the part of our church members would make giving a delight to them, and would provide amply for all the needs of the work. The foundation principles of the Great Commission are these:—

1. The command to be obeyed is to preach the Gospel to every creature.
2. The agents for its fulfilment are the people of God, believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.
3. The power for its accomplishment is the Holy Spirit.
4. The Missionaries are the Messengers of the Churches.

In rendering obedience to this our Lord's command it is possible that the Churches may have as much to say to the Societies as the Societies to the Churches. If among the Churches there is growing up a disposition to work on Divine lines not generally adopted, is it not incumbent on the Societies to recognise this, and to encourage them to do so?

Let us take one fact as an illustration. A little more than two years ago the pastor of a church, the majority of whose members are in humble circumstances, inaugurated a Missionary Prayer Union—a simple organisation, free from embarrassing complications, and securing from all its members daily prayer and daily gifts for missionary work. Six months ago an additional feature was added: a Missionary was appointed, to be supported by their daily gifts, remembered in their daily prayers. The wisdom of this arrangement was justified by the success of the valedictory services in October last, and still more by the returns from the members at the close of last quarter, the first in which the Prayer Union could claim to have a missionary of their own. The following statement of the amounts contributed by the Union since its formation may be interesting:—

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| From January, 1892, | | to March ..... | £14 | 0 | 5 |
| „ April | „ | to June ..... | 12 | 18 | 7½ |
| „ July | „ | to September... | 17 | 6 | 0 |
| „ October | „ | to December... | 17 | 5 | 5 |
| „ January, 1893, | | to March ..... | 15 | 17 | 11 |
| „ April | „ | to June ..... | 16 | 8 | 3 |
| „ July | „ | to September... | 25 | 8 | 8 |
| „ October | „ | to December... | 34 | 8 | 9 |
| | | | £153 | 14 | 0½ |

It will be seen that for the first eighteen months the quarterly amount continued about the same. During this period, and for the quarter following, the membership was between fifty and sixty.

After the valedictory services in October, the membership increased to over eighty. Of the £25 8s. 8d. for quarter ending September 1893, only about £17 was from the boxes of the members; the remainder being part of the collections at the valedictory services. But the last amount, which was the largest of all, was entirely from the daily gifts of the members. What the present quarter will realise will be known after Sunday, April 1st, when the next quarterly meeting will be held.

But it may be asked, has not this method seriously interfered with the ordinary missionary income from the church? The following statement will show. For the year before the formation of the Prayer Union, the amount contributed by the church to the Missionary Society was £109 13s. 2d. For the year closing at the end of March, 1892, the amount obtained from all sources other than the Prayer Union was £106 19s. 6d., and for the following year £92 16s. 9d. There is therefore a small diminution, which is only partly owing to the daily gifts to the Prayer Union Fund.

But against that very slight diminution must be placed the fact that by this method of daily giving the Missionary Society has profited in two years to the extent of about £150. And now that the members of the Prayer Union have a missionary whom they regard as their representative, the annual gifts to the Society promise to average about £120.

We submit these facts and figures for the consideration of Missionary Societies, and especially of pastors of churches. The adoption of a similar method in many of our churches would probably be productive of similar results. Is it not worth the attempt?

The Union referred to above was originated at the West Tabernacle, Bournemouth, by Rev. Geo. Wainwright.

THEATRICAL EMPLOYÉS.

On Friday the fifteenth social gathering of East-end theatrical employés was held at the Shoreditch Town Hall, when some 1,100 or 1,200 ladies of the ballet, chorus girls, dressers, scene shifters, gasmen, stage carpenters, flymen, limelight operatives, baggage men, cleaners, bill-posters, supernumeraries, and others sat down to tea in the large hall. As usual, the host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. George Williams. Mr. Williams took the chair at the meeting which followed. Mr. Seagram read the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, and Rev. T. C. Udall offered prayer. The chairman then, on behalf of his wife and himself, gave them a hearty welcome. He was certain, he said, that everyone in the hall wanted to get to heaven. Since they met last Good Friday two of their friends had entered the glory land—Mr. Sawell, their secretary, and Mr. Carleton, their missionary. By trusting in Christ and living a life of consecration to God his hearers also might be ready to enter heaven in the same way as their two departed friends had done. He then set before them the fact that their eternal welfare depended on their seeking grace and pardon through Christ.

Mr. Thomas Dashwood gave a stirring address on the words "Very real." Sin, he said, was real, life was real, death was real; and he impressed upon them the necessity of making their lives very real by taking Christ as their Saviour.—Mr. T. C. Chadwick, after referring with feeling to the death of Mr. Sawell and others, said there was no more noble or beautiful thing than a good and holy life; and a good life could only be lived when its ways were based on Jesus Christ.—Mr. George Nokes observed that some one wrote to the newspapers some time ago to the effect that Christianity was "played out." He denied it. Let that person come and see the present meeting, and the thousands who came to hear the Gospel in the theatre on Sunday evenings.—Mr. Goodenough, the new missionary, also spoke.

THE CHURCH FOR THE TIMES.*

"They are filled with new wine"! That was what some said of the men and women in "the upper chamber," upon whom the Holy Ghost came on the Day of Pentecost. The "mockers" saw in the glory and grace of the great spiritual Epiphany only what they brought the power to see. And yet, in deep, true senses, the mockers were right. Metaphorically, the Spirit-baptized ones were "filled with new wine." They were branches of "the true Vine"; and the rich, glorious life of the true Vine, that was rising from hidden and infinite sources in that spiritual springtime, was flooding all their being.

And there was Joy—festive joy—"joy in the Holy Ghost." "The fruit of the Spirit is joy." And the joy gave elasticity to the step, nerve to the arm, attractive brightness to the life, a winsome glory to the countenance, and exulting words of praise to the lips of those in whose hearts it welled up. The Church of Pentecost was a joyous Church. They ate their meat even with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favour with all the people. Where there is the reality of religion and the fulness of the blessing there is joy—must be. Our religion does very little for us, and we have need to inquire whether we have any, if we are not joyous. "Wilt Thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in Thee?"

And there was Enthusiasm. The Church of Pentecost was full of what a great writer calls "the Enthusiasm of Humanity," and was full of other enthusiasms. It was clothed with zeal as with a garment. But where is our zeal to-day? And upon what are our enthusiasms spent? There is enthusiasm about many things, about business, and money-making, and pleasure, and party politics, and the idle gossip of the hour and of the place; but religious enthusiasm, intense earnestness in the matter of the soul and God and eternity, is, alas! rare. And when it does break out, it offends the proprieties; it is fanaticism! "They are filled with new wine!" "Thou art beside thyself!" Ah, but is there not enthusiasm in heaven? And does it not circle round the Lamb, kindled and excited by his matchless self-sacrificing love, and by the salvation of the lost? "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." "Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat and be merry." . . . . "It was meet that we should make merry, and be glad, for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again; and was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry."

And there was Fearlessness. The Church of Pentecost was inspired with great courage. Cowardice gave place to boldness. Timid men were transformed into heroes. Peter, who dissembled in the presence of a servant-maid, and shamefully denied his Lord, answered to his name, "the Rock," and charged home upon the murderers of Jesus the awful guilt of their crime: "Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken and by wicked hands have crucified and slain."

And there was Intense Conviction—intense conviction about the fact of the resurrection, the miracle of miracles: "With great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus"; intense conviction about the realities of the unseen world, about the worth of the soul, about the heinousness of sin, about the love and righteousness of God, about the efficacy of the blood of the Cross, about the terrors and grandeurs and glories of eternity.

And there was Self-sacrifice—complete self-devotion, arising from the overmastering motive of love for Jesus, and for the souls of men. The members of the Church of Pentecost were baptized into Christ's death, and made conformable to that death. The deepest thing in them, as it is the deepest thing in God, was the Cross.

Now, a Church possessing these and suchlike characteristics is the great want of these times. And a Church possessing these and suchlike characteristics is as possible now as at the beginning. There are discussions on many subjects, endless meetings, and talk at which the heart grows sick; controversies on creeds and confessions, on ritualisms and ceremonies, on ecclesiastical forms and machinery, on money-raising, on the historical order and development of the books of Scripture, on prophecy fulfilled and unfulfilled. Fruitless controversies and discussions for the most part—a grievous waste of precious time and energy often. What is wanted is a Living Church—a Church filled with God—"God-intoxicated," as someone has significantly and strikingly put it. And were a tithe of the time spent so unprofitably and uselessly spent in prayer—in waiting upon God—the Church would become a living Church, filled with the Holy Spirit, and, as a consequence, dowered with all adequacies and sufficiencies—equipped perfectly for her mission and work in this age.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

That there are many persons who are members of a Christian church who ought not to be, is not more true than that some persons are not members who ought to be. There are various reasons which hold more than one true convert to Christ from openly confessing Christ. Some are afflicted with a chronic habit of indecision on most subjects. Others are so inclined to self-distrust that they feel doubtful about themselves, and still more doubtful whether they should hold out if they should make a profession of faith. These are near of kin to Bunyan's "Mr. Despondency," "Little Faith," and "Miss Much Afraid"—not a very jubilant sort of Christian at the best. Others, having very properly a high standard, are apprehensive that they may not live up to that standard. For some of these or similiar reasons thousands of truly good people waste a considerable portion of a short life in a sort of "border state," not world's people, nor yet openly Christ's people. This is not a good state to live in.

Genuine conversion to Christ demands confession of Christ before the world. That is a happy privilege, and it is an imperative duty. Some one of this hesitating class may raise the very proper question, "How am I to know that I am truly converted?" To this question I would reply that it is not needful that you should be able to name the place and the hour when the Holy Spirit wrought an instantaneous change in your heart. Thousands can do this, but as many thousands more cannot do this. Conversions are not run in the same stereotyped mould of experience. The vital questions with you do not turn on dates or places, but on present heart experiences and present duties. Have you acknowledged before God that you were a sinner needing Christ? Have you sincerely repented of your sins, and are you so set against them that you pray constantly to be delivered from them? Do you accept Jesus Christ as your atoning Saviour, and are you willing to follow Him and obey Him as your Lord? Do you take his commandments as your rule of life, and are you asking his Divine help, and are you willing to accept his guidance? Jesus Himself once asked a certain man, "Lovest thou Me?" Can you honestly say, "Yes, I do, and I want to serve Him?"

Then, my friend, even if this love be but feeble, and if your faith be but small, make the most of what you have. Don't quench the spark by delay; fan it into a flame by decisive action. Strengthen what faith you have by exercise. If you want to love Jesus more, begin to work for Him, to make sacrifices for Him, and to bear some crosses for Him. Feelings are not to be measured, like water, in quart-cups, or grain, in bushel-baskets; they are to be tested by their sincerity and their influence over your daily conduct. In plain English, if you are striving every day to live like a Christian, then you are a Christian. And not without. If you cannot sincerely say from your heart, "I abhor sin, and I accept Christ as my Redeemer, and my Ruler now and for ever," then cut your hand off sooner than go through the solemn farce of uniting with a Christian Church.

Bear in mind that the step of confessing Christ is not a final, but an initiatory step. It is not ending a campaign; it is an open enlistment for service. You don't come into Christ's school because you know everything, but because you want to learn and are glad to have Him teach you. Also bear in mind that when you join the church you not only take the Bible as your rule of daily conduct, but you also confess the Lord Jesus Christ to be your Lord, and you pledge to Him your life-long loyalty and obedience. You join your weakness to his strength, your ignorance to his wisdom, your unworthiness to his merit, your whole self to his service. If you do that sincerely, Jesus Christ gives you infinitely more in return. He becomes responsible for you; He provides for you spiritual food and nourishment. His precious promise is, "My grace is sufficient for you." His guarantee is, "No man shall pluck you out of my hand. Because I live ye shall live also." Christ accepts no temporary enlistments; you must rejoice to enlist for life, On the blade of that sword of the Spirit which the Captain of your salvation hands to you, is inscribed, "He that endureth to the end shall be saved."

Do not hold back because a confession of Christ will involve responsibility and excite the observation of others. You need just that. "Witnesses" are intended to be watched and examined. If enlistment puts you into some hard fights with self and sin and customs and popular evils, all the better. Cowards and shirks win no victories and wear no crowns. Do you desire and hope to be on Christ's side at the day of judgment? Then confess Him and follow Him here. Your best service will be small in comparison with the glorious reward.

MACHINE MADE MILLENNIUMS.

A very weighty and timely article on this subject is given in Rev. Joseph Cook's serial, Our Day, for January; it is written by Mr. W. J. Lhamon, of Minneapolis. We extract some of the closing paragraphs:—

"It is a mistake to think that a society morally wrong can be righted by political machinery. Those who rank as the world's prophets and poets never think so. . . . Not to name other reformers that have permanently helped the world, Jesus and his disciples stand confessedly and pre-eminently first. They were strangely silent as to the organism of society, even that of the Church; so that the devout followers of Jesus are to this day divided as to the authorised polity of his Church. Jesus insisted on every man being right with himself, with his neighbour, and his God.

"There is no permanent human happiness without human holiness. The difficulty with any machinery whatever is that sinners, if they are in the majority, are bound to monopolise it. Not until the ballot-box counts more saints than sinners will the way be open for a respectable political millennium. The social state is but the average of its social units. It can be mended only in proportion as they are mended. Many a social reformer is at fault in counting too much on polity, too little on personality. Foul water is not filtered simply by pouring it into new vessels. Drop by drop it must pass through the purifier. So with humanity; it is educated, governed, redeemed in its individuals. The primary business of the reformer is to increase the number of righteous ones.

"Peoples that are alive to their ethical and spiritual interests can never be cheated by a Circe's cup of Socialism. The lamentation of Moses is the lamentation of history. 'Jeshurun waxed fat and kicked.' Begin with the body of the man; deny the Christ; take it for granted that this being does live by bread alone; make him fat; blanket and stable him well; and presently you will have, instead of a brother, husband, father, friend, just what you have made him by your false and vicious treatment—an unmanageable, stall-fed, kicking beast. It is not a time to look backward from some impossible dreamland, and revel in the imagination of what might be if such or such a social state could be imposed on us by law; but it is a time to forecast on the bases of historic experience and Christian revelation, what must inevitably come to pass should the body be put first and the soul last in the social régime. We may rest assured of two things: First, that the only possible redemption for humanity is the redemption of its units, and that by Christly processes; second, that the governments of men will unfalteringly keep pace either by evolution or revolution with the spiritual and ethical progress of men."

THE KENTISH VILLAGE MISSION is now steadily at work. From July to January 145 services were held, besides open-air lantern services and tent missions. Three permanent stations are now open at Dartford Heath, Halfway-street, and Green-street Green. Help is much needed, as well as supplies of tracts. The secretary is Mr. J. G. Dixon, Bexley, Kent.

A New Translation

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

5. For we know that if our earthly house, this poor tent, be taken down, we have in heaven a building which God has provided, a house not
2 built by human hands, eternal. For indeed in this one we sigh, because we long to put on over it our dwelling which comes from
3 heaven; (if indeed the Lord shall find that we have assumed a robe, and are not un-
4 clothed). For we do sigh under our burdens, we who are in this mean tent; for we have no wish to lay aside our raiment, but to put on more, that our mortality may be absorbed and
5 lost in life. And He who formed us for this very end is God, who has given us His Spirit as foretaste and pledge.
6 We have a cheerful confidence therefore. We know that while at home in the body we
7 are banished from the Lord; for we live
8 the life of faith, not of sight: we have a cheerful confidence, and anticipate with more delight our being banished from the body
9 and going home to the Lord. For which cause also we make it our ambition, whether at home or in exile, to please Him perfectly.
10 For we must all of us appear without disguise before Christ's tribunal, that each one may receive an award for his deeds in this life, according to what he has done, whether good or good for nothing.
11 Knowing therefore how greatly the Lord is to be feared, while we endeavour to satisfy men, God knows us perfectly; and I trust that in your own consciences you fully understand 12 us also. We are not again recommending ourselves to you, but furnishing you with a ground of boasting on our behalf, that you may have a reply ready for those with whom appearance is everything, heart nothing.
13 For if we have been beside ourselves, it was for God's glory; or if we are in our sound
14 senses, it is for your service. For the love of Christ overmasters us, the judgment we have formed being this, that One having died for all, then His death was their death,
15 and He died for all in order that the living may no longer live to themselves, but to Him who for them died and rose again.
16 We therefore henceforth know no man simply as a man: if we have known Christ as a man,
17 yet now we no longer so know Him. So that if any one is in Christ, he is a new creature: the old state of things has passed away; a new state of things has sprung into existence.
18 And all this from God, who has won us back to Himself through Christ, and has appointed us to serve in the work of reconciliation.
19 We are to tell how God was in Christ bringing back the world to Himself, not putting men's transgressions to their account, and has deposited with us the message of this reconciliation.

3 If indeed: Some authorities read if at least.—Robe: See Is. lxi. 10, Gal. iii. 27. The rendering here given of this verse is in general accordance with the interpretation preferred by Anselm, Erasmus, Calvin, Olshausen, and others, and seems alone to suit the introductory if indeed (or if at least).

4 Absorbed and lost in: lit., drunk down by.

5 Foretaste and pledge: or, first instalment [of life]. The same word occurs in c. i. 22, and Eph. i. 14.

10 Good for nothing: or, worthless (phaulŏn). Some authorities read bad (kăkŏn), something more positively evil than phaulŏn, though not indicating anything so actively harmful as a third word (pŏnērŏn) found in Matt. vi. 13 and many other places.

12. Boasting: lit., a boast.

14, 15, 20, 21. For all: the same preposition occurs six times in these verses.

19. With us: lit., in us.

GRAFTING AND FRUIT-BEARING.

A very fine-looking pear-tree stood in our garden for many years without bearing any fruit. Blossoms it had in abundance in the spring time, and a wealth of foliage during summer, while in the autumn its leaves glowed ravishingly with the beauty of the crimson and purple fires which were consuming their brief existence. The tree was lovely in appearance, but there was something wrong with the sap.

One day, dear Mr. Spurgeon called the gardener's attention to it, and—he was tender to everything, animate or inanimate—instead of ordering it to be cut down as a cumberer of the ground, he suggested that it should be grafted. This was done, and for some time the tree looked the reverse of beautiful, as it bore on its branches unsightly lumps of clay, which fixed and protected the young grafts till their life was knit with the sap of the old wood. More years rolled by; there were so many fruitful trees that, I suppose, this barren one was not remembered, or inquired after, and it seemed to pass from our minds. Then, alas! all too soon for us, came the sorrowful time when our precious one was first laid aside by terrible illness, and afterwards called up, from the land of sunshine and roses, to the blissful Eden above. No wonder that, for so long a season, the suffering pear-tree was forgotten—except by the gardener.

When I returned from Mentone, the tree was in a promising and healthy condition, and this year it has borne the finest and most luscious pears I have ever tasted. It has produced summer-fruit, though the old stock was a winter tree. The grafts have developed into strong, healthy branches, yielding a plenteous store, while even the lowermost twigs of the old tree manifested the power of the new life within them by hanging out some little winter pears as tokens of the joyful change within.

Here is a beautiful analogy between nature and grace, and a lovely picture of what the Holy Spirit will accomplish in those whose lives are brought under his sweet control. Without the grafting, which wounded it sorely, my tree would have remained unfruitful to this day; but the sharp, keen knife did its work well, and now the aforetime barren tree is the pride of the garden for its choice productiveness.

Dear fellow-Christian, do not faint or fear when the blessed Husbandman cuts, and grafts, and wounds thee! Such divine woodcraft will bring about thy perfection; and out of thy suffering will come service and satisfaction, for thus shalt thou bring forth "much fruit" to the praise of Him who tends thee. Do not be as much concerned about the pain the grafting causes, as that the "afterward" should bring forth "the peaceable fruits" He so much values. Not for a moment will the Heavenly Gardener forget thee. The processes of nature, and sometimes of grace, are slow; but He waits, and has "long patience" with thee. He watches with loving scrutiny every indication of developing fruit-buds, and great will be his joy, when, in full strength and beauty, thou shalt "glorify" Him by thy abundant fruitfulness.

Every time the splendid fruits from the grafted tree, of which I now tell you, came upon the table at Westwood, I took a special delight in them, recalling my beloved's concern for the tree, and thinking how pleased he would have been at the success of his experiment.

And, when thy dear Lord sees in thee the lovely growth of the fruits of his Spirit, "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance," rich products resulting from his own mighty love, and care, and skill, exercised on thy behalf—must He not certainly feel a sweet content and delight in thee, will He not "rest in his love, and joy over thee with singing"?—Mrs. Spurgeon's Book Fund (1893).

"THE ULTIMATE REVELATION."

In his address at the recent Islington Clerical Meeting, of which the full text appeared in The Rock of February 2, Dr. Wace spoke as follows:—

If we would adequately keep before our minds the full force of the expression "the Word of God," it is desirable for us always to contemplate it in a personal and living sense. The phrase is frequently employed to denote the Bible as a whole, and with perfect justice in the sense already mentioned, that the Spirit of God presided over the composition of those sacred books. But however just such an application may be for certain purposes, it may, if used without due consideration, tend to obscure this vital aspect of the expression, and we may be in danger of thinking too much of a book when we ought to be thinking of the Person who speaks in the book. Attention has been drawn by modern criticism to the personal characteristics which mark the books of the Bible, and to the special circumstances of their composition, and in this respect it has had a very beneficial effect. What we need to realise, and to keep ever before our minds with the utmost distinctness, is, that in the pages of the Bible, in the utterances of Prophets and Apostles, we are listening to the communings of God with the soul of man, to the interchange of words between our Father in heaven and his children on earth.

The Bible is a revelation, but not only in the sense that certain infallible statements have been made, respecting the will of God, our duties and our destinies. They have been made, and they constitute some of the most precious and momentous parts of the volume, laying the corner-stones of our whole existence, present and future. Round such a momentous assurance as this, that we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ, our whole life as Christians must revolve. These stand out as greater facts than any other which meet either our physical or our mental vision. But it is characteristic even of revelations such as these that they have been made in direct response to human needs, and in reply to the utterances of the human heart.

The ultimate revelation is a Gospel. It is the reply of a merciful God to his sinful and suffering children. It is not a mere revelation of abstract truths, however great or important, but it is a word of comfort spoken to our hearts, promises of salvation from sin and deliverance from evil. The same is the character of the revelation throughout. In response to successive needs and successive struggles some gracious voice from heaven is heard, some promise or some guidance to which the soul might cling, and by means of which it might find its way through the darkness by which it was encompassed. As we accompany the Patriarchs, the Prophets, the Apostles, through their labours, their errors, their uncertainties, their sins, as words of hope or fear, of joy or sorrow, of repentance or victory, are wrung from their inmost souls, we hear also that Word of God, which in each critical moment was spoken to them, and we enter into communion alike with them and with their Divine Guide.

It is this which, as we are told, renders the Word of God so "quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of the soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and discerning the very thoughts and intents of the heart." Statements of general truths would hardly do that; but words of God, spoken to men in all the critical circumstances of their lives, uttering his will and speaking his mind, amidst human joys and sorrows, temptations, sins, and victories; addressing men in the midst of their domestic, their social, their political, no less than their spiritual concerns; having a message of support and guidance for them at every turn, and finally comforting their last struggles with the gracious promise of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord—these cannot but penetrate into the very recesses of their hearts, revealing them to themselves, making them understand their real wants, and their permanent and true strength. What is there in heaven or in earth, what art, what science, what literature, what power, which can compare with the preciousness of utterances such as these? The grass withereth and the flower fadeth, and all the glory of man is as the flower of grass; but the will and the mind and the heart of God remain eternally the same, and every human soul, in every turn of its moral and spiritual experience, may commune with that heart and mind in the Bible, and find its refuge there. "The word of the Lord endureth for ever, and this is the Word which, by the Gospel, is preached unto you."

REV. J. McNEILL IN SOUTH AFRICA.

WELCOME AT CAPE TOWN.

On Friday, March 2, the Drummond Castle arrived in Table Bay with this evangelist and his companion, Mr. J. H. Burke, on board. News of their coming was received with great joy, especially by those who had the pleasure of hearing Mr. McNeill at home; and arrangements had been made for a seven days' mission before the two brethren arrived. As the steamer was not expected till the afternoon, few of the committee were present to welcome them at the docks. However, Rev. J. C. Harris, the secretary, and the vice-chairman, Rev. J. M. Russell, bade the evangelists a hearty welcome to South Africa, and conducted them to the Y.M.C.A., where a goodly muster of the general committee were soon gathered to bid welcome to preacher and singer.

An address of welcome having been read, Mr. McNeill replied, and said that both Mr. Burke and he had felt some natural trepidation in approaching the Cape, but all such feelings had disappeared. He thanked the South African brethren for the cordial and brotherly welcome they had received.

A reception tea was arranged to be given in the Y.M.C.A. in the evening, to which about fifty sat down, including representatives from all the Evangelical churches in the town and suburbs. After tea the evangelists were welcomed, and assured of hearty co-operation in their mission. When the speeches were finished Mr. McNeill thanked the hosts, and expressed his pleasure at all the churches combining to assist. After tea Mr. McNeill and his friends adjourned to take part in the last of three special prayer-meetings arranged for; while Mr. Burke went to meet the combined choir from the churches, and to complete the plans for his part of the mission. Much prayer has been offered, is being offered, and will be offered that God will mightily bless the efforts of these evangelists, and that many may be brought to the feet of Jesus.

THE FIRST MEETINGS.

Some diversity of opinion was expressed as to how many of the Capetonians would be roused to come and hear the renowned preacher. The estimate, I am glad to say, was exceeded by the number who came, and came early, to hear the Gospel. His first meeting was held on Saturday, and on that night of all nights over 1000 gathered in the large Dutch Church kindly placed at the committee's disposal by our Dutch brethren. The meeting was for helpers, and to these Mr. McNeill gave a rousing and pithy address on 1 Chron. xii. 22. He did not take long to explain the chapter, and sounded the keynote of the mission by impressing on all the need of their becoming helpers.

A prayer meeting was held on Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, and attended by over fifty who pleaded with God for a mighty manifestation of his Holy Spirit. On Sunday afternoon, about 5000 men gathered in the Dutch Church, and listened with rapt attention, notwithstanding that scores had to stand the whole time. Several other meetings have been held and were all well attended, the evenings witnessing a multitude seldom seen in Cape Town. At the first after-meeting over a dozen stood for prayer. The afternoon meetings are also well attended. We ask the prayers of your readers.

LOCAL OPTION IN NEW ZEALAND.—The first voting under the new licensing law in New Zealand, which was passed last year, was (says a Dalziel's telegram in The Times) concluded on Thursday. The interest and excitement called forth by the struggle were almost equal in intensity to those of a general election. The prohibitionists, although forming a small minority of the people, were well organised, and they fought the election upon the liquor traffic abolition ticket. In the Dunedin district 7400 persons voted, and total prohibition was only lost by eighteen votes. In Oamaru and Clutha prohibition was carried, and at Port Chalmers the prohibitionist vote was within fifty of the requisite three-fifths majority. At Wellington five moderates and three extremists have been elected on the Licensing Committee. The prohibitionists polled there altogether 3400 votes. At Christchurch and a number of other places the prohibitionist vote, although insufficient to enforce the cancelling of all licences, secures the reduction of the number of public-houses.

THE OPIUM QUESTION.

In a recent letter Miss Nellie Marchbank, of the China Inland Mission, writes:—

We are very much in sympathy with every effort made to rid China of the terrible opium evil, and also to rid England of the deep disgrace of forcing the cursed thing on the Chinese. We have read with much interest about the struggle that has been going on at home, and sometimes it is almost more than one can bear to read of men who ought to know better, if they cared to inquire, speaking of the opium as a mild stimulant, and a lot of other rubbish.

Every day we can see how opium is demoralising the dear natives, and our hearts are made to ache over and over again. We meet the opium evil at every turn, and yet our city is not so bad as many others; but here, as elsewhere, the use of opium is on the increase.

A few weeks ago I visited a village where one of our Christian women lives. It was a rich village; nearly all the people who lived there were of the better class; but I heard a sad story. Opium had, within the last few years, found its way there, and there were even some low opium-dens close by. I was told that to save their boys going to these places and thus be led forward in vice, the parents had, in many cases, set aside a room where their sons could smoke the drug; they go into the nearest city, and buy a few dollars'-worth at a time. I did feel sorry. This village will not, cannot remain much longer the prosperous place it has been in the past for many generations.

A few days ago I was staying at an inn overnight. I had a Christian chairbearer, and he was telling the Gospel to some other men who were also staying overnight at this place. By-and-by the conversation turned upon foreigners (Englishmen) and their presence in China, and one man made this remark, "Yes; if foreigners had never come to China we would not have had the opium, and we would have had fewer thieves and vagabonds."

It is true. Not only is the opium a terrible evil in itself, but it leads into misery, sin, and degradation too deep to mention here. May God prosper every effort made to stay this evil! He is on our side, and victory must come.

CORSICA VILLAGE MISSION.

A letter has been received from Miss Grant Brown, dated Corte, Corsica, March 8, from which we extract the following:—

"We are now at Corte, and have crowded meetings every evening. Here in the centre of the island, the mountaineers are restless and excitable. Our Corsican workers are anxious to gather out from among the crowds those who would form a Protestant congregation. All day long I listen to suggestions, and those who are interested come sometimes to my study and confer together. As soon as we go to the Mission-hall, however, we see a mass of heads at the door. The people are there, ready to hear all they can, and if we do not let them all in they are offended. The only way will be to hire a large salon and have drawing-room meetings for those of the upper classes, and then organise a meeting in the church. We have asked the Mayor to give us an old chapel which once belonged to the Jesuits.

"I cannot tell you how interesting it is to see natives at work. Though I am the only English person in this mission, I am truly with a band of workers. It has been suggested that we should have a missionary institute for young men as soon as possible. In the Balagna, which was quite virgin soil when we began to work, and where we have mission rooms in different villages, there are troops of young men who love the Gospel. They are so intelligent and earnest, there is no telling how many of them might become true evangelists if taught. It has also been suggested by our native workers that there should be an institute for girls. Of course, none but Corsicans would have a right in a country like this to start institutes. Those who come here as strangers could never do it. This is real work, when Corsicans become workers.

"I hope our friends will not forget us. You know all the difficulties we have had to encounter these years, and the dangers even, since first as lonely missionaries we visited this land of the vendetta. Now we wait for the harvest. Ask our friends to sympathise with us still. We cannot be too thankful that a friend continues to support our evangelist, M. de Matra. C——, the converted priest, hopes to come as soon as he is made pastor. A few days ago another young evangelist arrived, a native of Corte, who had spent a year and a half in England. It is touching to see the joy of the people as they welcome him."

Mrs. Matheson, 46, Harcourt-terrace, Redcliffe-square, S.W., will be glad to give any further particulars that may be desired.

CHILDREN'S MISSIONS.

[From a Correspondent.]

Mr. Shuldham Henry, who lately departed to be with Christ, was holding services some years ago in Sunderland. After one of the meetings he suggested to four or five members of the church that they should form an Evangelisation Society to carry on Christian work in the town. From small beginnings the work has gone on, until now there are eight mission stations in different parts of the town, and more than seventy young Christian workers, who pay a large part of the expense themselves. They find the best way to grow rich is by giving what they have. The grace that they get to work with, more than compensates them for what they do.

Six of these missions are exclusively for children, where on Sunday and week nights more than two thousand children hear a pointed earnest Gospel address. The workers aim for their immediate conversion. The only inducement (which is sufficient to gather them by hundreds) is that they get a ticket on leaving, and those who attend are given a tea once a year, and a small prize is given to those who have attended the best. Three hundred attend on Wednesday nights in a mission room in the lowest part of the town. There is nothing told merely for amusement, but the meetings are conducted most seriously, and the children are made to feel their solemn responsibility to God. Hundreds, we believe, have thus been eternally saved.

Many come in rags without shoes or stockings, yet they have souls as finely strung as the better dressed, and it is easy to see how much they value kind Christian sympathy. Some of them come from drunkards' homes—homes where children seem born only to be sad, in dens written all over "with lamentation, and mourning, and woe." It is a sad thing, though often the case, that the most desolate place that some of them ever see is their own home, and life with its youthful brightness is turned into a dark misfortune. Some of these boys often pray to God for their drunken fathers and mothers. Can there be a grander sight than to see one of these shoeless boys on his knees, lifting up his hands unto the Unseen, feeling in the dark for God, and asking Him to make father a better man? Is there anything so irresistible as a sigh from the heart of a sorrowful child, when it appeals at its Maker's throne? There are more communications between earth and heaven than the world is aware of. There are secret splendours that the eye cannot see.

At the end of the meetings those who feel their need of a Saviour are earnestly invited to remain for a few minutes. Sometimes one or more stop behind who had professed to decide in previous meetings; on inquiring what is wrong, they say they have been in some bad company and done wrong. They are unhappy, and sorrowfully confess their sin. Often twelve or more will stay behind.

Many incidents that have occurred might be told, but space forbids. The surroundings of many of these children in the lower parts of the town are terrible. Many of these young ones blush with shame when they are asked about their parents. When the father is asked at the great day, "Where is the flock that I gave thee, thy beautiful flock?" what will he be able to say? Are the rights of a child less sacred because they are shoeless? I would value the prayer of a poor child that prayed for me, even though his father or mother were drunkards. The number of conversions amongst the young, other things being equal, is far larger than in adult services.

There is room in this town for twenty more such missions. It is a great opportunity for Christian workers to exercise the grace God has given them, and it has been found a most fruitful one in Sunderland.

GENERAL NEAL DOW.

On Tuesday last week the National British Women's Temperance Association combined with the United Kingdom Alliance to carry out a suggestion made by Miss F. E. Willard, president of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to celebrate the ninetieth birthday of General Neal Dow, "The Father of Prohibition." Lady Henry Somerset presided over the chief meeting, and was supported on the platform by many influential temperance reformers.

The West Ham Crusaders' Temperance Band played selections from six to seven o'clock, and special prohibition songs were rendered during the evening by the Temperance Choral Society. Madame Antoinette Sterling also sang during the evening. In opening the proceedings, Lady Henry Somerset read extracts from letters received from well-known leaders of the temperance movement who were unavoidably absent. In the course of a brief address she claimed that the best treaties of peace between nations had always been unwritten, and that by that meeting the two high contracting parties of temperance people of the two greatest nations, set the seal of their sympathies to a treaty, not of peace only, but of practical co-operation in the temperance cause. If their ears were keen enough to catch the vibration of the heart strings here and yonder, they would find them attuned to the old song of "Goodwill to men."

On the motion of Sir Wilfrid Lawson, seconded by Mrs. Ormiston Chant, it was resolved to send a congratulatory address to General Neal Dow, and a cablegram was despatched from the meeting in order that the great temperance reformer might read it at the celebration in the City Hall, Portland, Maine, which was to be held there at eleven o'clock the same evening, according to London time (7 p.m. New York). The cablegram was, Lady Henry Somerset announced, to be cabled to every newspaper in the United States freely by the Associated Press of America, and a reply to it from Portland, Maine, would, it was expected, be cabled the same night to every British newspaper freely by Reuter's Agency. The cablegram to General Neal Dow was as follows:—

"The mighty throng gathered in Exeter Hall crowns your ninety beneficent years with love and gratitude. For you can truly say: 'When the ear heard me, then it blessed me; and when the eye saw me, it gave witness to me; because I delivered the poor that cried, and the fatherless and him that had none to help him. The blessing of Him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy. I put on righteousness, and it clothed me; my judgment was as a robe and a diadem. I was eyes to the blind and feet was I to the lame. I was father to the poor, and the cause which I knew not I searched out" (Job xxix. 11-16).

The following address to General Neal Dow has been adopted by unanimous vote:—"A representative audience crowding Exeter Hall, London, on the evening of March 20, to celebrate the 90th birthday of General Neal Dow, of Portland, Maine, sends its reverent and affectionate greetings to the 'Father of Prohibition' and the world's veteran temperance chief. To-night 'the nations are praising him afar off,' who, fifty years ago, declared on witnessing a woman's heart-break and a home's eclipse because of drink, 'With God's help, I will change all this!' We are profoundly grateful for a character that illustrates a spotless purity of life, for a career devoted to the emancipation of the slave, the cause of total abstinence, the enfranchisement of women, and for the courage that dared to be in the right, with two or three, and held steadfastly on its way till crowned by the action of that great majority which gave constitutional prohibition to the State of Maine. We pray that your ninety beneficent years may be rounded to one hundred, and that you will tarry with us until the mother country shall enable her people to put the liquor traffic under the ban of law and make 'home protection' the watchword of her politics. We feel sure that no birthday has ever been so universally observed, without distinction of nation, sect, or party, and we argue from this indication of the cosmopolitan character of the temperance reform, its universal conquest when 'the race out of childhood has grown.'"

Resolutions were also adopted expressing the trust of the meeting that the Government would allow nothing to interfere with the carrying of the Local Veto Bill to a successful issue during the present session; rejoicing in the vast progress and advanced position of the movement for the legislative suppression of the liquor traffic; and urging temperance reformers of every section to use all possible means to secure the enactment, application, and enforcement of the Local Veto Bill.

Mr. J. H. Raper and Miss Frances Willard delivered addresses, and after several other speeches had been delivered, and the parting song "Brave Neal Dow" heartily sung by the audience, the proceedings concluded with the Temperance Doxology:—

Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him who saves from sin and woe,
Praise Him who leads the Temperance host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Portland (Maine), March 20, says:—There was a great meeting today at the City Hall, at which speeches were delivered, eulogising the great work accomplished by General Dow in the course of his long public career. General Dow received from the meeting at Exeter Hall, London, a long, congratulatory telegram, to which he forwarded the following reply:—"Warm thanks for your cordial greeting to me, and warm thanks for all you have done and intend to do for the cause we all hold dear.—(Signed) Neal Dow." Despite his advanced years, General Dow's faculties are remarkably bright. Over two thousand telegrams and letters of congratulation from all parts of the world reached him, including many from notable personages, and his house was visited by a constant stream of callers anxious to offer their congratulations in person.

INDIANS OF THE NORTH-WEST.

Bishop Reeve, in a letter published in the March issue of Missionary Leaves, describes the setting apart for pastoral work of Mr. John Ttssiettla, this being the first ordination of a native within the Arctic circle. The bishop says:—"Mr. Not-afraid-of-mosquitoes (for that is the meaning of the name) had been labouring most faithfully and earnestly as a catechist amongst his fellow-tribesmen; and this, together with his humility and consistent godly life, seemed to point him out as a fit person for the office of the ministry. The ceremony took place at St. Matthew's Church, Peel's River. Your heart would have rejoiced to have been present, to have seen that nicely-filled church, to have noticed the reverent demeanour of the congregation, the earnest attention of the Indians, and of the Eskimo also. The members of St. James's, Bath, subscribe £60 per annum for his support and the expenses of his mission.'

The Bishop also mentions the founding of a new mission at Hay River, Great Slave Lake. The Indians there have always been inclined, more or less, to Protestant doctrines, and have long desired a missionary. The worker appointed was Mr. Marsh, around whom the Indians gathered in a very encouraging manner. The Romanists are specially active in this region, and a French priest promptly arrived at Hay River to oppose the Protestant missionary. Rev. J. Hawksley reports regular and diligent attendance at services, and observance of the Sabbath, on the part of the Indians at Fort Norman. The Romanists had been very active in their opposition. The priests had been giving away medals and crosses to protect from sickness, promising forgiveness of sins, and doing all they could to pervert the people, but without success. He has had six regular scholars, and twenty others when the Indians were in.

During last summer the Bishop visited all the stations in his diocese, except one, travelling nearly four thousand miles. Though seeing much that was discouraging, he was on many hands greatly cheered. Rev. W. and Mrs. Spendlove, at Fort Resolution, have, perhaps, the most trying post of all. The Indians are all Romanists, and although glad of his aid for their bodily ailments, are too much afraid of the priest to seek it in their spiritual need. Their work, however, "is not in vain in the Lord," although there is not much to show.

The auxiliary helper in England of the work superintended by Bishop Reeve is Mrs. L. B. Valpy, 10, Marlborough-buildings, Bath.

INFIDLEITY REPROVES NOTHING THAT IS BAD. It only ridicules and denounces all that is good. It tears down—it never constructs; it attacks religion, but offers no adequate substitute.

SECRET DISCIPLES IN INDIA.

In the fifty-fifth report of the Wesleyan Mission in the Mysore Province, we read:—"No one who studies Indian missions will ever suppose that these figures of church membership represent the whole or even any large portion of the real results of our labours. Here and there, in the various sections of the detailed reports from the several circuits, there are references to sincere and devoted though secret disciples of the Lord whom we serve.

"Thus the senior missionary at Mysore city, writing of a carefully organised tour, says:—It was cheering to meet in remote places those on whom the truth had by different means begun to make its impression. In one village we met a respectable and well-to-do man whose mind seems fully made up as to the claims of Christ. He has entirely forsaken his idols, and is now seeking earnestly to bring his wife and only son to see things as he sees them. On one of our walks bank to camp we met a religious procession halting by the side of a stream. An offering had just been made in fulfilment of a vow, and the remains of the offering were being committed to the stream.

"We spoke to the whole procession, and afterwards got into private conversation with two of the men. We were surprised to hear them speak regretfully about the ceremony which had just been performed. They said they took no interest in it, but were compelled to join in it on account of the mothers and wives and old men of their household. They then told us that they belonged to a small group of men in an adjacent town, who for some time had been meeting secretly to read the gospels together. Lastly, a Mussulman whom we have known long and conversed with frequently, came and announced his belief in Jesus as the Son of God, and his desire to leave all and follow Him. The case is a difficult one. We have no reason to doubt his sincerity. But if he is faithful to his purpose he will have to leave his present appointment, and will expose himself to a persection which is sure to be very savage.

"In the same circuit a native evangelist has itinerated widely in all directions, has been well received everywhere, and reports a considerable number of 'secret disciples.' In some villages he has been able to establish small societies that meet for the study of the Bible, and he is confident that not a few of the members of these are Christians in all but baptism. In one of the most remote villages of the Nagar an old man is in the habit of gathering his family around him when they return from the fields at the close of the day's work and offering a few simple words of prayer to the Saviour about whom he has been taught, always concluding with the words, 'Our Father, which art in heaven,' &c.

"In another of these villages there lived an old man who was sure to be found among the group of listeners whenever the preacher went there. He loved to read the Scripture portions and tracts, which he kept carefully wrapped up in an old piece of cloth, and many of which he had held in his possession for a number of years. In the early part of the year he died. During his illness he sent for the Scripture reader and talked with him about what he had heard of the Saviour. He never received Christian baptism, but he died with faith in Christ and praying in his name.

"Such are only types of many unenrolled and unbaptized followers of the Saviour. Others there are with whom no missionary is personally acquainted, and some whose circumstances and relations are such that, although somewhat intimately acquainted with them, we are compelled to hold our peace respecting their faith in Christ."

The work of the Mission is very varied, and includes education, the care of orphans, and zenana visitation. The general superintendent of the Mission is Rev. J. Hudson, Bangalore.

THE SELF-HELP EMIGRATION SOCIETY sends emigrants to Canada and other colonies, and befriends them until settled in their new surroundings. During last year it sent out 302 men, 91 women, and 87 children—480 in all. Of these, 295 were from London (many of them country-bred, and accustomed to agricultural work). The emigrants to Canada have numbered 441. In addition, 16 have been sent to Australasia, 15 to South Africa, and eight to the United States. The emigrants contribute, personally or through friends, towards the cost of their emigration. The office of the Society is 39, Memorial Hall Buildings, Farringdon-street, E.C., Mr. E. Wilson Gates, secretary.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 1.—ISAIAH XXXIII.

The Final Prediction against Sennacherib (1).—Evil recoils. Men start avalanches that overwhelm their own dwellings.

The Prayer of God's People (2-6).—Here is a prayer for every morning, "Be Thou my arm for to-day." Their means, "thy people's." Mind to go into the world, leaning on that strong support. (3) The tumult is caused by the approach of God like an advancing thunderstorm. (4) The caterpillar here is the wingless locust. "As locusts leap, shall they leap upon it." Thus Judah took Sennacherib's spoil. (5, 6) Put the Lord in his right place. In Him are treasures of wisdom and knowledge. The fear of God enriches the soul with veins of ore.

The Destruction of the Foe (7-14).—The valiant ones are equivalent to the Jewish ambassadors sent to sue for peace. (1) Sennacherib had been bribed in vain. He had broken the covenant, and had stopped all peaceful intercourse throughout the country (2 Kings xviii. 4-17). (9) Sharon was a fruitful plain near Carmel. (10) God sometimes appears to sleep, but when He arises He turns the proud boastings of his foes against themselves. (14) And as He deals thus with his people's foes, He awakens them to see the danger of tampering with One so holy. They ask, if God's wrath is so terrible, and his purity so intense, how can they endure its eternal manifestation.

The Reward of the Righteous (15-19).—This is a refrain from Psalm xv. What a description of the holy soul! The righteous walk; the upright speech; the scorn to foul the hand with unjust aim; the stopped ear; the shut eye. (16) There are heights of character and privilege inaccessible to the foe, the hidden manna, and the water of life, from which no oppressor can cut us off. (17) Hezekiah would no longer be arrayed in sackcloth, but in beautiful raiment, and the view would no longer be pent up by the walls of the beleaguered city, but would extend to the utmost extremities of the land, free from the invader. The terror of the foe shall be not for experience, but for meditation as a thing of the past. The Assyrian scribes shall have vanished. The fierce people of barbarous speech will have passed away.

The Safety of God's People (20-24).—Zion had no river, but God would be to his people what a river was to others without its disadvantages. (21) Nothing hostile can come to us through Him. (23) The enemies' host is compared to a war-galley shattered by tempest. (24) The pestilence induced by invasion will be at an end.

MONDAY, APRIL 2.—ISAIAH XXXIV.

Threatenings against neighbouring peoples. Edom is used throughout this chapter as personating the enemies of God. That land suffered severely under the Babylonish invasion, which probably is here referred to. It is impossible to divide the chapter, which is one prolonged description of the pouring forth of God's wrath upon a people whose cup of iniquity was full. (2) We must distinguish God's judgment of nations, from that of individuals. It is clear that nations, as such, are summoned before his bar, and consigned to desolation. The judgment of God is always in process, and the desolate regions of Edom, Babylon, Asia Minor, and North Africa attest his sentence. (3) Blood enough to melt mountains in. (4) Nature is sympathetic with man, though this imagery may set forth great social and political changes (Matt. xxiv. 29, Rev. vi. 13). (6,7) Different animals for different ranks of people. (9-17) The imagery employed is that of the destruction of Sodom. The description is very graphic: streams of pitch; dust of brimstone; the land a cauldron; the ever-ascending smoke of a furnace; the scream of eagle, hawk and owl; the invasion of the palaces by the thistle; the howl of the wolf; the call of the jackal, the arrow-snake's nest, the kite with his mate. The entire picture portrays uttermost desolation from which the figures of hell are largely borrowed, and, indeed, the desolation of earth affords a picture of the woe of the lost. To a large extent, this awful picture has been literally and terribly realised, but it foreshadows something more desolate and terrible in the eternal world, of which the scenes of earth are the material and transient type.

TUESDAY, APRIL 3.—ISAIAH XXXV.

The previous chapter and this should be read together, that the contrast may be the more effective between the fate of the ungodly and the lot of the righteous.

The restored Jerusalem; the advent of the Gentiles into the Church; the blessedness of the Millennium; the safety of the believer, and heaven itself, may be read in the words of this beautiful poem.

(1) The curse of God changes Carmel and Sharon into a waste. His blessing makes the wilderness and parched land like Carmel and Sharon. When the love of Jesus comes, deserts sing and become carpeted with flowers. The rose is the narcissus. (2) The glory of Lebanon with its shaggy woods, the excellence of the luxuriant plain, are imputed to the waste, which immediately renders back that glory and that excellency to God. (3-4) Where hands are weak, and knees feeble, there is no source of help like the thought of God's presence. Say it over, and over again, "My God will come. Be strong, my heart, and fear not. He will come and save." (5-7) Even now we live amid the evidences of God's presence, but our eyes are blinded, our ears stopped. Oh, for the quickened sense; the leap of our nature lamed by its fall; the song from lips which God will touch! The dreariest wilderness shall yet become water-springs; the mirage (parched ground) which so often disappointed, shall become a fulfilled prophecy; thirst satisfied; the dragons (jackals) of the heart extirpated, their lair a paradise. (8) This highway is even now being cast up in the world. Jesus Christ in his Gospel is its foundation. The R.V. gives a beautiful alternative, "The unclean shall not pass over it, but He shall walk in the way with them." Be holy in walk and conversation, and you shall become aware of the Presence of the Holy One at your side. Fool as you are in the world's judgment, you cannot make a mistake in company like that. (9) Nothing can hurt us if we walk with God in holiness. Dreaded evils soar around, but they pass away. (10) The return from Babylon, the restoration of a prodigal, the home-coming to heaven, are times of rapturous joy. Sorrow and sighing may have hovered about our path, but shiver back before the transcendent light that shall greet the welcomed soul. O songs! O everlasting joy! O gladness never to be dimmed again!

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4.—ISAIAH XXXVI.

This and following chapters occur in 2 Kings. Recently-discovered inscriptions on the old site of Nineveh corroborate these records with minute accuracy. At the death of Sargon, Hezekiah refused to go on paying tribute to Assyria. A large party of Jews advocated alliance with Egypt and Ethiopia, as we have seen. His opposition was overruled, and the invasion fell upon Judah.

(1) The inscriptions put the cities at 46, and the prisoners at 200,000. (2) Amongst them is a picture of the monarch seated in the entrance to Lachish. How startling that great army to all but Isaiah! (3) Eliakim had taken the place foretold (chap. xxii. 15-22). (4-10) A broken reed is an apt image for human help. Rabshakeh thought to put the people upon the horns of a dilemma. If they trusted in Egypt, they would be deceived; if they trusted in God, the Assyrian mistakenly thought that the people had offended Him, by putting away the altars and high places. It is very terrible when the thought intrudes itself that evil is sent to us from the Lord, but even then it may be averted by repentance and faith. In the case of Rabshakeh, the closing words of his speech appear to have been suggested by chap. x. 5, 6. (11, 12) Syrian might better be Aramæan, the language spoken in the north of Palestine, and understood by the Assyrians. The wall was crowded with men, from whose ears the Jewish statesmen desired these threats to be withheld. The Assyrian, however, desired to strike fear into their hearts, by depicting, in his coarse words, the extremities of famine to which they would be reduced. (13-22) There are times in all lives when Satan pours a volume of horrid suggestion into the heart, and when this fails he turns to flattery and seducing bribes. So Rabshakeh began to depict the attractions of the land of captivity to which his master would remove them. He recited the invincible might of his master, the abject helplessness of the cities that lay in the rear of the invader, and ended by contradicting himself. Comp. x. 20.

(21) Thus our great tempter roars around the fold, but he is chained. Answer him not, but keep close within the fortifications, looking heavenward for help.

THURSDAY, APRIL 5.—ISAIAH XXXVII.

Hezekiah's Lament (1-7).—No place is so safe as the prayer-closet in a storm. (2) It is pleasant to have fellowship in prayer! Happy the man who has an Isaiah to send to! (3) Extreme danger was impending which they must go through, and which they were unable to avert. The two tribes were the remnant. Hezekiah rightly brings God Himself into the fray. If you are doing God's work, and on God's plan, you may count on Him. (5, 6) Faith looks away from circumstances to God. The blasphemy is against Him. God identifies Himself with his people. "Why persecutest thou Me?"

Sennacherib's Letter and its Treatment (8-20).—(9) The approach of Tirhakeh, in compliance with the league that Hezekiah had formed, made Sennacherib more eager to take Jerusalem. (10) The devil is often loudest in his boasting when he feels that his chance of success is diminishing. (12) When we see the fate of others, our brain is apt to turn dizzy, but we must remember the vast difference between those who have or have not God as their defence. (14) God knows the contents of every envelope, but He likes his own to confide in Him. Spread your trouble before God. (16) Not the God of Judah only, but of Assyria, and therefore the supreme Judge and Monarch. Always remember in prayer that God is not only yours, but the God of him from whom you pray to be delivered. Ask God to do what is right between you both. (17) We bend our ears and open our eyes to the need of our friend. (19-20) One of the strongest arguments in prayer is to plead the name and glory of God invoked in our case.

Isaiah's Song (21-35).—This was the period of Psa. xlvi. A time of immense anxiety, and of heroic faith. When we are entrenched in God we laugh our foes to scorn. (24) We can recount their proud boasts with the derision that confident faith inspires. (26) We see that they have done their exploits with strength that God gave, and which He can restrain. (27) We know that we have a secret of power and defence in which others are deficient. (28, 29) We can almost hear the voice of God threatening our foes with their inevitable doom. (30) For two years Hezekiah and his people had depended on the spontaneous yield of the ground which they might now venture to cultivate. (33-35) All around the city stood the bastions of God's might, through which the foe could not break.

Sennacherib's Fate (36-38).—The angel of God breathed on the faces of the host. Though the monarch lived for twenty years, he never again assailed Jerusalem.

FRIDAY, APRIL 6.—ISAIAH XXXVIII.

The story of Hezekiah's sickness introducing an exquisite psalm. (1) This order was reversed because Hezekiah repented. God's ways are modified by our attitude towards Him. (3) Josephus says his grief was so sore, because, being childless, there was no heir to his throne. Three years later, Manasseh was born, an unmitigated curse (2 Kings xxi. 11; xxiii. 26, 27). Hezekiah referred to his earnest efforts to cleanse the temple (R.V., "sincere with God.") (6) This was an assurance that Assyria would not again attack him. (8) Josephus thinks that the hours of the day were marked by steps, over which a shadow fell, indicating the hour of day. (10) "In the noontide of my days" (R.V.). (11) The Hebrew had but a clouded view of the future, and dreaded Hades, with its privations. (12) The slight shepherd's tent, the web cut from the loom, the brief hours of daylight, are the sad emblems of mortal life. (13) The sufferer reckoned that after the brief Eastern night he would be crushed. (14) A touching prayer for the oppressed believer. (15-20) The tide turns, thanksgiving follows petition. What God says He does, but all life should "go softly," i.e., "in a solemn procession" (R.V.). The spirit life grows by death. Peace comes out of bitterness. Love is shown as God draws us from the pit. Sins are cast behind his back, and He is seen bending over us ready to save us, and all after, days are filled with song, in which others join the delivered soul.

SATURDAY, APRIL 7.—ISAIAH XXXIX.

This chapter is repeated 2 Kings xx. 12-21. Read also 2 Chron. xxxii. 25. (1) Babylon at this time was tributary to Assyria, and the king apparently desired to become Hezekiah's ally against the common foe, Assyria. (2) God had given much substance to Hezekiah (2 Kings xxxii. 29); and, in any case, he should have acknowledged God in them. He had no right to ostentation or vanity. We are all liable to the same sin, to be proud of God's gifts, and to magnify ourselves, as if in some way they were the result of our own efforts. If we do not render according to the benefit done us, we bring wrath on ourselves and others. Ingratitude leads to pride, and this, in turn, to failure in the hour of temptation. (3, 4) How much we owe to the watchfulness of a faithful friend, who marks the hour of temptation with keen sympathy, warning, and restoring. (5-7) This is the first reference to the Babylonish captivity with which Judah was punished for her sins. Sometimes it only needs a straw to turn the scale on which tons had been accumulating. One word may cause an avalanche. (8) The king assented to the Divine verdict, acknowledging its justice. There is a touch of selfishness in Hezekiah's words, but on the whole there is nothing better than to confess that God's ways must be good, because they originate in his perfect nature.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 8.

DISCORD IN JACOB'S FAMILY. Gen. xxxvii. 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Gen. xlv. 24.

JACOB'S home at the time of this lesson was at Mamre, in the plain of Hebron (xxxv. 27). He ranks with Abraham and Isaac, as one who by faith consented to be a sojourner in the land of promise (Heb. xi. 13). Though it is more than two hundred years since the promises were made to Abraham, at present neither the numerous seed, nor the actual possession of the land, has been realised. The promises of God are fulfilled in his own time. They may tarry, but they are sure.

Joseph, with whom this and the next few lessons deal, is perhaps the most interesting character whose history the Scriptures record. At the time this story opens he was seventeen years old (2). Boys of a similar age will do well to make his life and character their study.

How chequered his brief life had been! He was probably able to remember something of the rapid flight from Laban; of the dread with which Jacob anticipated the meeting with Esau; of the occasion when Jacob came limping into the camp after the night at Jabbok, and the change that had appeared in his father since then. He had seen Bethel, the spot on which the foot of the ladder rested; had suffered the loss of his mother Rachel; and afterwards had stood by Machpelah, while Isaac was buried by the side of Abraham and Sarah. It is possible that these events, coupled with the instruction which his father gave him, had much to do with forming his character. Young though he was, he had already chosen his father's God to be his God, and had begun to trust and serve Him. Would that every youth would make an equally wise choice.

This piety was developed under very unfavourable surroundings. As the title of this lesson suggests, there was discord in Jacob's family, and all we know of Joseph's brethren proves them to have been almost to a man destitute of true godliness. The conduct of the sons of Bilhah and of Zilpah (2) was not calculated to make it easy for Joseph to be true to God. Do not say you cannot be a Christian because of your unfavourable surroundings. God can keep you faithful among any number of faithless ones. The very difficulties, if met in the spirit of faith, will tend to strengthen a godly character.

The piety of Joseph won for him two things, first, the special love of his father (3), and secondly, the hatred of his brethren (4). It is not remarkable that Jacob should love him, for he was the first born of his beloved Rachel (2), and his brother Benjamin was at this time but a child. But the character of Joseph tended greatly to increase his father's love for him. See Prov. xxiii. 15, 24. To the natural ties of nature were added the stronger and more enduring ties of grace.

But the manner in which Jacob showed his love for Joseph tended to increase the hatred of his brethren (4). The many-coloured coat was not, as we used to suppose, a kind of patchwork garment, but a long white linen robe, reaching down to the feet, and ornamented with a little stripe of colour on the skirt and sleeves. If no special significance attached to such a dress, the fact that it expressed the partiality of Jacob for Joseph was enough to add fuel to the fire of jealousy that already burned in his brethren's hearts. But this result was even more certain if the dress was worn only by the sons of the rich and noble, and indicated that Joseph was to be spared the toil that fell to the lot of his brethren. Such partiality on the part of Jacob was inexcusable. It was doing harm to his other sons, and would be likely to bring trouble upon his favourite.

Another reason for their hatred was that Joseph had borne witness against their misdeeds (2). It is not well to encourage a habit of tale-bearing, but there is no evidence that Joseph's conduct in this matter needs to be so described. He seems to have been simply doing his duty, and at the risk of suffering from those whose sins he declared. Their hatred of him, therefore, was like that of Ahab for Micaiah (1 Kings xxii. 8); and of the world for those who bear witness against it.

Joseph's dreams won for him greater hatred still (6-11). Possibly the thoughts of the future greatness of the family which Jacob's conversation had put into his mind was the natural explanation of these visions. But they were evidently a Divine message to him. Was not this "the word of the Lord" which "tried him," because its fulfilment was so long delayed (Psa. cv. 19)? Joseph told his dreams, apparently with heartless simplicity. Yet in such a divided home as that he might have known that his brethren would have no sympathy with such hopes as the dreams expressed. Such evidence of God's favour towards him intensified their hatred, though it considerably aggravated their guilt. For if God had spoken by these dreams, were they not setting themselves against Him as well as against Joseph?

LESSONS.

1. The Value of Early Piety.—The boy Joseph determined what the man would be. In your dreams of future greatness and godliness don't forget that you must begin early. 2. The Possibility of a Godly Life amid Unfavourable Surroundings.—No condition of life can prevent you serving God if you have a heart given to Him. Are brothers and sisters and companions against you? God is for you. Trust Him. 3. A Godly Life is Sure to Meet with Persecution.—This fact is older than the time of Joseph. It is one expression of the enmity between the seed of the woman and the serpent; and will last until the Lord comes to cast out Satan.

LITTLE PITCHERS.

'You have heard of the American pitcher plants? Yes, and you know they are popularly called fly-traps; but have you ever seen one? In the southern parts of America they grow to large proportions, but in those plants best known, the blossom, or pitcher, is about six inches long, and about two inches in diameter. Its rounded hollow leaves grow in a handsome clump near the ground, and form a kind of vase or pitcher, on which is a lid always open. From out this clump of leaves grow the flowers, very brilliant, and standing proudly on the top of a stalk more than a foot high."

"Have these pitchers any use?" you ask.

"Yes: our Father never created anything or anyone without intending it, or him, or her, to be of good use."

"As far as we know at present, the use of these pitchers is to catch insects—that is why they are called fly-traps. 'I do not wish to be that kind of pitcher!' you think. Listen—the little pitchers are generally half-full of rain water, and flies and other insects enter in, and are drowned.

"It is intended they should die in this way, for when once they are in, they cannot get out. On the underside of the lid or cover—the lid forms a kind of pathway into the pitcher—is a sort of covering of stiff bristles pointing downward to the water inside; these offer no resistance to the insect getting in, but they are an effectual barrier to its ever getting out again.

"'Does it do any good in there?' you naturally ask. Yes, it decays in the water, and becomes a rich fertiliser for the plant to feed and live upon. There may be other reasons, but no one has been able to give me any as yet, and I have inquired, for your sake, of many naturalists. 'I do not think I can be like that pitcher-plant!' you say. Suppose we say your heart is like the pitcher-plant—receptive, made to take in only that which will nourish and sustain it, and provided with a covering, or means of defence. For that is how God made it, just as He made the pitcher-plant. The defence, or covering of the heart, is Christ, but if you reject Him—if you pay no heed to God's words: 'Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life'—you lay your heart open to every evil thing that is waiting to attack and gain possession of it; and instead of 'flourishing as a green bay tree,' or as our pitcher-plant, your heart becomes a noxious weed, described in Jer. xvii. 9; and Matt. xv. 19. Do you like the picture? 'No,' you reply, 'and I do not think my heart is like it.' I hope not; but it is if Christ is not your Defence, your Saviour, your Guardian, your Guide, your Life.

"Because, though you may be 'a very nice child,' as you have heard your friends say, if God is not your King, you are a poor, defenceless child of sin! 'I did not think you would talk to me like that!' you say. Why not! I love you, and I want to know that every one of the 'little pitchers,' you among them, has Christ on the right side of the door of their hearts, just like the protecting armour of spikes on the door of the pitcher-plant; Christ shut in in your heart, and your life 'hid with Christ in God.' But I know what it is when Christ is not inside! 'Perhaps you remember when God was not your King?' you say. Yes, I remember, and I know how dark everything was, and what a difference it made to me and my friends when——

I came to Jesus, and I found
In Him my Star, my Sun.

"When you have done that, you will understand why it was that somebody once said, 'When you have God in the heart, a little of the world will go a great way.' You will want to be like Christ, and you will learn to think as He thought, to walk as He walked, and to do as He did; for nearness produces likeness. 'You see those pitchers?' said a Christian Oriental friend to me. 'Well, they remind me of two sorts of Christians, in capacity. When we know Christ we are filled with happiness; some of us are like the great pitcher—so much joy in us; but we can only be full, after all.

"'Others are like that tiny pitcher—not much joy in us, but full to the brim. That is how it will be in heaven—no discontent, for we shall each be full to the brim of life and love; the only difference will be the difference of capacity, and only God will see that."

"So when you are Christ's child you will be this other kind of pitcher, as well as the first-named. Try, by daily growing more like Christ, to increase your powers of reception and retention of all that is 'lovely and of good report," so that on earth you may not only be 'full to the brim,' but running over with loving deeds, full of grace, mercy, and truth, that shall flow into the lives and hearts of others to fill them with thankfulness and blessing. So shall you be 'a vessel holy unto the Lord'—one of his own Little Pitchers." M. B. GERDS.

CHILDREN'S HOME, PARIS.

A few months ago we were desired to send over to South Africa a dear little boy, aged four years, who had been placed in the Orphanage at 35, Boulevard Bineau, Paris, some two years before, under sad circumstances. He was always very delicate and required much loving care.

When the request came from his uncle in South Africa to send him over, saying he would pay all expenses with outfit, etc., we felt it our duty to let him go—though it seemed sad to send a baby-boy of four such a long journey alone. However all due care was taken, the child was given into the charge of the captain, and the happy result has been most gratfying. "Maurice" was everybody's pet on board, his bright sweet face and pretty ways won him many friends; one of the passengers, an M.P., was specially kind to the boy, and loaded him with presents as he left the ship.

When the uncle came on board the child threw his little arms round his neck, and the loving reception touched the uncle's heart at once. Now a request has come for us to send over his younger sister. We have two more little boys that are not fortunate enough to possess a kind uncle able to provide for them; they are both "without friends," they will soon be beyond the age at which we can give them shelter.

We have forty-five children, many of whose histories are very sad. One of these little ones can be adopted in a very easy way, by paying £16 per year. It is not a large amount to feed, clothe, and educate one child. The little ones for whom we plead have had a good deal of sorrow and privation; we long to show them what happiness means by leading them to Jesus, to be little Christ-bearers, for truly "the Lord hath need of them."

THE LATE SIR HARRY VERNEY.

The uses of great age are not always in Christian minds estimated at quite their proper value. Men content themselves with that sentence in "the prayer of Moses the man of God," which says that the strength of great age is "but labour and sorrow, for it is soon cut off, and we fly away." We are apt rather to pity than to felicitate the aged, forgetting that if God adds to their years, if He is ready in a life here and there to let the shadow on the dial go many degrees backward, He must have a purpose in so doing. Let us reverently examine that purpose, not waste our pity on those who have seen his goodness so long in the land of the living. For, after all, there lies the point of the whole matter. The message of the aged Christian in all circumstances is the message of David in his declining years: "I have been young and now am old; yet saw I never the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread."

It is impossible not to indulge in such reflections in approaching the long life of him who is here delineated in all too inadequate words. Sir Harry Verney had been for twenty years the typical old man. Few who are now alive knew him in middle age, almost none can speak with personal knowledge of his youth. But everyone who had ever heard his name knows that through all his days nothing ever drew him aside from a firm faith in the mercy of God, or from a clear belief in the satisfaction of the Cross of Christ, in the power of prayer, and in the comfort of the Scriptures. A life lived in that conviction is always a witness to them that are without, and, if it be a very long life, the force of the testimony is multiplied by every year that passes over it.

Sir Harry Verney was born in 1801, his father being General Sir Harry Calvert, G.C.B., and to the very last the flags of the regiments the general had commanded in the Peninsula, which hang in the entrance-hall at Claydon House, were proudly shown to visitors by his son. He was educated at Harrow School and afterwards at Downing College, Cambridge; but that part of his training which most occupied his later thoughts was a residence of some months with a clergyman-tutor at Broad Clyst, in Devon. The tutor used his opportunities in the wisest degree; but Broad Clyst is near Killerton, and Killerton was the home of Sir Thomas Acland, and a magnet for all that was real in the religious life of the West country. Sir Thomas imparted to his young neighbour, who was destined for the army, a keen sense of the more excellent way of life that is offered to a Christian country gentleman, who is content to be a true nursing-father to his tenants. The lesson was remembered for over seventy years.

Still, for a time he served in the army, becoming finally a captain in the Grenadier Guards, from which he retired with major's rank in 1827, the first year of William IV.! He used to say afterwards that he felt it to be a blessed sign of a change in the times when he was asked to arrange a Bible-class for men in the Household regiments. "Such a thing," he added, "would not have been thought of in my day."

In 1826, on his father's death, he had become Sir Harry Calvert, and the next year he changed his name. Viscountess Fermanagh, the heiress of the Earls Verney—Sir Harry was still using her prayer-book in Middle Claydon Church a week before his death—had left her Buckinghamshire estates to Lady Calvert, and from thence they passed to Sir Harry with the name of Verney, which he has borne so long. It was a heavily-encumbered heritage, for there had been a foolish and improvident Earl at the close of the eighteenth century, who, like the frog in the fable, would have Claydon House as palatial as Stowe; and it happened to him, as it must happen to one "that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God"—there was a great collapse, which laid obligations upon those that came after. Sir Harry Verney went softly and simply all his days, not only to pay them off, but to give his tenantry their due.

Earl Verney began to build a palace for himself, and dwas not able to finish it; Sir Harry, in a more Christ-like spirit, practised the Gospel of care for the poor, built them good cottages, and only lately fostered the foundation for them of a village library of healthy literature. The Bucks Infirmary, to which they look in their time of physical need, was always in his mind, and only the beginning of his last few days of illness prevented him from going to Aylesbury to preside over the annual meeting of this charity. If he cared for their minds and bodies, it is scarcely necessary to add that, being what he was, their spiritual needs were never lost sight of. His estate involved the patronage of four livings, and these he always endeavoured to fill with earnest Evangelical pastors. The son of the late revered Vicar of Keswick holds one, and recently the rector of another resigned in order to give himself to the work of the C.M.S. in India. To Sir Harry this patronage was a trust, a sacred "deposit," and many will remember how, some little while since, there was a discussion on the wisdom or unwisdom of the private patronage system at the Oxford Diocesan Conference. An expression of opinion that the system should be abolished or modified brought the old man to his feet in its defence. He felt it to be the one security against Ritualistic teaching in a diocese where the maintenance of Evangelical principles needs all the stalwart aid it can get.

Two other matters remain to be noticed—his long Parliamentary life and his unique personal character. Some years since, in celebrating the jubilee of his work at St. Stephen's, his friends made a loving investigation of his words and votes. Most of them do not concern us here, but it will always be a joy and a help to remember that his first Parliamentary utterance was in support of a petition in favour of the Better Observance of the Sabbath, on March 4, 1833. A year later he is giving his voice for some scheme of temperance legislation. Wilberforce was his father's friend, but without that friendship he would have pleaded, as he did, for the abolition of the Slave Trade. Lord Shaftesbury, he always avowed, was the greatest man he ever knew; but, without that admiration, he would have associated himself with the great Earl in all his remedial aims and acts. In everything he approved himself a large-hearted, because a truly Christian legislator.

What he was in himself and in his home it is not possible to describe in many words or in few. But his childlike faith was inspiring, his gratitude to the Giver of all good gifts for the blessings he had received and for the time in which his lot was cast, put to shame the discontent which sometimes appears even in the devoted. Probably the greatest mercy of all his long life was the brevity of the illness which was prelude to his peaceful end. "Your God and my God," he murmured to his son, who lovingly and sorrowfully tended him. May it be even so that "we which have believed" may "enter into rest!"

GENERAL BOOTH'S JUBILEE.

This is the jubilee year of General Booth's Christian life; and in response to an appeal by the leading officers of the Salvation Army, the General has issued an order for rejoicings and other celebrations. He describes the past fifty years as "fifty years of mercy," and says:—

"On review I feel that I ought to testify that I have not felt it necessary, during my long years of almost incessant labour to remove the sins and miseries of men, to seek any other Saviour than the Christ I met with in the beginning, or to rely on any other power than that which changed my young and thoughtless heart. I have made no improvement upon my principles, nor striven after any new revelation. I stand just where I stood fifty years ago, proclaiming, through the same Jesus, full and free forgiveness for the worst and most hopeless of the sons of men, and through the same Holy Spirit, power to enable the weakest to master every evil of their own nature and to conquer every temptation that may be encountered from the world and the devil."

After mentioning that, from the first, God has laid the poor on his heart, and referring to the difficulties of various kinds that he has experienced, the General says:—

"By the grace of God and to the glory of his name we stand to-day a great growing force of skilled, devout, and consecrated warriors, in the forefront of the fight with sin and wretchedness and death and devilry of every kind, not only having gathered by common consent multitudes of souls to God, but having aroused and inspired the universal Church of Christ to greater efforts to carry out her true mission on the earth. In consenting to your Jubilee proposal, I want to say that you are perfectly correct in judging that anything done should look only in the direction of, and have only for its aim, the advance of the war. To this end, and with this view, I accede to your suggestion that the Army should aim at raising £50,000; but, in addition, I would propose several other things:—

(I.) An International Congress, to be held during July, at which officers and soldiers representing the Army in every part of the world shall be present. That, in connection with this Congress, a Day of Thanksgiving, Rejoicing, and Salvation shall be arranged for at the Crystal Palace. (II.) That the first week in May shall be regarded as a Jubilee Week of Reconciliation, during which an effort shall be made throughout all our borders, by all concerned, to promote, as far as possible, not only among our own people, but among all the friends with whom we have any acquaintance: (a) The forgiveness of injuries. (b) The reunion of friends who have been estranged. (c) The restoration of backsliders. (d) A baptism of love upon all our corps everywhere. (III.) The holding of a Jubilee Salvation Campaign, conducted by myself, throughout the United States and Canada, in the coming autumn, of about four months' duration. (IV.) The commencing of Salvation work in other countries where as yet our flag has not been unfurled."

Other proposals are: To add to the ranks of the Army 1000 newly-commissioned field officers, and to add at least 50,000 juniors to the numbers of the Army in Great Britain alone; to prepare and fit up a home for lost children; to open at least one new Jubilee Shelter for the homeless and starving in London, and another in Glasgow; and to determine the site of the long-contemplated over-sea colony, and despatch the first party to take possession of it.

The General adds: "To accomplish these varied objects a larger sum of money will be required than the amount we have named; but God, in a very remarkable manner, has placed within my hands the power to render more effectual assistance. A lady, a dear friend of the Army, lately deceased, has left me the bulk of her estate, which is expected to produce the sum of £20,000. Now, while this legacy has been bequeathed to me untrammelled by any legal or other directions whatever as to the use I should make of it, I shall have the greatest satisfaction in adding it to the £50,000 you propose to raise, so as to render this Jubilee effort a crowning success; and in doing so I feel sure that I shall be acting in harmony with the considerations and desires that led our friend—now, I believe, in glory—to love and help the Army, and to leave her fortune to the General."

WHY ARE OUR PRISONS FAILURES?

A well-known prison chaplain has asked the question, "Why are our prisons failures?" I beg to supply the answer. Because the Gospel of the grace of God is not brought to bear upon the hardened or broken hearts of the inmates. There are prisoners who appear to be perfectly incorrigible, whose mission seems to be to pollute and contaminate those not so sunken as themselves. There are others (principally first offenders) who lament their fall, who in solitude grieve over their position, but who never hear a word of kindness spoken which would, in all probability, cheer them to do right, who are often broken-hearted and well nigh in despair. Thoughts of "home," or wife, or mother, flash through their minds, and they long for sympathy, but get it not from officials. Let the Gospel of a loving Saviour be preached or told out to them by some one, other than an officer of the State, and you would see "signs and wonders done in the name of Jesus"; nor would I despair of seeing habitual criminals converted in our own country, as they are in other lands.

There is little, if anything, in the English system to reform, much less to convert men. Many of the worst criminals when in "durance vile" will curry favour with the chaplain by joining the "confirmation class," but are only religious for a purpose; and hypocrisy thus prevails, that favours may be conferred. Sir E. Du Cane has written concerning "The punishment and prevention of crime," but says little or nothing concerning the reformation of the adult prisoner. Sanitation and ventilation (to which every care is given) are needful for the body; but men have minds that need enlightening, and souls that need saving, and England is almost careless about the most important matter of the reforming of her criminal classes.

Let accredited, qualified honorary workers of both sexes be permitted by the State to visit our prisons at times that shall not interfere with the work and business of the institution; let them be allowed to go from cell to cell, and with wisdom, born of experience, minister words of love or warning; and in sympathy tell out the message of God to these, our fellow-creatures.

There is more liberty in Russia, or even Morocco, or any other country, to tell of Him who came to give deliverance to the captives than is found in England. Officialdom says: "It is the chaplain's place, and he is the fit person." I know a deputy-governor who was obliged to cease from holding a Bible-class among a few of the convicts under his charge. He loved their souls, and sought to win them to Christ. English red tape obliged him to close the class. America is very far behind us in many things pertaining to prison life and discipline. Yet America furnishes some of the most remarkable cases of reformation. There have been cases of men who have been soundly converted to God whilst in prison, and who are now working most efficiently in the many missions in New York and other cities. Why are America and Canada as far before us in reformatory efforts among criminals as they are behind us in discipline and morals? Because there is freedom to honorary accredited workers to visit the prisons. At Toronto some thirty gentlemen visit the prison to conduct Bible-classes among the inmates. In nearly all the American prisons workers of both sexes are allowed to visit, and read and pray with any who wish it; whilst the pulpits are willingly thrown open to men who are gifted and fitted for this particular work.

Here we deal only with offenders as criminals, although they are men of like passions with ourselves, they are amenable to love, and open to kindness. Everlasting severity and discipline only harden the heart of such men, but love will break down the hardest of criminals. We desire that the Gospel may be allowed to be fully and freely preached among our prison population, apart from any denominational or sectarian teaching. Let Christ be uplifted by those who are constrained by his love, and we are sure of the blessed results that will follow.

CROAKING CHRISTIANS should read the Book of Nehemiah. A preacher once said in conference that he had wept over the terrible state of things on his charge. Bishop McTyiere said in reply, "What we need, brother, is not weeping Jeremiahs, but building Nehemiahs."

A GOOD WORK IN SWANSEA.

The work which God has been pleased to do in Swansea during the past thirty years, by his servant, Mr. Oscar T. Snelling, is familiar to many of our readers. The services in the Albert Hall have attracted much attention on account of the large audiences brought together to hear the Gospel and the manifest results which have accrued therefrom.

Mr. Snelling resided in early years at Southampton, where he first learned to work for Christ, and speak in the open air, under the leading of the late Dr. Wigram, afterwards Bishop of Rochester. When only eighteen years of age, he began to travel as an evangelist, and in Weston-super-Mare met Dr. Elwin, who led him to visit Wales. This was thirty years ago, for Mr. Snelling is now forty-nine years old. The object of the tour was to hold evangelistic meetings at various centres in South Wales, and a beginning was made at Newport. The gatherings were held sometimes in the open air, sometimes in the Town Hall, and sometimes in chapels. From Newport the missioners moved to Cardiff, and later to Swansea. Their visit to Swansea followed upon that of Joshua and Mrs. Poole, who had held good meetings at the Ragged School. From Swansea the party went westward to Haverfordwest, Pembroke, and Tenby; but Mr. Snelling returned to Swansea, in which he had become deeply interested. From that time he has remained in the town—a period of over thirty years. He held meetings in the Ragged School for several months, preaching every night and holding daily prayer meetings. But this building could not always be at the disposal of the Mission, and he therefore took a place in Orchard-street, which he occupied for twenty-five years.

In 1868, Mr. Snelling preached on Sundays in the Theatre Royal, and continued so to do until 1874, thereafter, during a brief period, turning the Star Theatre and Opera House into a place of worship on Sundays. In the meantime he married a Hampshire lady, the daughter of a Nonconformist minister, who has proved herself a real helpmeet to him in his labours. They have one son and daughter, now in their teens.

A BOLD MOVE.

As a local editor says: In 1875, Mr. Snelling took the bold step of holding services in the Albert Hall. Some people thought that in doing this he was courting defeat. But what has been the issue? He has held services in the Albert Hall on Sundays ever since, and to-day has a congregation almost as large again as that of any other pastor in the town. The Albert Hall seats 2,500 persons, and not only is it crowded every Sunday night, but between 300 and 500 people have to be turned away. In the church there are no less than 800 members, while the Sunday-school, of which Alderman Chapman is the superintendent, has an average attendance of about 600. Thus, numerically, this church is far stronger than any other in Swansea, if not in the whole Principality. Nor are these large congregations, as is too often the case in the large towns, composed mainly of women and children. When Dr. S. C. Morgan was Vicar of Swansea, he drew Mr. Snelling's attention to the fact that the Albert Hall congregation was very largely composed of men, and what was true then is even more true to-day. The preacher has wonderfully attracted young men, more especially of the working classes.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.

How is this remarkable success to be accounted for? What do the people go out to see and hear by the thousands every Sunday? Certainly, not a man preaching learned and elaborate discourses. Mr. Snelling says with his ideal master, the late Mr. C. H. Spurgeon: "I would sooner pluck one brand from the burning than explain all mysteries. To win a soul from going down into the pit is a more glorious achievement than to be crowned in the arena of theological controversy as Doctor Sufficientissimus; to have faithfully unveiled the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ will be, in the final judgment, accounted worthier service than to have solved the problems of the religious Sphinx, or to have cut the Gordian knot of apocalyptic difficulty. Blessed is that ministry of which Christ is all." Wherein, then, lies the secret of success? Simply that the preaching is purely of the evangelical character, and that the speaker tells the truth in an interesting way, often "embodying it in a tale," so that it "shall enter in at lowly doors," while speaking with an intense conviction of the reality of the things set forth.

Naturally, seeing the evil wrought by strong drink, it is conducted on temperance lines; but this is subordinate, the grand aim being the salvation of sinners.

RELIEF AND RESCUE WORK.

Many philanthropic labours are mentioned by the writer already quoted. When great distress existed in Swansea, Mr. Snelling actively interested himself in the relief of the unemployed. He was also mainly instrumental in getting relief works started by the Corporation, which gave employment to between 150 and 200 men. He has always staunchly supported the movement for providing breakfasts for poor children, and both he and Mrs. Snelling are members of the Cwmdonkin Shelter Committee; while he himself has had a night shelter for girls on the Strand, which proves of considerable value. He is almost daily in attendance at the police court, to do rescue work. Sometimes he gets the boys away to sea, and finds situations for the girls. Sometimes he gives them advice, and sometimes he pays the fines. In addition to these opportunities for usefulness to his fellow creatures, he is an active member of the Board of Guardians, of the Provident Dispensary, and of the Hospital Committee.

These varied efforts reach many of the poorest and most hopeless classes—to be found in Swansea as elsewhere; but above and beyond all, Mr. Snelling is emphatically a useful and successful labourer in the Gospel. His address is 26, Brunswick-street, Swansea.

HOME OF REST, WALTON-ON-NAZE.

The report of this Home for deserving women requiring change of air says:—"The past year has been one of great spiritual blessing amongst the 245 persons that have passed through the Home. Weary toilers with the needle, and some with the unmistakeable cough, showing a near end, have been strengthened to go on longer; and, thanks be to God, many have received Jesus, and gone home rejoicing through our morning readings, and dumb lips have been opened, and cold hearts have been changed from a heart of stone to a heart of flesh. In faith we have rented a cottage for workers who wish to share with us during their holiday a little work in our beach services and meetings; this was filled during August and September, and very much valuable help was given to us. The beach services were largely blessed last year." Information may be had of the Hon. Superintendent, Mrs. Moore, 102, Regent's Park-road, London, N.W.

BETHESDA GIRLS' TRAINING HOME, LIVERPOOL.—Some sixteen months ago, Mrs. M'Lachlan, the lady superintendent, started the work of rescuing destitute girls and women, and affording them a training which would fit them to earn their own livelihood, and such success has attended her efforts that it is now felt desirable to extend the premises. Since the opening of the Home there has been an average membership of sixteen, and the inmates have been carefully trained in those special duties befitting women, some of them having been put into situations. By way of promoting the extension, a sale of work was held a few days ago at the Home, 9, Netherfield-road, South.

The Evangelist.

I DID NOT ASK TO BE SAVED.

John Hayne was a young man much given to the use of profane and reckless speeches, and when the village pastor asked him one day if he was not grateful for the offer of salvation, he said:

"No, why should I be? I did not ask to be saved."

"Let me tell you a story," said the pastor, quietly. "A young relative of mine was wounded at the Battle of Gettysburg, and for hours lay in a state verging upon unconsciousness. After a time, he became aware that there were voices near him, and although he could not move as much as one of his eyelids or fingers, even, he thought he felt a hand softly placed upon his heart.

"Then he became aware that a woman—a nurse—was pleading with the regimental surgeon, who was on the field, to make one more effort to save the poor fellow's life. Presently he realised he was was the object of her solicitude.

"'He is so fine-looking, and so strongly-built,' urged she. 'His natural vitality must be great. Besides, sir,' she continued, in a reverent tone, 'he may have a wife, a mother, or a sister praying for his safety now.'

"'It is no use to spend time over him,' replied the surgeon, gruffly; 'but if you wish to stay by him you can. Remember, if you remain here you will run the risk of being left alone all night on the field.'

"'Very well,' replied the nurse, bravely, 'I will take the risk, and shall do all in my power to save this poor fellow.'

"Presently the soldier became conscious that his jaws were being gently forced open, and that some powerful stimulant had been given him. It was not long before he revived sufficiently to be carried to the hospital, and in good time he entirely recovered. His life had been saved through the prompt and faithful efforts of that devoted nurse.

"Now, what if I should tell you," continued the pastor, as he earnestly looked at the young man, who was now all attention, "that the soldier was ashamed of the noble woman who had risked so much to save his life; that he subsequently went about bragging that he had never asked her to save him; that he had no knowledge of her; that he refused to acknowledge she had been of any service to him, and never mentioned her name except in a slighting, reviling way?"

"I should say he was a mean, contemptible ingrate He was not fit to live; his life was not worth saving," cried the young man, impulsively.

"Very well," said the pastor; "but this nurse only by a little temporary sacrifice of comfort on her part, and at the same time being in the pay of the Government, was the means of prolonging the soldier's little life for a few brief years in this world of care and sorrow; while Jesus Christ, the Divine Lord, suffered on the Cross and died, as He lived, to redeem you from sin, and now offers to make you an heir of life eternal. Yet I have never known you to speak of Him, or of those who love and try to follow Him, with even common respect! Is not that true?"

"Sir," replied John Hayne, "I have never looked at the matter in this light before. An ungrateful person is the most shameful and degraded creature living. I promise as much as this now—I will never use the Lord's name lightly again." The pastor did not press the subject any further at that time. He had set the young man thinking. Not long afterwards John Hayne was led to see himself a sinner, and Jesus Christ as his Saviour, and he says that the pastor's simple lesson on ingratitude caused him to examine his own soul, and to study God's Word, until he was brought to a saving knowlege of the Redeemer, who loved him, and gave Himself for him.

And yet I know—I know
He has forgiven me. I knew it first
By that sweet look I met across the crowd—
A look which told me of his quenchless love.
O Lord! My Lord!
It was that look which rescued me,
As with a living touch.

FORMOSA.—Mrs. Ede, wife of the missionary teacher at Taiwanfoo, has been seriously ill. She has now recovered, and it is trusted that no such permanent injury to her health has occurred as will make it impossible for her to continue to reside in Formosa, where Mr. Ede has done good service, into which he has thrown his whole heart.

AFRICAN MISSIONS VISITED.—25.

By Mr. D. A. HUNTER.

I left Clarkebury early on Wednesday morning, mounted on a splendid native pony, and despite the heavy state of the roads, consequent on the severe thunderstorm of the night before, we covered the twenty-two miles to Engcobo by breakfast time. The storm had been even more severe at Engcobo than at Clarkebury, an inch and a-half of rain having fallen in a very short time.

Reports as to the state of the two rivers between Engcobo and Main varying so much, I sent a native messenger forward to get some accurate information. He came back and announced that they would be passable in the afternoon; so about 1.30 p.m. we inspanned, and made for the south. The Umgwali was crossed without serious difficulty, the water just coming into the body of the cart, and no more. An hour and half's driving from the Umgwali brought us to the Qumancu, and my heart sank as I looked at it. It is one of those dangerous streams, narrow, running between high steep banks, and very swift. My position was somewhat perplexing. It was nearing sunset, and there was no moon; between the two rivers was no European house; heavy black clouds threatened more rain, and a further rise in the river.

The alternatives were crossing, or camping in the open all night. It was a cold, damp evening, so I determined to attempt the passage. Some native young men, who lived near, and took to the water as though they were to the manner born, came to my assistance. One went through, the water reaching to his shoulders, and borrowed a long rope from the storekeeper on the further side. We then outspanned, took everything out of the buggy, and one end of the rope was fastened to the pole. The other end was held by men on the far bank, who pulled vigorously on it, to prevent the buggy being washed down stream, as it was being taken through by four natives. Only the hood was seen above water, but the trap was soon safely landed on the other side. Then these young fellows carried my luggage through on their heads in a way which called forth my warm admiration. Few white men could have done it.

My boy and I mounted the horses, and with two natives at the head of each, we also got through without accident. It was with a feeling of deep thankfulness and relief that I commenced to inspan, in order to reach Main before dark.

Our troubles were not over, however. There was no proper road, only a track across the veld. So long as daylight lasted, one could follow this with safety, but darkness came down, while we were still separated from the station by a labyrinth of mealie fields, mud aoles, and streams.

When I was nonplussed, and could go no farther, a native came up and agreed to lead the way to the station. I guided the horses on his track, as well as I could in the dark, and by-and-by we found ourselves within sight of the welcome lights of the manse. The cordial reception given by Rev. D. Doig Young and Mrs. Young more than made up for the difficulties. I found, as a fellow guest, Rev. Canon Waters, of the Anglican Mission at All Saints. He was weather-bound by the Qumancu, which I had just crossed. It had been higher earlier in the day, when he was unable to cross.

Main is a station of the Free Church of Scotland, and is the centre of nine principal out-stations and eleven minor out-stations. It is intimately connected with Free St. Mary's, Edinburgh, which congregation contributes largely to the support of the work. Not only do the members of Free St. Mary's contribute funds for the work at Main, they do what is even of more value—they pray—as individuals, as a congregation, they pray for the missionary, his wife, the native Christians, and the conversion of the heathen around. I wish every station I have visited were connected with a congregation at home as Main is. This connection is, I believe, to a very large extent, the secret of the remarkable spiritual power which energises the work there. What a mass of indefinite prayers, and vague interest, might be transformed into real pointed petitions, and intelligent understanding, were every congregation at home connected by correspondence with some particular station abroad, and did every station abroad have its counterpart at home. How I wish all our missionary secretaries and committees would take to heart this suggestion, which has so often been brought forward in recent times, and put it into practical working before the close of 1894. We should then have less cause to deplore lack of funds and workers.

The Women's Christian Association, started at Main in 1886, has proved a powerful agency, both in this district and wherever it has spread. It is a sort of Christian Endeavour Society for native women. Its objects are:—(1) The development of their own spiritual life. (2) The improvement of homes and of family life; (3) The moral and spiritual training of the young people of the congregation. (4) The devising of means for the ingathering of heathen women and children. (5) Total abstinence of all members.

At the outset, twenty-eight native women gave in their names, promising, by God's help, to do all they can to carry out the objects of the association, and at the end of the first year, eighty-seven were pledged members. To-day the numbers have increased more than ten-fold, and branches have been formed in other stations and among other denominations. The women come in from long distances to attend these meetings. They commence the one day about noon, and continue till the next day at sunrise, with intervals only for food. A band of these women will go off sometimes 100 miles, all the way on foot, to help inaugurate a new branch where it is wanted. They are in earnest: they believe in the power of prayer, in the gift of the Holy Ghost, and put to shame many of us who have had a hundred-fold their advantages.

One of them, Nomatafa Mpamba, a Bible-woman, is instant in season and out of season. She goes where beer parties are assembled, and by her quiet persistence gets a hearing for the Word. On one occasion she entered a hut where a beer party was assembled, and opening her Bible began to read. A firebrand was seized from the hearth and thrust in her face with an angry "Go away! We don't want you here." Nomatafa went on quietly reading, the party was surprised into listening by her courage, and she had a good service there.

This movement has spread to the young women, who are banded into a Y.W.C.A., and even to the children. At Kidston these children came in a body and asked permission to have a meeting among themselves. They now go in bands to the heathen villages, led by some of the Y.W.C.A. members, and hold meetings.

CARDIFF SAILORS' REST.

In the Bute-road, the principal thoroughfare to the Cardiff Bute Docks, stands a building of modest dimensions, not distinguished by special architectural ornamentations, but greatly distinguished by the amount of good work achieved within its unpretending fabric. It is known by the title of the "Sailors' Rest." This institution has for more than twelve years been under the active and constant superintendence of Miss Tilly (daughter of Rev. A. Tilly, for many years pastor of Tredegarville Baptist Chapel at Cardiff). This lady has given up nearly all her time, and laboured with unflinching perseverance during the long period, without any reward beyond the feeling of a cherished duty performed, and the frequent gratification of receiving from seamen, following their perilous calling in the most distant parts of the globe, indications that the good seed had not been sown in vain.

On the evening of Wednesday, March 14, the staff of ladies and gentlemen who give their voluntary services in aid of the various departments of the good work carried on at the Sailors' Rest assembled there for the purpose of taking their leave of Miss Tilly, on the occasion of her approaching marriage to Mons. Cardot, missionary pastor, in connection with the Baptist denomination in the Department of Aisne, Northern France.

Miss Tilly, in returning thanks for the expressions of esteem, spoke with gratitude of the continued sympathy of her fellow workers.

The Cardiff Review of March 15, writing of Miss Tilly's departure, says:—Through summer and winter, in sunshine and in shower, exhibiting an incredible amount of perseverance in her noble, disinterested work, she is now preparing to yield her post to those who, however energetic they may be, cannot equal the long service this lady has rendered to her Master.

MOSES' AUTOBIOGRAPHY.*

FALLACIES IN THE HIGHER CRITICISM.

By the production and the issuing of this invaluable and most timely little book, the author and the publishers have deserved well of all the churches and of the truth itself. The recent attacks upon the truthfulness and trustworthiness of the early books of Scripture have been so multitudinous, so determined, and so overbearingly pretentious, and they have come from quarters so unexpected, and, in some instances, from scholars of such high position and of such high repute, that it requires no slight degree of Christian heroism, as well as strength and skill, "to turn the battle to the gate." But the author of this book has proved himself to be both endowed and equipped for his strenuous conflict by the same Lord who called him to the fight.

The state of the case is well put by Mr. Denniston himself: "A new 'Criticism' has sprung up to tell us that instead of any writing of Moses, we have only a set of compilations many centuries later, which, being afterwards combined by an editor, were published by Ezra and Nehemiah, while Deuteronomy is a composition by itself, the work of some unknown person in the reign of Josiah, who pretended to have found it in the Temple. This unknown person is accused of affixing to it the name of Moses and a date many hundreds of years earlier than that at which he had himself concocted it, in order to stamp it with an authority to which it could not otherwise lay claim. Thus the story of what Jehovah really spoke to Moses is lost to us. And what we have got in its stead we cannot tell. Now the proof of this very serious conclusion is grounded chiefly on alleged incongruities in the story, dislocations in the narrative, and peculiarities in the style, which oblige us to break up the history, and seek its fragments in writers later by centuries, and differing from each other. The present object is to examine the internal evidence with regard to the variations alleged—'Internal evidence,' because that is what the 'new Criticism' claims to rest upon."

Mr. Denniston wisely directs his defence of the Books of Moses chiefly against their assailant who has just now the greatest influence in our own country, Dr. Driver, who owes this influence mainly to the comparative moderation which he is careful to maintain in his tone and language. But our author deals, when necessary, with less cautious assailants, such as Wellhausen, Kuenen, Robertson Smith, and Cheyne. Dr. Driver begins, like the rest of the "higher critics," with assigning the earliest part of Scripture to two contrasted and, as he would fain persuade us, conflicting chroniclers "in two different ages born"—the one using the word Elohim, the other the word Jehovah, as the name of God. With the characteristic dogmatism of his school, he starts with asserting the "incontrovertibility" of assumptions which he cannot but know to have been controverted by scholars whom even he cannot gravely affect to despise. He assures us that "so strongly marked are individualities of style, that documents or sources so combined can be generally distinguished without difficulty from each other, and from the comments of the compiler."

These two supposed writers are at first indicated by the letters E and J, but subsequently the letter P is required to denote the "Elohist" by eminence, because to P is at length attributed—under the name Priest Code—the authorship of the passages in Exodus, Numbers, and Leviticus, which relate to the Tabernacle and the Levitical services. But a minor Elohist is still found necessary—or rather a semi-Elohist is supposed to be writing in a style somewhere between that of the original "Elohist" and the original "Jehovist."

What, then, are the distinctions between the style of the "Elohist" and that of the "Jehovist"? These are pronounced to be "strongly marked"—the "Jehovist" is described as "free, flowing, and picturesque"; the "Elohist" as "stereotyped, measured, and prosaic."

It must be seen at once that this purely literary differentiation between "E" and "J" brings the question fairly and fully within the competence of those whose verdict is now asked for—namely, the reading public generally. For everyone who knows the difference between a style, "free, flowing, and picturesque," and a style, "stereotyped, measured, and prosaic," is undoubtedly competent to form a judgment on the point in question, provided only that at least the Revised Version is an accurate translation from the Hebrew. This the distinguished Revisers, Drs. Driver and Cheyne, will be amongst the last to dispute.

Moreover, Dr. Driver, whilst obliged to admit that the words Elohim and Jehovah represent two strongly distinguished "aspects of the Divine nature," yet finds himself compelled by his hypothesis to maintain that the selection by the one writer of the word Elohim, and of the word Jehovah by the other, was not influenced by that distinction. How it is to be accounted for on any other principle, he is as unable to inform us as we are to imagine.

Yet every accurate, every sensible writer—Dr. Driver, for example, to say nothing of Inspiration—would like to be credited with some reason, beyond a mere inexplicable mannerism, for the habitual and systematic presentation of one "aspect of the Divine nature," and the eschewing of the other. If the difference be a mere matter of style, wherein is the word Elohim or the "aspect of the Divine nature," which it presents, more "prosaic" than the word Jehovah, and its especial significance, or wherein is the latter the more "picturesque"?

Mr. Denniston shows clearly that the employment of the word Elohim or the word Jehovah, and any difference of style which can with any even plausibility be made out in connection with the one or the other, is much more reasonably accounted for by the change of subject than by a change of author. He demonstrates the impossibility of sustaining Dr. Driver's extremely artificial and improbable hypothesis. Indeed, Dr. Driver finds himself practically obliged to give it up, whilst he still writes as if, instead of surrendering, he had all the while sustained his ground. The change of subject in Genesis ii., for instance, from that in Genesis i. is quite sufficient to account alike for the variety in the name of God, and for any difference in the style which can, with the slightest fairness, be contended for. So far is the first chapter of Genesis from being more "prosaic" or less "picturesque" than the second, that some who claim to be higher critics, regard the first chapter as a poem!

Besides, in the second and third chapters the two names are combined. The name is not simply Jehovah any more than Elohim, but Jehovah-Elohim, "the Lord God." Dr. Driver pronounces Elohim to be "the God of Nature" and Jehovah "the God of Revelation," but is obliged to admit that his distinction is not borne out by the usage of the two words in the early books of Scripture, whether accepted as the work of one writer or of more than one. But it seems strange that a "critic" should not see the reason of this. It only proves that Dr. Driver's distinction is arbitrary, and of his own devising, and is not drawn—as it surely ought to be—from the actual usage of the writer or writers. Mr. Denniston, adhering to the really scientific method of ascertaining the meaning attached to the words from the regular usage of the words, shows that the change of names, so far from being capricious and altogether unaccountable, is most apposite and most instructive. The distinction drawn by Mr. Denniston, namely, that Elohim is the name of God when regarded simply as Creator, and Jehovah his name when regarded as "Lawgiver, Judge, Redeemer," is consistently observed throughout the books of Moses. In the like truly critical way, the great Bengel shows that the names Jesus, Christ, and Jesus Christ are used in the New Testament, not in a casual and unmeaning way, but with a beautiful adaptation to the context.

By and by Dr. Driver finds it necessary to his hypothesis to "call from the vasty deep" of conjecture and assumption, not indeed a third historian, but an audacious forger, who did his work so deftly as to deceive not only his own contemporaries, but all succeeding generations, both of Jews and Christians, until the Scotland Yard of the "higher criticism," thousands of years after the event, sent forth detectives, who, nevertheless, have failed to find either the local habitation or the name of this most successful of impostors. The critics ask us to believe in anonymous celebrities, "an unknown, but noted priest," who, for the greater glory of the God of truth, palmed off upon the theocratic public as the authoritative work of Moses his own production, ingeniously fabricated, many centuries after Moses had departed!

As to the style of the Pentateuch, Mr. Denniston shows that the way of telling is determined, as it ought to be, by what there is to tell. He also lays bare the inaccuracy of Dr. Driver in his alleged difference of features "between the bare style of the Elohist, and the full style of the Jehovist," as seen in the first and the second chapters of Genesis. Dr. Driver tells us that two verbs are used in expressing direct Divine acts in the first chapter, whilst 'nine' are used in the second chapter. One has only to count the verbs so applied in the first chapter, to find that there are nine in the first chapter as well as in the second!

Mr. Denniston is justly shocked by Dr. Driver's attempt to persuade believers that daring and elaborate forgery is as fit a vehicle for Divine inspiration as are authentic records.

Our author proves that, according to Dr. Driver's own showing, the different writers among whom he parcels out the Pentateuch are wonderfully apt to forget the part they have to play, and to indulge in mutual mimicry of each other's styles. Thus are we told that the measured and prosaic author of the "Priest Code" allowed himself to paint an ideal picture of the Mosaic age, and that he sometimes adopts the style of the Jehovist, but is excused for this inconsistency on the ground that "this was only at important moments in the history." The whole system is shown to be "highly artificial," and "where the professed agent is Reason, the actual one is Imagination."

Mr. Denniston demonstrates that the Book of Exodus bears the clear and vivid marks of being written by the main actor in the events recorded, and that to deprive Moses of its authorship is as grave a literary outrage as it would be to deny to Cæsar the authorship of his Commentaries on the Gallic War, or to Xenophon that of his Anabasis.

Our space only allows us to add that Mr. Denniston has admirably accomplished his design to persuade thinking minds to pause and join in an earnest attempt to reason the matter fairly out, before giving themselves up to the dreary infidelity that must result from the present rashness, although "the simplest-minded are blandly assured that it is only the form, not the substance, of the revelation that has been altered by the new treatment." The book is a successful as well as "an earnest attempt to reason the matter fairly out," and as such is commended to all who are in any danger of being captivated by the oracular plausibilities and the incoherent hypotheses of conjectural criticism. No one who really respects the authority of Christ and his Apostles can on such a flimsy, frivolous, and vexatious tissue of "plausibilities," possibilities, and adventurous conjectures reject the authority of the New Testament in order to discredit the Old. And that this is what it really comes to, Dr. Cheyne and his compeers evidently see.

DAY BY DAY.

'That they may know from the rising of the sun that there is none beside Me. I am the Lord."—Is. xlv. 6.

Meet the rising sun with prayer,
Greet the opening day
Free from every anxious care,
By Another borne up there,
Brother, rise and pray.

Meet the rising sun with praise,
Why, oh why, be sad?
Ere is trod life's busy maze,
Take of heaven a steadfast gaze,
Joyous, hopeful, glad.

Meet the rising sun with trust,
All is in his hands,
Who can strengthen us to cope
With the world, and bear us up—
He, the sea commands.

Meet the rising sun with love,
Love for all around;
Seek the anxious soul to soothe,
Seek sad burdens to remove,
Loving e'er be found.

Thus from rise to set of sun,
Morn, and noon, and night,
In the path of duty run,
Well continued, well begun,
Every moment bright!

TEMPERANCE WORKERS in the Isle of Man have been fighting vigorously in the Licensing Court, in order to check the freedom of licence which prevails to a sad degree, more especially in the summer season.

THE SHAFTESBURY INSTITUTE.

With heartfelt praise we look back on a record of six years' work, now completed. We are living among the girls, women, and men, in the slums of West London, seeing daily the depths of sin and misery in which they are lying; and we value the work, not merely for itself, but as a spiritual education, learning to realise the power of prayer, a fuller trust in the Lord, and proving Christ to be a living, bright reality. He has brought us through many dark and trying experiences, and has opened unexpected doors, fulfilling in our experience the promise "I will bring the blind by a way they knew not," etc.

The primary object of the Shaftesbury Institute—founded in 1888—was to gather in and bring under helpful influence girls working in factories and laundries in West London. Uncared for and shunned by all, their pitiful condition aroused our sympathy. Thank God, our efforts on their behalf have been crowned with blessing, and we have proved that only salvation through Christ can subdue their wild unreasoning nature. Notwithstanding many difficulties that seemed at first insurmountable, a decided change has shown itself in the tone of some of our girls, whose influence is now telling in their own families.

We have now in working order, under responsible heads, the following departments of work:—(1) An Evening Home for Factory Girls. (2) A Training Home for Domestic Service. (3) A Mothers' Meeting. (4) A Day Nursery. (5) A Women's Shelter, and as an adjunct to this shelter, a small Women's Labour Home, which provides employment for eight women. At a distance of four minutes' walk is (6) a Labour Home for Men, and at the rear is (7) our beautiful new Shaftesbury Institute Mission Hall, seated for about 500. This hall, and small superintendent's house adjoining, was purchased two years ago, and it has proved a valuable accession to the work. There remains still a loan of £150, and we are asking the Lord of the Treasury to touch the heart of some of his givers to send us this sum, so that there may be no debt on the hall where so much spiritual work is carried on. (8) Short meetings are held on Sunday afternoons, in some of the men's common lodging houses, and house-to-house visitation is carried on by our deaconesses.

Our training home has now been removed from the institute to 20, Clarendon-gardens, Maida Vale, where we can receive eighteen girls. We welcome from any quarter those who wish to leave the factory life, friendless girls who need a helping hand, or the condition of whose homes makes it impossible for them to live respectably; and we also take girls sent to us by the magistrate through the prison missionary. Many have been saved from utter ruin by being received and cared for. They are trained under a workroom matron and undermatron in housework and dressmaking, and we also give them careful Bible instruction. If they do well, they earn for themselves a character, and situations are got for them. A small outfit of clothing is provided, and the wages come to us until the clothing is paid for. We should be grateful for orders for plain dressmaking and underclothing; also woollen garments of any kind can be made by our knitting machine, the gift of Lady Overtoun.

The lay nursery, in charge of a nurse-matron, is a sweet haven of rest for the little ones whose mothers are the bread-winners. It is not the children only who are benefited, the Crèche is a means of reaching the mothers' hearts, who are often softened and touched by the care bestowed on these little ones. Two free cots have been given by kind friends. Five pounds annually enables us to receive free (during the day time), the child of a mother who is the bread-winner for the family, or of a widow struggling to maintain a large family.

Our Shelter for Women is a rest for many, who, except for its open doors, would have passed the night under some archway or open doorway, for so long as a woman can earn anything at all she will not go to the workhouse. The 2d. Shelter supplies a respectable lodging, free from the contaminations of the women's common lodging house, which, in most cases, is infinitely more degraded than that for men. In this 2d. Shelter are to be found crossing-sweepers, match-sellers, apple-women, flower-women, dustheap-women, rag-and-bone-sorters, and in our 6d. Shelter are to be found respectable women, who have been housekeepers, dressmakers, and governesses, and, reduced to the last shilling, have been thankful to benefit by it.

Much is said against shelters, but only those who have a practical knowledge of the world can realise the vast extent of the wandering population of London, and the lack of immediate employment has led to destitution a large number of women, and our doors have saved from a life of shame some who would rather live it than go to the workhouse. We were greatly encouraged by receiving from the Medical Officer of Heath a letter commending the Shelter, to which he has occasionally paid surprise visits. A few only of the women remain daily for morning prayers, for many have to go out very early, but on Sunday morning the hall is full, and the bright service has been a channel of blessing to many. Cases of those whom the Shelter has helped is to be found in our "Occasional Paper," which we shall be glad to forward free, on application being made to the secretary. From the Shelter young girls are drafted into the Training Home, provided they agree to the rules and are willing to work.

During the year 1100 different persons have passed through the Shelter, and 160 of these were children. It is made use of by churches and societies, tickets being issued which they can purchase, and issue free to those they wish to help. Destitute and starving cases are carefully investigated, and relieved by free shelters and food, rather than gifts of money, which in most cases would be spent in drink. Much harm is done, and men and women are pauperised, by the giving away of indiscriminate charity.

Christmas is the only time of year when free meals are given by us, and for which a special appeal is made. At that season of the year, free dinners or teas are given to our Shelter women, the slum children, the nursery mothers, and the mothers' meeting, also to men from the common lodging houses, after which a short simple address is given. But the object on this occasion is to minister to the temporal wants rather than to the spiritual needs. The plan of giving free teas in order to gather meetings we cannot but disapprove of. In some places we know free breakfasts and children's dinners have proved a means of blessing, but we speak from our own experience only, and as a rule we find the effect is to harden and demoralize.

Perhaps no part of the work is more interesting than the Sunday afternoon meetings in the common lodging houses, which we have carried on for three years. A little band assemble, and, after prayer, we go down to the depths of drink and despair, and carry the joyful message of a Saviour's love! It is almost impossible for anyone who has not seen it to realise it fully, the awful condition of these hells upon earth!—as they themselves express it, where language is used that is "not fit for a dog to hear."

The beautiful mission buildings at 21, Bell-street, with the Mission Hall at the rear, were God's gifts to us for a labour home, which was opened by H.R.H. Princess Christian in June, 1891, and since then 250 men have passed through it. It is conducted on the same principle as the Girls' Home, labour is given in return for board and lodging. The men receive a gratuity (not wages) for the work they do, and at the end of a three months' residence they have earned sufficient to purchase a suit of clothing, and are sent out to situations. Gentlemen's cast-off clothing would be thankfully received for this purpose. We find our men value clothing much more when they buy it, than if it was given to them. Though the work is carried on in London, cases come to us, and are welcomed, from every quarter.

We are in urgent need of help. To those who do not live in London may we suggest that the wider our sympathy with other fields of service, the more are we ourselves enriched. To those who live in West London, what can we say? Sin and poverty are at your door; riches and starvation meet together. They are your sisters and mine that have sunk so low, some of them once as you are. Surely God will hold you, as well as me, responsible for the Christless lives! The cost of one social entertainment, reckoning it at £20, would maintain two girls in the home for a year. The silver and the gold are not ours, but God's, and, by-and-by, shall we not have to give an account of this stewardship?

HOME OF INDUSTRY WORKERS.

The sixty-seventh party of young emigrants—described by Miss Macpherson in our last issue—were present at the Workers' meeting in the Home of Industry on Wednesday week, and during the tea hour were introduced to their visitors by their devoted friend, who chatted about them, told something of their life-stories, tested their knowledge of Scripture, and called on one of the elder lads to lead in prayer. Rev. T. J. Hazzard also talked with the lads, and commended them to God, asking that many of them may be led out into definite Christian usefulness in the future. An adjournment being made to the Upper Room a season was spent in praise and prayer.

REV. F. B. MEYER

gave an address in which he dealt with four aspects of the Cross of Christ, as set forth by four great writers in the New Testament.

In the Epistle to the Hebrews the Cross of Christ is very specially contemplated in its propitiatory aspect, making atonement for sin, and thus as a way of approach. Hence as in Heb. x. 19-22, we are entitled to draw near by the new and living way opened by the blood of Jesus.

Then the Apostle Peter brings out another phase, that of consecration, for by the cross we are redeemed, bought back (1 Pet. i. 18; 2 Pet. ii. 1), so that we are not our own, and are under the most sacred obligations to serve wholly the Lord Christ.

A third aspect, specially brought out by the Apostle Paul (see Gal. ii. 20; Eph. ii. 5; and Rom. vi.), is that of identification. Being made one with Christ now, as we were one with Him on the cross, our attitude towards the world, the law, and the flesh becomes changed, and we begin to learn how to live in some measure his life here below.

Lastly, the Apostle John dwells very specially on purification as the result of the cross (see 1 John i. 7; Rev. i. 5, vii. 14, xxii. 14, R.V.). In daily walk our robes become soiled, but full provision is made for daily cleansing. Learning thus more deeply to understand the wondrous meaning of the cross we day by day fulfil in our own history, and experience the power of the Cross of Christ in self-denial, self-sacrifice, and dying to sin and the world.

MR. F. S. ARNOT

told afresh something of the wonderful way in which God led him thousands of miles through the heart of West Central Africa into the Garenganze country, then an empire of considerable extent. The character of the region was admirably illustrated by a large map, specially prepared to show the trade route from Benguella to Garenganze—how God opened the hearts of the native despots, made a way through the most lawless tribes, restrained the malice of the slave-hunters, and won a hearing from Msidi and among his savage people. God's marvellous faithfulness and overshadowing care were again illustrated in the stories of deliverance and guidance told so simply and quietly by this heroic young missionary pioneer. These things are all in his book, and doubtless many of his hearers had read them there, but none the less did they stir all hearts as they were narrated to the glory of God.

As to present matters, there are now two missionaries in the Garenganze country, two are on their way thither, some six are in the Luvalu, and others at Bihé preparing for the journey to the interior. It must be remembered that the whole of this route lies along an elevated plateau, or hilly ridge, the watershed drawing northwards to the Congo, and southwards to the Zambesi. Hence after the coast section, from Benguella to Bihé, is traversed, the route is exceedingly healthy, and fever is not to be dreaded. At present the workers are preparing for fresh labourers, men and women, called by God and fitted for this service. Many are needed, but the standard cannot be lowered. Let the Church of God wait on Him, and the answer will come as of old, "Separate unto Me"—whom He will.

WITH REGARD TO THE OPIUM QUESTION, the following opinion of a Parsee gentleman seems worth reproducing:—"Opium stupifies, alcohol incites; opium dulls the nerves slowly, alcohol quickly destroys them; opium makes a coward, alcohol a murderer. Even in small doses, taken over a long time, opium makes a brute, alcohol a beast. Take thy choice, and then hide thy face from the light of day."—Madras Mail.

JEWISH NOTES.

NEW YORK.

The distress among Jews in New York during the past winter has been appalling, and Mr. Warszawiak and his helpers have been compelled to spend much of their time in giving them relief. He writes: "We have found that this furnace of distress has not been without a cleansing work among the poor people. A number have frankly admitted that it is a punishment from God, and it may be because of rejecting the Messiah. In some houses we have found the New Testament being diligently studied by those unwillingly idle men, while many most gratefully acknowledge the Christian love shown them in the relief received, and contrast it with the indifference they meet with among their own people.

YEMENITES IN JERUSALEM.

A few years ago a number of Yemenite Jews from Arabia arrived at Jerusalem and encamped on the slopes of Olivet in great destitution. Much kindness was shown them by missionaries of the London Jews Society and others. These Jews had never before heard of Christ or seen Christians, and the kindness they received at Christian hands impressed them deeply, especially in contrast with the treatment they received from the Jerusalem Jews, who showed them no pity. One of their leaders wrote to their Rabbi in Yemen, telling him in glowing terms of the Christians and their doctrines. Rabbi Yehya wrote in reply:—"With regard to the Christians, you mentioned that they are religious and benevolent people. We can say nothing, because we have never as yet seen a Christian; they are not to be found in the whole of Yemen. And with regard to the book you sent us (the New Testament), we have never seen the like here. . . That religion is quite a new thing to us, and of it we never heard since the destruction of the first Temple, when our emigration from the land of Israel took place." There are now several Yemenite settlements around Jerusalem, which are regularly visited by Rev. J. Jamal. In the March number of the Jewish Intelligencer he writes of the readiness with which they hear the Gospel. After speaking by invitation to a Yemenite congregation, who listened for two hours without interruption and with marked attention, some were heard to say: "Should this Christian Rabbi go to our country, Yemen, we are sure that hundreds of our people would embrace his faith." The Mildmay Mission to the Jews have been waiting on the Lord for some time past for an opening in Arabia, and they hope before long to send forth a messenger of Christ to this hopeful field, where the soil is virgin, and where the evil seeds of a corrupt Christianity have never yet been sown.

SOUTH AFRICA.

On arrival at Johannesburg, Messrs. Day and Malbert were kindly received hy the ministers of the Dutch Reformed, Presbyterian, and Baptist Churches, and were invited to give addresses on the Jewish Mission. The Brethren were likewise interested in the cause. There being a large number of poor Russian Jews at Johannesburg, who can read nothing that is not written in Hebrew characters, the evangelists were compelled to prepare their handbills by means of a mimeograph, as the only printer who possessed Hebrew type refused to use it for such a purpose. The opening for Jews was held in the Public School, on Jan. 10, and was attended by about twelve Jews, mostly of the upper class. Two days later a letter appeared in the local paper attacking Jewish Missions, and raising questions which afforded an excellent opportunity to the missionaries to reply, and thus to make known the object of their visit to many who would otherwise have been unreached. Their correspondent afterwards interviewed them, and proved to be a highly-educated Jew of the Reformed school. He remained talking for three hours, and seemed in a measure touched by what was said to him.

The jargon-speaking Jews from Russia have attended the meetings held expressly for them, and listened very attentively, many accepting New Testaments at the close. But at a meeting held in the Dutch Reformed Church, where the addresses were given in English, Mr. Malbert had eggs thrown at him by some English Jews who attended on purpose to vent their rage against him as a "turncoat." The class to which these turbulent spirits belong is becoming numerous in Johannesburg, and they are known as "Jew-boys." Addresses are now being given every Thursday evening to English-speaking Jews in the Baptist Church, and on Saturdays and Sundays to Russian Jews in the Blue Ribbon Hall, which is conveniently situated in the heart of the Jewish quarter. New Testaments are given away after each meeting. The gold mines extend for several miles, and the stores, which line the entire distance, are, almost without exception, in Jewish hands. This in itself will show to what an extent the Jews are pushing their way in this part of the world. It has been remarked that Johannesburg should be re-named Jewsburg.

Messrs. Day and Malbert have been much cheered by seeing the light dawn upon one Jewish soul, who is now rejoicing in the knowledge of acceptance with God through Christ. He said to one of the missionaries: "You remember my saying that I did not think there was much use in your coming to Johannesburg. How little did I think then that I should myself be so soon converted! I now believe you were sent of God to that end."

JERUSALEM NOTES.

The last few days have been exceptional ones for all who have Protestant feeling and aspiration. The "Reunion" pilgrims (so called) have come and gone, and left behind a very pleasing recollection. The company, numbering 120, headed by the Bishop of Worcester and his son and Canon Tristram, arrived by steamer at Jaffa, and, of course, have gone about (if not from Dan to Beersheba) under the skilful pilotage of Messrs. Cook's representatives, spying out the land to the utmost of their power. It was pleasant to find that some, if not so many as could be wished, had a desire to know all about the Christian living agencies and the work effected by them, as well about the dead past; and the work of the London Jews' Society and the Church Missionary Society will doubtless benefit in the future by the sympathy now elicited.

The lectures delivered by Canon Tristram and Mr. Fred. Bliss were exceptional for their ability and the living power which accompanies those who speak of their own special subjects, whilst to visitors who had heard of the present incumbent of Christ Church, Mr. Kelk, and the oldest missionary in Palestine, Mr. Zeller, no doubt their deliverances on "Walks about Jerusalem" and "The Druses" were most welcome. Certainly those who heard Mr. Hanauer talk of the walls and the Temple area, and who profited by his guidance thereto, will have some idea how unrivalled is his knowledge of these subjects.

Last Sunday had been hopefully anticipated by many, and although the stormy winds had hindered a large number of Americans from arriving, and slightly chilled those who were here, yet the sermons by the Bishops of Worcester and North Dakota were refreshingly simple and practical and evangelical.

Jerusalem is even yet a wondrous city, "whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord." Tourists come and go continually; but the resident scores of thousands remain and multiply, and piteously little and feeble seems to be the quickening power which on one day worked such wonders. Though saddening, it is not to me astonishing; but some of us in prayer on the Mount of Olives last Saturday, felt that, like the men of Galilee on that spot, we were "looking up into heaven." May many soon go as they did, and meet with like success! Is Turkey stronger than Imperial Rome? And if it were, must not both fall before the "stone which was cut out of the mountain without hands"? ## WORK IN ROME.

Mrs. Wall writes:—We have much, very much, that encourages us to believe there is a growing interest in the Word of God amongst the people, not only with the working classes, but also with those who fill other positions. We take our tracts weekly to most of the respectable shops, and find very few who refuse, not more than one or two in a street. The portions have also been given, and now many ask for a copy of the New Testament. Our medical mission makes our visits to the poor most welcome. Whenever a person has once been to receive the medicine, they are not only pleased to see us, but also to listen to the sweet words of Jesus. Our only sorrow is that we have so few who are able to go; our workers are fully engaged from morning to night, and as yet our prayers for reinforcements have not been answered.

MILDMAY COTTAGE CONVALESCENT HOME.

BY A RECENT VISITOR.

The fragrance with which the name of Mr. Pennefather is enshrined in the memory of thousands in the present day testifies to the practical and personal nature of the work which he organised and carried on through a long life with such a large amount of success. Little wonder that after his death his numerous friends were desirous of instituting memorials worthy of the pastor they mourned.

Two of those with whom he had been connected in Christian toil were walking in the neighbourhood of Tonbridge shortly after his death. Passing some pretty cottages, one of them exclaimed, "How nice it would be if we could have a Cottage Home of our own in memory of Mr. Pennefather, and invite some of our poor tired people down for rest and change!" The wish thus expressed proved the germ of a Christian enterprise which has brought help and hope to hundreds of suffering and almost hopeless toilers in the great Metropolis, The scheme was talked over, prayed about, and finally, in the name of the Master and his servant lately gathered home, funds were collected. On April 13, 1874, a small Cottage Home to accommodate four women was formally opened. A few friends gathered on the wet and stormy day, amongst them being the two ladies to whom the Home owed its commencement. How strange it seemed that one of these should, even in the consummation of her cherished plan, receive "the arrow with a point sharpened with love." Only once, during the following months, while consumption was rapidly doing its work, was she able to visit the Cottage Home.

After eleven years the Cottage Home was removed from Tonbridge to East Finchley, but that place was found to be too near London to ensure the benefit that was desirable for its inmates, and after two years a convenient and much larger house was taken at Clacton-on-Sea. A glance at the Home itself and those who visit it may serve to indicate something of the routine of work carried on. At the top of the house are two airy dormitories, overlooking fields and country scenery, and capable, with a wing-room below, of accommodating nine women. These come from crowded homes, or solitary lodgings, the overburdened and failing mothers of large families: solitary women who are eking out a scanty living by hard work, servant girls who have broken down in their situations, and have no homes to go to; while sometimes there may be found amongst the inmates of Mildmay Cottage white-faced children who have pined amidst London smoke and din. All these receive personal care at the hands of the matron.

In addition to these inmates, there are from time to time other visitors of a higher social position, who occupy a large, well-furnished bedroom, and share the matron's pleasant sitting-room. Most of these visitors are Christian workers, who, in this Home of Rest, and surrounded by Christian influences, and the fine bracing air of the place, speedily regain lost vigour, and return refreshed in mind and body to their sphere of labour. The charge made to these visitors, though moderate, is sufficient to help in defraying the expenses of the Home. Many of the poorer people who come down are unable to pay even the small sum that by no means covers their actual expenses, and then this charge is reduced, paid by some benevolent friend, or remitted altogether. So the Home is largely dependent upon the generosity of subscribers. During the year 1892-3, 143 people visited and derived benefit from their stay in the Cottage.

This Home of Rest is sadly crippled for want of funds just now. Household goods will wear out, and the small regular income of the Home leaves no margin for replenishing. Should any kind reader wish to relieve the present necessity, or become a subscriber to the Home, they are desired to communicate with the secretary, Mrs. Macrae, 119, Mildmay-road, N.

FIGUERAS.—Don Alexander has just received an intimation from his advocate that April 30 has been fixed for the date of his trial. So once more we appeal for earnest prayer on behalf of our brother. —Emily Lopez Rodriguez.

MOTHERS, in their fondness and solicitude for their daughters, often err grievously. They should all know that to invite and possess the confidence of their daughters is to secure them against evils?

MISSION WORK IN PERSIA.

ENGLISH OFFICIAL OPPOSITION.

THE Mohammedan authorities in Persia have begun to dread the leavening power of Christian missionary work and the circulation of the Holy Scriptures. Unable to prevent this by threats, they have now adopted a somewhat new line of action. They have discovered that the British Government can be induced to assist them in preventing the spread of Christianity among Muslims. On two occasions recently they have, therefore, appealed to the British consul at Ispahan to put a stop to certain very important portions of our work. In the first instance they were completely successful. The consul found that his official instructions compelled him, though unwillingly, to force the British and Foreign Bible Society to close a Bible shop they had only shortly before started in Ispahan. At the same time he compelled the C.M.S. to close their dispensary in the same building, and to prevent the re-opening of these rooms he removed the Bibles and medicines to the Consulate, where they still remain. On appealing to the British Minister at Teheran, we were informed that the consul had been perfectly correct in his action. It was with regret that the consul took this step, but he merely acted up to his instructions.

A more decided attempt is now being made to put a final stop to all Christian mission work here. Encouraged by their success in the matter already mentioned, the Muslim authorities have now applied to him (a) to forbid us to circulate the Scriptures among Muslims, (b) to compel us to drive away Muslim boys from our school, (c) to put a stop to medical mission work among Persian women, and (d) to force us to refrain from using a lithographic press which we have just set up. This application was not technically correct in the way it was made, and the consul was thus enabled to set it aside for a few days. In the interval thus obtained he telegraphed for instructions to H.B. Majesty's Minister at Teheran.

The consul has now addressed to Rev. W. St. Clair Tisdall, secretary C.M.S. Mission at Ispahan, a letter, in which he embodies the instructions which he has received. In that letter the consul says:—

"I am instructed by Her Majesty's Minister that the condition on which missionaries are allowed to reside in Persia is that they do not proselytise among Mussulmans. Further, with reference to the complaint of the Persian authorities regarding the printing press which you have lately established, I am informed that, if it is established for proselytising purposes, the Persian Government would be in their right in asking for its suppression. . . . The Persian Government, while according perfect freedom in religious matters to all communities not professing Islam, have expressed their determination that any interference with the belief of such of their subjects as are Mussulmans shall not be tolerated.

"It is with very much regret that I have to inform you that, according to my reading of my instructions, should you or any of your subordinates get into any difficulty while working among the Mussulmans, it will not be in my power to offer you any official assistance."

It follows, therefore, that not only has the English Government informed us that they will not help us should we be exposed to danger in our work, but they tell us that we are permitted to remain in this country only on condition of our not doing the very work for which we came to Persia! Should the Persian authorities bring to the English Ambassador's notice the fact that we still persist in preaching the Gospel of Christ, it remains to be seen what he will do. Unless he receives instructions contrary to those which have now been given him, the result can hardly be other than an order for our departure from Persia. It has come, then, to this: that the British Government steps in to support Muslim fanaticism, and to forbid us missionaries to obey, in Persia at any rate, our Master's parting command.

Of course we missionaries shall not permit anyone to prevent us from doing our duty as long as we are permitted to remain in the country; but we would ask Christians in England to do their best for us by inducing Her Majesty's Ministers to change their present policy of supporting Islam and striving to crush out of existence Christian missions among Muslims. They are now pursuing in Muslim lands the same line of action that in India made them expel missionaries from British territory in days gone by, and thus helped to produce the Mutiny—God's judgment upon our nation for openly opposing the spread of the Gospel. Surely at the close of the nineteenth century it is too late for a professedly Christian country to oppose Christian missions.

MEDICAL MISSIONS IN INDIA.

ONE of the great wants of this heathen land is men of God with knowledge of the medical science, and the more such men we can have for India the better. While in the larger towns and cities the Government provides very largely for the medical wants of a certain class of the people, and while the recently-established "Dufferin Hospitals" supply, to some measure, a want sadly felt by the female population of our cities, yet it may well be said that the great mass of the poor, both male and female, are destitute of competent medical attention, and it is the very poor especially that require the aid of our medical missions.

My own opinion is, after a long career of mission work in India, that every missionary who is sent forth should have at least some medical training to fit him for his work, for once he goes forth into the country he will find no end of most pitiable cases of bodily ailments, and the people most anxious for medical help. Of recent years a good movement has been set on foot to train Christian native students for the double duty of healing bodily ailments, as well as making known the richer provisions made in the Gospel to heal the maladies of the souls of men.

The Missionary Training Institute started in Agra by Dr. Valentine in 1881 is doing a noble work in this direction, and while I resided lately with the good Doctor for a few days I was highly pleased to see the order, discipline, and training of the native medical students under Dr. Valentine's care and tuition. The one great difficulty is to secure a sufficient number of the right sort of men, but as mission converts multiply this difficulty will grow less.

To say nothing of the use these students will prove to their own countrymen when they go forth equipped for their work in the double capacity of evangelists and doctors, it is also a grand opening for the most intelligent of our young converts to a career in which they can pursue a most useful and honourable course of life, and one in which they may by diligence gain a competency by which they may promote not only their own interests, but also the higher interests of mission work.

One great drawback in paid native agency has been the idea that evangelists are mere mercenary hirelings who preach the Gospel simply because they draw a salary for doing it; but when they can say "we not only support ourselves, but we also heal the sick, that are poor, freely," their moral power will be felt throughout the land. I know of no better opening to the hearts of these suspicious and caste-bound people than to be able to give them a practical proof of our interest in their good by being able to heal their diseases and relieve their bodily pains. Therefore I wish God-speed to such useful work as that carried on by Dr. Valentine's Missionary Medical Institute in Agra.

THOMAS EVANS.

IN AN EDITORIAL NOTE the Methodist Times says: "We tried two sections in the Methodist Temperance work of this country for many years, but it did not work at all, and finally the Conference, without a dissentient voice, allowed temperance societies to be formed on an exclusively total abstinence basis."

IDOLS DESTROYED.—Describing the opening of a new chapel at Pao-ning (Si-chuen), Rev. W. W. Cassels writes:—"Early on Sunday morning I was in the new chapel, spending a quiet half-hour in prayer before the day began. While kneeling there a man came in with a basket on his back. He, too, knelt for a moment in prayer, and then took a seat. I soon got up to speak to him. I know him as a man who had been at the service a few times, and found that he then had a basketful of his idols and tablets, which he wished to destroy publicly. So the first outsider to enter the chapel on the morning of its opening was one who was turning to God from idols! On Christmas Day I baptized ten, four of them men and six women. Nearly all of them were advanced in years."

REAPING IN CONGO-LAND.

DR. W. H. LESLIE writes from Banza Manteka, on the Congo:—"While our hearts are sad with the loss of Brother C. E. Ingham and others whom we loved, we are cheered and encouraged by the abundant harvest which is being reaped for Christ. Between 200 and 300 souls have been added to the church here since last March, which means a great deal when it is considered that each one of them has passed through a number of rigid examinations, and their lives were carefully watched for manifestations of the working of God's Spirit before they were accepted as church members. If candidates in England and America were as carefully dealt with there would be fewer dead churches.

"These poor people support their own (very) poor, and also support a native missionary, who is doing a grand work in a town about two days' journey from here. The evangelists (native) of this church are about ten in number, supported, some by Young People's Christian Endeavour Societies of America, some by individuals. We have a school, in which these workers are taught for a portion of each year. The Lord is abundantly blessing their labours; their reports remind one more of apostolic than modern times. Men, seemingly, dare not lay hands on them, although at times they are desirous of doing so. They defy the State soldiers to commit acts of cruelty and vice. Chiefs cower before them.

"An incident occurred a few weeks ago that has the genuine 'miracle' ring about it. An influential chief had opposed the work for a long time, and at last threatened to punish any who would come out to hear the Gospel. The preachers, nothing daunted, took the case to the One who is able to remove the greatest obstacle or to bring low the proudest head. Believing that He had heard them, they came out and preached Jesus to the chief. At first he refused to listen, but after a time became quiet, and then showed personal interest. He was impressed and convicted, and at last asked the old question, 'What must I do?' The way was unfolded from the Word, and illuminated by the Holy Spirit, until the man said—

"'THAT'S GOOD, TELL ME MORE.'

So the rest of the day was spent in slaking the thirst of this awakened soul at the fount of life, and when the sun was set the only candle was burnt to render further reading possible; and deep was the regret when it flickered and went out. Before dawn had matured to daylight, the man was at the teacher's hut, waking him from sleep 'to tell him more.' This chief is now holding up Jesus to his own people."

THE A.L.O.E. MEMORIAL.

You have already announced that the Church of England Zenana Missionary Society (to which the late Miss C. M. Tucker belonged) has proposed that a memorial fund should be opened to build a nursing ward connected with the dispensary at Batala, which she had named the Star, because she believed it was a source of light in the surrounding heathen darkness.

This scheme is one which the relatives and friends of this loving and saintly missionary believe is the memorial which of all others she would have chosen. We have already received at this office about £14 in direct contributions towards the £330 needed to build the ward, and we trust that sums of which we do not at present know may have been contributed through our local secretaries.

Women and girls in the city and district where Miss Tucker lived and laboured are dying for want of care in their sickness—dying without a word of hope or comfort. The need is therefore urgent, and we trust it may be made widely known, and that the means to build and open the ward may be given without delay. Contributions may be sent to the financial secretary, C.E.Z.M.S., 9, Salisbury-square, E.C.

ABORIGINES IN CHINA.—Mr. Waters has taken an interesting journey into Kwang-si, proceeding as far as Peh-seh, from whence houseboats can be taken down the river to Canton. He found the people very respectable and well-to-do. Very little opium is smoked, and numbers of the people belong to the aboriginal tribes. The people everywhere were friendly, and possessed a great many foreign things brought from Canton. They knew he had come to preach the "Jesus religion," listened very well, and bought books.

THE R.S.U. JUBILEE.

On April 11, 1844, Mr. S. R. Starey invited three friends interested in work among ragged children, Messrs. Locke, Morrison, and Moulton, to meet him in conference at his father's house. That night these four laid the foundation of "The Ragged School Union." They called a second and larger meeting, soon followed by another and another. Meanwhile, Mr. Starey went into the courts and alleys, offering pennies as bribes to the wild, ragged children there to take him to their "schools," so discovering the whereabouts of existing missions, and inviting teachers and representatives to the meetings.

Plans were made, resolutions carried, methods discussed, and the lines on which the Union was to work formulated. Finally, on November 21, Lord Ashley (Shaftesbury) was asked to become president, an office he accepted, and nobly filled until his death. He lent, without stint, his heartiest co-operation and wide influence. It was a work after his own heart, and to him is due its broadly extended usefulness. After fifteen months of devoted service, during which he acted as co-honorary secretary with his friend Mr. Locke, Mr. Starey was called from London, but not until the Union was firmly established, and had gained a deep hold on the hearts and sympathies of God's people, who with himself had heard "the cry of the children."

Surely and steadily ever since its beneficent mission has extended on every hand. Fresh methods to suit fresh needs, and to meet the altered conditions of the times, have been invented by its ready agency. Its year of jubilee has come, and all who care that the little ones of our great city should not be forgotten in the rush of its modern life are urged to make themselves conversant with details of the splendid mission of the "Ragged School Union," and by sympathy, gifts, and prayers to support the hands of its over 4000 voluntary workers, and share in the jubilee joy.

THE P.S.A. MOVEMENT.

In October last, at the Congregational Institute, Nottingham, a large and representative Conference was held to consider the relation of the P.S.A. classes to the churches, and how those classes should be conducted so as most efficiently to further the extension of the Kingdom of God in the land. At the conclusion of the Conference, the following resolution was unanimously and heartily adopted:—

"That twelve representatives of the P.S.A. classes in the town, to be selected by their Federation, and twelve ministers of the town, to be chosen by the Ministers' Fraternal, form a committee to consider more fully the two questions that had been brought before the Conference, and to report to the leaders of the P.S.A. classes, and to the churches in the town."

This committee has met twice, and after full consideration of the P.S.A. movement, and the relations which it should hold to the churches, has adopted unanimously the following resolutions, and earnestly commends them to all leaders of the P.S.A. classes, and to all the churches in the town:—

First—"This Conference, whilst recognising the great good that has been done by the P.S.A. classes in many places, perceives certain dangers that may imperil their future usefulness unless wise and effective precautions be taken."

Second—"In order to guard this popular movement from such dangers, and to secure the results which its founders have earnestly sought, it is absolutely necessary that the Sunday meetings of the P.S.A. classes, without losing their attractive and brotherly character, be conducted distinctly as religious services, so as to awaken and cultivate a devotional spirit; and, further, that the proclamation and appeal of Christ's Gospel, by speech or song, and the enforcement of his teaching in regard to the personal and social life of men, be the constant aim of all who take part in them."

Third—"It is most important that each P.S.A. class should be so related to the churches of the town:—

(a) That, on the one hand, representatives of a single church, or of several churches, shall be associated with the class, and have part in its direction, and that the churches shall support and encourage these representatives in this responsible position, by their sympathy and prayers, so that all the P.S.A. classes shall feel the inspiring and sustaining spiritual force of the church in all their work; and

(b) That on the other hand, the P.S.A. classes shall in every way assist and forward the varied work of the churches, and impress upon their members who profess faith in Christ that they should become members of Christ's Church in one of its branches, and share in the privileges and duties of church membership."

IT IS TEN TIMES EASIER to lead a child than an adult to Christ; and I may add, that often the child is ten times as fruitful in the Kingdom of God as the adult.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

MR. HOLLAND'S BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Those who give attention to the progress of practical Christianity in the slums of the Metropolis cannot fail to be attracted by the fine work of the George Yard Mission. Of the many influences that have contributed to the success of this institution, the personality of its chief, Mr. George Holland, stands among the foremost. When the George Yard Ragged School was opened, forty years ago, it was to him its management was entrusted; and since then he has borne the burden and heat of the day, and seen the fields ripen to harvest under his fostering care.

To open a Ragged School in these early days required faith, courage, and wisdom possessed by few, and the good Lord Shaftesbury loved to acknowledge that the sight of George Holland, busy at work in the moral waste at Whitechapel, always inspired him with fresh zeal to pursue the new crusade for Christ. To describe the environment of the mission at its commencement, so that it may be realised to-day, is almost impossible. The old conditions, moral and physical, have disappeared, and happily there is no locality in existence, in London at least, to which they can be compared. To the work given to him, Mr. Holland brought a heart filled with unfailing charity, and the power to awaken the better feelings in the most abandoned. To the children he was most attractive, and his ministration to them was the key to their parents' heart. Friends from every rank of life rallied to his aid. To each, without patronage or condescension, he assigned their place, and many high-born ladies found that under his unobtrusive but vigilant management they could render the cause efficient aid.

When it became known that March of this year carried with it his seventieth birthday, his many friends resolved to do themselves a pleasure by giving it a worthy celebration. Accordingly it rained congratulations all last Thursday. The Duchess of York asked him to accept her kind wishes and her photograph, and the Duchesses of Sutherland and of Bedford gave practical proofs of their goodwill. His old friend, Earl Compton, the new president of the Ragged School Union, and the Countess Compton sent him a kindly message, as well as Lady Nottage, Miss Marsh, and many others.

In the evening there was a notable gathering, containing representatives of the highest and the lowest ranks of the social scale, the Earl of Harrowby presiding. He said that he had known his revered friend for thirty years, and that he had kept himself acquainted with the marvellous progress of the mission by personal visits. The charm of Mr. Holland's annual reports was their thankfulness to God for blessing received. But what else was to be expected, seeing the good old English Bible was the text-book alike for the children and the young people of the mission? By means of the crêche, babies were taken in at the tender age of three weeks, and thereafter every stage of their growth had special provision made for its requirements. The mainspring of the work was Mr. Holland's ardent love for his fellow-men, and his belief in the glorious Gospel of Christ. He congratulated Mr. Holland on his vigour, and in his own name, and on behalf of all present, wished him health and prosperity in his work for many long days to come.

Rev. M. Linton Smith, the representative of Rev. E. A. B. Sanders, the rector of Whitechapel, said he was delighted to come to George Yard. New to the locality, everywhere he heard of Mr. Holland and his work, and saw healthy proofs of it not only in the educative and civilising agencies of the Mission, but in the power of a better life that had its source in the unseen, in the lives of the people.

The testimony given by Colonel Macgregor as to the value of George Yard was of much value. Long before he had seen the place he had been interested in it, and for the past nine years he had been permitted to take his part along with other voluntary workers.

At this stage the Countess of Harrowby asked Mr. Holland's acceptance of an enlarged photograph of himself, in an oak frame, in the name of over a thousand children, and others who were regular in their attendance at the Mission, and on behalf of other friends, she asked him to accept the present of a pony, to be used by him in his work. Not less valuable were the kind words used by the Countess in making the presentations.

In acknowledging the gifts, Mr. Holland took the opportunity of restating the principles on which the George Yard Mission rested. The Bible, he said, was the book of the place; old and young were led to study it; and now, after his long years of work, proofs of the value of its teaching were always coming in. No fewer than 45,000 children had attended the schools, and many of them were now living Christian lives all over the world. He promised to make good use of the pony, as at his age a lift in life was very pleasant and acceptable. He hoped to have many years' work still in Whitechapel and to die in harness.

The Rector of Spitalfields, Rev. J. H. Scott, said he was a fellow-worker with Mr. Holland, and had come to testify to his brotherly feeling to him, and to join in thanksgiving for all he had been permitted to do. The modesty that characterised Mr. Holland's methods might be taken as a model by all Christian workers.

The good wishes of the voluntary workers of the Ragged School Union were conveyed in a sympathetic address by Mr. John Kirk, Secretary of the Ragged School Union, and this brought a very pleasant meeting to a close.

ST. GILES' CHRISTIAN MISSION.

Anyone wishing to gain an idea of the nature of the work carried on by this Mission could have easily done so by witnessing its operations on Good Friday. Between eight and nine o'clock in the morning about 100 prisoners were discharged from the London gaols. All these were invited by the Mission to partake of the free breakfast provided day by day during the year at the prison gates. God's Word was read, and kindly advice given to all those partaking of the free meal.

Before the last person had left the breakfast rooms, the children of the Mission Sunday-schools were gathering at the hall in Little Wild-street, Drury-lane, and by ten o'clock about 1100 children were seated to listen to a brief and earnest address.

In the evening, the same chapel was literally crammed with adults listening to selections from Handel's "Messiah." So favourable an opportunity of proclaiming the Gospel was eagerly embraced by Mr. Wheatley, who in commenting on the solo, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," mentioned the wondrous kindness of Him who loved us so that "While we were yet sinners He died for us." Mr. Wheatley spoke of the case of an elderly gentleman who was recently robbed of £5000 by a man who is now a convict, and who when sentenced left behind him a daughter totally unprovided for. But in the time of her sore need the very one who had been so greatly wronged took her himself, cared for her for a time, and then brought her to Mr. Wheatley, so that she might be comfortably placed in a school. Mr. Wheatley remarked that such striking kindness is rare with men; after all, it but feebly illustrates the love of Him about whom they had been hearing in the singing.

So the work is carried on, inside and outside prisons, in Homes for men, boys, women, and children, in Sunday-schools, in mission-halls, and amongst the poor and sick of St. Giles. Will the readers pray that the Lord's blessing may rest on the work of his servants.

MISS MARIA WEST.

Dear Sir,—You will be grieved to hear that Miss Maria A. West, author of the "Romance of Missions," and who has often contributed to your columns, is at present lying here dangerously ill. Her illness necessitates an operation of a very serious nature, which by the time this reaches you will have been performed. I write that you and the many friends of our dear and honoured sister on both sides of the Atlantic, and in the far East, where she so long laboured as a missionary, may remember her specially in prayer at this time.

During a sojourn in the Riviera for health's sake also, I have had the great privilege of Christian fellowship with the beloved sufferer, and I would most earnestly commend her to the prayers of God's children that if it his will He may be pleased to spare her for further useful service. Besides her work in Armenia, she was honoured to establish Strangers' Rests at Smyrna and at Constantinople, and many have been blessed through her instrumentality.—Yours faithfully in Christ, P. W. Whytock.

The Thanksgiving Meetings.

LETTERS FROM WORKERS.

I am extremely glad of the projected thanksgiving meeting at the Mile-end Assembly Hall, and I shall make a point of attending some of the meetings. J. F. Morton.
Conference Hall, Mildmay Park, N.

I gladly would join in "praising the Lord" in the meetings of the 11th, and believe these will be the forerunner of still larger blessings He intends to give us in our future ministry for Him. W. Holmes.
156, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.

I cannot tell you how my heart rejoiced at the thought of that grand Praise-meeting. May I suggest that French Christians unite with you on April 11 in praise for all that God has done in France?
22, Rue Vendôme, Lyon. A. Malpas.

You have my hearty sympathy in the effort noted in your letter of March 15. Trusting it may have the effect of stirring the whole Church into more diligent services,—Yours sincerely,
Ned Wright.
Greenhill Park, Harlesden, N.W.

It was surely an inspired thought which prompted the thanksgiving service for April 11. I shall certainly hope to join you, and to induce as many Ragged School workers as possible to share in a like privilege. John Kirk.
Ragged School Union, 37, Norfolk-street, Strand, W.C.

We will very heartily join in the thanksgiving for blessing since '59, and many of our workers will be delighted to be present, and to join in the praise, for His mercy endureth for ever. May we continue to praise Him, as well as to pray to Him.
Edward W. Matthews, Sec.
British and Foreign Sailors' Society, Mercer-street, Shadwell, E.

May God's Spirit bless his children with a mighty "revival," a wholesale "restoration" of backsliders and a worldwide "quickening" amongst the dry bones! May our Lord, who has burdened your soul with this matter, guide you. Nothing is more needed to hasten his coming. Augustus Wilke.
The Emigrants' Home, Blackwall, E.

I see the great thanksgiving meeting at Mile End is on the very jubilee day of my husband's founding the Ragged School Union. Mr. Starey has been ill, and is far from strong; but I hope, please God, we may get to Mile End either morning or evening, to unite our thanks and praise with those of God's other dear workers.
Jessie Hepburn Starey.
Camden Town, N.W.

Your invitation for a day of thanksgiving on April 9th, has started such a song of praise in my heart for the blessing of 1859 which has followed us ever since, that I send my tribute of praise and thanksgiving to be added in your meeting. Looking prayerfully and expectantly to see greater things. "They all drank of that spiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Christ." Maria J. Frith.
Inniskillen.

I am in full sympathy with you and the other brethren, conveners of the meeting for thanksgiving, to be held in the Great Assembly Hall on April 11. May the Lord pour out on all assembled the spirit of true praise and thanksgiving, and send showers of blessing on all work and workers in East End missions. J. Wilkinson.
Mildmay Mission to the Jews, 79, Mildmay-road, N.

As one who through the grace of God was brought to a knowledge of the truth in the great awakening of 1859, and who has been privileged to witness very much blessing to hundreds since that time, I rejoice to hear of the proposed day for praise to God. May He give his people hearts full of loving gratitude for all the glorious things which have been accomplished during these many years. May there be a hearty oneness in praising our God, such as there was in the days of Solomon. Robert Bilke.
Abergeldie, Greenhill-road, Harlesden, N.W.

I quite hope to be present at one of the meetings in the Great Assembly Hall, and shall do my best to induce our other workers here to spend part of the day in praising God for his abundant blessings. I can look back since 1859 and say, "Blessed be the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits." I trust that this occasion for praise and thanksgiving will result in bringing down redoubled blessings on the universal Church and to all Christian workers.
Courthope Todd.
Macready House, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, W.C.

Is there any particular reason for confining the area of thanksgiving to the East End of London? There are some among us still whom God most graciously honoured in 1859 and subsequent years in a much wider field, such as Dr. Williamson, of Belfast, and Dr. Whyte, of Edinburgh, and others whom I could name, and who were fellow-workers with Reginald Radcliffe and Brownlow North. Would it not be to the glory of God to widen the basis, and to bring in these veterans, now hoary in the Master's service? (Rev.) J. More.
Cheltenham.

It is with joy I see the notice of the Meeting of Praise for April 11, and my wife and I sincerely trust to be able to be with you. I can, thank God, look back to the blessing which was showered down in the sixties, and my father rejoiced with others at the revival on all sides. For the many years of blessing at the Emigrants' Home we desire to praise, and are looking forward with fresh confidence to a mighty awakening if God's people get together. In the Victoria Homes in Whitechapel we never had a greater spirit of hearing than now. Edward Trotter.
5, Montague-square, W.

There can hardly be two opinions among Christian men as to the wisdom and duty of holding special meetings for praise and thanksgiving where God's mercies have been manifest and great. I am not able, from personal knowledge of details, to connect the cause and effect in East London, as you and some others can; but if in your own knowledge marked blessings from God have been the result of the prayers offered in 1861, I can well rejoice with you that hearts are being moved to true gratitude and praise. May the meetings be abundantly owned of God to his glory.
25, Onslow-gardens, S.W. H. W. Webb-Peploe.

One cannot refrain from writing a line or two in thanks to our God for the hearty responses given from so many of the Lord's stewards to your timely suggestion for prayer and praise. Surely the spirit of it already burns in every true Christian's soul. It has been the subject of prayer from a few in Brighton that such a gathering should be convened.

We take your suggestion to be quite of the Lord, and an answer to our prayers. Surely we might take up the prayer of Asa (2 Chr. xiv. 11), and cry, "Lord, it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many or with them that have no power; help us O Lord our God, for we rest on thee," etc. May the Lord grant a mighty day with Himself and revival which is so much needed.
Edward Hurditch.
27, Buckingham-road, Brighton.

The memory of the mighty Revival of 1859-60 thrills my soul. I was a lad then, and one of many called into the Kingdom of God at the time. I remember attending a great meeting for praise and prayer in the City Hall, Glasgow, where upwards of three thousand were gathered together. The wave of spiritual blessing was rolling over the land. Among those who took part were some workers from Belfast, one of whom was Rev. Thomas Toy. He, with the other labourers, had come from the midst of the awakening there, and while they spake and praised God the Spirit's power was manifested and many cried aloud for mercy. The Christians at that time were filled with praise, and earnest waiting on God, which resulted in thousands being brought to the Lord. D. M. Cameron.
Union Tabernacle, Wandsworth-road, S.W.

The call to a day of thanksgiving signed by six honoured names in your issue of March 15, has touched a chord and finds a response in many hearts here in Manchester, and we are asking how can we best co-operate in this blessed movement. As one who has watched with ever-growing thankfulness the wondrous Evangelistic and Missionary movement of the last thirty years, and as one who believes that these are but the drops which herald the showers of blessing which our God has promised and is waiting to give, I feel we do well to "keep not silence," but bringing an offering of thanksgiving prove the Lord (Mal. iii. 10). Surely He will "open the windows of heaven," and not England only but the world shall be refreshed.

I shall hope to be with you at the Great Assembly Hall on the 11th, unless we organise a similar gathering here at the same time, so that we shall be "with one accord," if we cannot be "in one place."
Manchester. Leonard K. Shaw.

The very mention of those "times of refreshing" and soul-blessing fills my heart to overflowing, so that I have no words for expression. Yes, '59 to '62 were dewy seasons indeed, though—thrice blessed be his holy name—I have seen his saving and sanctifying hand often and often since, but never, I think, in such a moving, mighty manner as then. Nevertheless, to those of us "who are alive and remain," He has not denied his precious word, "Lo, I am with you alway, even to the end."

I myself was born (spiritually) in 1856, the year of the first Barnet Conference, and got my Gospel training in the blessed seven years of spiritual plenty that followed, while yet a stripling yokefellow with Henry Hull and others at Stafford Rooms. Those were glorious days. But the Lord, the Spirit whose awakening and converting grace was there so abundantly poured out, remains the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever—his measure of bestowal still unlimited save by our unbelief and unreadiness to receive. We do well to meet and praise "Father, Son, and Holy Ghost" for all we, and others, have received in the days gone by, and since, till this very hour, and ask of Him more "rain in the time of the latter rain."

My still feeble state of health may prevent my being present in body, though I dare hope this may be permitted. Frank H. White.
Talbot Tabernacle, W.

GRATEFUL REMEMBRANCE.

Ah! full well do we remember
Vanished years of God's right hand;
When He woke from sin's deep slumber
Countless souls throughout the land:
Seasons when the quickening Spirit
Clothed his word with power Divine:
Glorifying Jesus' merit—
Sealing faith with many a sign.

Then did love, to effort rising,
As from deep artesian springs,
Flow in earnest deeds, devising
Yet more large and liberal things;
Till the Gospel's pure sweet fountains
Gushed from rocks once bleak and bare;
Desert sands and rugged mountains
Blossoming like gardens fair.

Though a younger generation
Finds survivors frail and few,
Who in fervent consecration
Kindled then or flamed anew;
Not the less the thrilling story
Of these thirty years and three*
Claims accumulating glory
To Almighty love so free.

Have our thanks been rendered duly
For abounding grace bestowed?
Have our lives, surrendered fully,
Proved our gratitude to God?
At his feet we fall, confessing
Lack of faithfulness and love;
Seek once more the wealth of blessing
Treasured in the clouds above.

Like the fragrant incense, raise us,
Lord of love, thy face before;
Kindle into joyful praises
All our hearts' devoted store.
Then, thine ear in mercy bending
To our penitent refrain,
Let the promised showers, descending,
Flood our thirsty land again.

Belfast. W. Maxwell.

A MARKED CHANGE.—Telling of a baptism of six at Ts'n-chan, North China, Mrs. Hunt writes:—"One of the women, Mrs. Chang, is the wife of 'Chang,' the man who was servant to Mr. and Mrs. Polhill-Turner at the time of that dreadful affair at Sung-p'an. She appears to be really changed. Naturally rather coarse and loud, she has wonderfully altered for the better. Now, the neighbours say, she never abuses them as was her wont. When provoked, she goes into her room, and shutting the door waits until the anger has quite gone."

THERE IS THIS PECULIARITY ABOUT STRONG DRINK, that it has the extraordinary power of permeating, with the result of rendering useless, whatever remedies are resorted to for the relief of social misery. Replace with improved dwellings the houses that drink has converted into hovels, and drink will at once assert its power to turn the improved dwellings into hovels. Reclothe the children whom drink has reduced to rags, and drink will again assert its power to strip them to rags. Replenish with food the cupboard that drink has left bare, and drink will again assert its power to clear the cupboard.—Temperance Record.

Letters to the Editor.

DR. WEYMOUTH ON 2 CORINTHIANS.

Dear Sir,—Will you permit me to set before your readers a few brief remarks on my Translation of Paul's Second Epistle to the Corinthians, which you are kindly allowing to appear by weekly instalments in your columns?

1. This Translation is by no means intended to compete with either the Authorised or the Revised Version, or with any other. I venture to think, however, it may be studied with advantage as a running commentary side by side with the more strictly literal (and for that reason probably less intelligible) rendering which the reader is accustomed to use.

2. The Head Master of Harrow, Dr. J. E. C. Welldon, in the preface to his scholarly and every way excellent translation of the Nicomachean Ethics of Aristotle, writes: "I have deliberately rejected the principle of trying to translate the same Greek word by the same word in English, and, where circumstances seemed to call for it, I have sometimes used two English words to represent one word of the Greek." On both these points Dr. Welldon has here given expression, as to a translator's duty, to views which I have long strongly held, and upon which I have acted in this Translation.

3. This Translation is in no sense a revision. It is made direct from the Greek. If therefore the reader is at any point disposed to say "I like" (or, "I do not like") "this alteration," I will ask him to reflect that "alteration" is altogether an inappropriate word, the work having been done independently of both A.V. and R.V. It is based on neither of these, though they are of course among the very numerous aids that have been consulted.

4. Of various readings of the Greek, the one which seems to me to be the true one is followed in the text, while others (if sufficiently supported, and affecting the rendering into English) are quoted in the footnotes as preferred by "some authorities," with no attempt to indicate in each case the weight of those authorities.

5. Very few other notes are added, and those not of the nature of a general commentary, except where it seemed desirable to correct a more or less prevalent error. They are mostly intended to explain or vindicate the renderings here given.—Yours faithfully,

R. F. Weymouth.

REST FOR CITY WORKWOMEN.

The eleventh annual report of the Convalescent Home for City Young Workwomen, 1, Albert-villas, Whitehall-road, Woodford Wells, says:—"Fresh air! Rest! Good food! These three things that all admit are necessary and desirable, are what this little 'Home' has been the means of bestowing on many hundreds of poor and toiling women and girls since its opening eleven years ago. These are what we still ask help for, that during the coming year our eight beds may all be kept full, that as many girls as possible may have the benefit of a stay in the country. Since its start God has always provided for all the needs of the Home, and has given continual tokens of his blessing. From the first it has been our desire not only to get the girls who visit us strong in body, but happy in heart as well, and it is our greatest joy to have the testimony of so many that through their visits to the 'Home' they have received the gift of eternal life.

"Our Home is free for those who are too poor to pay. These applications are the most numerous, and as a rule, we find they are the ones for whom the 'Home' is specially intended—girls and women who work on year after year without any change or rest, and who finally have to give up work, and, but for a good rest in fresh air, would probably never be fit to return to it. Of course all who can are expected to pay for board and residence.

"The following case is typical of many others:—S. S., a girl of sixteen, and worker at collar glazing, was sent to us as quite unfit for work, and looking most miserably ill. There had been great trouble in her home. Her father had been out of work, and the whole family, which consisted of many little ones, for some time had only had this girl's 6s. per week to depend on. It was no wonder she looked bloodless and ill! The fresh air and good food worked wonders in her case, and she left us looking quite healthy. In this instance, and many like hers, we find the presents of old clothes sent us by friends so very useful. Where there is a struggle to get sufficient food, it is simply impossible to get sufficient clothing, and we are so thankful for gifts of any kind of garments, and for boots."

HE ONLY IS ADVANCING in life whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into living peace.—Ruskin.

MRS. BAEYERTZ AT CARDIFF.

Many people of Cardiff have been blessed by another visit of Mrs. Baeyertz, the Christian Jewess, who has conducted a ten days' mission here. The power of her addresses has been even more felt this time than when she was here for a fortnight, twelve months since. More souls have been saved, and the influence of the Holy Spirit more felt. Each afternoon Bible-readings have been given in the new hall of the Y.W.C.A., and though sometimes the rain was pouring down there were full meetings.

On the evening of the first week Mrs. Baeyertz preached in Tredegarville Baptist Chapel, and the last three evenings in Bethany Baptist Chapel. On the second Sunday services were held, afternoon and evening, at the East Moors Mission Hall, where many were induced to give themselves to the Lord. On the last day Bible-readings were given, at noon in the Y.W.C.A. Hall, in the afternoon at Bethany, a holiness meeting being held in the same chapel in the evening, when almost the whole congregation remained to the prayer-meeting.

On Thursday evening one hundred and twenty-five persons who had professed conversion were invited to meet Mrs. Baeyertz and the workers who had helped in the mission, and the testimonies were most encouraging, nearly all who spoke pointing definitely to the words that had drawn them to seek their Saviour; the sermons upon "The Unpardonable Sin" and "The Great White Throne" were mentioned more than any other, followed by the portions of Scripture always pointed out to them in the inquiry-room.

Two women, brought in the night of the address to "women and girls only," persuaded their husbands to go the next night, when only for men and boys, and they also joined with their wives in praising God that their sins were forgiven. This night Mrs. Baeyertz gave a description of her conversion. Two Israelites were converted where they were sitting, without going into the inquiry-room. There is no doubt that the many prayers sent up for a blessing on the mission have been richly answered, and those who joined in praying have had their own faith much strengthened.

Emily S. Lipscomb,
Hon. Sec. Y.W.C.A.

RESCUE WORK IN NORTH LONDON.

The eighth annual report of the Finsbury-park Rescue and Preventive Association has just been published, showing the work is divided into three departments—rescue, educational, and legislative. Under the first we find the Home is always full, literally besieged with applicants, and that the methods and teaching are blessed by God to the highest good of many of those who find shelter under its roof, and also much approved by the many outside workers who seek to place their erring sisters in Alpha House. Midnight missions have been held, both amongst fallen men and women, in halls, and in the streets; many grateful testimonies have been received from men as to actual benefits derived therefrom.

The educational section shows that "White Cross" work is vigorously prosecuted, hundreds of young men having signed its pledge at meetings held in the neighbourhood. Many touching letters to Mr. Fish, the honoured secretary, attest the value of this movement. A conference of schoolmasters has been held on schoolboy morality, the hearty response to which showed how anxiously our best men are thinking on this serious subject, some of the revelations being too terrible to print.

Under legislative must be included the closing of some immoral houses, taking little children from other similar dens of temptation, the affiliation to fathers of illegitimate children; also the spread of information as to the prevalence of vice amongst our soldiers in India.

All the work of these departments, including entire maintenance of two matrons and sixteen girls, has been done upon the sum of £337, about £80 of which have been earned by the girls. Every phase of the work is crippled by lack of funds; yet this and similar societies are rendered absolutely necessary by the secret vice of the people. The secretaries are Mr. J. Fish and Mrs. Bailhache, Alpha House, Hanley-road, Crouch Hill, N.

THIS IS A RULE from which there should be no deviation. Do not teach the Scriptures to children so that when they grow up they may find that teaching to be neither correct nor true.

THE TEACHER in his efforts may kindle a fire in the hearts of some young hearers, who, in after years, shall prove to be the very ones the world most needs—great souls who shall win glorious victories in the strength and cause of the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE SEDGLEY MISSION.

The report of the Sedgley Temperance Home Mission, issued by Mr F. A. Homer, J.P., opens by showing the appalling dearth of the Gospel which prevails on all hands. As to the work going on in connection with the Hall, he says:—"In October last, in passing through one of our streets, I spoke to a drunken man, and oh! the sorrow it caused me to hear him say, in the course of conversation, that, during the twelve months he had been in Sedgley, no one had spoken to him about his soul. And is this man the exception? Alas! I fear not, and 'judgment must begin at the house of God.' We grieve over the fact that many are willingly ignorant of God, setting no value on the Gospel, and living regardless of death and coming judgment, and many of our intelligent artizans are settling down in total indifference to God and eternal things. Many never enter a place of worship, and as a rule they regard stated official ministrations within church walls as just so much paid work. And must these perish for whom Christ died? What did our great Examplar do? and what would He have us do? 'He went round about the villages teaching.'

"The attendance at our usual Sunday and Thursday evening service has been good—the results, as with all our labour, we leave with God. We have long since ceased the attempt to count our converts; we prefer to weigh them. We continue to hold unbounded faith in tract distribution, and in the spread of pure Gospel literature. The mothers' meeting, conducted by my daughters, has numbered between sixty and seventy members. The out-of-door meetings still occupy our deepest interest, and we are never more conscious of the Master's presence than when engaged in street preaching. We missioned the streets frequently during the winter, and in the summer months visited the Bull Ring.

"We are thankful to be able to record some considerable revival in the temperance cause during the past year, a goodly number having signed the pledge, and keeping it too. Several specially good meetings were held."

A WARNING VOICE.

In my late struggles of conscience, and anxiety and earnest prayer to God for clear guidance as to my duty to resign, or not, my late position, on account of being a partaker in the opium traffic, while knowing the terrible evils it is inflicting on the Chinese, I have been clearly led of God to receive from Him the same commission that He gave to Jeremiah, to utter words of warning to my beloved Nation, to our National Church which I have been brought up in, to the Christian Church at large, and to the company in whose service I have spent the first twenty years of my manhood.*

That as a Nation we shall suffer terrible retribution for our iniquitous crime of forcing the subtle poison on the Chinese I feel sure; and I believe that the time of retribution will be much hastened by the lies which have been told in evidence before the Commission, about the harmlessness and general benefit of the deadly drug.

Many Christians have boldly uttered the voice of reproof, but our National Church as a body seem to be shrinking back from the great responsibility of faithfulness. As far as the carriers of the drug are concerned, people may say that they have been greatly prospered for many years.

I believe they have been allowed to prosper on account of the many missionaries who have travelled by the same ships, taking the joyful news of a Saviour to these heathen lands; and the responsibility of the shareholders, etc., has not yet been brought home to them.

The time will come, I believe, when missionaries will choose the ships to go in that do not carry opium, and God's servants who are engaged in the traffic will go elsewhere for employment; then the shareholders will have to settle their responsibility.

I do fully believe, however, that as a Nation and as a Church we shall be awakened to our responsibility (God grant that it may be soon), and that the inherent sense of justice in the Nation will stop the traffic.

May the retribution which must come, be used to purify us, and to bring us to repentance.

A Free Man.

THE GRAND SECRET in managing children is to keep one's own temper, and never to raise the voice when correcting them. Of course, this requires great love and patience, and no small amount of self-control, but the object gained is worthy of all.

THE Y.W.C.A.

BOARD SCHOOL TEACHERS' BRANCH.

The annual meeting of the teachers' department of the Y.W.C.A. was held at Morley Hall on Friday week, Lord Kinnaird presiding. The report showed that during the year seventy-five new members had joined the London branch, making a total of 459 members and associates. During the year nine monthly Bible classes have been held in different districts. Reports were received from provincial branches. Merthyr Tydvil has a membership of forty, with a reading union. Leeds reports a steady increase, and a membership of 100. Norfolk reported a membership of over 200. The Clifton branch has a membership of seventy, and the interest in the meetings is steadily increasing. Reading reported a steady increase in the membership. Canon Acheson expressed his great pleasure at hearing such good accounts of the branches. Reports were received from five of the nine London Bible class centres, and an account of the general work of the Y.W.C.A. was given by Miss Morley. Later in the evening addresses were given by Lord Kinnaird, Professor Gladstone, Rev. J. C. de Condoli, and the Hon. G. Kinnaird. Information can be had from the sec., Mrs. Amand Routh, 14a, Manchester-square.

BRIEF NOTES.

The Upper Norwood and West Dulwich branch, 3, Gipsy Hill, has entered upon the thirteenth year of its existence, and the committee acknowledge the goodness of God in guiding Miss Ellis and Miss Bamber (late of Tryon House) to accept the post of hon. secretaries.

The Dressmakers' Home, Leamington, had according to the new report last year ninety-three residents and visitors, many of whom have to thank God for the blessing received in the Home. Evangelistic and Bible class work is carried on in connection. The superintendent is Miss Bagster, 23, Milverton Crescent, Leamington Spa.

THE Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Ralph Morphett has been appointed secretary of the Bristol Association.

The opening service of the Jubilee Conference will be held in Westminster Abbey. The Bishop of London has consented to preach on the occasion.

Captain Cundy presided at the annual meeting of the Kingston and Surbiton Y.M.C.A. The total membership is now 227, as compared with 125 in the previous year.

Dr. John G. Paton's visit to Sheffield, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., has resulted in an addition of £70 to the funds of his mission, after the payment of all expenses.

Mr. A. E. Knight has been welcomed as secretary of the Ryde Association, in succession to Mr. T. W. Morphey, who now takes the oversight of "Hazelwood," the fine Y.M.C.A. home in the same town.

Nine hundred sermons to young men have already been promised to the National Council for June 3, by clergymen and ministers in various parts of the country, in connection with the Jubilee of the association.

The National Council have published a very pretty badge for use by Y.M.C.A. members as a means of fraternal recognition. It is of symbolical design, and presents intact the main features of the International badge issued at Geneva.

The annual conversazione in connection with the Birmingham Association, which took place on the evenings of the 14th and 15th inst., was very largely attended, and proved in every way successful. Mr. Councillor E. Parkes, J.P., was chairman, and addresses were delivered by Revs. J. E. Moony, F. S. Webster, W. Hackney, and Mr. Geo. Ingall.

The work of the College Association at Lafayette College, U.S.A., for the past year has been very active. Its members have taught in fifteen Sunday schools, seven being maintained wholly by students. Twenty-four of the recent graduates are now studying in theological seminaries. Eight attended Mr. Moody's Missionary School at Northfield last summer. For a month last summer a band held Gospel meetings in the larger towns in Northern Pennsylvania under the direction of the State Y.M.C.A. Forty students intend to enter the ministry.

A mission to men has just concluded in the lecture hall of the temporary premises, Croydon (North End), the speakers being Revs. A. J. Easter and J. Jeffray, Mr. H. Johnson, and Miss Florence Francis. Open-air services have been held every evening during the mission outside the building by the mission band for half-an-hour before the inside meeting. The inside kept within the hour, and half-an-hour for after meetings, with the result that anxious souls have been dealt with nightly, three or four some nights deciding to yield their lives to God.

W. N. Morris, General Secretary.

Mr. Henry Armstrong, general secretary of the Newcastle-on-Tyne Association, has concluded a week's mission for young men at Sunderland. The meetings were commenced in a large tent, when over 1000 persons were present, and were continued in the hall of the Association each week evening, when the average attendance of young men was about 100. The concluding meeting was held in a large hall. About twenty clear cases of conversion were recorded. Mr. Armstrong spoke with much freedom and power. The mission was greatly helped by the solos of Mr. George Haddock and a male voice choir. Dr. Harry Guinness will pay a visit to the town, under the auspices of the Association, from April 5 to 8.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

At the recent annual Conference of the Ossett and District Sunday-school Union, Mr. Henry Ackworth read a paper on "The Y.P.S.C.E. at work."

A week's mission has been held in Whetstone, at which several elder scholars decided to follow Christ. The Y.P.S.C.E. have lately held good meetings.

A branch of the Christian Endeavour was started March 20, under very favourable conditions, by the teachers of the Tooting Congregational Chapel Sunday School, of which the Rev. Bevill Allen is pastor.

The Brighton-road C.E.S. (Dublin) lately invited the Sandymount Endeavourers to a social gathering. Papers were read, entitled "The Look-out Committee and its Work," "The Prayer-meeting Committee at Work," "Our Responsibilities," and "Our Influence," interspersed with music.

At the anniversary of the Society in connection with Vines Church, Rochester, Alderman Belsey spoke of the growth of the Society during its two years' existence, and gave suggestions for work. Rev. H. H. Pullen spoke as a deputation from the executive of the British section.

The Pacific steamer Inderlyen carries on board a Floating Endeavour Society numbering eleven members. At a farewell service held with this society by the Endeavourers of San Francisco, just before the boat left the wharf, there were two conversions, and three who had been careless Christians pledged themselves to renewed activity.

Junior societies of C.E. are bound to be alive, because they are made of such lively material. Nothing in this world is more thoroughly alive than the small boy. His sister differs from him in this respect only in degree, not in kind. Out of such boys and girls junior societies are constructed. A dead junior society is a curiosity, as yet undiscovered.

A Y.P.S.C.E. was started at St. Mary Street Baptist Church, Newport, in October last, with a membership of forty-five. The present number is sixty-nine active, nine associates, five honorary; twenty-four associates have become members, and nineteen members have joined the church since its formation. Committees are appointed for various purposes, so that nearly all the members take their place somewhere as active servants of their Lord. A prayer meeting is held Sunday evening after church service.

IRISH NOTES.

A Salvation Army hall, to accommodate about 320 persons, has been opened in Dublin.

Ormeau-road Methodist Church, Belfast, added 117 persons to its roll of church membership last year.

Rev. Mr. Johnson, a returned missionary from Madagascar, has been addressing meetings in county Cork in the interests of the London Missionary Society.

It is proposed to raise about £3000, in memory of the late Rev. Dr. Johnston, to augment the endowment of the Belfast Presbyterian Orphan Home, and to render the institution self-supporting.

During the two months since the Poolbeg-street Shelter for Men has been opened in Dublin 5,645 beds have been paid for, showing that there was a need for such an institution, and that if a proportionate number be occupied during the remainder of the year the shelter will be self-supporting.

The Belfast branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which has now been in existence nearly three years, has during that time investigated 1309 cases, involving the welfare of 3300 children. The Society finds that drink is the principal cause of cruelty to children in the city, and of their neglect.

A strange state of things is existing in Galway. Some time ago the Congregational minister in the city, in order to alleviate distress amongst the poor, which during the winter was very severe, opened workrooms behind his church in which women and girls were taught by ladies to cut out and make up their own garments. Several Roman Catholics came to these gatherings, and thus incurred the anger of the local priests, who used to stand at the gates of the church to see who were going in, and to use physical force to prevent their doing so. As the result five families have got notice to quit their homes, and the women who still venture to attend the work-meetings have to do so under police protection, both in going and coming, while the city is in a very disturbed state.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Dr. Norman Walker has given his Chalmers lectures in Aberdeen to interested audiences.

Colonial missions were strongly advocated at a meeting in the Free Assembly Hall, Edinburgh, last week. Addresses were given by Sir Thomas Clark, Professor Drummond, and others.

The Christian Literature Society for China has closed the second year of its operations, which have been of great service. At the annual meeting in Glasgow it was stated that a splendid work is being accomplished, though the funds are limited.

At a conversazione in Aberdeen, promoted by members of the Congregational and Evangelical Union Churches, Dr. Berry, of Wolverhampton, said that there being no difference between the two Churches in theology or in policy, needless division was not only a scandal but a crime.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

By a combined effort on the part of those representing the moral forces of the district, an attempt to obtain a new licence at Hounslow has been defeated.

No remedy for poverty and wretchedness, for squalor and dirt, will ever be more than a momentary boon until strong drink is eliminated as a factor from the lives and the homes that are sought to be raised to decency and comfort.

It is gratifying, as showing the advance of temperance sentiment in the schools of learning, to note that on a vote being taken, after a debate at St. Andrew's University on "Temperance v. Total Abstinence," it was in favour of total abstinence.

At the Central Criminal Court on Thursday, Mr. Justice Graham sentenced a prisoner to three months' hard labour, and said that the case was but another of the hundreds of illustrations they had of the evils that followed from giving way to the drink.

The annual meeting of the London auxiliary of the Bible Temperance Association was held on Wednesday evening, March 21, at Exeter Hall, Mr. J. L. Aukland presiding. Rev. James Pyper delivered his annual address, and Mrs. Aukland, Mrs. Stewart (Blackheath), and others took part in the proceedings. Special reference was made to the gratifying fact that the number of churches is increasing rapidly in which unfermented wine is used for the communion.

A drawing-room meeting was held the other evening, on the invitation of Mrs. Herbert Robertson, at the Cedars, South Hackney, on behalf of the London Police-court Mission of the C.E.T.S. Mr. R. O. B. Lane, Q.C., the magistrate at North London Police-court, warmly commended the Mission to the benevolent public. He remarked that it was impossible to sit for a month, or for a week, or even a day, in one of the London police-courts without seeing how homes were devastated, domestic happiness ruined, and lives wrecked by the abuse of strong drink.

The annual meeting of the Sheffield Gospe Temperance Union was held in the Rutland Institute, Fargate, on Thursday evening. The annual report stated that during the last year twenty-eight affiliated societies and sixty meetings had been supplied with voluntary speakers; also that a weekly Gospel temperance meeting had been held during the winter in the Vestry Hall, Westbar, and 241 pledges taken. Short missions had been held at Grimesthorpe and Attercliffe. Forty-four societies are affiliated to the Gospel Temperance Union.

The Leeds Mercury calls attention to the fact that a few months ago a Departmental Committee connected with the Home Office issued a remarkable report on the working of the Habitual Drunkards Act, in which it was distinctly recommended that the obligation of obtaining the consent of the patients themselves before sending them to a Retreat for Inebriates should be abolished, and that, in fact, the chronic victims of alcoholism should be relegated to the position of lunatics. In other words, that any man or woman habitually given to intoxication might be placed in an Inebriates' Home under the order of two magistrates. No one can doubt that in certain extreme cases the victims of alcoholism are as incapable of volition as lunatics themselves, and that in their own interests it would be a great blessing if they could be placed, nolens volens, beyond the reach of alcohol.

Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portrait and sketch of the late Mr. Thomas Blamire, Missionary in Spain.

A penny book of hymns has been prepared for the Day of Praise and Thanksgiving on April 11th, which can be obtained in the vestibule of the Great Assembly Hall, on entering. It contains some of the older as well as later hymns.

At this time of the year, the time when the singing of birds has come, it is pleasant to read that in France there is a Society for the Protection of Animals, and that the Minister of Education has issued a circular to the educational inspectors saying that he would be glad if school societies for protecting animals arose everywhere in France. He has even drawn up a model for the statutes of these humane clubs. The pupils forming these societies are to promise, in signing the roll, to be kind, pitiful, and just to domestic animals, not to torment or tease them, to hunt or startle them, and to abstain from wanton destruction of birds, and never to destroy birds' eggs. There are prizes for the good children who persevere in their work, and a kind of social punishment for such as break their pledge. But we have a growing disbelief in the moral value of prizes; they insensibly draw the mind away from doing good for its own sake. To keep the tone up, we must always keep the standard up.

Eight hundred and thirty captains, representing crews of about 25,000 or 30,000 souls, have signed a petition to the Prime Minister on the dangerous condition of the Atlantic, caused by derelicts which are tossing about. There is something pathetic in the thought of the castaway vessels, each of them representing storm and calamity, just tossing about unguided night and day, a danger to other vessels carrying living men. It is a sad picture of the ocean of life where only too many derelict Christians, who have made shipwreck of faith and a good conscience, are tossing about, and endangering the salvation of others. They are a cause of doubt, of discouragement, of fear; they are the worst tempters of the feeble and unstable; they are the justification which the ungodly plead for their ungodliness and sin, and, as a derelict is the most difficult to get into harbour, so are they among the most difficult to save. But they should be lovingly looked after. What a delightful ministry for anyone to be called to, to seek specially the shipwrecked ones.

One of the subjects discussed at the recent convention of Free Churches at Leeds was the multiplication of small places of worship beyond all possible need of the population. It was powerfully urged that when this is the case efforts should be made to amalgamate, where the main doctrines and methods are substantially alike. It was also urged that where existing places of worship are adequate for all who could at one time attend, proposed additions should be discouraged. We know of one village in Wales, not a place of summer resort, where, for a population of 2500, there are thirteen churches. On an average, only half any population can at one time be present at church. In this case, then, there are thirteen places for 1250, supposing all these are willing to go—i.e., about ninety for each church. All these separate places involve separate expenditures, in addition to erection, and the maintenance of at least some six or seven ministers; whereas three buildings would suffice, each holding 300 worshippers, with three ministers adequately supported, and more than half the money now wasted in needless incidental expenditure set free to promote the common cause of the Gospel and humanity.

No difference of political views should prevent one from giving full weight to at least two sentences which are contained in Mr. Gladstone's letter to Sir John Cowan, a letter which will no doubt become historic.

Another period has opened, and is opening still—a period possibly of yet greater moral dangers, certainly a great ordeal for those classes which are now becoming largely conscious of power, and never heretofore subjected to its deteriorating influences. . . . Now is the time for the true friend of his country to remind the masses that their present political elevation is owing to no principles less broad and noble than these—the love of liberty, of liberty for all without distinction of class, creed, or country, and the resolute preference of the interests of the whole to any interest, be it what it may, of a narrower scope.

If any one knows from reading and observation what the effects of the consciousness of power are upon individuals and classes, the aged statesman is that man. His words, then, should be read as another incentive to evangelise England. Men will never prefer the interests of the whole to any interest of a narrower scope until they learn to love one another with a pure heart fervently, and that comes from the knowledge of the love of God in Christ Jesus.

We are glad to see that Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell's excellent book, "The Human Element in Sex: Being a Medical Inquiry into the Relation of Sexual Physiology to Christian Morality" (London: J. and A. Churchill), is into a new edition. Dr. Blackwell gives prominence to the mental and spiritual element in our nature, and rightly insists that by the exercise of the higher qualities the lower part of our nature is not so much kept in subjection as honoured and glorified by being put to its proper uses. Fathers and mothers will be helped by the book, and every young man and young woman would be better for reading it before marriage. There is a wise word on page 66 which we should like to see made a rule of action by every doctor: "A really serious and natural evil results from the thoughtless treatment of the poor. In dispensary and hospital, and wherever medical assistance is rendered to the exposed and helpless classes, the first duty of the physician is to respect personal modesty, or to instil it if the habit has been lost. This is a point on which the medical practitioner cannot avoid a moral responsibility."

In a recent issue we contrasted the present condition of Staffordshire in regard to crime, with that of fifty years ago, when judges shrank from their work, so serious were the offences that were brought before them. What with bull-baitings and dog-fightings, and cock-pit and rabbit-course scenes, the county was characterised by savagery which, though not unknown elsewhere, was happily not dominant to the same terrible degree. The changed state of things is doubtless to be ascribed to more than one agency. Primarily we associate it with the influence of Gospel preaching; secondarily, we attribute it to civilising influences, legislative and educative, brought to bear upon the people through the action of godly statesmen and earnest social reformers. The Christian activity in the county during the last thirty years has been fruitful in a high degree; at the same time no one can measure the effects of the humane legislation of the same period, as it has affected the labouring and artisan classes.

Mr. F. A. Homer, of Sedgley, who has watched the course of events during recent years, with the interest of a Christian citizen, and with the special facilities open to a magistrate, writes to us:—

Doubtless the Gospel has been pre-eminently the agency by which the marked improvement has been brought about; but teetotalism has been an efficient handmaid. The Midland Temperance League, established some forty years ago, with the counties of Stafford, Salop, Worcester, and Warwick as its field of operations, has done a great deal in the formation of temperance societies, and has organised thousands of meetings, besides stirring up the churches and promoting Bands of Hope. From 1860 to 1870 a remarkable work was done in South Staffordshire in the reclaiming of drunkards by the "Lifeboat" and Garibaldi crews, and this was followed by the Blue Ribbon Mission, when thousands signed the pledge.

The tendency to brutality continued, however, to exhibit itself in the form of assaults upon wives, but this was fairly stamped out by the exemplary punishment meted out to offenders by the late Mr. Isaac Spooner, when stipendiary magistrate, whose worthy successor, Mr. N. C. A. Neville, is now dealing with cases of cruelty to children in a manner which assuredly will speedily reduce their number.

Mr. Wm. M. F. Round, secretary of the Prison Association of New York, gives, in Christian Thought, expression to the view that criminals are not the victims of heredity. "The conditions likely to promote criminality may be inherited, but vices themselves, solely as the result of moral impulse, I do not believe to be inherited, nor do I believe virtue to be inherited." He holds that crime is not a disease, nor by any necessity the result of a disease, though it may be the result of disease in some instances. Of 700 criminals examined, not one-fifth but might have lived a virtuous life if they had tried. Most criminals are such because they wish to be; they choose the profession and follow it for the sake of its excitements and rewards.

"They can and do abandon it when such rewards are not equal to the effort, or when the penalties are too great an opposing force; or when, gaining a higher view of life and of their own weakness, they come to desire the things that make for righteousness and virtue." Among a number of suggestions which are evidently suited to the state of things in America, he has one which is good for all places and times, and which was gloriously carried out by John Howard, whose statue was unveiled at Bedford last week. "To purify our prisons, to save ourselves from criminals, we, as Christian citizens, must throw our prayerful interest into the matter."

There will be general agreement among spiritually-minded men with the view of The Presbyterian (America), that while the evangelist is a distinct gift from the ascended Christ, he is not a substitute for the pastor.

The most thorough, abiding, and valuable revivals generally are those which come through a pastor's faithful preaching and skilful management. It will be a sad day when pastors lose their converting power, and when no gracious work can be had without the professional evangelist.

Do not the churches which prize the ministry of a pastor who has converting power generally derive the greatest benefit from the labour of true evangelists? And is it not by these churches that professionalism is prevented from gaining access either to the pastorate or to the evangelist's sphere?

There can be no doubt that most of the dangers and defects of the Church spring from a shallow Christian experience, or from no experience at all. Errors in doctrine are due to the heart rather than to the head. Unworthy conduct comes from not having a deep and abiding union with Jesus. There is something in communion with Him and in a true knowledge of his mind which insensibly leads the soul into the way of righteousness. Illumination is from Him who is made of God wisdom to them who have turned to Him. Hermann says that "the right confession of the Godhead of Jesus depends on experience of the work which God performs through Jesus on the human soul." Hence it is a matter of the greatest importance that all Christians should strive for a fuller life of faith, so that they may glorify their Saviour by word and deed.

"Blessed is the man whom Thou chastenest." The judgment of man would hardly reach that conclusion. Was Job blessed as one messenger after another hurried into his house with evil tidings? "No," says the man of the world, "he was miserable and much to be pitied." But "we have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful, and of tender mercy." The latter end of Job was better than the beginning. When men find trouble and sorrow, and their heart is brought down with labour, it is a painful process; all the same they are blessed. "For the Lord doth not willingly afflict nor grieve the children of men; though He cause grief, yet will He have compassion according to the greatness of his mercy.

Dr. Candlish has some excellent "Thoughts on the Doctrine of Sanctification" in The Thinker for April. He admits that evangelical preaching has been apt to dwell too exclusively on the way of pardon, and that there was until recently a neglect to expound the evangelical way of sanctification, as it had been done in former times. He, however, believes that "recent works, such as Boardman's Higher Christian Life, Bonar's God's Way of Holiness, and the writings of what has come to be known as the Keswick School, have done most valuable and needed service by reviving the study of this most essential part of evangelical theology; but some of them have, I cannot but think, been marked by exaggeration, and by a tendency to reduce the experience of all to a fixed and uniform course of successive stages. This insisting on a uniformity of experience in conversion has been productive of much evil, and it is not less likely to be less mischievous if applied to sanctification." There seems to be a tendency in every man to make himself the measure of everyone else, in religion as in other things; but God gives us infinite variety, never uniformity.

Dr. Kennedy contributes a useful paper to The Thinker on "The Book of Jonah: Its Authorship and Date of Composition." After noticing that in dates assigned by various critics all place the composition of the book at a time long after the destruction of Nineveh, he adds that "if any critical impression can be trusted, we are surely justified in saying that the book must have been written before Nineveh had ceased to be a city, and had passed away so entirely that its very site had ceased to bear its name; and not in the midst of circumstances historical, political, and social, so entirely different from those of the age of Jonah, as were those of the age of the exile, or the ages following both in Palestine and in Babylon." When the book is subjected to the test, that there should be some correspondence between a book and the age to which it professes to belong, it comes triumphantly through; for the most eager searcher can find no indication of the influence of a post-exilic age. On the other hand, "it is generally admitted that both the substance and the colouring of the book are in keeping with the age and circumstances which the book pre-supposes."

Dr. Kennedy, bearing in mind the fact that the Bible "makes an almost ostentatious exhibition of whatever evil" in the Prophets of the Lord, observes with great force that when Jonah's work was over and done, nothing remained but that, as a prophet, "he should faithfully record the work which he had accomplished with so little honour to himself, but with so much benefit to others. It was not for him to think of the self-humiliation which the task involved. It may have been rather a satisfaction to be constrained thus to sacrifice his own credit to the glory of the Lord, whom, he confessed, even in the hour of his flight from his service, to be 'Jehovah, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land.'" Under any fire of criticism the book remains uninjured.

The alleged discovery of a new Life of Christ in a monastery in Tibet still excites a great deal of interest. The little book, claimed as a discovery by a Russian traveller, M. Notovitch, is published with maps and illustrations in Paris, and has reached a third edition. Unfortunately for its authority, "the narrative," says The Daily News, "depends entirely on the credit of the Russian traveller. He has brought nothing back with him but his own notes. He has no shred of original manuscript, and not even the photographs which he took on his way." For his illustrations he is indebted to the collections of a friend. None of the eminent ecclesiastics whom he consulted advised him to publish. Some day, perhaps, when the Gospel has penetrated to the heart of Tibet, confirmation may be found of the remarkable story, but meanwhile we can attach no weight to it, even as an expression of Buddhist thought about Christ.

REV. J. McNEILL AT THE CAPE.

Great interest is being excited by the meetings held by Mr. McNeill and Mr. Burke, and we are looking for much blessing. After Mr. McNeill has had about sixteen days in Cape Town he will visit various centres in South Africa, before sailing for Australia.

The following is the arranged programme of tour:—Cape Town, March 3 to 21; Kimberley, March 24 to April 2; Bloemfontein, April 4 to 6; Johannesburg, April 7 to 23; Pietermaritzburg, April 25 and 26; Durban, Natal, April 28 to May 5; East London, May 6 to 9; King W. Town, May 9 and 10; Lovedale, May 12 and 13; Grahamstown, May 14 to 17; Pt. Elizabeth, May 20 to 27; Cradock, May 29 and 30; Stellenbosch, June 1; Wellington, June 4 and 5; the evangelists hope to leave for Hobart Town and New Zealand by s.s. Gothic on June 8.

DIVINE ATTRIBUTES.

The things of God, invisible,
By things He made we understand:
Behind "effect" we find the "cause"
In his creating hand.

The sun, the golden king of day,
The moon, the silv'ry queen of night,
The stars, the world—all these display
"The greatness of his might."

As diverse "cunning works" of man,
Our minds with admiration fill:
Inventions, many, intricate,
Give proof of thought and skill,

So when we scan God's universe,
In ev'ry part, what glories shine!
It "shows his handiwork," and tells
Of wisdom and design.

Revolving seasons, one by one,
To peoples all their witness bear;
Before the living voice is heard,
His goodness these declare.

He sends the sunshine and the rain,
He makes the seed to germinate;
His bounties like a river flow,
They never terminate!

His providential acts proclaim
That our Creator-God is good,
By fruitful seasons filling men
With gladness and with food.

The eyes of all look unto Him,
Beasts of the field, birds on the wing:—
His open hand supplies the wants
Of ev'ry living thing.

The God of glory thundereth,
His voice, in power and majesty,
Resounds throughout his temple vast,
All there Him glorify,

Save man—to whom is manifest
What of the Godhead may be known
From "things that are" by power divine—
No thankfulness he'll own;

And even though good gifts of God
Are lavished on him day by day,
All unresponsive, man remains—
No homage does he pay,

Until God's grace has been revealed,
Then, only then, it is, we find
Its subjects, men, give praise to Him,
With grateful heart and mind.

WEALDSTONE, NEAR HARROW.—A new mission-hall has been erected in this parish. At the opening, Mr. Basley described the progress of the mission since its commencement in 1889, in a private house. Proof was given that it had been owned by God. The Sunday-school has increased to over 100, and many have come out on the Lord's side. The financial statement showed that help is needed in meeting the payments to the builder. The secretary is Mr. Basley, Hazeldene, Wealdstone.

CLAPTON HALL, UPPER CLAPTON.—Mr. C. Russell Hurditch has just closed a fruitful month of ministry in this hall, where for many years a prosperous work has been carried on. The meetings were largely attended, and each week repentant souls appeared to enter into peace, and some backsliders have been restored. During the present month Mr. Donald Rea, from the North of Ireland, is conducting the services, and holding special evening meetings from Tuesday to Friday this week, April 3 to 10.

"AROUND OUR KING."

Haste again, ye days of grace,
When, assembled in one place,
Signs and wonders marked the hour
All were filled, and spoke with power;
Hands uplifted, eyes o'erflowed,
Hearts enlarged, self destroyed!
All things common now we'll prove,
All our common stock be love.

Satan, filled with hellish spite,
Veiled in robes of borrowed light,
Strove to scatter ruin wide,
Disunite, and then divide!
Still his utmost skill shall fail,
Patient love shall still prevail,
Clustering closer, now we'll cling,
Swarm and hive AROUND OUR KING.

One of God's many devoted labourers in the East of London has sent us a long list of causes for praise and thanksgiving to God, not by any means confined to London, which has suggested the following paragraphs.

The only right attitude for the creature before the Creator is that of rendering to Him the praise and glory due unto his name. "Let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." Even when we confess our sins we are glorifying God. Joshua appealed to Achan to give glory to God by confessing the sin which had brought judgment on Israel.

"I will extol Thee, my God, O King, and I will bless thy name for ever and ever." "Let everything that hath breath praise Jehovah. Praise ye Jehovah."

In 1859 and the immediately succeeding years, God in a remarkable way revealed Himself, as Canon Garratt in his brief but pregnant letter has reminded us.

Although it is blessedly true that the one name, the name of GOD, stands alone in those years of prayer and answered prayer, yet we cannot forget the names of many whom He raised up as his instruments in those days of grace. We will only mention some who have passed from earth to heaven; those who remain live in the affections of us all.

For the great daily prayer-meetings into which the people of the United States were driven in thousands, by the financial disaster and panic of 1856; for the meetings of the two young men who prayed down the first droppings of the showers of blessing in Ireland in 1859; for those who brought the news to England, and for those who went to the North of Ireland to see the wonderful works of God, and returned to spread it in Scotland, England, and Wales—O God, we praise Thee.

For Dr. Elwin, Charles Graham, Dr. William Graham, of Bonn, and many more, who in the earliest numbers of The Revival vindicated the Revival as a work of God, and led, guided, counselled, and shielded it from the extravagance of man; for The British Messenger, Wynd Journal, Latter Rain, and other periodicals which worked wisely and efficiently in the same good cause—O God, we praise Thee.

For Dr. Elwin, who in the true spirit of "A Servant" (as he used to sign himself), sought out and encouraged men and women whom God had marked out as gifted and qualified workers; for Geo. J. Knight and his companions, who made Fairlop Friday ring with the Good News from Heaven; for the working-men whose "Christ for Me" and other sacred songs mingled with the crowing and cooings of Bird Fair, and have not been silenced yet—O God, we praise Thee.

For Captain Trotter's notable conversion, and for the testimony which he gave in Willis's Rooms, together with Brownlow North and Stevenson Blackwood; for Baptist Noel, who was not ashamed of Payson Hammond and his children's meetings, out of which has grown the Children's Special Service Mission—an untold blessing to two or three generations of children; for William and Catherine Pennefather, and the Conferences which drew Christians together in the one Name; for the Deaconesses and Medical Missionaries, and all the word "Mildmay" means, and for all the Conferences and Conventions to which it has given rise—O God, we praise Thee.

For Denham Smith and his ministry of Jesus Christ, which turned the Express Boats into Bethel ships; for the truth preached by him and others, which brought rest to multitudes wandering wide from the central point of bliss, and safety, certainty, and enjoyment, to thousands of unassured believers; for Duncan Matheson, a missionary hero of the Crimean War, with Eternity written on his eyeballs; and for James Turner, of Peterhead, a flame of fire among the towns of North-east Scotland—O God, we praise Thee.

For William Carter, the sweep, and William Taylor, the navvy, and Robert Craig, the hawker, in London; for Robert Cunningham, the flesher, in Glasgow; Peter Jackson, the cabman, in Edinburgh; Robert Annan, of Dundee; and the many other faithful witnesses of the industrial classes whose record is on high; and for the multitudes who owe their salvation instrumentally to them—O God, we praise Thee.

For Henry Moorhouse and his seven successive sermons on "God so loved the world," which became an important factor in the subsequent life and work of D. L. Moody; for all that by the grace of God, American evangelists have accomplished here, and English evangelists have been used to effect in America—we praise thee, O God.

For John Hambleton, a man faithful above many, and for all his rugged and uncompromising words and writings; for Macdowall Grant, of Arndilly; Gordon, of Parkhill; Henry Reed, of Tasmania: men ordained of God to sow the good seed, the Word of the Kingdom, by life and speech, sometimes in drawing-rooms, sometimes in the condemned cells of murderers; for Robert Aitken, who, like Paul, testified with tears the Gospel of the grace of God, and by whom God revived the stones out of the heaps of rubbish in Newport and other towns—O God, we praise Thee.

For the women thrust out in answer to prayer, of whom some have fallen asleep, but the greater part remain unto this present; for Elizabeth and Augusta Bramwell and for Lady Kinnaird, pioneers and founders of the Young Women's Christian Association; for Mrs. Daniell and the Soldiers' Homes; and for those who have followed in their track among Sailors, Railway men, Policemen, and the Post and Telegraph services; and for the souls saved by their means—we praise Thee, O God.

For Robert Baxter, whose stalwart and venerable form was conspicuous in Gospel meetings indoors and out; for the Evangelisation Society, by which the essential truths of the Gospel have been systematically safeguarded; for John Macgregor and Gawin Kirkham and the Open-air preachers at fairs and races, as well as in the parks and on the streets; for the latter-day evangelistic and missionary operations of the Y.M.C.A.; for the pastors who left their sanctuaries to preach in theatres and music-halls where Satan's seat is; for the impetus given to Charles H. Spurgeon, and for all the institutions connected with the Metropolitan Tabernacle—O God, we praise Thee.

For great-hearted Henry Bewley, and the innumerable tracts which he and others have scattered through the world; for the men-singers and women-singers whose lovely hymns and songs have quickened the dead, awakened the careless, comforted the sorrowful, and brought glory to thy Name—we praise Thee, O God.

For the Christian Mission founded on Mile End Waste, and for Catherine Booth, the mother of the Salvation Army, and for all the good that world-wide organisation has effected in a multitude of ways; for the Midnight Meeting Movement, and all the rescued lives of women and of men; for the Earl of Shaftesbury and his manifold ministries to the spiritual needs and the temporal well-being of the people—we praise Thee, O God.

For the magnificent Assembly Hall in which we meet to praise God; for the Edinburgh Castle, the East End Tabernacle, Whitechapel Church with its outside pulpit; for the Y.M.C.A. building at Stratford; and for many other buildings all over London and the whole land—O God, we praise Thee.

For neglected and ill-used children gathered into Homes, fed, taught, trained, usefully employed at home or emigrated in tens of thousands to build up Canada; for the large proportion of these latter having attained a standard of exemplary life which would do credit to any class or all classes put together; for mothers' meetings, and for the work of faith and labour of love among factory-girls, matchbox-makers, flower-girls, and other classes of our poorest workers—we praise Thee, O God.

For the enormous change in the habits of Christian pastors and people as to abstinence from alcoholic drinks; for improved and multiplied facilities for obtaining non-inebriating refreshments; for refuges, shelters, homes to reclaim the drunkard; for Thomas Smithies, the British Workman's Friend, and for all Christian philanthropic agencies—we praise Thee, O God.

For Missionary Institutes, where hundreds of young men and women have been trained for work at home and abroad; for Homes where multitudes of foreigners passing through London have heard the Gospel; for Strangers' Rests and Sailors' Welcomes, and dock labourers' missions; for drinking and dancing houses and dens of infamy pulled down or converted into mission halls or homes—we praise Thee, O God.

For Bible-reading unions, prayer unions, missionary unions; for greater attention to the prophetic Word; for increased love to Israel; and for increased intelligence as to the Jew's place in the Divine purposes—we praise Thee, O God.

But while we praise our adorable Lord God for all He is to us, and pour out our hearts in thanksgiving for his innumerable mercies, we have abundant cause for self-abasement and confession of our backslidings and our sins; our forgetfulness of the Giver in the enjoyment of his gifts; our self-love and self-worship; our gathering into cliques of similar taste or caste, opinion or experience, interest or association. In a word, the Jew, the Gentile, and the Church of God, have all alike worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is over all—God, blessed for ever. For man is the same in every age, and just so far as we depart from God we develop the same principles as our first parents in their primeval apostasy. Irreligious Self returns like the dog to his own vomit again, and religious Self like the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.

But from this loathsome Self and all our humiliating confession of its irredeemable and unalterable corruption, we turn again to the Lord our Maker; and for the revelation by the Father to our spirits that Jesus the Son of Man is the Son of the living God; for sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and having by that sacrifice for sin condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law may be fulfilled in us, walking not after the flesh but after the Spirit—we praise Thee, O God.

For uniting us with Him in his death, burial, and resurrection, in his session at God's right hand, in his suffering and in his glory—we praise Thee, O God.

For the mystery that we are in Him in heaven; for the greater mystery that He is in us on earth; for the greatest mystery of all, that we are his body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all—we praise Thee, O God.

For the sympathising ministry of our great High Priest, who has passed through the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God; for the invitation to tell out everything at the throne of grace; and for the assured compassion and grace to help in time of need—we praise Thee, O God.

For the mansions which He is now preparing for us; for his promised return to receive us unto Himself; for the throne on which we shall sit with Him, and for the ages of the ages through which we shall eternally reign with Him—we praise Thee, O God!

Glory to God for all the grace
We have not tasted yet.

Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and blessing! Blessing, and honour, and glory, and power, unto Him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever!

THE WORK AT COSTERS' HALL.

The revised roll of membership of the Working Mission Church at Costers' Hall, Hoxton, of which Mr. W. J. Orsman is the hon. superintendent, now contains 442 names, and there are 150 voluntary workers in connection with the mission. An average of about fifty meetings a week is held. The Sunday Gospel services, the Sunday-school, and classes are crowded; the large and small halls are also filled, and so likewise are nine class-rooms. Mr. Orsman states that the strain upon his time and strength has been more than usually heavy during the last winter, and thus he has not been able to take that rest and change which might have enabled him to throw off the effects of an attack of blood-poisoning.

During the winter the free breakfasts to many Board-school children have been continued, each party consisting of 250 hungry little ones. The halfpenny dinners have also been greatly appreciated. "The majority of the youngsters are fatherless or motherless, and of the others most of them have parents out of work or sick," we are told. "There is no room for crafty lodgers, lazy loafers, and ne'er-do-wells at Costers' Hall. Our 442 Christian members are useful judges and advisers in these matters." The Costers' Hall branch of the International Bible Reading Association now has 652 members under the direction of Mr. John Neal, the superintendent of the Sunday school. The senior Bible classes have a total membership of 110 men and women.

In addition to the direct evangelistic work, the encouragement of thrift by means of various societies does much in attracting men away from the public-house. The free use of well-lighted rooms is allowed on week nights. The aggressive temperance work appears to be heartily taken up, well-attended meetings being held on the first Tuesday in each month. Books are needed for the Band of Hope Library. Mr. W. J. Orsman's address is Milton House, Shacklewell Green, N.E.

The Revival of 1859.

[Our readers will recognise the writer of the following letter as having been Incumbent of Holy Trinity, Lincoln's Inn Fields, 1850—1867, and as now Hon. Canon of Norwich.]

Dear Friend,—I cannot say with how much pleasure I read your proposal for Thanksgiving on April 11 for the Revival of 1859 and the following years. I felt that though the proposed Thanksgiving Meeting might have some special reference to the East-end of London, of which I know but little, the whole of that blessed season, in so many places, the time of spiritual birth to so many, was in your mind.

That time of Revival in the retrospect looks to me like a bright defined period of grace unlike anything before or after it. The most like it was that wonderful work of Moody and Sankey in London. But it was in some respects very different from that. There were no Moodys and Sankeys engaged in it. Some of those whose letters you have published were at that time much blessed in winning souls, but no one would have thought of coupling their, or any, names with the Revival, as we cannot help doing when we speak of the very great blessing which has accompanied the labours of those eminent American evangelists. Then, there was great preparation and much expense in arranging for those labours, the time for which was fixed beforehand. There was nothing of that kind in 1859. It came like the rain from heaven, preceded sometimes by the prayers of a few believing men and women, but with no organised effort, at no prearranged time, with no unusual instrumentality except that which grew out of it when it came. All felt it to be, in a very special manner, the work of God Himself, and the instruments He used to be more remarkable for their feebleness than for anything else. What was so striking was that a word spoken in private, even by a child, had then more efficacy often than the most powerful addresses have at other times. It was the wind of the Divine Spirit, which, even more manifestly than it usually does, blew where it listed.

The work, as far as I know, generally closed as suddenly as it began, but the effect remained. There are, I am persuaded, numbers in most Protestant lands whose Christian life commenced under its influence. Those of us who remember Barnet at the time of the Revival cannot doubt that all that has been fruitful in blessing at Mildmay sprang out of it. I think I have read that those who chiefly helped Mr. Moody in Belfast were men and women who had become Christians during the Revival; and you evidently know something of the same kind in the East End.

There were one or two things which characterised it.

One was the full persuasion that in the conversion of souls human agency had very little to do except to speak the word of life simply and truthfully, and that all the power was in God.

Another was an unbounded trust in the plain Gospel of Jesus Christ as the only instrument used by God for this purpose.

Another was a refusal to recognise as satisfactory or safe anything short of the full acceptance of Christ as the Saviour from guilt and the Saviour from sin—the assurance that He blotted out the one, and would not allow the other to have dominion, that He forgave and justified at once, and implanted the seed of a new nature which must eventually prevail.

Men and women, and children too, had then their spiritual birthday which they never forgot. That was often true before, and has often been true since, but it was specially characteristic of that happy time.

And there was another characteristic which was chiefly, no doubt, owing to its freshness: an absence, especially among the young Christians of those days, of conventional phrases, which are generally unreal, and always unpleasing.

It was a time of joy, God grant such another! I sometimes think, but perhaps I may be wrong, that the perpetual efforts at producing by human methods something of the same kind without the characteristics I have mentioned, are a hindrance to its coming. But God is able to grant it, whatever mistakes we may make. I could not help writing this. Yours very truly,

Samuel Garratt.

The Messengers of the Churches.

From the brief statement given in our last issue of the success of the Missionary Prayer Union at the West Cliff Tabernacle, Bournemouth, it will be seen that, in two years, this method, while very slightly diminishing the amount from subscriptions and collections, has sent up to a missionary society the sum of £150, received almost exclusively from the daily gifts of the members.

It will be seen also that since the appointment of a missionary whom the members could regard as their own representative, the income has increased from about £60 a year, to what promises to be almost double that amount. If in one church this method produces an extra income of about £120, why should it not be tried with equal success by others?

The church referred to cannot be described as either very large or very wealthy. Its membership is only about 200, and among these there are only a few who could be described as moderately wealthy. It has other tolerably heavy burdens to bear. It is safe to say that there are at least a thousand churches in the country with a larger and wealthier membership, and freer from financial difficulty.

Suppose that in these 1000 churches a similar method were adopted, and were to realise anything like the same results? If the average amount from each church were only £100, the result from all combined would be

Let none regard the idea as an impossible or difficult one. It can easily be done. If the pastors of the churches will take it up they will find their people ready to respond. The missionary spirit will grow among the members, and daily giving accompanied by daily praying will become their delight. These distressing appeals from our Societies, and threatened withdrawals from some of the work we have undertaken, will be no more. We urge it upon the prayerful and practical attention of the pastors. Which of them will take it up at once?

Even churches whose pastors have not been awakened to the Great Commission are not debarred from this path of blessing. Wherever there is a man, woman, or child, alive to the world's great need and the Lord's great command, that one spark of the fire of heaven, if fanned into a flame by prayer and work, will set the deadest church aflame.

Why should not every church undertake the support of a missionary of its own? Smaller churches could unite to do so; larger churches could sustain more than one. The objections to this idea seem very frivolous. To follow the course of one missionary as he journeys to his sphere of labour; to sympathise with him in his endeavours to master the language; to watch him in his first attempts to witness for Christ; to think of him daily, and to pray for the maintenance of his spiritual life in the midst of distressing surroundings; to wait each quarter for the message from him—all this is an unspeakable blessing to the members. So far from narrowing their sympathy and interest to the one man, by means of that one "living link" they become interested in the whole missionary field. It makes missionary work their own, and deepens their sense of responsibility in connection with it. It makes the missionaries what Scripture intends they should be, "the messengers of the churches." The missionary society would come between the church and the missionary not so much as a barrier but as a link—not to separate but to unite them. Is not that a desirable result?

We repeat, it is not upon the wealthy members that the success of this scheme depends. It obtains not large donations from the rich, but small daily gifts from all. In the case before us the general amount per day is a halfpenny, a few promise a penny, and the persons who are giving thus, nearly all of them belong to the humbler classes. Not a few are either in places of business or in domestic service, and the annual gifts from these vary from 15s to 30s. a year. From the same class of persons, who may be found numerously in all our churches, similar results may be obtained. Who will not make the experiment?

The letter on a succeeding page from Mr. H. W. Fry, who has recently returned from an extended tour, in which he has visited many missionary stations, raises another deeply important issue. It is evident that in his judgment there are not a few incompetent and unfit missionaries in the field. They have been examined by a committee or council, who have used their best judgment upon the information placed before them. But results have not justified the acceptance of these candidates. Under the more Scriptural plan of which we speak the churches would exercise a far more effective supervision, upon a wider and more impartial basis of information. It might be expected, indeed, that a church full of the missionary spirit would provide its missionary from its own members; and a candidate endorsed by such a church, previous to coming before a society's committee, would be less likely to be unsuitable than one accepted under the present system.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Rev. C. W. Drees, superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church in South America, writes from Buenos Ayres, on Feb. 27:—

Our annual ministerial conference has closed its session, held Feb. 16-20, in Mendoza. Members of this body are labouring in Argentina, Brazil, Chili, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, and Central America. We have lines of influence and active work extending into Bolivia and Ecuador. Recognising in a fraternal spirit the faithful labours of those who share with us the call to this vast field, we are seeking with them to fill this continent with Gospel light and salvation.

The statistical returns for the year just closed will show an increase of nearly one thousand in the number of communicants in our churches. More than 4000 children are in our Sunday-schools, and nearly 3000 in our day-schools. Contributions from local sources almost duplicate those received from our parent missionary society. Yet our resources are utterly inadequate to the calls that come to us. The openings are marvellous as to number and the preparation of the people to hear the Gospel message.

Our supreme aim is to secure genuine spiritual transformations through the power of the Holy Ghost. Ask the Christians of England to pray for us.

A New Translation

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

By Richard Francis Weymouth, D.Lit., M.A., Fellow of Univ. Coll. Lond., Editor of the Resultant Greek Testament.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

5. 20 On Christ's behalf therefore we come as ambassadors, God, as it were, offering entreaty through our lips: we on Christ's behalf beseech
21 men, "Come back to God." Him who knew nothing of sin He has made to be the impersonation of sin for us, in order that we in Him may become the impersonated righteousness of God.

6. And you also we entreat—we as God's fellow-workers—not to have received His grace to
2 no purpose. For He says, "At a time of welcome I have listened to thee, and on a day of salvation I have succoured thee." See, now is the time of loving welcome! See, now is the
3 day of salvation We endeavour to give no cause of stumbling in anything, lest the work we are doing should fall into discredit.
4 On the contrary, as God's servants, we seek the fullest approval—in unwearied endurance, in afflictions, in distress, in helplessness;
5 in floggings, in imprisonments; in unsettledness, in toil, in sleepless watching,
6 in hunger and thirst; in purity of life, in knowledge, in patience, in kindness, in the 7 Holy Spirit, in love unfeigned; in proclamation of the truth, in the power of God; by the arms of righteousness, both sword and 8 shield; through honour and ignominy, through calumny and praise; as impostors, and
9 yet true men; as obscure persons, and yet well known; as on the point of death, yet, see! we are alive; as under God's discipline,
10 yet not deprived of life; as sad, but always joyful; as poor, but bestowing wealth on multitudes; as having nothing, and yet possessors of all things.
11 Corinthians, our lips are unsealed to you:
12 our heart is expanded. There is no narrowness in our love to you: the narrowness is 13 in your own feelings. But in just requital (I speak as to my children) let your heart expand also.
14 Come not into close association with unbelievers—ox yoked with ass. For what is there in common between righteousness and lawlessness? or what partnership has light with 15 darkness? Wherein consists Christ's harmony with Belial? or what participation has
16 a believer with an unbeliever? and what compact has the Temple of God with idols? For we are the Temple of the Living God, as God has said, "I will dwell among them, and walk about among them; and will be their God, and it is they who shall be my People."
17 Therefore, "Come out from the midst of them and separate yourselves, saith the Lord, and touch nothing impure; and I will receive you,
18 and will be as a Father to you, and you shall be to me as sons and daughters, says the Lord
7. the All-Ruler." Having therefore these promises, beloved, let us purify ourselves from all pollution of body and of spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of God.

3 We endeavour to give: to render this by a participle, giving, involves an ambiguity in English, it not being clear whether the part. refers to the we or the you. There is no ambiguity in the original.

15 Wherein consists: lit., what is.

PRAYER AND REVIVAL.

In the course of a delightful walk among the hills on Easter Monday, a Welsh pastor related the following example of the influence of prayer in promoting a revival of spiritual life without recourse to any external agency. It is a custom occasionally to gather the small Sunday-schools of a country district to the central school or chapel, for examination in the Scriptures, prayer, and singing. Such an assembly was to take place on a hill pointed out. A man of much prayer, on arriving, was greeted by the presiding minister, who hoped for a very happy and useful season. He replied he was sure of it, as he felt that prayer for much of the Divine presence would be answered.

After the usual exercises of worship, the question was asked, "What was the chapter for the day?" "Sixty-fourth of Isaiah." "What is the first verse?" Seven hundred loud voices repeated together, "Oh that Thou wouldest rend the heavens, that Thou wouldest come down!" "Say it again," said the minister. They said it again, with renewed emphasis. "Say it again," and the third time they repeated the prayer. There were immediate signs of very deep emotion. The expected lesson could not be proceeded with. That one verse was enough. The whole of the allotted time and much more was occupied with prayer, praise, exhortation, and confession of sin and of faith in Christ, by young and old. It was the beginning of a revival in all the neighbourhood, lasting several months, and resulting in the admission of hundreds to the churches. Many in the churches at Tredegar are known as "children of the revival."

Another case was as follows: Some years ago a famous lay preacher, a God-sent evangelist, was announced to preach. Great numbers had assembled, and, the hour having struck, were getting impatient. The preacher was in his bedroom, at the house of the farmer on whose grounds the service was to be held. The latter sent to summon him, but the servant returned saying he had got someone with him in his room and was begging him to come with him, and was saying, "If you do not go with me I will not go up hence," or something to that effect. The godly farmer said, "Oh, it's all right! we shall have God's presence to-day."

And so it was. A remarkable power attended that day's ministry. Many were pricked to the heart and cried aloud for mercy. It was the beginning of a long-continued period of spiritual revival, during which not only a multitude of sinners were converted, but the whole tone of the spiritual life of believers was raised, in personal devotion, attendance at services, active zeal, and righteousness of life.

It cannot be wrong to avail ourselves of methods to promote revivals which are Scriptural and have been proved efficacious—but we must be on guard against thinking more of methods than of objects, of creating a revival ourselves rather than of seeking it from heaven; of looking to some human agency more than to the Divine Head of the Church; to freshness, eloquence, music, excitement, rather than to the Holy Spirit to kindle and fan the sacred flame. Very often real and lasting revivals have begun within a church, among two or three members, rather than from foreign aid and fire kindled from without.

REV. EGERTON YOUNG IN EDINBURGH.

A series of meetings, under the auspices of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, have been held in Edinburgh, at which stirring addresses by Rev. Egerton R. Young, the well-known missionary to the Red Indians, were given. The meetings have been of the most successful character, and Mr. Young has taken Edinburgh by storm.

He spoke in St. Andrew's Parish, Grange Free, Augustine Congregational, and Broughton-place U.P. Churches, and his addresses made the deepest impression. The four greatest meetings of the series were—one held in the U.P. Synod Hall, one in Carrubbers Close Mission, and two gatherings in the Free Assembly Hall. The crowds in these halls were overflowing. Mr. Young's addresses revealed a power of description of the highest order, while the pathos and thrilling character of some were heart-melting. Large collections for the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, and for Mr. Young's work, were given. Rarely has the missionary spirit of the Scottish capital been so stirred.

GATHERED.

The heavens are gathering one by one,
In their capacious breast,
All that is holy in the earth,
And beautiful and blest.

Jesus is the great lily-gatherer! (Song vi. 2). He is ever walking up and down his garden, and with tender hand gathering his lilies one by one, and laying them in his bosom. If the thought of death does press heavily sometimes (and are there not still those "who through fear of death are all their lifetime subject to bondage"?), then look at it in this light—being gathered by the hand of Jesus.

Having drawn us to Himself, having shepherded us since then, will He not tenderly care for us in our last extremity? Dying grace will be given when it is needed. "As thy day, so shall thy strength be"—at the right time, too—

Till He bids I cannot die;
When the time He wills has come,
Nought shall keep me from my home.

A prepared people for a prepared place! The stones made ready "in the quarry" (1 Kings vi. 7, R.V.) for that holy temple which is being reared amid the hallelujahs of heaven. "The voice of weeping shall not be heard there, nor the voice of crying." Fear not, child of God, though you almost hear the surging of the cold waters—and some of us seem to tarry by the "river" for a long while—they cannot harm you.

If sin be pardoned, I'm secure,
Death has no sting beside."

When the day was breaking on the Sea of Tiberias, after that night of toil (John xxi.), and Peter knew that the stranger standing on the shore was his beloved Lord, what cared he for the floods that rolled between? "He did cast himself into the sea," and was speedily at his feet (ver. 7). When the eye is becoming dim to earthly objects, and the light of the eternal Day is breaking, will not Jesus be standing "on the shore"? And as we recognise the One who "washed us from our sins in his own blood" will not all fear, all thought of death, vanish away?

Who is this that comes to meet me,
On the desert way?
As the morning star foretelling
God's unclouded day!
He it is who came to join me
On the cross of shame;
In his glory well I know Him,
Evermore the same.

"I will come again and receive you unto myself" (John xiv. 3) is fulfilled in a measure, as one by one our loved ones fall asleep in Jesus! "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints" (Ps. cxvi. 15). But while we can almost hear the sounds of gladness and rejoicing, there is mingled with this the voice of sadness, as it was one day in the olden time (Ezra iii. 12). We think of the bereaved ones whose hearts and homes have been blighted. Toward you also the Lord has a purpose of love. "Oh, not in cruelty, not in wrath," has He 'ransplanted your beloved ones to a sunnier clime, where no rude blast shall ever come—lovely ones taken away that the altogether lovely One may fill their place. The Master saith, "Where is the guest chamber?" "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with Me" (Rev. iii. 20).

We asked for an earthly thing
That night in our hour of dread,
And the Lord God answered all our prayers
With a heavenly thing instead.

"Who pulled that flower?" said the gardener, as he walked the garden path. His fellow servants answered, "The Master," and the gardener held his peace." "I was dumb. I opened not my mouth, because Thou did'st it" (Ps. xxxix. 9). The garden is his, the "lilies" are his, the fruit of his own toil and care—may He not do what He will with his own? Then can we not enter a little into Christ's joy, as his prayer is being fulfilled—"Father, I will that they also whom Thou hast given Me, be with Me where I am, that they may behold my glory" (John xvii. 24)? Our heavenly Joseph is in haste to have his brethren in "Goshen's land," that they may be "near" unto Him (Gen. xlv. 10). Only a little while, and there will be a glad reunion (1 Thess. iv. 16, 17). "With them" and "with the Lord." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words:"

Where the child shall find its mother,
Where the mother find the child,
Where dear families are gathered,
Who were scattered on the wild;
Brother, we shall meet and rest
'Mid the holy and the blest.

RUSSIA AND THE STUNDISTS.

From the information received from Odessa, it is evident that the persecuting policy of the Russian Government is being steadily renewed. Students and other persons "suspected" of revolutionary tendencies are being arrested, and domiciliary visits are being paid to private houses by the active and corrupt agents of the "third section." It may, however, be said that any Government is justified in protecting itself against any attempts at its own violent overthrow, and that therefore Nihilist students are persons to be closely watched and, if needful, arrested. But apart from the fact that in these arrests and trials all the safeguards of personal freedom are violated, what can the apologist for the Russian Government say about the wholesale arrests of Stundists and their foul treatment in prison? Our correspondent informs us that Sylvester Mouzh, a peasant, was arrested, confined in a subterranean dungeon, almost starved, and then sentenced to deprivation of all rights and to banishment to the Caucasus. The kind of punishment inflicted on this poor man has also been inflicted on numberless members of the Stundist persuasion.

Now who and what are the Stundists? Of all men in the world they are the most deserving of considerate and just treatment. Grant, if you will, that the revolutionary student who has absorbed the teachings of Bakounine is a dangerous wild beast. But against the Stundist no such accusation can be made.

HE IS REALLY A PRIMITIVE CHRISTIAN, reappearing in this nineteenth century to shame us all out of our smooth routine and decorous conventionalism. His ideas are those of Count Tolstoi; nay, they are those of the Sermon on the Mount. He loves his neighbour as himself, he calls nothing his own so long as his brother is in need; he labours honestly for the bread that perisheth, he carries out all the precepts which the early Christians regarded as having binding force. He is a disciple of the Gospel of non-resistance, which, indeed, he makes almost the corner-stone of his creed, so that he cannot be the enemy of the Russian Government as the Nihilist conspirator is.

This is the kind of man who is being now persecuted by the corrupt administration of the Czar—an administration which has created special machinery to deal with Stundists, just as Charles II. and his Ministers created special methods of crushing out the early pious Nonconformity of England. We may feel reasonably certain that the same result which happened in England will happen in Russia—the persecuted will prove stronger than their persecutors. The progress of Stundism is so rapid among the simple, honest peasantry of Russia, whose natures are predisposed to receive its teaching, that it is evident the Russian Government is becoming alarmed at a movement which, by purely peaceful methods, will effect of that vast empire than can ever be effected by violent revolutionary means. The existence of the Russian Autocracy, with all its apparatus of corruption and cruelty, depends on poor men being willing to accept the office of hired butchers, ready to slaughter their fellows at the bidding of their imperial master. Once let millions of men band themselves together in an attitude of passive resistance, and declare that, come what may, they will not fire upon their fellow-men at the bidding of a despot's creatures, and it is all up with the Russian despotism. You cannot draw an indictment against a whole nation, said Burke. You cannot imprison, much less execute, millions of men.

The Gospel of George Fox, of Garrison, of Tolstoi, whatever we may think of it as a final statement of the relations of men to the State, is the true Gospel for the suffering, silent, inoffensive peasantry of Russia. It possesses an explosive force a thousand times greater than all the dynamite in existence. And it is probably because it is so strong, so invincible, that Stundism is persecuted by the Government. In the same way the harmless, peaceful Christians of Antioch and Rome were persecuted by the Roman Imperial power. But the Russian Government is in one respect meaner than the Roman. For while the Roman Government made no specific attempt to degrade the class from which Christianity made the greater part of its converts, the Czar's Government goes out of its way to perpetuate ignorance and drunkenness among the Russian peasantry.

NO BOOKS, BUT MULTITUDES OF DRAM-SHOPS,

such is the Government's policy. Stundism, on the other hand, puts a ban on drink, and enjoins the study of the Gospels; it tends to rescue the peasants from their two greatest evils. And the Russian Government, which should welcome the aid of moral reformers whose methods are peaceful, is deliberately committed to the task of suppressing the best and strongest ethical movement in the country.

The Russian Government, therefore, stands condemned of being a distinctly anti-moral power. Happily, as we have said, it cannot win in the long run. Somehow, at some time, in ways unforeseen, the great fabric of imperialism superimposed on a democratic people will crumble and collapse, and the reign of truth and justice will begin for the great and noble Slavonic people. If the Stundists had their way, that reign would be ushered in peacefully; if such is not the case, the fault will lie exclusively at the door of the Czar and his advisers. —The Daily Chronicle.

MURDER BY MOB LAW.

A Dalziel's telegram from San Antonio (Texas) states that advices received there from the village of Ecchio, on the border, reports an atrocious lynching of a negro woman for the supposed murder of a white child. The negress, who made no attempt to escape, but was seized by the lynchers while giving food to one of her own infants, stoutly maintained her innocence. In spite of her denials, she was taken to an open lot leading to a steep incline of nearly a quarter of a mile, and was made to look on while a number of men drove nails through a large empty barrel so that the points stood up inside. She was then pitched into the barrel, and the ends were closed. Then, amidst the shrieks of the unfortunate woman, and the yells of the lynchers, the barrel was started rolling down the hill. The poor woman was a shocking spectacle when taken from the barrel, and almost instantly expired. Her dead body was afterwards hanged to a tree and riddled with bullets. There is reason to suppose she was quite innocent of the crime imputed to her.

On this painful topic The Dundee Advertiser, in a recent issue, has the following remarks, in which we heartily concur:—

"Lynch law has long been an unenviable characteristic of the Southern States of America, but it appears to be infecting the North also. There were lynchings in Illinois whilst the Chicago Exposition was inviting the attention of the world to the products of American civilisation. In the present month not only Tennessee but Pennsylvania has shown the ghastly spectacle of human beings put to an ignominious death without any form of trial. The victims of these outrages are usually persons of negro blood. As the whole machinery of law and justice is in the hands of the whites, there can be no pretence that there would be any likelihood of the escape of those whose guilt could be reasonably established. These ghastly murders are, in fact, the outcome of the race prejudice which has survived from the days of slavery. The average American protests that all men are 'born free and equal,' but denies in practice the commonest rights of humanity to all American citizens who have any negro blood in their veins.

"The negro has made great progress since the war in intelligence, refinement, and wealth, but everywhere the brazen wall of prejudice shuts him out from the common inheritance. There is perhaps a contemptuous kindliness for him so long as he remains a hewer of wood and drawer of water, with no aspirations or with aspirations carefully suppressed, but so soon as he claims the position of a citizen of a free country the whole force of social pressure is exerted to keep him down. The hangings, shootings, burning of negroes who have not been convicted of any crime bring discredit upon the American nation, and those who take part in these murders or condone them are the deadliest foes of those free institutions of which America claims to be in a special sense the home."

METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.—On Sunday evening, at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, it was announced that Mr. Thomas Spurgeon had decided to accept the invitation which has been accorded to him to fill the pulpit so many years associated with the name of his father, the late Mr. C. H. Spurgeon. A welcome meeting will be held on April 12.

LORD RADSTOCK ON MISSIONS.

Dear Sir,—Much prayer has for many years gone up for that collection of peoples and races which we call India, and the tiny little band led by Carey a hundred years ago has been reinforced by some hundreds of God's servants in this century. How often we hear even Christians asking, "Are missions doing good?" A strange question indeed for a Christian to ask, implying either that God was not blessing his own truth, or that his servants were all in such an unfaithful state that they could not be used of Him. Because in these latter days in England we have been permitted to see much reaping, many seem to have forgotten our Lord's saying, "One soweth and another reapeth." But the Lord has not been unmindful of the patient labours of his servants, so many of whom have spent their lives in preparing the ground, or sowing seed, or gathering out the thorns which continually grow up to choke the seed.

We fear that there are those among their fellow-servants who have inculcated at home principles of self-denial for others, and thus "lay burdens" on them as a test of true service which they themselves have not "touched with their little fingers." And it sometimes happens that those who have little experience of missions have assumed a self-made episcopacy and have often given authoritative decisions while they failed to understand God's dealings with his servants in distant lands; and have often fussily interfered between the servants of God in the mission-field and the Divine Lord who was walking in the midst of the candlesticks in India and was guiding them.

Indeed, it has been marvellous to see how often missionary committees at home seem to think that the Lord Jesus and the Holy Ghost are not in the same reality in the midst of the "two or three gathered in his name" in heathen lands, and have often ignored his presence in the "Churches in Asia." They have perhaps sometimes assumed, on somewhat superficial grounds, that God has been the director only of the Church of England, or the Church of Scotland, or the body under whose banner they have enrolled themselves; they have been apt to limit the Holy Ghost to the same methods they themselves are cognisant of, or to enforce their own opinions on the "Churches in Asia." Even the Apostle Paul seemed to need the discipline of the Mamertine prison, and the Apostle John the exile of Patmos, before they could be refined enough instruments to transmit the Lord's Divine teaching of Church principles.

It is therefore a grave question how far mission work has not been weakened by the missionaries being dependent for their support on bodies of well-intentioned men, who, often living in comfort or even in luxury, and perhaps sometimes in an atmosphere of half-hearted and worldly Christianity, know little of the without which they have no power for casting out demons at home, and still less the various forms of devil-deceit 7000 miles away.

The Apostle commended the elders of Ephesus to "God and to the word of his grace." Mission committees too often practically say to the missionaries, "Mind, you are employed by us; we give you the money, and you must be guided by us." Is it to be wondered at that the real presence of the Lord in the midst of the Churches is little apprehended; and that, as a consequence, there is often more reliance on human organisation than on Divine power; and that the weakness of native Churches and their dependence on man come as a result of the training which missionary committees too often give to those whom they are apt to consider as "our men"?

Meanwhile, spite of all the failure of the churches at home to obey the command, "Go and preach the Gospel to every creature," the blessed Lord is doing his own work, and has been honouring the labours of his servants. Accounts come from all parts of India as to how prejudice is melting away. There are tens of thousands who say, "Your religion is better than ours." But, among the high castes and the Mohammedans, to be baptized means to be and to be exposed to the bitterest persecution, such as none in England can undergo. In this neighbourhood where we are, in the territory of the Nizam, the greatest Mohammedan State in India, the work of God has been going on for many years. Some thirty years ago a very rich Parsee merchant confessed Christ as his Lord, was turned out of his family, and lost his property, and became a preacher of the Gospel. God has signally blessed his efforts, and there are some fifty stations and institutions, with about 600 communicants. Lately there has been a remarkable stir among the educated natives. Many have come to the Gospel meetings, and we have had the privilege of seeing several Brahmans and Parsees, and upwards of twelve Mohammedans, who are inquirers. Some of these used to come to cavil; now they are being attracted by the grace of God, but have not yet seen the Lord clearly enough to "leave all and follow Him." Several come three or four times a week to the meetings. Besides this there are meetings almost daily in the bazaars, where some, including my servant, an orphan, who left Mahomet for Christ five years ago, are constantly preaching the Gospel, and we trust that before long there will be an ingathering to the blessed Name. Three days ago an inquirer, who had come in from the district three or four weeks ago, found the Lord, and glorified Him in the meeting, and went back to his lonely life in the district, like the eunuch, "rejoicing." We had another in our midst some two and a-half years ago. My late host, Capt. Chauncey, had been brought to the Lord; he had fed upon and so diligently studied the Scripture, that his Bible is filled with remarkable notes of great value. Five weeks ago, when we were having our morning meeting, his utterance was only adoration and praise. That day he was taken ill, and soon his temperature rose to 106, so that I and my son had the privilege of nursing him for a couple of nights. On the last of these nights he asked me if it was wrong to pray to be taken to the heavenly home. The next day the illness showed itself to be small-pox in its worst form, and soon there was not a square inch of his body which was not affected by the terrible scourge. But he was kept in perfect rest; his nurses never saw anything but a smile, and on the morning of February 4 he said, "Jesus is my all in all." That day he passed into the rest he longed for. Twelve hours after the body had to be laid to rest. The whole station was present, and some 400 natives came to bear witness to their esteem for him. Many had cried when they heard of his death. His duty as cantonment magistrate necessitated the administration of justice, not always palatable. But these bore but one testimony to the reality of his blessed life with God.

LOVELY INSTANCE OF THE GRACE OF GOD

Thank God there are other saints of God in the Government of this dark land. How sad that some of their fellow-servants in England, instead of praising God for these precious gifts, should lightly accept the slanders of the accuser of the brethren, and stigmatise them as wrongdoers because they follow a course which their experience leads them to believe to be the true one. We need to remember that the accuser of the brethren can use, and does too often use, religious papers; and we need to remember that we are not exempted from the command to have the love that "thinketh no evil," because a statement is printed and its authority vouched for by those who are veiled from personal cross-examination by the editorial "we." "Judge nothing before the time" is too often ignored, and like every other disobedience, brings hindrance to the work, and loss to the disobedient one.

Let us remember the battle is the Lord's, and therefore expect that He will guide his own in the right way, and lead them to victory.

March 6.—Since writing the above I have heard of several other natives who are inquiring. One Brahman told me, "We are dissatisfied with our present condition, and we want to hear more," and he said that as the result of only one meeting in the city, he knew many of his friends were set thinking and inquiring. Another Brahman, at the head of an important native educational work, said: "We many of us are at heart Christians; every educated man reads Milton, Cowper, Wordsworth, Tennyson, and who could read them without feeling the power of the truth in them?" And later on he said, "We are looking for something to satisfy us. Education has swept away our faith, and we are looking for a new teaching. If all Christians had followed the teachings of Christ, all India would have been Christian. We are now in a transition state; what the future may be we do not know."

I heard of a zealous Mohammedan who said, "India will become Christian." If thousands of God's servants came out to India, I believe they would each find more inquirers than they have perhaps at home. Surely this must be a call to some. "Is it time for you to live in your ceiled houses and this house lie waste?"

March 16.—I am sure many of the Lord's people will join in praising the Lord that the educated young Mohammedan, to whom the Lord Jesus was revealed five weeks ago, came to church, took off his cap, and knelt down as an expression of heart adoration of the Lord, and joined in the service as an intelligent, loving worshipper. Would to God that taking off the hat and kneeling down meant the same with millions in England, who have the "form of godliness." To him it involved the risking of everything, even of life.

Another remarkable incident. Mr. Ruttongi told me of a striking occurrence in the Bazaar yesterday. A Mohammedan who had been a Sepoy said:—"I believe that Christianity will prevail over Mohammedanism." Mr. Ruttongi said, "If you said that before your Moulvies they would beat you." He said, "I don't care for them." Mr. Ruttongi then told them the following fact:—That in the mosque at at Damascus, which is the tenth in sanctity, one of the minarets is dedicated to Christ, and on it this text: "Thy kingdom is for ever." The other day a fire destroyed the buildings abutting on the minaret, but the minaret and the text were quite uninjured. The people in the crowd said, "Oh, we know Christ will reign." It is also said the Mohammedan teachers in Arabia now believe Christianity will prevail.

Is not this the beginning of the last great ingathering? Ramadan has now begun, when no Mohammedan has even a drop of water from sunrise to sunset. Most of my Mohammedan, Parsee, and Hindu friends are scattered, so I learn. "The harvest truly is great." "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth labourers." "The Bridegroom cometh." Alas! are not many slumbering and sleeping, and some, alas! even beating "their fellow servants." I leave Bombay on April 4. Pray for a blessing on the voyage.

Yours for Christ's sake,

Aurangabad. Radstock.

THE CORK DISTURBANCES.

The street-preaching disturbance in Cork has entered on a very acute stage. On Sunday week the opposition offered to the evangelists, both by the mob and the police, was more violent than ever. The quarterly meeting of the Cork Methodists on Friday adopted the following resolution, which was forwarded to the Chief Secretary:—"We desire to record our strong protest against the strange action of the police authorities on Sunday, March 25, in allowing the mob freely to indulge in savage and cowardly attacks on the members of the Open-air Mission; and when they did choose to interfere, in directing their energies to supplement the operations of the mob, instead of affording protection to those whose persons and liberties were being assailed in so wanton and outrageous a fashion."

Owing to this protest exceptional interest was centred in last Sunday's street-preaching. The police were more active than usual in keeping back the mob. Notwithstanding this the evangelists received rough usage, one of their number, Mr. Buchanan, being badly wounded on the temple with a stone. A spectator who protested against the usage they received was followed and beaten. Considerable excitement prevailed, and it took a large police force, including mounted men, to clear the streets. No arrests were made.

THE BIBLE IN CHINA.—In a recent letter, Mr. W. J. Slowan, secretary of the National Bible Society of Scotland, writes as to the spread of the Scriptures in the Chinese language:—"The Gospel of St. Mark, which is the only book we have as yet been able to issue with brief explanatory notes, is meeting with a ready sale, though it costs a couple of cash more than an ordinary Gospel, and that is something to a non-Christian Chinaman. Out of 600 portions sold in a recent journey of one of our agents in the province of Fookien, 340 were of the Annotated Mark. I have had a letter from another agent, who, writing from Hanchung, tells us of the welcome the same book has received from the missionaries of the Baptist Society and the China Inland Mission in the remote province of Shensi. They would like to have 10,000 copies of it."

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 8.—ISAIAH XL.

The second part of Isaiah's prophecies begins here. The earlier ones were local and temporary in their reference: these belong to the distant future, and are world-wide in their scope. Their theme is the deliverance of Israel from exile in Babylon, and the destruction of that proud city by Cyrus, but these carry him forward to the Messiah and to the redemption of the Cross.

A General Introduction (1-11).—The scene is laid in Babylon towards the close of the seventy years' captivity, the ground of comfort being the approaching restoration of Israel. To all tried souls there comes clear shining after rain. When the appointed time of their misery is accomplished; when their punishment is accepted (R.V. marg.); then at last the grace of God restores the penitent and believing. (3-5) Hark, how herald voices proclaim the advent of God over all difficulties, for Israel's deliverance. These words were specially fulfilled when John the Baptist proclaimed the advent of our Lord (Luke i. 16, 17). (6-8) Human might and wisdom that oppose the fulfilment of God's purpose are as the grass and flowers before the hot breath of the sirocco, but God's words stand for ever. (9-11) The scene is changed from the wilderness through which the exodus was to pass, to the cities of Judah, and they are bidden to expect the return of their scattered peoples under the convoy of Jehovah, who shall bring again his flock, gathering and settling them in the ancient fold. Note the union of might and gentleness.

The Greatness of God (12-26).—There was but one answer to all these questions. None could do all these things but God. (12-15) His hand alone can hold the waters in its hollow; or measure the vast heavens with the span, the space between the end of the thumb and end of the second finger; or take up the isles as the slight dust raised by the desert wind. (16, 17) All the wood of Lebanon and beasts would not suffice in the judgment of the prophet to offer Him a worthy sacrifice. (18-26) The graven image is made of wood, the molten of metal, but what a contrast between these and the Mighty God, who sits above the vast orbit of the earth's progress around the sun, who draws the blue azure over all, as the Eastern the awning over the open court of his home, and before whom the best concerted plans of his foes wither as the stubble before the hot east wind. What a difference between the loftiest human conceptions of Deity and those presented of the Holy One in Scripture, to whom the stars are like the sheep that the shepherd calls by name!

Fainting Hearts and the Unwearied God (27-31).—We never know what God can be, until we have come to the point of despair. You must be faint to know his power; wait on Him to renew your strength.

MONDAY, APRIL 9.—ISAIAH XLI.

A great convocation is summoned of all the nations, to determine the question of God's sole Deity. This conception underlies the present and following chapters.

The Advent of Cyrus (2-7).—The great conquerors of history have been raised up by God to achieve his purposes. Cyrus is said to come from the East, because Persia is east of Babylon; but in v. 25 from the north with reference to Media. The opposition of the idol-makers against the coming King is graphically described. We hear their talk in the workshop, but all their plans are destined to be abortive.

The Deliverance of Israel (8-20).—Hast thou been chosen in Christ? Thou shalt never be cast away. The deliverance achieved for the people of God in Babylon is but an emblem of thine. He is with thee, thou needst not fear. He is thy God, thou needst not look around thee. Count God's "I wills," and rest on them. The opposition of the mightiest shall collapse, and God goes forward leading thee by thy right hand, and whispering meanwhile, "Fear not." (15) Israel should destroy her foes, as the Eastern corn-drag bruises the corn with its teeth, and gives the chaff to the winds. Is there not a sense in which we all need to be made new, sharp? In Gospel teaching we need the power to tear away the refuges behind which the conscience hides itself. (17-20) The march from Babylon is an emblem of our experiences in an arid world, but as God gave water in the desert, so weary spirits will find in Him all the elements of this exquisite picture, which but reflects different phases of his character.

Idolaters Challenged (21-29).—Let them predict the future: but they are dumb. So great an event as the overthrow of Babylon was never anticipated. God was the first who by his prophets revealed the mighty events that led to Israel's emancipation. It is He who said suddenly to his people, "Behold, behold!" Note the repeated verdict upon the emptiness and helplessness of idols (24 and 29). The evidence of prophecy is an indissoluble, indisputable testimony to the truth of revelation.

TUESDAY, APRIL 10.—ISAIAH XLII.

The Coming Prince (1-9).—(1-4) A description of his character. In its full significance this can only apply to Christ, to whom it is referred (Matt. xii. 11-20). Anointed by the Spirit; carrying on his work quietly and unobtrusively; gentle to bruised reeds; careful of the dimly burning wick, though never "burning dimly" Himself (R.V. marg.); never daunted nor discouraged; never resigning his trust but always pursuing his vast scheme of redemption: such is Christ (5-7). The Father directly addresses Him, and his words apply to the human as well as to the eternal life of our Lord. Notice that the results of the Gospel are here directly attributed to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. (8, 9) There is always more to follow. Every fulfilment of the Divine promise is a stepping stone to more.

An Appeal to the Captives to Anticipate Deliverance (10-25).—The isles of the Gentiles, all sailors and voyagers, the very inmates of the ocean depths, are summoned to join with wilderness and city, with the nomads of Kedar, and the inhabitants of the rock-dwellings of Sela, to celebrate God's wonderful acts. (14) Jehovah had appeared indifferent to the sorrows of his people, but now He would rise and give vent to his long pent-up wrath. Art thou blind? God will bring thee by a way. Art thou ignorant of thy path? God will lead thee. Does darkness enshroud thee? He will make it light. It is impossible for Him to forsake. (18) Blind as the heathen were, the blindness of Israel was less excusable. They were intended to be his messengers and servants, announcing his Gospel to the world, but they were for the most part blind and deaf, they neither observed nor heard. (21) God's help was utterly undeserved by Israel. It was in pursuance of his own righteousness that He executed righteousness upon their foes. He was also faithful to his promise. (22) How often do we in our sin go near to defeating the gracious purposes of God. We allow ourselves to be robbed and spoiled and snared. We yield ourselves to his foes and ours, because we will not walk in his ways, or be obedient to his law. So long as we abide in obedience we are impregnable. Disobedience opens the door to the foe. (25) Whenever we are passing through trouble, let us lay it to heart, asking if there be any cause of controversy between God and ourselves.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11.—ISAIAH XLIII.

Ye are My Witnesses (1-13).—We are bound to God by creation and redemption. In redemption there is the idea of ransom by price. Babylon was placed under the curse for Israel, and Christ for us. We have been called to be his peculiar people. The higher the waters, the closer the Christ; the fiercer the fire, the more careful his preserving care that not a hair of our heads shall perish. (3-4) Egypt and Seba were destroyed by Cyrus, in the course of the conquests that destroyed Babylon, but the Almighty was prepared to allow the wholesale overthrow of mighty kingdoms as part of the general scheme for the redemption of his people. To an extent little realised, the Divine purpose for his own is shaping the course of human history. (6) Neither north nor south can resist when God bids them yield up his children. (7) Alone amongst the assembled nations, the Jews stand forth to witness to the unity and supremacy of Jehovah. We, too, are summoned to bear our witness in the world of our time.

The Destruction of Babylon (14-28).—God sent the Medes and Persians to Babylon, and because of them the Chaldeans became fugitives in ships down the long course of the Euphrates. (16) The deliverance of Israel from Babylon would be accompanied by marvels so stupendous as to put in the shadow those of the Exodus. (19-20) In the pilgrimage of life, water often fails us. We come to wells of human comfort, and find them dry, but it is not so with those for whom God is working; and the unclean things that haunt others find no hold in them. (22) How much cause we have given God for these complaints! How poor has been our return to God for all his benefits! (25) "Blotted out" is an image from an account book, where the debt is cancelled. When God forgives He remembers our iniquities no more. (26) God loves us to plead with Him, reminding Him of his promises. Priests, prophets, and princes had alike broken God's covenant, and therefore the whole nation must suffer, until repentance and faith unlocked again the secrets of God's forgiveness.

THURSDAY, APRIL 12.—ISAIAH XLIV.

God's Restoring Grace (1-5).—In spite of the sins enumerated at the close of the previous chapter, revival would come as a gracious visitation from God. When once the soul has been born into the family of God, it sustains a relation which sin cannot break.

Jeshurun is a diminutive term of endearment for Israel. (3) Are you thirsty? Do you feel dry and unemotional? Have you children under your care? See that you are in the very position to claim these wonderful promises. It is when we are right with God that we can claim his blessing for others. (5) But there is a sense in which each must claim God for himself. It is a good thing for the young convert to say, "I am the Lord's"; to be willing to be known as a follower of the Lamb. The idea is that of a solemn and public covenant before witnesses. So the Christian in the two ordinances subscribes, that is "writes on his hand," I am Jehovah's. It is said that Christians in the early days used to mark themselves with the name of Christ.

An Idol Factory (6-20).—Note the titles of Jehovah, and remember that Christ spoke of Himself as the first and last. The "ancient people" are the Jews, appointed as God's in ancient times. (9-10) Anything apart from God, which is the centre of our thought and life, is as ineffectual in real helpfulness as the idol. God only is a rock. (20) The idolater becomes like that he worships. He worships a lie, and a lie deceives him. He prostrates himself before that which cannot save, and he loses moral power.

Forgiveness and Redemption (21-28).—Never forgotten, just because God has taken us to be his forgiven; whilst transgression and sin darken our sky, like thick and black clouds. (24) When God undertakes the deliverance of his people He frustrates human schemes and prognostications. It is a grand thing to detect his voice saying "This shall be," then though all the prophets say the contrary, his counsels shall stand, and Cyprus shall be the instrument of redemption.

FRIDAY, APRIL 13.—ISAIAH XLV.

Cyrus (1-7). It is said that this prophecy was read to Cyrus by Daniel, and that it exercised considerable influence upon him. When God goes before us, it is not difficult to do exploits beyond the range of human strength. The primary reference is to the capture of Babylon, but it applies to us also. The loose loin of our foe; the open door of our prison house; the free passage through the great gate; the smoothing of the rugged place; the dissolution of brazen doors and iron bars; the unburying of hidden wealth, this is what God will do for those who follow Him. Darkness and light are his creatures, peace and tumult obey his words, the unruly wills of men own his control. The Persians believed in two co-eternal beings, Ormuzd, and Ahriman, Light and Darkness, but God is supreme over all.

Resistance both Impious and Useless (8-17).—We often strive with God, and question the rectitude and wisdom of his ways. The Jews questioned why they should be delivered through the heathen Cyrus, and afterwards why Gentiles should be admitted to the Church (Rom. ix. 11-21). As well might a fragment of an earthen vessel arise against God. As a parent is superior to the babe, or the potter to his clay, so God's schemes and plans move in circles beyond the range of human intelligence. (11) Those who are one with God, and appropriate his promises, stand by his grace in a position of command. God does their bidding. (14) When we are right with God there goes forth a mysterious influence that captivates and subdues others' souls. The saints shall judge the world. (15) We cannot understand God's ways, but we always recognise Him as Saviour; in the heart of the darkness is love.

Salvation in God Alone (18-25).—The land had lain waste foreign to God's purpose; it should be inhabited again. (19) God has no secret purpose which will thwart his fidelity to promise. His election does not counteract the freeness of the Gospel offer. (21) No other name is given under Heaven, among men. (22) There is life in a look. You may be at one of the ends of the earth. Thence you may look. (23) Phil. ii. 10. (24) See R.V. The soul finds righteousness and strength in God only.

SATURDAY, APRIL 14.—ISAIAH XLVI.

(1-4) Bel is Baal, the Sun-god, by some identified with Jupiter. Nebo, the planet Mercury, which enters into many of the Babylonish names. These idols are borne by beasts of burden into captivity unable to deliver themselves, the beasts stoop wearily beneath their weight. It is a fine satire, for immediately (3, 4) God turns to his people, tells them that He had borne them from the earliest days of their existence, and that He would carry them even to old age. Note the contrast between the weary beast and the unwearied arm of the Eternal, who bears, and carries, and delivers.

(5-7) The prophet returns perpetually to the absurdity that man could be helped by that which he himself had made, and which he must move from its place. These arguments are still employed by missionaries, and are a good illustration of the province of sarcasm. There are some sins which can only be laughed out of court, but amid the laughter let us never forget they are sins.

(8-13) In opposition to the helplessness of the idols, Jehovah adduces the evidence of prophecy to show that He is god alone. The ravenous bird is Cyrus, whose standard was a golden eagle, and who pounced upon his prey. This prediction made 150 years before could not but command attention. God brings near his righteousness. Oh that men would accept it! His salvation tarries not. It is we that keep Christ waiting at the door.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 15.

Joseph Sold into Egypt.—Gen. xxxvii. 23-36.

Golden Text—Gen. l. 20.

Shechem, where the sons of Jacob were feeding their father's flocks (12), was many miles north of Hebron, the home of Jacob; and Dothan (17) was still farther north. Its modern name is Tell Dothaim. The district is extremely fertile, and affords the best pasturage. The fountain at which Joseph's brethren may have watered their flocks still exists. It will be seen, therefore, that the journey upon which Joseph was sent (13, 14) was a difficult and perilous one.

The reception his brethren gave him is one of the darkest stories in human history (18-20). The pit into which they cast him was a kind of cistern, dug sometimes out of the earth, at other times out of the solid rock. Dr. Thomson says there are thousands of such cisterns in Upper Galilee, and he tells of one who fell into one of them, the sides of which were so smooth that he found it impossible to climb out, and after spending two dreadful days and nights there was taken out more dead than alive. To kill Joseph outright would hardly have been less cruel than to commit him to such a place, and leave him there as his brethren intended.

The road from Gilead to Egypt "enters the hill country of Samaria by the way of Dothaim, and thence on through Ramleh and Gaza." The merchantmen are called Midianites (28-36) and Ishmaelites (25). They were descendants of Ishmael, and were bearing some of the rich products of Gilead into Egypt. Thus early was balm spoken of in connection with Gilead (Jer. viii. 22). It is probable that this balm was "some resinous extract from the forest trees of Gilead," and was used for medicinal purposes.

The sale of Joseph to these Midianites was Judah's proposal, possibly in order to save the life of his brother; or, as his words seem to suggest, to gain some profit by him (26-28). Twenty shekels would be about £2 10s., and was less than the ordinary price of a slave (Exod. xxi. 32). Potiphar, to whom the Midianites sold him (36), is variously described (see margin). The Egyptian monarchs were able at will to order the death or the punishment of their people. A chief executioner was a useful instrument for carrying out such commands.

There are three lines that may be pursued, all of which make this story full of instruction.

See it first in relation to Joseph. He has hitherto been conspicuous for the simplicity of his piety, and is learning the truth of what was afterwards declared by Jesus (Jno. xvi. 33).

He has also received, in his visions, special predictions of future greatness. How do his experiences in this story look by the side of those Divine prophesies? It seems as though God's Word was going to fail, and wicked men who set themselves against God were triumphant.

Our judgment of any single event is almost sure to err. Give God time. The issue will show that this incident, disastrous though it appears, is one of the means by which God is fulfilling his purpose. In later life Joseph understood it (xlv. 5; Psa. cv. 17, and Golden Text).

Next look at the conduct of the brethren. No language is too strong in which to denounce their base and cowardly deed. But how came they to do it? The most monstrous crimes may prove to have a very small beginning. Who would have thought that such a crime would result from the jealousy they felt towards Joseph (Acts vii. 9)? Beware of the beginning of evil. A simple thought may speedily develop into an appalling crime.

See the hardening effect sin has. When they had committed the deed "they sat down to eat bread" (25). It was nothing to them, yet they had heard the crying and pleading of their young brother (xlii. 21, 22).

So they had not done with this crime when the Ishmaelites took away their brother. That one fact which occurred twenty years later, reveals the suffering which they brought upon themselves by it. Their remorseful recollections of that day were so great a torment to them that it seemed to their guilty consciences the cause of every form of trouble they had to meet. A sin is not done with as soon as it is committed. It is a seed sowing, and will be followed by a terrible harvest. If you have not brought your sin to Him whose blood can cleanse it, do so now.

The third view sees in this story a beautiful foreshadowing of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus was the well beloved of the Father as Joseph was of Jacob. The mission of Jesus to this world was typified by that of Joseph to his brethren. The manner in which Jesus was treated by his people was foreshadowed by the brethren's treatment of Joseph; and God overruled in each case the wicked purposes of men and made "the wrath of man to praise Him."

For the Young.

WINSOME CHRISTIANS.

My Dear Young Friends,—I wonder if any of you share the very common opinion of many, that becoming a Christian means giving up all and everything beautiful, pleasant, happy, and free? There was never a greater mistake than this. There may be, there are, many persons in the world whose natural temperament unfits them for any great enjoyment of life. A fascinating young girl said to me: "Fancy me being a Christian! I should like to be, but it means such a lot of giving up, such a change in everything that I could not do it, for I have not the courage!" She did not understand, she was judging by appearances. I replied: "'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.' Give yourself to God without looking at other Christians, and you will find that He who made every beautiful thing and every delightful sound, He who formed and called forth the sweet graces of the soul, and clothed the earth with floral delights, besides filling the air with sunshine and birds, made all these things for Himself! 'He hath made everything beautiful in his time.' Would He then have you and your surroundings unbeautiful?"

"I do not know; but look at H——. Before she became a Christian she was a well-dressed girl; since then she has neglected her appearance and her home duties shamefully."

"That is her fault, not Christ's. Or, rather, it is her misconception of what Christ requires of her. But, remember, she is doing what she believes He would have her do. She is, therefore, to be respected for her sincerity. You have nothing to do with H——. You are pointed to Christ, and if you can find, in all his teaching, that He anywhere demands the sacrifice of the beautiful and the lovely, or the annihilation of the charming and the perfect, I say, then, you have won your case."

She was thoughtful for a moment, then she said, "I always thought He taught that we were to give up?"

"Give up what—your sins? Yes, He did; but they are the most hideous and disfiguring excrescences that can be imagined. They are to the soul what leprosy is to the body—a frightful disease, at first distorting and alienating, and finally destroying utterly, and in the most loathsome manner."

"But did not He say we must give up everything else?" asked L——.

"Do you really think He did? Have you never heard 'He hath given us all things richly to enjoy,' not to abuse? If that is so, and it is—in addition to his having given us all our capacities for enjoyment and beauty—how can you believe that He demands us to give up what He sends us?"

"It sounds right enough, but all the girls I know who ever became Christians, gave up many things, ordinary things, such as books, flowers, pretty clothes, companions, ornaments, and one girl even gave up going to picture galleries, or looking at magazines."

"You are still quoting other people, making them your bogey; why not go to Christ, direct, and when you are his, see what difference it makes in you, before judging others? You have not proved your case, because in the instances you have given, I can quite understand that the books, flowers, pretty clothes, companions, ornaments, picture-galleries, and magazines were snares, or temptations to those who gave them up? or they thought they were. You know, 'to him that thinketh it a sin, it is a sin,' though it may be the highest form or expression of spirituality to another."

"I am beginning to see, then, that temperament has a great deal to do with it. Reading is a great snare to me; I neglect so much when I have an interesting book. If I became a Christian should I have to give that up?"

"Not necessarily; the all-sufficiency of the grace of God would regulate that taste in you, if you would let Him. You would desire to do nothing in excess if you wished to walk as He walked, for excess in anything is sin."

"Oh, that makes it plainer," said L——, brightening up at the thought. "I remember now, there is Mrs. W. A., always so sweet and charming, and so full of interest in everybody and everything, and yet I know she is a lovely Christian."

"You are still, L——, looking away from Christ! Let nothing divert your gaze from Him (Heb. xii. 2), read carefully through all his teaching, go out with Him as He tells you to 'consider the lilies,' stand by his side as He draws a lesson from the birds of the air; listen to his voice as He calls a little child unto Him; hear Him as He speaks of the waves of the sea; of the light; of the lambs upon the hillside; of rest, and peace, and love; and then if you find anything contrary to the noblest beauty, the highest loveliness, it will be because you have carried it to the Gospels with you, for it is not in Christ."

"Thank you so much," said L——, "I will study the Gospels."

L—— is now a Christian, just as fascinating as ever, just as well dressed, and yet perfectly consistent.

"L—— is a winsome child of God, and a real one," was said.

"Yes, the secret is, she worships the Lord in the beauty of holiness; her spiritual eye is fixed on Christ, the 'altogether lovely' one, hence she grows daily more like Him."

CHILDREN'S SERVICES IN RADNORSHIRE.

Mr. Josiah Spiers, the children's evangelist, recently brought his mission in Wales to a termination for the present by a series of meetings, lasting over six weeks, in Radnorshire. Llandrindod Wells, that popular Welsh health resort, was first visited, and the meetings were held in the Congregational, Baptist, and Presbyterian Chapels, and the Friends' Meeting Room in alternate weeks. Two meetings were held on each Sunday, and five meetings were held during the week besides. Throughout the mission an excellent attendance was maintained, the Sunday evening meetings being particularly large. The farewell meeting, held in the Presbyterian Chapel, was a memorable gathering; and there is no doubt that the mission will live for many years in the memories not only of the children, but of many adults too. Quite a number of young men and women and others retained a lively and happy recollection of a mission conducted in the town by Mr. Spiers some nine or ten years ago.

One very noticeable feature of the ministry of our brother was his earnest appeals to Church members who belie their profession by a life of ease and indifference to the claims of their Saviour.

The meetings were continued at Penybont, and here again they were joined in by all denominations, and were well attended throughout. Much blessing rested upon these meetings again, several making the happy choice which none ever regret. Mr. Spiers for a part of the time had the co-operation of Miss B. Spiers (his niece), who was enabled to help a great many by personal dealing and otherwise. The friends at both places have made arrangements for the carrying on of occasional children's meetings, and at Llandrindod Wells a United Endeavour Society has been established under very promising circumstances.

THE CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

Anniversary meetings, Thursday, April 5; Rev. E. A. Stuart, M.A., at 3; Dean Lefroy at 6.30, in Exeter Large Hall, Strand.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Sun., April 8, 2 Cor. v. 1-11; Mon., 9, v. 12-21; Tues., 10, vi. 1-18; Wed., 11, vii. 1-16; Thurs., 12, viii. 1-12; Fri., 13, viii. 13-24; Sat., 14, ix. 1-15.

IF YOU ARE OLD ENOUGH TO THINK, think on this: what you are to be will depend upon what you do; and what you do will depend upon what you are.

THE LATE MISS GRENFELL,

OF MAESTEG HOUSE, SWANSEA.

This devoted lady, who has been called away from a life of singular activity and usefulness to the presence of Him she loved so well, and whose departure has caused widespread mourning in Swansea, had been for over thirty years a recognised leader in Christian work of every kind in the district; so that, as a local contemporary has said, the inspired epitaph may well be applied to her, "Our sister, a servant of the Church . . . . . and a succourer of many" (Rom. xvi. 1, 2).

Miss Elizabeth Mary Grenfell was the daughter of Mr. Pascoe St. Leger Grenfell, while her brother was Gen. Sir F. W. Grenfell, who achieved not a little fame as Sirdar in Egypt. Some thirty years ago when Mr. Grenfell, sen., was staying in Swansea, where he had built schools and mission halls, his daughter asked him to give her land on which to erect a school. The question "Where can you get the money to build?" she answered by raising over £300 in three weeks. The building was completed, and is now used as a day and Sunday-school. An iron church was also erected, about fifteen years ago, through her efforts. It has recently been replaced by a permanent edifice, the original one being removed to Port Tennant. The Golden Griffin coffee tavern was also opened several years ago at Miss Grenfell's expense. The title Golden Griffin is borrowed from the family crest.

Even at this early date Miss Grenfell was indefatigable in her efforts to ameliorate the condition of the poor by whom she was surrounded, and gave herself up entirely for others, forgetting her own comfort. The whole of the East Side was spiritually parcelled out by the Grenfell family when they were at Maesteg, each of the daughters being allotted a separate district as Bible readers and district visitors, and right well did the whole of them perform the duties devolving upon them, thoroughly ingratiating themselves in the affections of those to whom they so unselfishly ministered.

Thus beginning, Miss Grenfell found herself gradually led out into further Christian service. Her sympathies were fully with the Y.M.C.A., to which she was a true helper in many ways. In her also the Y.W.C.A. found an ardent supporter and willing worker. Indeed, she interested herself in the work among the young women actively and earnestly. With characteristic generosity she purchased and furnished No. 2, Grove-place, where she assisted the Association, and did much valuable and good work. In 1, Grove-place, which she also purchased, she conducted a Policemen's Bible-class, which was well attended. In the Swansea Police Force Miss Grenfell was known as the "Policeman's Friend," a title which she most deservedly won.

Very peculiarly, however, was she associated with the work among railway men, and ten years ago she started in Swansea a branch of the Railway Mission, leading the Sunday Afternoon Bible Class, and inviting the railway men and their friends once a year to a pleasant gathering at Maesteg House. The Railway Signal for May, 1888, gave a brief sketch of her labours, from which we learn that:—

"Miss Grenfell stood by the Railway Mission work from its commencement in the Western Counties, and bore a large share of the expenses in many places within reach of her own beautiful home. Evangelists and others who have visited Swansea have met with very cordial receptions from her; and we thank God for raising up here and there ladies as well as gentlemen who are right in the front of the battle against sin, and in the front rank of the service of mercy towards those around them. In connection with other work her name is alike familiar; we know that not a movement in the South Wales district is carried on without her sympathy. Policemen as well as railway men, navvies and boatmen, all sorts and conditions of men, have been befriended by her.

"As a visitor to the sick, too, she was well known. For her no sickness or disease had any terror; she would wait for hours by a bedside, ministering comfort and consolation. In fact, Maesteg House, St. Thomas, the family residence, become known as a resort for help in time of sorrow, need, sickness, or other adversity. Her untiring zeal and anxiety for the spiritual welfare of all grades of humanity was proverbial, and no movement, having for its end the improvement of the masses, ever appealed to her generosity in vain."

The Swansea postal and telegraphic staff also came in for a large share of her attention, and she always evinced the keenest interest in their spiritual welfare, encouraging them in every possible way to accept Christ as their Saviour and guide. In mothers' meetings, Bible classes of various kinds, and work among poor boys she was constantly active. The Cambrian notes that "Miss Grenfell never missed an opportunity of showing her regard to the deceased members of her classes when it was possible to do so, and was frequently to be seen in a funeral procession of some humble working man or woman. Upon one occasion, the day being cold, wet, and stormy, a perfect hurricane swept over Danygraig Cemetery during the progress of the funeral of a working man, whilst the rain poured down in pitiless torrents, drenching those who remained to hear the last prayers. Many were fain to seek shelter under the walls of the adjacent church, but Miss Grenfell braved out the unpropitious elements until the final Amen was pronounced, and then started the beautiful hymn, 'Safe in the Arms of Jesus.'"

The same journal states that but recently, when the schools at Kilvey and Pentrechwyth were known to be in the market for disposal, Miss Grenfell stepped in and took over the entire management and sole responsibility, thus saving the schools to the few Bible-reading and Biblical-exposition institutions of the country. Some years ago Miss Grenfell paid a visit to Palestine, and took notes during the journey, from which she was enabled to evolve an excellent lecture, which she afterwards frequently delivered.

Varied and wide-reaching as are the labours we have mentioned, they are far from exhausting the circle of her sympathies; to give a full list of these would be tedious, while to pass them over would be to present an incomplete view of her devotion and multitudinous activities. Several churches and church institutions owe much to her, while at the Golden Griffin she had a meeting for dockmen, and at St. Thomas's mission-room weekly Bible-classes for women and for young men. The members of these classes, on removing elsewhere, were followed by prayer and loving letters; and many now leading useful and honoured lives owe much to her Christian influence and teaching. So that, as Canon Trotter said at the funeral: "Her holy and beautiful example will, doubtless, be reproduced in hundreds of Christ-like lives, and thus, once more, the great fact will be illustrated that the grain of wheat falling into the ground will bring forth much fruit."

Miss Grenfell led so vigorous, so devoted, and so self-sacrificing a life, that comparatively few suspected she suffered from any ailment at all. She was so reserved, so resigned, and so deeply interested in promoting the well-being of the people about her, of whom she had taken a more than sisterly care for so many years, that she almost forgot herself in her labours of love for others.

It was quite characteristic of her that just before she left Swansea to undergo the surgical operation, she visited several members of the mothers' Bible class with books, which she left at the homes with kindly words of counsel and good wishes. It appears there was a book club in connection with her class, and it "was her wish," as she expressed it, "to complete her work as far as possible before she proceeded to London." Though she thus seemed to have entertained a premonition of the critical nature of the position in which she was placed, not a word passed her lips that she was suffering, she was always marked by a happy smile and a cheerful demeanour all through the trying time she must have spent for a long time past.

But her physical sufferings—similar to those which had afflicted and at last carried off her sister Gertrude, "the good Miss Grenfell," who lies buried in Danygraig Cemetery—told upon Miss Mary to such an extent, that, acting under the best of medical and surgical advice, she consented to come up to London to undergo an operation. This was performed by two well-known surgeons, at her brother's house in London, and at first seemed successful; but ere long came a relapse, and a week after the operation she passed away.

The mourning when the tidings reached Swansea was general, and in St. Thomas, with which she was peculiarly associated, most of the shops were closed and the blinds drawn on the day the body was brought back from London, as well as on the day of the interment. Indeed, the funeral proved a memorable occasion. The whole town seemed stirred, and it was estimated that from 12,000 to 15,000 people assembled at the cemetery. Many were the sighs and sorrowful expressions heard on all hands that Swansea had lost the services of one who had ministered so nobly and unselfishly on behalf of all classes. Amongst those who followed the procession were representatives of the various institutions, Bible-classes, and missions for which Miss Grenfell had done so much. Canon Trotter and other speakers only voiced the general feeling when they said that, "God had removed from them a remarkable woman. . . . one who had gained the love and esteem of all who knew her." The following lines, great favourites with the late Miss Grenfell, were attached to a card on the coffin:—

Here lies the casket, waiting for repair;
Christ doth this jewel in his bosom wear;
Wait but a little while, and thou shalt see
Both one in Him throughout eternity.

EASTER AT NEW BRIGHTON.

Such glorious opportunities as are afforded us during the holiday-season for preaching ought not to pass unnoticed. On Good Friday we had a continuous open-air service on the sands for nearly five hours, during which thousands heard the Gospel message. Christian literature, tracts, etc., were freely distributed, while Bibles, testaments, and Gospel books were sold in large numbers by our colporteur. This year we had the assistance of a number of Mrs. Stephen Menzies' deaconesses, who not only helped with the singing but also spoke. They were a great attraction, and God blessed their efforts, which will doubtless be helpful to them in their training for missionary work abroad. Tea was provided at the Victoria Hall for between forty and fifty workers, which included also a band from Liverpool of the "King's Heralds," who went up in relays, while the others were carrying on the meetings. We finished up the day with a prayer-meeting at the Victoria Hall.

On Easter Monday we had the assistance of a number of preachers from the Liverpool Evangelisation Society, also Mrs. Menzies' deaconesses and other friends. The weather was lovely, and the large open-air meeting was sustained hour after hour.

Tea was again provided at the Victoria Hall for the workers, and a well-attended prayer and testimony meeting concluded the day's proceedings at the hall.

As the years go by there seems to be a growing disposition to listen to open-air preaching, certainly at New Brighton this has been the case.

During the long summer last year, we not only had our usual tent services on the sands, and also large open-air meetings, when the attention was most marked, but we had also two colporteurs at work every day following the crowds, holding meetings and selling Bibles and books. We shall probably attempt something in the same direction this summer, and earnestly ask the prayers of God's children for guidance and blessing.

New Brighton. Thos. A. Leigh.

The Late Rev. George Douglas, D.D., LL.D.,

Principal of the Wesleyan Methodist University, Montreal.

The late Dr. Douglas was not only for a long period the foremost figure in the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada, but was recognised as the great leader in all philanthropic enterprise in that most interesting and hopeful land. His career was animating and instructive to all who wish to lead a noble and a fruitful life.

George Douglas, who died on February 10, 1894, was born October 11, 1825, in the hamlet of Ashkirk, in the romantic Teviotdale, Roxburghshire, in Scotland, near Abbotsford, for ever famous as the home of Sir Walter Scott. Although his family emigrated to Canada whilst George was still a boy, yet the scenery and the associations of his birthplace left a perceptible impression on his mind, and even on his style.

Though bearing such a renowned, historic name, Dr. Douglas was of very humble parentage, being the son of a rustic artisan who, to meet the needs of his increasing family, transferred his thews to Canada. Thus the scantiest schooling fell to the lot of the future Principal of a College. Sixty years ago educational facilities were as scarce in Montreal as they are now redundant, and the "narrow means at home" made it necessary for the immigrant's stout laddie to develop his muscles rather than his brain. His father, however, managed to give him a short spell at a school kept by a Presbyterian minister. His richest and his most remunerative training was his religious training, first at home and then at the Presbyterian and the Wesleyan Methodist Sunday-school in Montreal.

At home he was so nurtured on the Bible and the Shorter Catechism, and he so assimilated that nutritious and kindly mental aliment, that it seemed to form the very fibre of his mental and his spiritual tissues; and the psalms of the Scottish Kirk and its favourite family hymns gave the key-note to his religious sensibilities. But attendance at the Methodist Sunday-school involved attendance at the Methodist chapel, and the fervid, loving ministrations of Rev. William Squire, at that time minister, were the means of bringing young George Douglas to his Saviour. The whole family became zealous and hard-working Methodists.

In his nineteenth year he was called to labour as a Methodist lay-preacher, still pursuing his laborious calling as a mechanic. The thrifty and hard-working family carried on two trades, that of carpenter and that of blacksmith, and George Douglas worked at and attained a mastery of both trades, thus developing great muscular strength and manual skill. His conversion to God took place when he was seventeen years of age. At that time Montreal possessed more Methodist ministers than Methodist chapels, so the young man had few opportunities for exercising in that city his extraordinary preaching power. But when he did occupy a city pulpit it was plain to everyone that his true sphere was the Christian ministry, not the smithy or the joiner's shop. Accordingly, in 1848, at the age of twenty-three, he was accepted as a candidate for the pastorate in the Wesleyan Methodist Church. His educational deficiencies were almost as prominent as his rare endowments as a pulpit orator, although for a short time he held a clerkship in a bookstore.

The Methodists of Montreal, perceiving that he needed and would richly repay some scholastic training for his work, resolved that he should have it. But, at that date, Canadian Methodism had no training college for ministerial probationers. So the warm-hearted and free-handed people, headed by the Hon. Mr. Ferrier, resolved to send him at their own expense to the Wesleyan Methodist College at Richmond, and support him there. Alas! they reckoned without their host. He reached Richmond, to be informed that he could not possibly be admitted. But the Mission House authorities, finding that a great fish had been cast up upon our shores, at once secured him. He was forthwith ordained and sent to the Bermudas as a missionary.

This non-admission of the future Theological Professor for training in a Theological College was long a subject of regret to himself and to his friends. Even after he had become the most popular speaker in the Dominion, the defects in his education were but too apparent, and he found it hard work to overcome them. But this he did accomplish so effectively as to give the impression in his later years to an educated audience that he had been favoured with a high degree of culture. And so he had, but it was almost all self-acquired. After some three years of missionary labour, he was struck down by a malarial fever, which left behind the insidious on-creeping tendency to paralysis with which he was called to struggle for full forty years, which culminated in total blindness for the last decade of his life, and in the gradual loss of the use of both hands and feet.

On his return to Canada, and the partial recovery of health, he was first appointed to a bush-station, where he had to "rough it." But he greatly enjoyed this bracing kind of life, with its varied forms of exhilarating locomotion, on horseback or in the sleigh. But his rare oratorical gifts soon brought him into prominence, and called him to the large cities—Kingston, Hamilton, Toronto, and Montreal. In 1869 the McGill University in Montreal conferred on him the degree of LL.D., and on the foundation of the Wesleyan Methodist Theological College in that city in 1873, he was elected as its first principal. This high place of toil and trust he held for more than twenty years, till the day of his lamented death. It was here that he rendered his greatest service to the Church of which he was for so many years such a strong and graceful pillar.

He had, to begin with, that which must ever be the indispensable prerequisite, the immovable substructure of all theologic teaching in every Evangelic Church, that for the want of which no amount of scholarship can compensate—an impregnable confidence in the truthfulness and trustworthiness of Holy Scripture, and in the absolute competence and the infallible authority of our Lord Jesus Christ in all his teaching and his testimony. His theology was purely Biblical, and its first course was laid at home. His earliest tutor in divinity was his own devoted mother, and her class-books were the Bible and the Shorter Catechism. John Ruskin truly traces the firm moral fibre of the Scottish nation to the national catechism and to its first awakening question and answer—"What is the chief end of man? Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him for ever." For, as Ruskin finely reasons, before you can answer the question, What is good for man? you must first reply to this: What is man good for? To the same effect spoke Thomas Carlyle, when "now upon the brink of eternity." The text of Dr. Douglas, not only for the pulpit, but also for the platform and the lecture-room, was "the big ha' Bible, ance his father's pride."

The next course in the goodly structure of his theology was laid in the Sunday School. The third course was laid by such preachers as Squire, Dr. Matthew Ritchie, and Dr. John Jenkins. The solidity and satisfying character of this blessed early teaching was proved by the fact that all the speciousness of the current Rationalism was unable to loose him from his moorings and send him drifting amongst the sparkling icebergs and the delusive fog-banks which were advertised as the long-sought El Dorado of theologic "thought."

Dr. Douglas was President of the Canadian General Conference from 1878 to 1882. He was often chosen to represent the Wesleyan Methodist Church at grand interdenominational conventions, including the great Christian Convention in Washington in 1871, with a thousand representatives, the Œcumenical Methodist Conferences in London, 1881, and in Washington, 1891, the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the international gathering of the Young Men's Christian Association.

He exemplified for many years heroic Christian fortitude. At the time of his coming over to the Œcumenical Conference in London, 1881, he was so nearly blind as to be unable to distinguish an old friend either by face or form, but only by the voice. But though a blind Samson, he never ceased to be Samson Agonistes, and was never shorn of his locks of strength. For a weary length of time he was completely paralysed both hand and foot, and was unable even to feed himself. But with the helplessness of the child, he combined the endurance of the martyr.

He was never so eloquent, either by voice or pen, as in his terrific denunciations of sin and vice and crime. An address to young men and women on "Social Purity," which he delivered at a Christian Endeavour Conference, has been widely circulated in booklet form, with the title "Walk in White," by Rev. Thomas Champness ("Joyful News" Book Dépôt, Rochdale). It is an oration of consuming power, and calculated to do much good.

A MISSIONER TO IRONWORKERS.

Mr. G. W. Jacoby, the Rolling Mill Evangelist, of Philadelphia, is so styled because until a few years ago he combined rolling-mill work with evangelistic effort. Since devoting himself entirely to Gospel work, he has been instrumental of good to many people in various States of the American Union. About nine years ago he paid a brief visit to Great Britain. He hopes shortly to come again, in order to make an evangelistic tour of the iron districts. He is widely known in America, where he is constantly holding missions. Friends who may desire to organise meetings for Mr. Jacoby should write to him at 1122, Savery-street, Philadelphia, U.S.A.

SHANKLIN, I.W.—A meeting of much interest was held at the Mission Hall on Easter Monday, when many from Southsea, Ryde, and Blackgang assembled. After tea an open-air meeting was held in the High-street, followed by the meeting in the hall, which was well filled. After several brief addresses, the meeting was thrown open for testimony, and two or three brethren from Blackgang stirred the hearts of all present; other testimonies were given, and the meeting was a most refreshing one.

AFRICAN MISSIONS VISITED.—26.

By Mr. D. A. HUNTER.

Leaving Main, and continuing my southward course, I reached Blythswood Institution after a twenty-five miles' drive. It is prettily situated in the midst of a hilly country, the wonderful growth of trees which has sprung up around the Institution forming a strong contrast to the bare hills around, with never a tree to be seen.

Blythswood is called after the late Captain Blyth, formerly chief magistrate in Fingoland. He was a man of robust character, who throughly understood the Fingos, and had great influence with them. After inducing the tribe to assist largely in making the road down the Kei Heights, and so greatly facilitating access from the colony to the Transkei, he cast about for some other good work into which to draw their energies and sympathy. He consulted with Rev. Richard Ross, one of the veteran missionaries of the Transkei, and it was decided to found a younger Lovedale among the Fingos.

Dr. Stewart, whose influence among South African natives is remarkable, was induced to come and address a great gathering of the tribe. They agreed to tax themselves by a poll tax, and that, together with contributions in kind at the opening of the Institution, made up a good round sum from the Fingos, which, of course, was greatly augmented by contributions from home, and from white people in the colony.

In 1876 the opening took place, but war between the Kaffirs and Fingos soon broke out, and Blythswood was requisitioned by Government to be used as barracks. White people from all around fled there, and went into laager for safety, until the war was over.

This storm weathered, the Institution was re-opened, and things went on quietly. In 1881 Rev. James McLaren came out to take charge, and at that time there were some fifty boys under training. That number has gone on steadily increasing, until now there are about 150 boys. It was found quite necessary to put up class-rooms and a hall to accommodate this accession, and the Fingos were again called upon. They promised to raise £500, Mr. McLaren pledging himself to raise a like sum in Scotland.

Great need was felt for a girls' institute. It is a mistake to train the boys of a tribe only, for when they grow up they cannot find wives sufficiently advanced out of heathenism and barbarianism to be true helpmeets to them. The Ladies' Missionary Committee of the Free Church of Scotland, realising this need, took the matter in hand. Both the girls' institute and the new class-rooms and hall were opened in May, 1892, by Major Elliott, chief magistrate of the Transkei. The following session the Girls' Institute was full, and an addition is about to be made, which will give twice the present accommodation.

Besides the ordinary school teaching, there are some twelve apprentices learning carpentering, and ten learning gardening. All the woodwork of the buildings recently erected has been done by those apprentices, who also make desks, forms, tables, blackboards, etc. They go out and work at new churches, schools, and other buildings in these native territories.

Among the girls, there is also an apprentices' department, where sewing and laundry work are taught. Each girl has to do her share of the ordinary house-work, and every boy has a certain amount of outdoor manual work to perform daily. They do fencing, wood-chopping, general farm-work, and tree-planting. Twelve years ago Blythswood stood on the bare open veld. To-day it nestles in a splendid growth of trees—oaks, gums, wattles, and fruit trees of many descriptions, all planted by the hands of the boys.

While most of the boys naturally are Fingos, the institution being situated in the heart of Fingoland, there are also Gaikas, Tembus, Bomvanas, etc., and one only realises what an advantage their being trained in regular manual labour is when one remembers that the native man's idea of life is to lounge about his kraal, smoke, and drink beer, while his wife tills the field, and supports her lord. Each Sunday some of the boys go off to preach the Gospel in the heathen kraals around. Besides the regular Sunday services, morning and evening, there are classes in the afternoon. The mission band has an early prayer meeting at 6 o'clock. At noon on Wednesdays, all work ceases for an hour, and everyone assembles in the hall for prayer. A meeting of the Women's Christian Union is held each Monday afternoon, and here, as at Main, it has proved a source of much blessing. On Thursday and Saturday evenings the natives have meetings among themselves.

Medical work is not neglected. The institution dispensary is open every morning, and is a means of drawing many of the raw heathen, who not only get the medicine they come for, but also the Gospel.

Altogether it is a grand work, fraught with mighty opportunities and corresponding responsibility—a responsibility shared by Christians at home, who ought constantly to bear up in prayer the workers and work of Blythswood.

DISTRIBUTING SCRIPTURE TRUTH.

Through the agency of the Society for Distributing Scripture Truth, rolls of texts, handbooks, cards, and leaflets are provided for railway waiting-rooms, hotels, ragged schools, asylums, hospitals, workhouses, prisons, seamen's missions at home and abroad, and other places of public resort. The thirty-fifth annual report shows that the sowing of the good seed is not in vain. Though they may not be heeded at the time, the Gospel messages are read, and the word of warning or comfort is often remembered, to the saving of sinners and the edification of those who believe.

Here are two striking incidents, showing how God has used tracts:—"A carter, having received a number of small handbills of Young Men's and other meetings, put them in his waistcoat pocket. One Saturday night he said to his wife, 'Lass, I have got a lot of papers here, I don't know what they are, but they will do for thee to light the fire with.' Taking one after the other out of his pocket, he spread them out, twelve in number, in order upon the table, having a little fun to himself; and then said, 'What fools these men must be, wasting their money, paper, and time.' He then said, 'I will see if there are any more.' 'Oh yes, one more, larger than the rest. I will put this in the middle. But the larger one was a tract, with these words upon it, 'Come to Jesus.' 'I was fixed to the spot,' he afterwards said, 'thought a moment, and then said, All these are the twelve apostles, but this tract is Christ's word to me, 'Come to Jesus.' I said to my lass, I'll go to the meeting to-morrow afternoon. I did so; and Jesus set me free.'

"Some years ago a young man, a Spaniard by birth, visited Leamington from New York, and received, in the Pump Room, a tract, which was given to him casually by a lady. It was one of Canon (now Bishop) Ryle's tracts, and was the means of his conversion. On his return to America, where his parents had taken up their residence, he entered one of the universities, and, having been ordained by Bishop Potter, was appointed missionary to the Spanish-speaking people of New York. From thence he went to Mexico, where he was appointed to one of the principal churches in the capital. He translated the whole of Bishop Ryle's tracts into Spanish, and the result was that there are now 160 Protestant congregations in Mexico, whereas a few years before there was but one; and 63,000 persons have seceded from the Church of Rome. The title of the tract is 'Are you forgiven?'"

The secretary of the Society is Mr. W. W. Brown, 65, South-street, Eastbourne.

DO NOT DESTROY your children's faith in you by not keeping your promises to them, no matter how trifling they may seem. The simple faith they place in you should be a reason, if there were no other, for keeping a promise once made.

The Evangelist.

"IN CHRIST."

In God's dealings with man it is often noticeable that He makes use of simple objects and every-day events in order to bring his truths home to the heart. But He also "moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform," as is illustrated in the following narrative:—

"I was about eight or nine years old when the first consciousness of my sinfulness dawned on me, and God only knows how I dreaded going to bed lest I should never wake up again. Later on, this terror was enhanced by the remarks of one of my teachers, who spoke of our Lord's coming as probable and possible at any moment, in the near future. The fear that Christ might appear before I was prepared to meet Him, well nigh deprived me of my reason. If I attended Gospel meetings I only came away with a heavier heart, as the devil would whisper 'You are too bad for Christ to have anything to do with you.'

"So matters went on for about ten or twelve years. One night I heard a notorious drunkard give an account of his conversion, and I thought to myself, if it was possible for God to save him there was a chance for me. But this faint hope disappeared when I heard another listener—whom I had always look upon as a Christian—say that it was presumptuous, if not blasphemous, to say one could be sure of salvation in this life. Feeling I could go no further, I wrote a note to the clergyman of the church I attended, and asked him to preach a sermon on the subject. He kindly did so, and took as his text, 'Come now and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet they shall be white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool' (Is. i. 18). That night I knew Christ was my Saviour.

"For a time things seemed to go very smoothly, but at length I began to be worried about the Judgment Day. I did not fully realise that, God having dealt with Christ on the cross on account of my sins, that day was passed for me. It happened that I needed to have some teeth out, and my nerves not being strong I had gas for the operation. I do not think a criminal about to be executed could feel more miserable than I did. My last conscious thought was 'Shall I come out of it again?' However, having 'gone off,' I seemed to be walking over a vast plain, when suddenly a tremendous chasm yawned at my feet, and at the same moment the thought flashed through my mind that the Day of Judgment had come. After the first shock I noticed over the chasm a white cloud through which loomed the shape of a throne. Out of the midst of the throne a voice called my name, but I had no time to reply before another voice replied—instinctively I knew it was the voice of Christ. Then I noticed that Christ was standing in front of the throne, and catching sight of the wound in his side I flew to him without a moment's hesitation. Marvellously enough, the nearer I approached to Him the less my body seemed to become, so that when close to his side it did not seem at all wonderful that I was able to enter and hide quite easily in the wound.

Rock of ages cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.

From this shelter I had a good view of all round, but my attention was drawn to an open book, the pages of which were completely covered with blood. All my fear vanished, as the words came to my mind that 'I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for My own sake, and will not remember thy sins' (Is. xliii. 25). 'Blotting out the hand-writing of ordinances that was against us." (Col. ii. 14).

"Some years have now elapsed since the occurrence, but the assurance has never left me that being in Christ judgment was only a matter of form. Christ having redeemed me by his blood no charges could be preferred against me."

G. Lawrence.

SOUTHWARK AND LAMBETH MISSION.—Mr. Benson, the evangelist, with his band of helpers, hopes to commence the open-air meetings, which have ever been a special feature of the mission, on April 15. As they are held continuously night by night in front of Christ Church (Sunday morning, at Belvedere-road), he is glad of the help of any Christian worker.

THE REVIVAL IN NEW YORK.

The fourth week of the evangelistic revival meetings in New York City has shown an increased representation of churches and a larger attendance than at any time before. At least fifty churches, (says the New York Independent of March 22), are now holding evening meetings in their own edifices, or uniting in union meetings in other church buildings. Denominational lines are thrown aside; Baptists, Congregationalists, Disciples, Presbyterians, Methodists, Reformed Churches—all Evangelical believers gather on the same platform, and work together for the cause of Christ without a reference to differences of dogma. Many who remember the great revival of 1857 and the Moody and Sankey work of 1876, say that the prospect is that the movement now started will result in one of the greatest religious awakenings ever known. The careful and thorough organisation is having its effect, and there is no confining of the work to any one set of meetings or any single locality. Interest naturally has centred about the meetings at Association Hall, Metropolitan Hall, Cooper Union, and the outdoor meetings in Madison Square in front of Dr. Parkhurst's church; but other places have been equally crowded. On Tuesday Broadway Tabernacle was filled to hear Mr. Moody, over three thousand people being present. Dr. Dixon has conducted the meetings at Metropolitan Hall, West Fourteenth-street, and wherever the churches have been opened crowds have gathered.

As was natural, special interest centred about the visit of Mr. Moody. He spoke with his old-time fervour, and showed that the years that have passed have not diminished his power in any sense. His special topic was the Bible. He said that we want to no portion of it should be given up; the only way to secure a real quickening is through the Bible and the whole Bible: "The Master has set his seal on the miracles in the Old Testament, and, until I know more than He, I will believe them. It is fashionable to throw out the supernatural. If you take that away from the Bible, you take away the heart. . . . In speaking of the Bible we must remember that it is only one book. There is only one book, if it is two parts. Some people speak of the Old Testament and the New Testament as if they were two books. The New Testament is full of parts of the Old Testament, and the Old Testament is full of prophecies which came to pass during the New Testament times." Referring to inquiries as to the explanations of the mysteries of the Bible, he said: "We cannot understand them, and I do not believe a man lives who can; do you, Dr. Taylor?" and he turned to the venerable preacher who sat beside him. Dr. Taylor responded: "No; that is the best evidence that the book came from God when men cannot understand its mysteries." There was also most impressive singing, under the lead of Mr. George C. Stebbins. A choir of one hundred voices had been organised for the occasion, and choruses and solos added not a little to the impressiveness of the meeting.

In the evening there was another crowded meeting at the Broadway Tabernacle. At the close of each many came up to shake hands with Mr. Moody in memory of his former meetings in the city, grateful for the influence that had then brought them to Christian faith.

Scarcely less interesting than the Moody meetings at Broadway Tabernacle were the OPEN-AIR MEETINGS IN MADISON-SQUARE.

Madison-avenue was almost blocked by the crowd of people, trucks, and carriages. The assembled company included mechanics, business-men, gamblers, and tramps, who stopped as the sound of some familiar hymn attracted them. One of the speakers was Captain Rotzler, of the First Battery of the National Guard, well known for rescue work in missions. As he looked over the audience he saw many whom he had met in the course of his labours, and made an earnest appeal to them to turn to the Lord and seek salvation. He was followed by Leonard Weaver, the evangelist. At Cooper Union the audiences have grown until over 4000 have been gathered at the different meetings. Mr. Stebbins has led the song service; and among those who took part were Rev. Thomas Needham and Mr. Okijima, founder and superintendent of the Japanese Mission in Brooklyn. On Sunday three of the theatres were occupied by the revival preachers.

Arrangements were made for meetings this week at Association Hall, Cooper Union Metropolitan Hall, and Madison Square, with noon meetings, for business men especially, in the old John-street Methodist Church and at the North Dutch Church Hall on Fulton-street, the home of the old Fulton-street prayer-meeting. Aside from these, evening meetings are held in every section of the city, carefully arranged so that there should be no interference of one with another. To give any conception of the interest manifested would require far more space than we have at command. On every hand there came instances of the redemption of men from the power of intemperance and vice, while many women who have been in almost despair have found new courage to meet the difficulties. It is true that the fact that many are out of work has given them leisure to turn their thoughts to religious subjects and to attend the meetings. Not a few have seemed to think these facts weaken the power of the work. In truth, they strengthen it. It is to the great credit of the workers of every class that they have so earnestly and so faithfully improved the opportunity that is before them; and we may hope that the coming week will show even greater results than the past.

GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL.

No evangelist is more welcome at Mr. Charrington's Great Assembly Hall than Mr. E. P. Telford. For nearly twenty years this honoured servant of God has been in and out among the friends of the Tower Hamlets Mission. Up till three or four years ago (when he went to America) he had always held a month's mission annually. He has just completed nearly four weeks' work, and will return again to take June and July in the Great Hall before leaving our shores for the United States on another evangelistic tour.

Some very stirring times have been the result of this visit. Mr. Telford is a great believer in not only preaching the Gospel, but getting his hearers to an immediate decision for Christ. On his second Sunday, at the close of his address, he urged those who were impressed to stand up boldly before the immense congregation of nearly 5000 persons, and declare publicly their determination to serve Christ. In all parts of the hall men and women stood up and said, "I will," thus testifying to the saving power of the Gospel. He then invited them to the inquiry-room, and before the first meeting was over the anxious inquirers had filled the room. A large prayer meeting was also held, filling the body of the hall, conducted by Mr. Kerwin, who appealed afresh to those who had not had the courage of their convictions to stand up, to come out on the Lord's side. As a result, over a dozen more asked prayer for themselves, and more than half of these went into the inquiry-room to be dealt with.

One very singular but sad case is worth recording, showing that one sows and another reaps. A man had been to hear Mr. Charles Cook, who occupied the platform the month previously, and was convicted of sin. He came to hear Mr. Telford on the night mentioned above, and decided for Christ. He went home and told the woman he had been living with for fifteen years. Next Sunday he brought her to the hall, and she was brought to the Lord. They went home that night, and resolved that they should separate. They have since done this, although it is very evident that they are very fond of one another. They are to be seen nightly at the hall rejoicing in the new-born love of the Saviour in their hearts. It may be wondered why they don't marry, but the strange part of the whole affair is that they are both living apart from their respective partners, the cause of the separation in both cases being drink on the other side. Very many other interesting cases might be cited. Especially has Mr. Telford been used of God to backsliders, and during his mission no evening has passed without some of his hearers finding their way into the inquiry-room.

BRIGHTON.—There is much cause to praise God for blessing on the preaching of the Gospel during the past year at the Athenæum Hall, North-street, in connection with the Evangelistic Mission. The workers there would be glad if Christian friends residing at or visiting Brighton would join them in the meeting for prayer and thanksgiving at 7.30 p.m. on Monday, April 16. Pastor Fuller Gooch, Mr. John McCall, Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, and others will give brief addresses.

RELIGIOUS LIFE IN SCOTLAND.

PRINCIPAL BROWN'S VIEW.

The closing lecture of the winter session at the Free Church College, Aberdeen, by the venerable Principal Brown, was given last week. The lecture was read by Professor Robertson. The Principal entered on a detailed and deeply interesting sketch of the changes that have taken place in the religious life of Scotland during the present century, tracing the movements that preceded and led to the Disruption. Coming to a review of the existing state of things, Principal Brown said:—

"How stands Scotland at this day in respect of its religious life? This is a question not easily answered. During the present century this country has passed through prodigious changes in politics, in science, and in almost everything, and this cannot but have affected to a considerable extent its religious character. Ours is a time of searching criticism in religion as in everything else. Nothing is now taken for granted. Every question, even the deepest, is openly discussed, and we are getting 'new departures' on every subject. Theology is no exception, and those things which have been most surely believed among us are now called in question, and the most vital truths have to be made good against the denial of them. In consequence of this, uncertainty as to almost everything in religion extensively prevails. There is also a spurious spirituality, which ought to be jealously watched. You will understand what I mean by a remark made to be me by an Edinburgh student of theology who spent a whole year studying in Berlin. I asked him whose lectures he chiefly attended. He answered, Pfleiderer's. 'What! Pfleiderer does not believe in the supernatural at all!' 'Oh, but he's very spiritual.' Well, I believe the spirituality he means is a reality; but it is the craving of his heart for God, after he has lost faith in the facts and the truths on which alone he can have satisfactory footing for what he wants. Pfleiderer himself has been amongst us, as one of the Gifford lecturers; and, taking advantage of that position, he has (with questionable propriety) expounded his anti-supernatural Christianity to large audiences. But it is a cheering sign of the sound and healthy Christianity that is the life of Scottish religion that the most distinguished professors in the three divisions of the Presbyterian Church have come forward in reply to Professor Pfleiderer—Professor Charteris, representing the Established Church; Professors Rainy and Dods, the Free Church; and Professor Orr, the U.P. Church. Yes, the best scholarship of Scotland is on the side of Evangelical Christianity.

"But that is not enough. We want life as well as truth both in our Chairs of Divinity and in our pulpits. And it is no small evidence that the religious life of the country is decidedly on the increase, that some of the best students in our Divinity Halls are offering themselves as missionaries, and are ready to go where, in the judgment of the Church, they are most needed. Nor do I know any better sign of the rising spiritual life of the country, than the continually increased interest taken in Foreign Missions in all the Churches, while money is coming largely in. I want you to watch this growth in the religious life of the country. The spiritual life of the Church has to be maintained, else it will decline, for nothing can stand still. Your part is to throw yourselves into it, and take your own share in your Master's work. For this purpose you must cherish your own spiritual life. For you cannot impart that which you have not yourselves. Suffer not your theological studies to deaden your spirituality. Walk closely with God in the midst of your studies as great Bengel—my favourite Biblical scholar—ever did; so that when his students met daily for their studies, and he began with a few words of prayer, they said his prayers were like morning dew. When you preach, remember that you go to the pulpit as ambassadors for Christ; let yourself be nothing, and your Master and his message be everything, your motto being—He must increase, but I must decrease."

HOME FOR MOTHERLESS AND DESTITUTE LITTLE GIRLS, Hurst-road, Eastbourne. The twenty-third annual report of this work, superintended by Miss Lee, says: "Six little ones have been received this year, five of them motherless. The children who are now in the Home all being so young, I have only been able to send one into domestic service. The health of all has been good." The children seem to be under very careful instruction.

THE LIVINGSTONIA MISSION.

Dr. Laws, of Livingstonia, is about to return to his medical missionary work at Livingstonia, Central Africa. He and Mrs. Laws were farewelled last week at a large meeting in the Free East Church, Aberdeen. In the course of a very interesting half-hour's address, Dr. Laws said:—

In the early part of the century Moffat and his companion missionaries made their way northwards, and settled at mission stations, thus breaking the then unbroken track of the large African Continent. Later he was followed by his son-in-law, Dr. Livingstone, who got further northwards, and was the first to cross from St. Paul de Loando to Quilimane. Gradually the map of Africa had got filled up, the travelling facilities were getting better, and he hoped that soon they would have telegraph communication from Aberdeen to Livingstonia. Missions had been in the forefront of the greater part of the discoveries, and the advances in science had been made use of in the furtherance of the Gospel. When he went to Lake Tanganyika it was supposed to be 150 miles long, but their first voyage in their steamboat stretched it out to 350 miles. He did not think that the geographical discoveries could stretch it out further. Along this lake there was not a single missionary. There were people living by the thousands on the shore, with not an individual to teach them about Jesus Christ. He remembered well one Sabbath afternoon in 1875 thinking of home and the church bells ringing in Aberdeen. He sat on a little knoll and looked across the blue waters of the lake to the hills on its western shore; and he thought what a difference! There were many men in Aberdeen preaching to their congregations: but there he was, with not a missionary preaching the Gospel northwards to Egypt, nor westwards to the West Coast.

But a change had come, and now there was the London Missionary Society on the East Coast of Lake Nyassa, the Church of England on the north and north-east of the lake, the Moravian Mission on the south, and the Church of Scotland at Blantyre, with Mr. Hetherwick at its head. The Dutch Reformed Church of South Africa had joined the Free Church Mission, and were sending forth reinforcements; and all were working together towards the one great end.

Referring more particularly to the work of the Livingstonia Mission, he said they had now congregations at five of their stations, the largest being at Bandawé, with a membership of over 100 persons. In former years the Angoni used to look upon the people round Bandawé as their slaves, but so great had been the influence of the Gospel that now the Angoni were becoming the teachers and preachers of those whom they formerly despised and looked upon as their slaves. There was also the medical, the industrial, and the educational side of their work, and in this connection he said he had been brought face to face with the question of providing an institution for the training of native teachers. The money problem had been a hard one for him to solve, but he would tell them he had no objection to take £20,000 or £25,000 for the building of manses, churches, and schools at their various stations. Their worthy chairman (Sir Wm. Henderson) had said he would give £5000, another friend had promised £2000, another had promised £500, another had paid £200, and a number of smaller sums had been added since. They wanted a school which would be a training institution, and boarding dormitories for boys and girls; they wanted a small hospital for the medical side of the work; they wanted technical workshops; and, besides these, they had houses to build at the different stations. In conclusion, Dr. Laws said they wanted half a dozen such volunteers to carry out work among the native women.

WHITECHAPEL.—Rev. E. A. B. Sanders, Rector of St. Mary Matfelon, issues a very readable report of the work in his large parish of 20,000 souls. It describes systematic visiting of factories and workshops, and vigorous work among young people; special efforts are put forth to reach Jews and social outcasts; a lively missionary interest is cultivated; the sick and suffering are sought out; and the starving are fed. It is a pity that such good work, on Protestant and Evangelical lines, should not be adequately supported. The rector is able to report much blessing on the exertions put forth, but he adds:—"Funds are very low, and unless help is forthcoming, many of our agencies for good must cease."

A BRAND FROM THE BURNING.

In connection with the special services recently held in the Mission Hall, Storis-street, Paisley, when the preacher was Mr. Robert Maclean, of the London Evangelisation Society, a rather striking case of conversion took place, which made a deep impression upon the people. A middle-aged man, of respectable appearance, entered the hall early one evening, and asked for a pledge-card. He was not known to any of the workers, who, however, invited him to remain to hear the address. At the close he was one of the inquirers, and raised his hand to express the fact that he was seeking Jesus. On being dealt with, the text which brought light to his mind was John v. 24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My Word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

His peace and joy was very marked when he had "set to his seal that God is true"; and on the missionary asking him for his name and address he readily gave them, and added:—

"I live in P——. Having been engaged there in heavy betting and drinking, I took train for Glasgow in a fit of remorse, as I had lost a great deal of money. There I kept drinking, and how I found my way to Paisley I cannot tell. Here, at any rate, I was this morning quite sober, but being unwilling to go home I lingered about the town all day and turned in here by mere accident, as people say, thinking it was a Mission Hall. You may judge of my feelings as the truth took hold of me, for I have been a church member for twenty years, but never was I convinced of sin until now. I see that God led me here to reveal his Son in me. Now I can go back to my wife and tell her all; but I shrunk from doing this before I repented and turned to the Lord."

Next day he left for home, and soon afterwards the missionary received from him the following letter:—"I was very sorry I had to leave Paisley before I saw you, and this is only a note to say I got home all right, and, trusting in Jesus, I am determined to live for Christ and work for Him too. Will you remember my wife and me in your prayers? We pray for you.—A Sinner Saved last Thursday."

When this letter was read to the meeting and its antecedents told, a profound impression was made on all present. "What hath God wrought!" was the exclamation of many a worker, whilst the careless were impressed with the reality and power of God's converting grace.

OUR VILLAGES.

The hundred days of special services held in the Bucks villages are now drawing to a close, and our hearts are filled with praise to the Lord for the great things He has done. Not only have the numbers who have come to the meetings been large at times, some not being able to get in at all, but the power of the Lord has been present in the salvation of very many souls, and in the awakening to more earnest service of those who are already his.

Many cases of conversion of deep interest might be mentioned. We are sure that if the Lord's servants would but go forth as our Master did into "the villages" to declare his Gospel, that glorious things would be done, and how gladly the people would receive them.

The second special all-day conference on "village work" will be held on Monday, April 23, at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, London. Meetings at 12, 3, and 7 p.m., open to all, men and women. Many village workers will be present, and well-known servants of Christ will take part. It is hoped that friends will enable us to send out one or two Gospel caravans this summer. Write for bills, and all particulars, to—Yours in his service,

Aylesbury, Bucks. J. E. Taylor.

HAMBURG.—From an account in the April issue of the Reporter of the German Baptist Mission, it appears that work at Altona-Ottensen progresses encouragingly. There is not only a real church life, but an active church work. In the four Sunday schools eight hundred children are instructed by forty-eight teachers. The endeavours of the young men's and young women's societies have resulted in a deepening spiritual life of the young people. The Strangers' Rest, founded originally by Mr. Radcliffe, was visited last year by 10,028 strangers, seamen and travellers, all of whom have thus come under the Gospel.

MILDMAY MEN'S NIGHT-SCHOOL.

Fourteen years ago, April 6th, 1880, we were present in Mildmay Conference Hall, when farewell was said to Captain the Hon. R. Moreton, who had for several years been the loved and trusted superintendent of the Mildmay Institutions, and many may recall the touching words spoken on the occasion by the late Sir Arthur Blackwood. These memories revived pleasantly last week, when, at a meeting in the Conference Hall, we heard once more the familiar voice, and saw on the platform the well-remembered form of him who, in earlier days, was so intimately associated with Mildmay. To the younger generation, and the members of the Night-school, Captain Moreton may be but a name; to the older generation, and many of the deaconesses and workers, he is a dear and honoured leader and friend; hence from these he received a warm and loving welcome on his return from beyond the sea.

But while those acquainted with the past felt peculiar interest in this reappearance of a familiar figure, the meeting itself was called for another purpose, being, in fact, the twenty-fourth anniversary of the famous Men's Night-school. It is, about Easter, usual to close the winter session with a social meeting, at which the work of the season is reviewed, and the prizes distributed. This gathering, held on Wednesday week, was largely attended.

Col. Morton introduced the proceedings with a few happy words of welcome, first to Mrs. Inge, who was to give the prizes to the members, as a new helper of Mildmay; and secondly to the former superintendent on his return.

Captain Moreton then opened with prayer, and added a few sentences, recalling his last meeting with the Night-school in March, 1880, when Earl Cairns spoke earnest and faithful words. Now, coming back, he finds the Earl gone home, as also beloved Mrs. Pennefather, Sir Arthur Blackwood, and Mr. Gawin Kirkham, all closely associated with Mildmay.

The official report of the winter's educational work was then read by Colonel Morton, and proved most satisfactory, not merely in general knowledge, but also in regard to the Scripture examination. "The members have distinguished themselves by the careful and earnest way they have answered the questions set; both as regards their knowledge of the subjects and experimental acquaintance with the truth."

Mr. P. S. Badenoch contributed, as is his wont, an interesting statistical review of the work. The Night-school has been opened sixty-nine nights, seven hundred and sixteen names have been enrolled, and the average attendance has been two hundred and sixty-three. Thirty-three men have not missed a single night, twenty-one have missed one evening, and ten have missed twice: these sixty-four receive prizes for regular attendance. On the other hand (and this point the speaker confessed had always puzzled him), sixty-two men had only come once, and thirty-four only twice: why should these come, have their names enrolled, and then vanish? No less than one hundred and thirty-three different occupations were represented among the members, varying from clerks and artists to labourers and handy-men. Two hundred and six certificates for proficiency had been gained, while eighteen had taken Pitman's shorthand certificate. One hundred and sixty-four were examined in Scripture, and only ten failed to pass. Facts such as these speak volumes for the patience, assiduity, and devotion of the lady teachers, who seemed, it must be confessed, highly delighted with the success of their big scholars. Mr. Badenoch touched briefly on the spiritual part of the work. He declined attempting statistics in this respect, but fully believed that the great day would show many trophies won to Christ in this Night School.

Mrs. Inge then distributed the certificates and prizes, after which Mr. Montague Beauchamp spoke touching and moving words of Gospel entreaty and exhortation to missionary enthusiasm and consecration.

OUR VILLAGES.—A friend writes:—"Surely there must be some of the Lord's stewards, whom He has blessed with means, who would be willing for his sake to live in a country village. An increasing sphere of usefulness is urgently requiring help, and the heart and hands of an aged evangelist who has borne the burden and heat of the day needs cheer and assistance, in two villages within eighteen miles of Bournemouth." Information may be had of Miss Taylor, Espinette, Chine-crescent, Bournemouth.

MISSION WORK IN VILLAGES.

It might encourage some of your readers to hear a little of what the Lord has been doing in this neighbourhood. About three years ago some ladies had it laid on their hearts to commence a meeting on Sunday evenings in the Infants' Schoolroom, Bishopsgate, as there was no place of worship anywhere near. Bishopsgate contains about forty houses, and many of the people were unable to walk as far as the church, which is at Englefield Green, about one mile distant. The meetings were very well attended, but when the ladies were away from home the meetings were discontinued, much to the regret of those who attended.

It was arranged for a colporteur of the Christian Colportage Association to come and labour around the district of Windsor, which is four miles away, and to conduct a service regularly every Saturday and Tuesday evening. About that time a Sunday-school and clothing club were commenced, and very soon the meetings were better attended. After a month or two one man, who had been greatly opposed to the meetings, was led to enter the schoolroom to hear the Gospel, and was shortly after converted to God, with his wife. He became such a bright Christian, and the change in his life was so great, that many came to the meetings to hear him read the portion of Scripture in the service: they could not believe it was true. Very soon after God was pleased to bless the word spoken in that schoolroom to the salvation of others, who are still rejoicing and working for Him. As people came from the villages around, the room was at times crowded, and it was indeed a sight to see men and women sitting on the top of the desks, or on the small seats used by infants in the week, listening most attentively to the Gospel message, which proved to be to many the power of God unto salvation.

Meetings were commenced by the colporteur for railway men and flymen at Windsor, also meetings at Englefield Green in a large room. The work was greatly blessed all round, and as the colporteur's health began to fail he was relieved of colportage work, and another appointed. Thus he was able to give his whole time to evangelistic work, and to make Bishopsgate the centre. An iron Mission Hall was purchased, and a site adjoining the school obtained to erect it on, but after we had begun to put it up the local authorities stopped its erection, because of a technical point, which could not be complied with. After trying for twelve months we were obliged to sell it, at a great loss, but though the iron building was not put up, the work continued to be greatly blessed for miles around. An earnest band of Christians carried the Gospel to the villages. Every Thursday evening in the summer a band of young men go on bicycles to the outlying points distributing tracts and conducting meetings in open air, school-rooms, or mission halls.

But, praise the Lord, through our not being able to erect the iron building, a Christian lady came forward and offered to erect a substantial brick building on the site if we could get a long lease. After some delay the lease was secured, and now there stands a splendid substantial brick building. Other ladies and friends subscribed liberally towards the seats, etc., so that the hall was opened a fortnight ago free of debt, practically speaking.

The opening day will be long remembered. The hall, which will seat 200, was filled in the afternoon, and in the evening it was crowded; many were unable to get a seat, and people came from miles around. Rev. W. T. Nicholson (Vicar of Egham) conducted the services, and addresses were given by Mr. H. D. Brown (London), the missionary, and others.

EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.—The annual conference this year will be held in Tunbridge Wells on September 25, 26, and 27. We trust, says Evangelical Christendom, that the well-known prevalence of Evangelical teaching in the Church of England in and around Tunbridge Wells will cause a more than ordinary interest to be felt in the work and objects of the Alliance, and that Nonconformity, which is also well represented in the neighbourhood, will show its interest in Christian union. The annual conversazione will be held on Thursday, May 17, at Regent's Park College; the kind invitation which has for so many years been given to the friends of the Alliance by the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Angus having been this year continued by their successors, the Rev. Principal and Mrs. Roberts.

A PEEP INTO AN AFRICAN GAOL.

The meeting at Johannesberg gaol last Sabbath was most interesting. Mr. Black knocked at the gate, an old rickety thing that a good shove would upset, and a huge warder opened it to us and shook hands quite chummy like. Inside is a great court yard with cells all round the sides. In the centre stands a good-sized building, where the Kaffir prisoners sleep at night. On one side of this building the Kaffir men and boys are all loose—most of them lying basking in the sunshine, or doing anything else they please. On the other side are the white men, some reading, some playing cards, some talking: occasionally some are having a little picnic if any friends are good enough to send in dainties. A supply of Sankey's hymn-books is kept on the premises, and in a little while a black man appears (having in large type upon his jacket and trousers, No. 1) carrying a number of these hymn-books in one hand, and in the other a bar of steel. With this bar he strikes another bar that hangs at the door, and this is the ringing of the bell.

In a few minutes the congregation begins to gather, the white men all going to the front, and sitting on forms, and the blacks sitting down on their hunkers behind. By this time Miss Murray and three S.A. officers had arrived. The meeting sang the hymn, "Sinners Jesus will receive," and nearly every white person joined, the chorus being repeated in good form. It was a relief to get a good sing, but what with the exertion, the great heat of the place, and being under the same roof with fifty or sixty Kaffirs, one did not feel quite comfortable. However, these things appear but trifles when souls are at stake.

After several short addresses, opportunity for testimony was given, and two white men responded, One thanked God for this his first experience of gaol, for during his imprisonment he had found Christ. Then, after closing, there was individual dealing, urging the claims of the Saviour upon these poor fellows. I thank God for this meeting. It was a relief to get out into pure air again, and I was not comfortable in body until I got a bath. It was evident during the meeting that some were impressed, and we can only believe that God will bless the word and lead those weary ones to Himself.—The Reaper.

REV. W. H. AITKEN AT KILBURN.

A mission has been conducted by the well-known missioner, Rev. W. Hay Aitken, in north-west London, which has been fruitful in blessing to many souls. The scene of his labours was Holy Trinity Church, Kilburn, where Rev. Stuart Churchill is now vicar, the successor to the late Rev. Canon Money, whose memory is cherished as a faithful exponent of Evangelical doctrine. The mission opened on Sunday, March 10, and was brought to a close on Easter Day. A special feature of the mission were the services for men only, which were of an encouraging character. Large numbers were present, and after-meetings took place at two of them, when several professed conversion.

The missioner was accompanied by Mrs. Crouch, who undertook a series of meetings for women. The Sunday gatherings were held in the Kilburn Town Hall, and were largely attended. The church vestry, a room capable of holding seventy, was set apart for the remaining meetings, but on nearly every occasion it proved insufficient for the numbers assembled.

The results of the after-meetings were very cheering, and not a few acknowledged that they had definitely accepted Christ as their Saviour. The interest in the services was sustained throughout the mission. A solemn impression was created by the meditation addresses on Good Friday and by the closing thanksgiving services on Easter Day, and there were numerous inquirers after salvation at the concluding service.

The morning Bible readings at the mission on the spiritual life were also found to be very helpful by the Christian workers. The subjects of "Heart-searching" and "Consecration" were treated, and during Holy Week some "Incidents of the Passion."

A wave of spiritual blessing seems to have been passing through the district, and Mr. Aitken's mission will long be remembered with thankfulness in the neighbourhood.

"OLD WARDOUR."

The true way to meet difficulties and seeming reverses is to make them an occasion for redoubled effort, and a stepping-stone to bigger and better things. That is what our friends of the West London Mission have done in taking a compulsory leave of Wardour Hall, Soho, where a grand work has been done among the masses for the past seven years. It has often been said that corporations have no conscience, and Crown corporations, we suppose, are the most heartless of all. At any rate, Mr. Price Hughes pleaded in vain with the Commissioners of Woods and Forests for a renewal of the lease of Wardour Hall on reasonable terms. All the past history of the place as a centre of moral and spiritual health in a dense and drink-ridden neighbourhood counted for nothing, and the missioners have had to take a regretful farewell of the spot that had become endeared to them by many hallowed memories and associations.

But God was not forgetful of the labours of his servants, and in a distinctly providential way he opened a new door for Mr. Josiah Nix and his helpers, almost the very day on which they knew the fate of Wardour. Craven Chapel, at the back of Regent-street, which for many years has been connected with the Congregational body, was placed at the disposal of the West London Mission. And so the sorrow of parting from "Old Wardour," as it is affectionately termed, has been much tempered by the hope and anticipation of glorious times in the new location, which is only a few minutes' walk away.

The very last meeting at Wardour Hall was held on Monday evening, when the room was packed, up and down, with a very lively and not at all a disconsolate-looking crowd. The presiding genius of Wardour ever since the West London Mission took it over has been Mr. Nix; plus Mrs. Nix, we should add—a strong team. On Monday evening Mr. Nix took up some time in detailing the steps they had taken to leave the place clear of pecuniary responsibility. The generosity of every one belonging to the hall showed how real was their sense of gratitude for the many blessings it had conferred upon them. Some £60 was left to be subscribed at the meeting, and subscribed it was in a short while; more than half of it being given by Mr. Thomas, the chairman of the evening. Mr. Price Hughes wanted to give the last pound, but Mr. Nix cleverly captured that pound with which to begin the new Budget at Craven Chapel. The speeches made by Mr. and Mrs. Nix, by Mr. Oxford, a neighbouring clergyman, by Sisters Catherine and Elsie, by Mr. Pyper, the chairman, and Mr. Price Hughes, were all cast in a grateful and hopeful mould, and the congregation cheered to the echo, in a way that showed there has been no unnatural repression of healthy feeling during Mr. Nix's régime. And so the curtain fell on "good old Wardour," with the doxology and the benediction, and a lively hope of repeated Gospel triumphs at Craven.

By way of postscript to our notice, we may tell an interesting little story we have heard of Craven, and which we believe is authentic. In the palmy days of the late Dr. Leifchild, one of the great lights of London Congregationalism in his time, it is related that at the close of an unusually brilliant and able discourse one Sunday, the doctor was interviewed by a stray hearer, who was labouring under a deep sense of sin and sorely wanted relief. He told the preacher that the relief had not come to his burdened soul through the fine sermon; whereupon Dr. Leifchild resolved that never would he preach another sermon without putting into it some word that would lead an anxious sinner to the waiting Saviour. Whatever may be in store for our West London Mission friends in their fresh departure at Craven, we are sure they will never make the mistake that Dr. Leifchild made on that occasion.

MR. HOLLAND'S BIRTHDAY PARTY.—In our notice last week of this interesting event, we omitted to mention that Lady Ashburton sent with her congratulations a pony phaeton, the pony to draw it having been given by other friends.

HOME CHURCHES AND MISSIONS.—Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, insists that every church should give to missions at least as much money as it contributes to sustain itself—usually recorded as "congregational expenses." And herein he teaches by example as well as by precept. The Clarendon-street Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, gave last year 20,000 dols. to missions, about double the sum of their church expenses.

LORD'S DAY REST ASSOCIATION.

A lively interest in the Lord's Day, and a determination to conserve its blessings, is a duty which to-day makes a specially strong appeal to Christian people; and we rejoice to know that the Working Men's Lord's Day Rest Association is doing much to emphasise the appeal and enforce the duty. This was made evident on Monday evening, when the thirty-seventh annual meeting of members and friends was held in the Lecture Hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, 186, Aldersgate-street.

It was a pleasant meeting, selections of sacred music being interspersed with the speeches. Mr. John Hodge, secretary of the British Steel Smelters' Amalgamated Association, and President of the Glasgow Trades Union Congress, occupied the chair, and in a hearty address showed that on comparatively low, as well as supremely high, grounds Sunday Rest deserves commendation. He deplored the backwardness of the Christian churches in entering upon a much-needed crusade against the unceasing efforts for secularising the Lord's Day.

In an abstract of the report, Mr. Charles Hill, secretary, stated that, under the auspices of the Association, five hundred sermons in favour of Sunday observance were last year preached by clergymen and ministers in London and provincial towns. Illustrated lectures were given, and meetings addressed in various centres by the society's agent. The facts rehearsed have from time to time been given in our columns. Appreciative reference was made to the innovation in postal affairs in Belgium. The stamps have a slip attached bearing words to the effect, "Not to be delivered on Sunday." This slip has to be removed if delivery on Sunday is desired.

Sir Douglas Fox traced the progress of the movement in recent years, pointing out that while on the Continent it has made great strides, at home it has failed to secure support in quarters where it should have commanded hearty sympathy. Though, however, the Upper House of Convocation did not speak out boldly and with a certain sound, on the introduction of the Bishop of Rochester's resolution in favour of the Sunday opening of museums, the Canterbury House of Laymen with a unanimous vote declared the observance of Sunday to have been an incalculable blessing, especially to working men, and deprecating Sunday opening as proposed.

Addresses were delivered by Messrs. James Judd, H. Johnston (London Society of Compositors), T. H. Ellis, H. Williams, sen., and others. Resolutions were passed, rejoicing that failure has attended many recent efforts to secularise the Sabbath, and urging the importance of steady opposition being presented to all such measures. The proceedings were pitched in a high key throughout, and cannot but have proved stimulating to the assembled supporters of the Society.

METROPOLITAN MUSIC HALL.

The Evangelistic Services at this hall have now closed for the season, and the meetings will be transferred to the Park and Hyde Park Hall. We have completed eighteen years' services at the music hall, and have been greatly encouraged, not only by the large attendance, but in many distinct cases of conversion. An old worker who had been blessed in the music hall some twelve years ago brought his two sons, aged twelve and fourteen, and both were converted, and testified at the watch-night service at Hyde Park Hall. Others are rejoicing over relations who have been brought in, and special praise has been called for on account of many backsliders who have been restored.

Our prayer-meetings have been well attended, and a spirit of prevailing prayer for a revival has been manifested.

We are looking forward to the re-opening of the Park meetings for the twenty-third year. When we began, there were few other meetings; now their name is legion, and everyone who has a hobby to ride, or a fad to air, trots it out in the Park, and there is more need than ever for a clear decided testimony for the Lord Jesus. We have found that the preaching of the Cross holds the people, that the setting forth of a risen Christ convicts the people, and that often sinners are awakened when they hear that the Lord is coming again.

We seek the prayers and fellowship of God's people on behalf of the Gospel in Hyde Park.

Chas. Cook.

S.C.A. CONFERENCE.

The Soldiers' Christian Association Conference, held in the Soldiers' Institute, Portsmouth, March 30 to April 2, was convened by the committee of the Southern District of this Association. Fifty-seven delegates attended. The following took part in the proceedings:—Col. Philips (of the Army Scripture Readers' Society), Capt. Wiseley (of the Officers' Prayer Union), Major-Gen. Martyr, Lieut.-Col. Fawkes, R.A., Lieut.-Col. Phayre, Col. Sandwith, Major Scott Moncrieff, R.E., Capt. Cleeve, R.E., Capt. Kirwan, Capt. Riley, Rev. E. Sharpley, B.A. (Wesleyan Chaplain), Dy. Surgeon-General White, Mr. Sydney Smith, Mr. J. Gelson Gregson, and Mr. Arthur H. Wheeler, organising sec. of the Association.

On Friday a devotional meeting was held, presided over by Capt. Riley, and on Saturday morning the business of the Conference was introduced by Mr. Wheeler reading a paper on the work of the Association, in which he traced the origin of the first Soldiers' Christian Association to a Society formed in 1882 at Saugor, in India, by Lieut.-Col. L. S. Richards, in the Leicestershire Regiment, who published an excellent "Christian Handbook" at Benares in 1884 in connection with this Society. He also drew attention to the interesting fact that before this distinct Christian Association movement was made for the benefit of the soldiers, Mr. Harrington had founded prayer-rooms, and had been instrumental in forming Soldiers' Christian Associations in connection with these rooms in 1886, about the same time that Miss Deacon started the Association in England, which has now been united to the Y.M.C.A., and under the direction of a committee of military officers and members of the National Council. The Association has developed into an important auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A., under the direction of Mr. Wheeler, the organising secretary of the Association. The importance of this report was so fully realised, that the Conference resolved to publish it.

In the afternoon session of the Conference, reports of work were made by Army Scripture Readers, and non-commissioned officers and men (who were regimental delegates) from the different garrisons in the southern district, as well as from Plymouth and the Brigade of Guards in London. The evening meeting was held in the large hall of the Institute, which was well attended, when addresses were given by Colonel Fawkes and Major Scott Moncrieff.

On Sunday afternoon a very good meeting was held, and powerful testimonies given by Christian soldiers concerning Christian life in a barrack-room. In the evening Colonel Philips and Captain Wiseley addressed a large gathering, after which a consecration meeting was held; and Mr. Gregson presided at the Communion service, which brought to a close a series of meetings in which the power of the Spirit's presence was reverently recognised.

The final meeting of thanksgiving and praise was held on Monday morning, when for two hours there was an unbroken string of testimonies from officers and men, thanking God for the blessed manifestation of his presence at the Conference. Several ladies, engaged in work at Soldiers' Homes were present, and gave parting texts at the Praise Meeting. Special prayer was offered on behalf of Miss Daniell, who is still in a critical condition of health, references being made to her work and that of other ladies at Soldiers' Homes in England, and also to Miss Sandes in Ireland.

PRESBYTERIAN SOCIAL MISSION FOR LONDON. At a gathering of Presbyterian ministers and laymen in the Lecture Hall of the Marylebone Presbyterian Church, Edgware-road, Dr. Pentecost introduced a proposal to form a Presbyterian Social Union for London. He said that such unions had been a great success in America—acquaintanceships were formed, questions discussed, and the social element among the great body of Presbyterians was cultivated. Dr. Pentecost read proposed rules, which provided that all members and adherents of the Presbyterian churches in and around London shall be eligible for membership. The objects of the union shall be the promotion of friendly fellowship, the consideration of practical questions affecting the polity and work of the Presbyterian Church, and generally the deepening of the interest of members in the extension of Christ's kingdom. All offices shall be open alike to ministers and laymen, and all elections shall be by ballot at the business meeting of the members of the union, to be held annually, in November. In the course of discussion, several speakers supported the proposal. Rules are to be further considered.

EX-SERVICE MEN AT PORTSMOUTH.

An interesting statement has been issued by Mr. Hogben of the work he is carrying on at Portsmouth, which formerly was a part of Miss Sarah Robinson's Mission in that great military centre. In this statement Mr. Hogben reports many striking facts as to the scope and fruitfulness of the work, and makes a strong appeal for increased support. In an introductory memorandum, Miss Robinson thus supports the appeal:—

"I shall be very glad if any words of mine can strengthen the appeal now made by Mr. Thomas Hogben, whom I have known as a personal friend since 1872. He has been from the first a frequent visitor and helper in all my Portsmouth work, and from 1888 gave his services gratuitously as editor of my monthly magazine Ready, until the close of 1892, when the editorship passed into the hands of Mr. Gelson Gregson, on his taking over from me the superintendence of the Soldiers' Institute. It is known to all our friends that the Portsmouth Soldiers' Institute was the headquarters of my whole work, and the residence of myself and lady helpers, Mr. Hogben also, of late, having his office there, as director of our Gospel work and town mission.

"At my retirement, the two branches of the work were separated. Mr. Gregson (at the Institute) working only for soldiers and their families; Mr. Hogben (at the Welcome Mission Hall) continuing the work among the poorest of the poor, and among ex-service men (both naval and military), thousands of whom live in and around Portsmouth. This special work began with tent services, organised by Mr. Hogben at Landport during the summers of 1888 and 1889, with marked success and blessing. Then followed the building of my large Speedwell Coffee Palace, with its Gospel hall, the 'Speedwell Mission,' under Mr. Hogben's direction, continuing and consolidating the tent work. In 1892, when the Speedwell was taken over by a company, we hoped to retain the hall and class-rooms for mission purposes, but, the company speedily requiring the whole building, we were forced to seek other premises. Hence the erection of an iron hall on a valuable site close by, and the change of name from 'The Speedwell Mission' to 'The Welcome Mission.'

"The importance and usefulness of the varied work carried on can scarcely be over-estimated. Whenever donors kindly allow me the option of apportioning their gifts, I certainly prefer to use them for this branch, especially as I fear it has suffered financially through my retirement. Last year I had the joy of seeing the Institute at Alexandria cleared from debt, and I do trust that the liberality of friends will bring about a like result this year for the 'Welcome Mission,' in clearing off the mortgage of £1250 on the site and building. I shall be pleased to give further particulars by letter, or to receive donations either for the 'Building Debt' or the 'Current Expenses' of the Welcome Mission. Having entirely left Portsmouth, my address is now, The Hut, Burley, near Ringwood, Hants."

GOSPORT SEAMEN'S MISSION.

The Good News, mission steamer of the English and French Coasting Mission, is now ready for the usual summer's work. About £10 weekly is needed for wages and working expenses.

Who will help in the Lord's name to send this boat forth, to carry the message of his love to hundreds of fishermen, lightship men, and others? God's blessing has hitherto abundantly rested on this means of carrying the Gospel of his grace to the unsaved, and many are constantly testifying to blessing received through this mission.

THE SCOTT MEMORIAL HOME OF REST, Bognor, Sussex, was opened in 1890, in a very small way, and has gradually reached its present dimensions: about eighty people can be accommodated at one time. Since the foundation of the Home, 2,096 visitors have partaken of its hospitality, the average stay of each being three weeks; some have stayed some months, and a few the whole year. Particulars as to terms of admission, and other information may be had from Mrs. W. D. Scott, Graylands, Chiswick.

EVANGELISATION SOCIETY FOR LIVERPOOL AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.—The eighteenth annual report shows that last year preachers were supplied for 634 meetings in a score or more places. Owing to the continued illness of Mr. Lydiatt, the agent, it was at times found difficult to provide preachers, but volunteer speakers filled the vacancies in a very encouraging manner. The noon prayer meeting and workers' prayer meeting are interesting features of the work. We regret to observe that the balance sheet shows £59 due to the treasurer. The office of the Society is 3, Hackins Hey, Liverpool.

A MISSIONARY TOUR.

Drs. A. J. Gordon and A. T. Pierson have been making a short tour in the interests of missions, beginning February 13, in Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, London (Ontario), and finishing with the Student Volunteer Convention, Detroit, February 28 to March 4. The degree of interest developed has been a most delightful surprise.

Instead of confining attention to the subject of missions, the two brethren sought to lay a foundation for a true and deep apprehension of the evangelisation of the world, by calling attention first to the Holy Spirit, his personality, work, and manifold activity as the Spirit of truth, of life, of order, of power; then to the blessed hope of the Lord's coming and the true character of the present age as preparatory to his advent, and as the age of out-gathering of God's people from all nations; then to the true relations of giving, both of self and of substance, not only to missions objectively, but to spiritual growth subjectively, etc. This honouring of the Spirit at the beginning was uniformly followed by remarkable signs of his personal presence throughout. At Toronto, one and even two overflow meetings became necessary, and the interest was most impressively solemn. Over 1470 dols. in voluntary offerings were gathered. Dr. G. L. Mackay, of Formosa, Mr. Spencer Walton, of South Africa, Rev. John McVickar, of Honan, were among the speakers. Dr. Mackay's account of the work in Formosa was one of thrilling and convincing power.—The Missionary Review.

LONDON MEDICAL MISSION.

The twenty-second report of work in St. Giles's tells of devoted efforts to bind up the broken-hearted, and to make known the Gospel of God's grace. We make a brief extract:—"Often we hear at our prayer and testimony meetings the exclamation, 'I love every stone of the Mission. It was here I received the blessing in my own soul for which I shall praise God all through eternity.' Recently at a Sunday-evening open-air service in the Seven Dials a reformed drunkard shouted out at the close of his address, 'Come along with us, and you will find peace for your soul, and when you are sick you will find every care and the best treatment from a Christian doctor.'

"At another open-air service a man to whom we had often spoken previously, listened to the message; the same night he came to the meeting held subsequently at the Mission, and found the Saviour. He afterwards stated that 'If the doctors thought it worth while to go out to preach in the Dials there must be something in it.' And he who was before an unbeliever is now clothed and in his right mind, serving the Lord Jesus."

The address of the superintendent, Dr. Latchford, is 33 and 34, Short's Gardens, Endell-street, St. Giles, W.C.

GIRLS' LETTER GUILD.

The annual social gathering of the members of the Birmingham centre took place in the Town Hall on Easter Tuesday. The chair was taken by Rev. A. R. Vardy, Head Master of King Edward's Foundation. About 2000 factory girls were present. The evening began by a tea to 400 of the members. This was followed by speeches from local clergy, and the secretary's report of the year's work. The latter showed a great advance in results obtained, and in the number of classes and meetings held for the girl members. The Guild now were able to hire and furnish a small room as their own in which to hold these classes, and lately another very popular development had appeared in the starting of a Guild magazine, which should link together lady correspondents and their girls.

This centre is in great need of more lady correspondents; about 200 girls have been waiting for months to join the Guild when more ladies do.

Any willing to help as writers should communicate with the secretary, Miss Kenward, 280, Hagley-road, Birmingham.

REV. DR. PATON, the New Hebrides missionary, preached twice in Liverpool on Sunday. His visit to that city has been very successful financially. Last week he received, among other substantial donations, £1000 from an anonymous friend. This is to be applied to the maintenance of the new mission ship.

WORTHING.—The great calamity that befel this well-known watering-place last year has now, we are glad to learn, overpassed. In consequence of the steps taken to secure better sanitary conditions, the town is now, says a correspondent of The Times, one of the healthiest on the South Coast. The climate is delightful, and those in charge of families may with perfect safety select Worthing as a desirable seaside resort.

MISSIONARY FUNDS.

Dear Sir,—All those of your readers who are interested in missionary work will regret to see by the notes in your issue of the 22nd inst. that there is likely to be a large deficit in the receipts of the larger societies. We may trust that this is merely temporary depression, resulting from the unusually severe disturbances in business circles. Whether this is so, however, or not, the fact will doubtless compel the authorities most nearly concerned to turn their special attention to every possible source of economy and retrenchment.

I have recently returned from a long tour through missionary fields, where I have met many missionaries, and seen a great deal of their work. Much of this work, and many of these workers, must enlist the heartiest sympathy of every right-minded person; but there are some workers who have failed in the past, and are likely to fail in the future, to carry out the work committed to their charge. These people often cost their supporting society as much, or more, for maintenance as the more useful man in connection with the work, they cumber the ground by preventing others taking their place, and they are apt, by their inefficiency, to harden those brought under their influence rather than to benefit them.

I desire to suggest that one of the economies which should receive the closest attention is a comprehensive scheme of retirement, under which every worker who may be adjudged from any cause inefficient may be compelled to retire. I am, of course, aware that this is a very delicate, difficult, and distasteful matter, but it is nevertheless a very important one, and one which those in authority, if faithful to their trust, must most carefully consider. It is unbusinesslike and unjustifiable to spend sacred missionary funds in the support on the field of inefficient persons, on the principle that because they are there they must perforce be maintained there until they voluntarily retire.

Sacred as is the obligation to exercise Christian charity and forbearance one towards another, the obligation to strict wisdom in the disbursement of missionary funds is still more sacred, and it appears to me that a weeding out amongst the workers is highly desirable and necessary in the best interests of the work, especially at this time, when the resources of the societies will be taxed severely to maintain their efficient workers, together with those new ones who may be accepted for the reinforcement of the various districts.—Yours truly,

H. W. Fry.

ENGLISH PRISONS.

Dear Sir,—I have been much interested in reading Mr. Cook's observations as to the hopeless way in which the religious work among prisoners is carried on in this country. Take, for instance, the question of drink, which it is admitted on all hands is the direct or indirect cause of four-fifths of the crime in this country. Nevertheless, except when the goal chaplain happens to be a total abstainer (a too rare occurrence I fear), there is little or nothing said to the prisoners to help them in shunning that which has been their downfall.

I have long thought that properly-accredited ladies and gentlemen ought to have the entrée (subject to proper regulations) to the prisoners who are desirous of being visited by those who seek to do them good. This is done in other countries, notably in America, and other colonies. I was only lately talking with a lady (wife of a Baptist minister) who has lately returned from Australia, where she and other ladies regularly visited the prisoners in Adelaide goal, and in many instances with gratifying success.

It may interest some of your readers to know that the strict official rule was broken a few years ago at Portsmouth Prison by Sir W. Harcourt—then Home Secretary—who, to his great credit, allowed Mr. R. T. Booth, the temperance evangelist, to give an address to the prisoners. I was told that the address would never be forgotten by the prisoners, many of whom were melted to tears, and I believe to repentance.

Now comes the question, Why should not such permission be granted more frequently and through out the country? Mr. Asquith, the present Home Secretary, has frequently declared his earnest wish to make the Home Office the medium of doing real good among the people, and I venture to suggest that a deputation of Christian M.P.'s and others should wait upon him, putting before him this matter, and I feel confident that good would result.

Yours faithfully, James Fielding.

Why should we not, at the meetings for praise on the 11th, pray for and expect believers to be endued and emboldened now with the salting and reflecting power (Matt. v. 13; Mark ix. 50; 2 Cor. iii. 17, 18, R.V.) of the Christians of the first centuries?

I rejoice that you are about to have a Thanksgiving Meeting. I fear we are very remiss in not thanking our God as we ought. Why not a thanksgiving meeting once a month? God has done marvellous things during these thirty years, whereof we are glad.

I have just returned from a visit to Italy, and have only now seen the notice of a Day of Thanksgiving, of which I am rejoiced to hear. If you have any bills left, kindly send a few, addressed to Conference Hall, Stratford, and I will see that prominence is given to same, also that the meetings are announced.

C. Boardman.

I cannot but feel that your proposal for a thanksgiving day is in full accordance with the mind of God, and also due to Him; besides, it is one of the surest ways of obtaining more. Let us gather in the true spirit of heart-thankfulness. Many of us have private as well as public reasons why we should thank and praise his name. (The Hon.) R. Moreton.

---

As one who has resided in London and engaged in God's work from 1851 onwards, no one has greater cause to praise God, and having lived and laboured since 1859 in the East of London, no one who has not been a resident can form any idea of the marvellous change for good within the area of the Tower Hamlets. I shall be happy to attend the meetings, and trust all who attend will carry to their respective spheres the spirit of praise and thanksgiving, which I think has been very seriously lacking.

Thomas Richardson.

I must express to you my deep thankfulness that it has been laid on your hearts to appoint such a meeting as you have proposed for April 11. May the windows of heaven be opened, that such an abundant blessing may be poured out as shall forcibly remind us of Early Church days, when "the place was shaken when they were assembled together."

Philip Gough.

Gray's Yard Mission.

---

I am not able to be with you on the 11th, but I shall, I hope, have the opportunity of inviting a good many Christian friends to join with you on that day in thanksgiving. Your thanksgiving plan gives me hope. It is, I think, the way to receive fresh blessing, to thank our Heavenly Father for those which He has given formerly. Saml. Garratt.

Ipswich.

There are many, doubtless, who, like myself, would gladly be present at the Thanksgiving Meetings on April 11, but are unable. Could not those who wish to do so, send a Thanksgiving offering, to be applied as the donor might desire, or to a special fund to be expended at the discretion of the conveners? Should this be practicable, I shall be glad to send a Thanksgiving offering for prayer answered. St. Leonard's-on-Sea.

---

I shall esteem it a great privilege to be present at the meetings on Wednesday, April 11, and earnestly pray that it may be a time of much profit and blessing. Truly we have much to thank God for. I shall certainly do my best to bring as many of our workers to the gatherings as possible, and we will hold special prayer meetings between now and then.

Robt. H. Parsons.

I shall be glad to attend some of the meetings on April 11. The work of God in the East of London is a striking example of his faithfulness to them that seek Him, of his love to the great multitudes, and of his power and willingness to sustain every enterprise undertaken for his name's sake. It has been one of the most effective antidotes to worldliness in our suburban congregations. The reasons for Thanksgiving are manifold and weighty.

It surely becomes one who, by the condescending care of my God, has been for more than ninety-five years maintained in mind and body, to unite with so many of his children in praise and adoration for the vast benefits bestowed upon us sinners, in London and elsewhere, in sending us the glad tidings of salvation through his beloved Son, for impressing these tidings upon us by his Spirit, and for the glorious abode He has prepared for us above.

Robert Nelson.

So glad you will commemorate that wonderful year 1861. 1859, 1860, and 1861 were the most marvellous years of grace for England, Ireland, Scotland, and America. Hundreds of thousands were the saved of the Lord. We feel now, after thirty-five years, the mighty impetus and baptism of fire then imparted. It is very meet, right, and our bounden duty, to remember with praise that glorious time which gave birth to The Revival paper.

Walter Bradbury.

As one of the workers in East London, it greatly rejoiced my heart. I hope there will be large gatherings on the day appointed. Brief accounts of the various kinds of Christian work begun and still continued in the East End would warm us to praise and thanksgiving. Some short comparison of what the work was half-a-century ago, and what it has grown to now, would have a very stimulating effect. I hope for great good to my own heart and soul on the 11th. George Piercy.

Not till to-day (March 28), as it happened, did I actually see your letter to Mr. Radcliffe; that number of The Christian escaped me. I read it at length with deep interest. I do cordially concur with your thought of the timeliness and of the blessing of such a "sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving." The past thirty-three years have brought with them grave developments of evil, but also great and wonderful developments of the work of God in and through his people. "It becometh them well to be thankful." At the date named I am to be (D.V.) in Ireland. But I shall, I trust, remember your thanksgiving in spirit before our Lord.—I am, very sincerely yours, H. C. G. Moule.

How many things the Lord hath done for London since 1861! How can we thank God for raising up such men as Richard Weaver, George Hatton, Denham Smith, Messrs. Moody and Sankey, our beloved friend C. H. Spurgeon, and many others? At that time the first midnight meeting was held in the City, and how many poor outcasts have been gathered into the fold. Shall we not praise God for the Theatre Services, for the many evangelists who have done grand work, and for the Y.M.C.A.?

I look back with great delight over thirty years, since I was engaged in Staffordshire preaching to thousands, and praying over weeping souls for twenty weeks night after night, and could not close the meetings until eleven o'clock p.m. Thousands were brought to the cross at these meetings.

May the coming anniversary, in answer to prayer, be like a rushing, mighty wind, and rouse the churches to put forth greater efforts to bring multitudes to the Saviour's feet. According to our faith be it unto us.

I was in my first pastorate at Romsey, in Hampshire, when the Revival of 1859 broke out, and I have special reason to remember it. The saintly Denham Smith's mother was a member of my church, and was one of the holiest women I have known, teaching me, as a young minister, many an unforgetable spiritual lesson; and Denham Smith, more than perhaps most men, was full of the spirit of the Revival, and during his frequent visits to his mother he was often at my house, and spoke on several occasions to my people on the great work of God. I rejoice in the proposed commemoration services, and shall be present at the meetings in spirit, and join in the thanksgiving and praise.

Nottingham. William Crosbie, M.A., LL.B.

We hope to unite with you in spirit on the 11th April, in thanksgiving to God, and we rejoice in it. Surely it is "good" and "pleasant" and "comely." The Lord make it a memorable day! Would you not suggest that it should be a day of "closet" thanksgiving as well, and for the dear ones on sickbeds, that none may feel excluded though they cannot be present in the large gatherings, or even in smaller ones? I have been so struck lately with "offer unto God thanksgiving," and "Call upon Me in the day of trouble." There was an impression made on my mind about 1860, though I was but a little child, by hearing a friend tell what he had seen among the boys and girls in Ireland; six years later the Lord claimed me for his own.—Ever yours in this precious Saviour, B. Campbell.

May I add another to my grateful recollections of the Lord's gracious dealings in the poor East-end? My early experiences were in Spitalfields and Bethnal Green, but I remember a visit to Ratcliff Highway, and my first sight of "Suicide Bridge," as it was called, from the many who had there ended their lives of sin and shame and sorrow. No building bearing the blessed and well-deserved title of the "Bridge of Hope" was then open for such, nor (as it seemed) any effort whatever made for them. When I returned from India in 1879, I found one little room had been secured by Miss Macpherson, in the lane, leading to this spot in which to invite poor wanderers and bring them within sound of the Gospel. Then a meeting was held at the Home of Industry, and Miss Steer was led to undertake a work for which thousands will call her blessed. Clara M. S. Lowe.

---

May I mention that a history of the Ulster Revival of 1859 is now being given in a little magazine Out and Out, which shows that that great movement was simply the outcome of earnest, persevering, united prayer, and of the faith which is born of prayer? Doubtless the same results would now follow similar efforts.

May I also give an extract from the "Autobiography of the Rev. Charles Finney," in which he says, speaking of the great American Revival of 1857-1858:—

"It was estimated that during this revival not less than five hundred thousand souls were converted. It was carried on very much through the instrumentality of prayer-meetings, personal visitation and conversation, by the distribution of tracts, and by the energetic efforts of the laity, men and women. There was such a general confidence in the prevalence of prayer that people seemed to prefer prayer to preaching. The general impression seemed to be: We have had instruction until we are hardened; it is time to pray."

Answers to prayer were constant and striking. The windows of heaven were opened, and the Spirit was poured out like a flood. M. D.

Allow me to add a note of praise for the wonderful dealings of God in connection with the work among men of various nations in the East End since that remarkable meeting in Sussex Hall. At that time my heart was drawn towards the foreign field. When The Revival first came out, I well remember being thrilled with its accounts of what the Lord was doing, and earnestly I prayed that I might share in the glorious work. One special request was that He would make me a blessing to people of another nation and tongue. And now men belonging to many nations have been converted in the East End, and are proclaiming the Gospel of Christ not only on board ship, but nearly all over the world. I would especially note the way the Lord answered my prayers. Instead of being sent out to one nation, people of many nations were brought to me.

I am right glad to know of the meeting for thanksgiving to be held April 11, for I quite believe there are many who look back on those years of revival with much joy. It is so with myself, and one can trace the Lord's hand now in seeing the converts of those happy days standing firm and becoming witnesses for the Lord to others. After an absence of twenty years from this very town, we are now reaping with joy from the seed sown so long since. We are continually hearing from persons we met with that they were brought to Christ in 1872 or thereabouts.

Some time since I came across a gentleman from Nelson, N.Z., and on asking him when and where he was brought to the Lord, he said, "Stafford Rooms." When? "1860." He gave me a very interesting account of the manner of his being caught by two young men and drawn into the meeting; he was saved there and then. Now he is preaching Christ in the colonies. Oh for the power of the same Lord to flood our isles again!—Yours very sincerely, S. Pyall Diprose.

Mr. W. T. Paton, who, we regret to say, is at present laid aside, writes that he "trusts and prays that the meetings may be seasons of rich blessing; indeed, he believes that this will be the case."

We shall be heartily glad to join with you and others in the proposed praise meetings on April 11. We have abundant cause to bless the Lord for all that He has done amongst the little ones during the last twenty-seven years. T. B. Bishop.

I shall be glad to make the praise meeting known for father's sake. I fancy how delighted he would have been to be at the meeting had he been spared.

With all my heart I rejoice in your forthcoming meetings for praise. Although shut out from all such assemblies in body, I have had happy fellowship and great refreshment in spirit for the past thirty-three years, from the printed reports of many missions. The accounts in The Revival (now The Christian) have been blessed to my soul many many times in those "years of plenty." I can recall one occasion, when vainly longing that I could be among God's people to share the blessing, those words coming very sweetly to my heart, "They that tarried at home divided the spoil." And indeed this is often my happy experience, while I am in the habit of praying specially for others in like case. How many hundreds of us have never attended a convention, yet such is our Lord's loving care for us, we have not missed our portion, but are "satisfied with favour, and full with the blessing of the Lord." Thus shall we join in your praise meeting, although absent.

Sarah Robinson.

BEFORE AND AFTER.—The approaches of sin are like the conduct of Jael—it brings butter in a lordly dish; it bids high for the soul. But when it has fascinated and lulled the victim, the nail and the hammer are behind.—Anon.

EASTERTIDE WITH THE SAILORS.—With a view to providing the seamen frequenting the East End of London with something beneficial in lieu of the baneful influence of the public-house, the Seamen's Christian Friend Society gave a series of special services at their new headquarters, St. George-street, London Docks. On Easter Sunday and Monday the English, German, and Scandinavian meetings were well attended, and on Thursday evening there was a service of sacred song by the King Edward Choir, at which a goodly number of seamen and others were present.

OBITUARY.

DR. REICHEL, BISHOP OF MEATH.

The Irish Protestant Church has lost one of its brightest ornaments and most scholarly ecclesiastics in the death of Dr. Charles Parsons Reichel, Bishop of Meath. He was the author of several works, such as sermons on "The Origin of Christianity," which are widely known. He was a very able popular preacher, and was Evangelical in his views.

MR. HENRY MATHEWS, CANONBURY.

On March 27, at the ripe age of ninety-four, Mr. Henry Mathews, of Canonbury, passed to his rest. He was one of the first teachers and committee men of the Field Lane Ragged School; for some years hon. secretary of the King's Cross Ragged School. For many years he was on the committee of the City Coal Kitchen, while for no less than fifty-eight years he was hon. secretary of the Widows' Friend Society.

MISS MACPHERSON, BELFAST.

Deep regret is felt by a very wide circle of friends in the north of Ireland at the death, by pneumonia, of Miss Macpherson, eldest daughter of Major-General Macpherson, of Fortwilliam Park, Belfast, who has passed away. She was the foundress of the Belfast Society for Nursing the Sick Poor in their Homes, and for twenty years acted as its general superintendent. In this way she was the means of doing an amount of good to the souls and bodies of multitudes that eternity alone will disclose. Stimulated by her example, similar societies have been formed in all the principal towns of Ulster. Thousands of families, regardless of denominational distinctions, have thus been benefited, and ministers of the various churches have been greatly aided by the labours of the district nurses.

MR. WILLIAM MORRISON, INVERNESS.

In the death of Mr. William Morrison, Inverness has lost one of its most valued citizens, who was well known and greatly esteemed throughout the north of Scotland. His sterling character and practical sagacity, combined with a singularly unselfish and modest disposition, won for him the confidence of all parties, and led to his being chosen to many a position of influence. Indeed, it is not too much to say that there was no public movement or association aiming at the good of the community for which the aid of Mr. Morrison's name and services was not sought. He was president of the Young Men's Christian Association, and an earnest supporter of temperance and social reform. A man of simple tastes and unaffected piety, he was the friend of the poor and the trusted adviser of all who were in distress. For several months he had been in failing health. Last winter he spent in the south of England, and was on his way north about a fortnight ago, when a sudden aggravation of his illness arrested him in Edinburgh, where he passed away last week, leaving a widow, two daughters, and two sons to mourn his loss.

PROFESSOR ROBERTSON SMITH.

The death of Professor Robertson Smith, at the age of 47, recalls theological discussions which excited much attention fifteen years ago. A son of the manse, the deceased professor studied at Aberdeen and on the Continent, and at the age of 24 was elected to the professorship of Hebrew in the Free Church College, Aberdeen. He was a member of the Old Testament Revision Company, and joint-editor, with Professor Baynes, of the ninth edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." His writings brought him under ecclesiastical censure for heresy, and he was dismissed from his professorship for his teachings regarding Holy Scripture. In 1883 he accepted the post of Lord Almoner's Reader of Arabic at Cambridge, and subsequently became University Librarian and Adams Professor of Arabic. He was the author of a number of books, in which patient research was combined with rationalistic generalisations. Rev. B. Bell, preaching in Withington Presbyterian Church, on Sunday last, declared the professor to have been "a true and humble Christian, with a faith simple and warm, learned from his godly parents."

MRS. COLIN TAYLOR.

In the year 1866 the Lord did a gracious work in the town and neighbourhood of Atherstone through the instrumentality of Miss Octavia Jary and others. Amongst the trophies then won for the Lord, few came out more distinctly than Miss Wood, of Pinwall Hall, whose life and gifts were laid at the feet of the Lord Jesus.

Very soon after her conversion she became a deep student of Scripture and a constant reader of the Puritans. Knowledge soon led to active service, and in many directions work for the Lord opened before her. Many a Leicestershire village welcomed her to cottage and other meetings, and when in 1885 she became Mrs. Colin Taylor, of Rickmansworth, a new neighbourhood soon discovered that one of rare devotedness judgment, and gifts had come into it.

Grace was given during the last solemn hours to speak to many loved ones of the all-sufficiency of the person and work of Christ, and she died, as she lived, a warrior, entering into rest on Thursday, March 22. Mrs. Colin Taylor, though a member of the Church of England, had great sympathy with the simple worship of the Friends, amongst whom she was widely known. She has left a husband and three little children to mourn her loss.

MISSIONARIES AND KESWICK.

Dear Sir,—I know there are many missionaries and other workers who long to attend the Keswick or some similar Convention, but are unable to bear the expense. On one occasion a generous friend gave me sufficient to send to Keswick a missionary who was returning to the field, and I shall never forget the gratitude and appreciation expressed by my missionary friend. There are probably many of the Lord's children who would wish to take part in such a blessed privilege as that of helping some of their poorer brethren and sisters to partake with themselves and others of the benefits of these gatherings. If such would entrust their contributions to me, I shall gladly keep an account of them and see that help is given only to those who may be considered unable to procure this privilege for themselves.

I have been trying to strike a rough average of probable cost, and have come to the conclusion that from £3 10s. to £4 would suffice for a single person, and about £5 10s. to £6 for two occupying one room. This includes travelling.—Yours faithfully,

Wellesley C. Bailey.

OPEN-AIR MISSION.

Dear Sir,—We are making preparations, on a larger scale than in past years, to send forth companies of preachers to hold week-evening open-air services in and around the metropolis during the coming summer. These special efforts were greatly blessed last year, and if God inclines the people to help us, it will be possible, with our large band of more than 700 members in London alone, to do much more.

Permit me to make known our urgent need of funds, and the fact that we are prepared to hear from clergy, ministers, and superintendents of missions who may be glad to have a band of open-air evangelists sent to their district on week-evenings, either at intervals or for five consecutive nights.

Another set of men will go forth on Saturdays to more distant suburbs, and many friends may be glad to invite their help, and to offer them hospitality by way of tea.

Though this letter has immediate reference to London, I may add that the committee respond to applications for open-air preachers from all parts of the kingdom. Prayer is earnestly asked that the labours of the forthcoming season of opportunity may be accompanied with the mighty power of God.—Yours faithfully, Frank Cockrem, Secretary.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For a mission by Rev. Dr. Morris at Astwood and Feckenham, April 1 to 16.—For a Gospel temperance mission being held by Mrs. Christie Mackenzie in the New Hall, Wellington, Salop.—For blessing upon a fortnight's mission about to be held in connection with the People's Bethel Mission, Callowhill-street, Bristol, by Mr. Henry Lakin, of Burton-on-Trent.—On behalf of a fifteen days' Mission now being held at Commercial-street Baptist Chapel, E.—For Barn Meetings, by Mr. John Elliott, at Zealmonachrum, N. Devon.—For a mission to be held by Mr. W. Lane, in Arthur-street Chapel, April 15-24.

THE CHARING CROSS VIGILANCE AND RESCUE COMMITTEE, in their report for 1893, state that since the home was opened in 1888, some 356 persons have been admitted. We read:—"No doubt there are continual disappointments and many failures; no doubt the work is the most trying and irksome within the whole range of Christian philanthropy; but to admit that it is hopeless, or to allow that it might as well be abandoned on the ground of its difficulty, is altogether impossible to those who recognise the power of religion, and depend upon the strength of the sovereign grace of God. In this work there is no place for despair, and those who carry on the work are upheld by the conviction that no case can be hopeless." Some cases described in the report show how much room there is for patience in such work, and also how blessed is the reward of the grace of long-suffering. The work of the Repression Committee was not unusually great, but it included a number of prosecutions and other measures of vigilance. The hon. sec. is Mr. S. Bowne, St. Martin's Church Vestry Hall, Charing Cross, S.W.

THE Y.M.C.A.

The Saltcoats Association reports good progress.

By the will of the late Mr. Henry Boys, a wealthy townsman, the Walsall Y.M.C.A. receives a legacy of £150.

From Auckland Mr. Brackenrig reports that the work is going on well, and that there is much encouragement in many ways.

Sir John Llewellyn presided over the annual breakfast of the Swansea Association. £900 has been promised towards the debt of £1000 resting on this institution.

Mr. H. J. Fairfax, general secretary at Hobart, has been on a temperance and evangelistic tour, conducting meetings at Zeehan and Strahan with encouraging success.

The Winchester Y.M.C.A. held a most successful social meeting in the Banqueting Hall, and subsequently Mr. Hind Smith delivered an illustrated lecture to a large audience.

The usual Good Friday re-union at Stafford Rooms was well attended. Professor Gladstone presided, and addresses were given by Revs. Gilbert Karney, H. E. Stone, and G. D. Macgregor, and Mr. Russell Hurditch.

Rabbi Gottheil, of New York, speaking on the Young Men's Hebrew Association, says:—"We imitated the Y.M.C.A., but we left out what is the real secret of its success—religion. All its branches are subservient to Christianity."

Carluke United Y.M.C.A. now embraces in its membership the Guilds or Fellowship Associations connected with all the churches (five in number) of the town, the lately resuscitated Y.M.C.A. in connection with the Free Church having just become affiliated.

The usual Easter Conference in connection with the North-eastern District Union was held at Stockton, under the presidency of Mr. Frederic Robson. Papers on evangelistic work were read by Mr. Henry Johnson, of Sunderland, and Mr. J. W. Pratt, of South Shields.

The Sydney Association reports that God's blessing has been manifestly vouchsafed to the evangelistic and Bible work, both in guidance through difficulties, and in the conversion of young men. Many touching incidents of the work of the Holy Spirit in men's hearts have been witnessed.

Dr. J. G. Paton has paid a short visit to Southport under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., very large meetings were held, and after payment of all expenses, nearly £80 was transmitted to the treasurer of Dr. Paton's fund, besides many special donations handed direct to the missionary. A visit from Dr. Harry Guinness is arranged to take place shortly.

The Association of the city of New York, at its forty-first anniversary, reported a membership of 7584, being 400 larger than ever before. In the employment bureau 3906 were provided with work. Fifty-nine educational classes in eighteen lines of study have been conducted for 1839 different young men. The total attendance at meetings and of visitors to the rooms aggregated 1,783,825, or a daily average for the year of 4887.

The annual report of the Oxford Association shows a membership of 616, and active work in many directions. The men's gathering on Sunday afternoon still retains its place as the most largely attended meeting. Instrumental music, hearty singing, and an address, are the chief features of this meeting. A large number of men have testified to the help derived from these meetings. The Sunday evening evangelistic meetings and the Bible classes have been greatly blessed. United prayer meetings and open-air work are also carried on actively, while the social and intellectual agencies are by no means overlooked.

The annual conference of the Midland District Union of Y.M.C.A.'s was held at the rooms of the Northampton Association. The report, read by the hon. district secretary, Mr. Henry Whitewell, stated that the work had been prosecuted with vigour and success in the larger Associations, but progress in the smaller Associations had not been so satisfactory. The membership of the District Union was 3587, and there were twenty-one Associations in active operation. In addition to the Bible-classes and devotional meetings reported by the various Associations, aggressive Christian work was being carried on in many places, such as evangelistic meetings, Gospel meetings for men, lodging-house missions, open-air and lantern services, street lads and hop-pickers' missions, by which many outside all ordinary religious influences had been reached and gathered into the churches.

IN THE UNITED STATES there is said to be one liquor dealer to every 272 inhabitants. Twenty years ago the proportion was one to 192.

REV. HUGH PRICE HUGHES advocates such a modification of the Veto Bill as will admit of a reduction in the number of licensed houses.

THE Y.W.C.A.

The Factory Helpers' Union, which is under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A., is doing excellent work amongst our factory girls, but is not as well known or liberally supported as it should be.

The Sydney Central Association says:—Our employment agencies are in great demand, and the Institute is very busy, while the boarding accommodation is in great request. Our evangelistic evening meetings have been well attended.

The Foreign Missionary Department is being reorganised, and in one of the divisions of the Association it is contemplated to appoint a travelling foreign missionary secretary. A considerable number of Y.W.C.A. members are now in the foreign field.

Arrangements are now complete for the Annual Conference, which takes place this month at the Morley Halls. The programme is full of good things, and the conference cannot fail to be stimulating and helpful to those engaged in Y.W.C.A. work.

The members and friends of the Sandwich Branch met recently at the house of the treasurer, Mrs. Oldfield. After tea a meeting was held in the drawing-room, when Miss Foquett, of Ilfracombe, gave an address on the words, "Follow Me." Missionary letters from India and China were read.

The work at Cardiff is continually increasing, and the premises at 27, Charles-street are taxed to provide for all who desire to avail themselves of the accommodation. The operations are directed to supplying a Home for young women. One great want in connection with the Institute was a suitable hall, and this has now been met. At the rear of the headquarters a cosy little iron hall has been erected, capable of providing sitting for 200 persons. The utility of the place has been sufficiently shown during the mission held by Mrs. Baeyertz. Bible readings were held daily, and Gospel addresses given at Tredegarville Chapel in the evenings, when large congregations gathered.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Mr. William Forbes has been holding services on the west coast of Scotland and in Edinburgh.

Rev. R. Mackay last week gave a lecture in Aberdeen in the interests of Dr. Barnardo's rescue work.

Rev. John Robertson, of the City Temple, Glasgow, has begun to publish his weekly Sabbath evening sermon.

The decrease in the Sustentation Fund of the Free Church for the first two months of the financial year amounted to £4525.

The ministerial jubilee of Rev. John Philip, F.C. minister, Fordoun, is being celebrated this week. He is known as an able writer on religious topics.

A party of 140 boys have left Glasgow for Canada, in connection with Mr. Quarrier's work. Much regret was expressed at the farewell meeting at the illness of Mrs. Quarrier.

The operations of the Sailors' Mission in Aberdeen are being extended, and a new building is to be erected. Encouraging reports of its work were given at the annual meeting last week.

Rev. J. J. Mackay, who has been so successful in aggressive work as minister of Trinity Free Church, Glasgow, has been unanimously called to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Church, Hull.

Dr. Barbour, of Bonskeid, and Mrs. Barbour, who are interested in China Missions, have paid a visit to Inverness to stir up new interest in this branch of missionary work. Their visit will excite fresh interest in missionary work in China, and doubtless lead to additional support being given by the Church.

In connection with the Dundee Home Mission Union, a house-to-house visitation is at present being carried on in Dundee for the purpose of inducing non-churchgoers to connect themselves with some church or mission. The visitation is being prosecuted in a systematic manner, the city having been mapped out into districts. Though only a part of the work has been accomplished, reports highly favourable to the objects which the Union have in view have come to hand.

IRISH NOTES.

During the past three weeks Gospel meetings have been held in Lisnaskea, co. Fermanagh, by Mr. J. H. Crawford, of the Irish Evangelisation Society.

The Dublin University Mission to Chota Nagpore has branches in every diocese in Ireland, and receives large support from Irish graduates in England. Its income last year was about £1000; during that time it sent five new workers into the Mission field, and is anxious to send out another this year.

A MEMORIAL in favour of Sunday closing on national lines, and not by local option, is being promoted by the Central Sunday Closing Association.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

A C.E. Union has been formed for Nottinghamshire.

A united meeting of Endeavourers from Ealing, Hanwell, Richmond, and Hounslow was lately held at Brentford.

At Battersea Park Tabernacle the report of the C.E. shows the society to be in a sound and flourishing condition.

In Cambridge the Zion Society, though only four months old, is accomplishing much good work. There are now forty active and fifteen associate members.

God is richly blessing the Wells-street, Coventry, Society, fifteen of its active members having recently joined the church. A weekly cottage meeting is successfully carried on by the Prayer-meeting Committee.

A Convention of C.E. societies in the Stroud district, held last November, was so successful that a series of united meetings was arranged for Good Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Reader Harris led the meetings, which have been a wonderful means of blessing.

A successful gathering of Christian Endeavourers was held at Langholm (Dumfriesshire) on March 29. Six local societies were represented. Stirring and helpful addresses were given by Rev. W. Knight Chaplin, London, and Rev. J. Buchanan, Langholm.

The annual meeting of the Glasgow Society in the City Hall last week was a very interesting occasion. Lord Overtoun presided, and urged the churches to throw their best energies into the movement. Several pastors testified to the benefits experienced in their congregations.

The society at Melbourne Hall, Leicester, records another year of much blessing. The membership is 82. The different committees have continued their work among the poor and the sick of this and other districts. Many children's and mission services have been held during the year. In the summer months open-air meetings were conducted in Lead-street on Sunday evenings.

The Three Counties Union annual meetings have been held at Luton. The secretary, Rev. J. F. Flatt, reported that there are now twelve societies in the union, with a membership of over 550. Meetings and conventions have been held in towns and villages in the districts, viz., Berkhamsted, Dunstable, Hemel Hempstead, Houghton Regis, Maulden, and Redbourne. The reports from each of the societies were very encouraging.

The fourth National Convention of the Y.P.S.C.E. Movement will be held in London at the Metropolitan Tabernacle at Whitsuntide, from May 12 to May 14 and 15. The Conventions which have been held at Crewe, Chester, and Bradford have drawn together thousands of young people from all parts of the United Kingdom, and it is anticipated that the 1894 convention will be the largest hitherto held in this country. Beside the fact that London is central, the phenomenal growth of the organisation more than warrants the expectation of a large gathering. There are now no less than 1240 registered societies in this country alone, this being nearly treble that of last year. Of this number more than 130 are in the London postal district.

DEPTFORD MEDICAL MISSION.—The fifth annual report shows an increase in the work, and especially in the number of patients visited in their own homes. A large number of surgical cases also have been attended, and have been undertaken with more confidence, owing to the addition to the staff of an efficient nurse. Amid the pressure of medical work the spiritual charge has not been overlooked. Dr. P. W. Nicol, formerly of Edinburgh, is the medical superintendent, and the mission still enjoys the sympathy and co-operation of its former superintendent, Rev. F. T. Pring, whose resignation was due only to his desire to devote his whole time to spiritual work. Dr. Pring is now hon. director, and communications may be addressed to him at 188, High-street, Deptford, S.E.

AN INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION is to be opened at Lyons, France, this month, lasting until November. Great numbers of people are expected as visitors. Miss Malpas, writing from that city, desires to recommend to English visitors a boarding-house, opened by M. and Mdme. Laügt. The terms are moderate. It is proposed to have a kiosque in the exhibition, where Bibles would be sold and Gospel tracts given away. There would also be work for individual Christians outside the exhibition, which stands in a park, where the multitudes would resort; and thus opportunities will be given for spreading God's Word and good Gospel tracts. Any who desire to help in this work with money or suitable little books are asked to communicate with Monsieur le Pasteur Laügt. 44, Rue du Béguin, Lyon; or Miss Malpas, 22, Rue Vendôme, Lyon.

PERSONALIA.

Rev. Samuel Chadwick has, it is stated, been compelled to take some rest from work.

The Bishop of Rochester is very ill, and has cancelled all engagements for at least six weeks.

Rev. Charles Garrett is so far restored that he has been able to return to Liverpool from the Isle of Wight.

Rev. B. Fay Mills, the evangelist, is to occupy the pulpit of the Brooklyn Tabernacle during the five months of Dr. Talmage's absence.

Rev. Dr. Stephenson is about to visit the United States, it being hoped that a month of rest from all work and change of scene may restore his health. He will return by way of the North-West, and will visit Hamilton before coming home.

Joshua Poole writes that while no longer fit for active service—his body being weak and nerves shattered—he is as deeply interested in the Lord's work as ever. Friends may like to know that he may be addressed 7, Gladstone-road, Halifax.

Rev. E. d'Auquier, late head master of the South-Eastern College, has been spending a few days at Ramsgate. Many will be sorry to learn that he is in a very weak state of health. Dr. d'Auquier's recent work at Stone Grammar School, of which Lord Harrowby is chairman, has been of the most successful description.

Bishop Hornby. — Information is anxiously awaited in Sunderland as to the bishop's health. It appears that the attack of fever which necessitated his return home was more severe than was at first supposed. Mr. Cowey, who accompanied the bishop, has died of fever. The Nyassa Mission will be recruited in the autumn by the accession to it of Rev. A. F. Sims, of St. Aidan's, West Hartlepool.

Rev. Henry Dyke and Mrs. Dyke, of the Paris Missionary Society, will shortly return to their work in Basutoland. The April issue of The Journal des Missions Evangéliques states that by his British tour Mr. Dyke has enlisted many new friends in the work at Lessouto, and has helped to consolidate the efforts of the Committee in aid of the Mission. Mr. and Mrs. Dyke will be accompanied by Miss Howie, a young lady from Scotland, who will assist in the work without involving the Society in any extra expenditure.

Dr. Newman Hall has completed a tour of eleven days, preaching three times at Nottingham (Rev. W. Crosbie, Congregational), twice at Leicester (Rev. W. Evans, Baptist), Ealing (Dr. Thain Davidson, Presbyterian), Hampstead (Rev. W. Brock, Baptist), and four times at Cross-Keys, Monmouth (Rev. J. Hughes, Congregational). After each evening service a special prayer-meeting has been held, to which most of the congregations have remained. Women, as well as men, have been invited to lead in prayer of their own accord, and many in response to appeal have held up their hand as request for special prayer, which has then been offered by the preacher, and by members of the congregation for confirmation in faith and full surrender to Christ. Similar engagements are pending at Bath, Lowestoft, Bloomsbury, Leeds, Shrewsbury, Wigan, Staines, Walsall, Birmingham, Bedford, Derby, etc.

MR. F. H. HUTCHINS has conducted some special meetings in the Mission Hall, Faversham. At the after meetings several decided for the Lord. During the mission the believers were strengthened and refreshed.

MADAGASCAR.—The new hospital in Antachamaki, N.E. Madagascar, was opened last August. It has two large wards, two small wards, bath rooms, dispensary, consulting and operating room, nurses' room, and store rooms. The total cost has been about £450, of which about £70 or £75 remains to be collected. The district is a most heathen and needy one, but the power of the Gospel has been felt of late, and it is hoped that the medical mission may prove a true help in the spread of the Gospel of love and mercy in that needy province.

CHURCH ARMY LABOUR HOMES.—Bishop Barry presided last week at the first anniversary of the Coupland-Taylor Church Army Labour Home, St. George's-in-the-East. Rev. G. J. H. Llewellyn bore testimony to the good work done by the Church Army, especially in visiting the casual wards of the London workhouses, and selecting from thence the most hopeful cases for assistance in the Labour Homes. Captain Brock, the officer in charge of the Home, gave a sketch of the operations of the Institution. Rev. W. Hunt said the Home was opened in Nov. 1892, and up to March 16 last a total of 156 persons had been benefited, of whom sixty-two were natives of London. Bishop Barry said these Labour Homes were only a small part of the Church Army work. There were twenty of them in London, and the number passing through them was between 2500 and 3000. A very large proportion were rescued and restored to independence, and had again become useful members of society.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Plymouth.—Mr. Nichols Barnes is holding a nine days' mission at Vauxhall-street Mission Hall. He will be glad of prayers on behalf of the mission.

Mr. Moody and Mr. Sankey have made an auspicious beginning at Norfolk, Virginia, where crowds have assembled to hear the Gospel preached and sung.

Mayfield, Sussex.—A fourteen days' mission here by Mr. Gerald Coultas has been the channel of blessing both to saved and unsaved. Continued prayer for the work would be much valued.

Bovingdon, Herts.—Mr. Goudie has closed a fifteen days' mission here. The meetings were well attended, and the Word, earnestly and faithfully spoken, has been, it is believed, a blessing to many.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith hope to open on Monday a special united mission in the Albert Hall, Leeds. Revs. F. B. Meyer and Dr. Newman Hall are to take part; prayer is asked for much blessing.

Mr. Walter Notman, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a fortnight's mission at General Alexander's Mission Hall, Burgess Hill. Mr. Notman will conduct services during April at the Edinburgh Castle.

Uphall, Linlithgow, N.B.—Mr. Charles Galletly, of the Evangelisation Society, has conducted a fortnight's special meetings in New Mission Hall, Uphall, which have proved a means of building up believers and the conversion of sinners.

Messrs. B. and F. Weaver are holding a fortnight's evangelistic services in the Newbattle Free Church, Midlothian; the members of various churches are joining in the work. Will the readers of The Christian pray for much blessing on the mission?

A. Hardie (Minister).

Meopham, near Gravesend.—A special mission, held by Mr. James Clark, Evangelisation Society, closed on Sunday week. We feel that abiding good must be the result, as souls have been brought into the light, and Christians stirred up. From the first the meetings steadily grew in numbers and interest.

Chas. J. Smith.

Rev. E. P. Hammond's mission in Springfield, Illinois, has grown in interest and spiritual issue. A "doll service" appears to have aroused great enthusiasm, the evangelist using the toys to illustrate the Gospel. Night after night the older folk have crowded the meetings, and many profess to have accepted Christ.

Ross Bible Carriage.—Mr. John Coates and his helpers have been seeing blessing on the work from place to place. They would be glad of prayer for a mission now being held in Regent Hall, Cheltenham. On April 18 the carriage will start on the tour made annually to the pleasure fairs held here and there. The Gospel tent will be put up and used as opportunity occurs.

Polesworth.—Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes has closed a ten days' mission at the Polesworth Congregational Church. The services were largely attended, and sometimes the church was crowded; the earnest appeals of the preacher rousing great interest in the village. One pleasing result is that a number of young men, who formerly attended no place of worship, have been gathered into a Bible-class preparatory to joining the church.

J. E. Hodge (Pastor).

Taunton.—Mr. Henry Varley has completed his second visit to this place, and it has been a time of much blessing. The conference of Christians on Easter Monday was largely attended from the neighbourhood round, and many have had to bless God for distinct help and accession of strength. The afternoon Bible readings, as well as the evening evangelistic meetings, have been blessed to many. Mr. Varley has now gone to Exeter.

Mr. Chas. Inglis has paid a visit to the Tolbooth Mission in Glasgow. Twice every day during the past three weeks have meetings been held, and at each service there has been manifest blessing. The addresses were of a solemn and searching character, and the inquiry rooms have been filled night after night with men and women seeking after God. Hundreds have been dealt with personally about their souls, and a number have professed conversion. The Bible lectures each day proved a great source of blessing to many.

Mr. W. Grove has concluded a six weeks' mission in seven villages around Alverston, Gloucestershire. The places have been much stirred, and the work has been specially marked among aged people, who have been led to see themselves sinners needing a Saviour. Numbers of these have walked four or five miles out and back to the meetings. The Methodist churches have been moved to ask and expect great things of God, and to lay hold on the promises, and so help on the work. On Easter Monday Mr. Grove was at Buckhurst Hill, in the afternoon, and spoke at Bignold Hall, Forest Gate, in the evening. He has now left for Belfast to commence a month's mission, and would be glad of the prayers of the saints of God.

Church Parochial Mission Society.—The following missions, among others, have been arranged for April. It is hoped they will be made a subject of prayer by our readers:—Rev. W. Hay Aitken, April 1 to 16, Heston, Middlesex; April 22 to May 7, Ballymena, co. Antrim; Rev. Canon Harrison, LL.D., April 7 to 16, St. Columba's Church, Liverpool; April 18 to 21, Parish Church, Lower Darwen; Rev. C. E. Meeres, April 16 to 24, Bulford, Amesbury, April 25 to May 3, Durrington, Salisbury; Rev. R. D. Monro, March 31 to April 7, Astwood Bank, Redditch; Rev. Joseph Morris, April 8 to 18, Feckenham, Redditch; April 21 to May 7, St. Thomas's, Launceston; Rev. E. Bachelor Russell, April 7 to 16, Throwley, Faversham; Rev. James Stephens, March 31 to April 10, Gorsley, Gloucester; April 14 to 17, St. Barnabas's Cambridge; Rev. S. A. Selwyn, April 7 to 17, Ventnor, I.W.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

A boy aged thirteen was found the other day in the streets of London insensible from drink, and the magistrate advised the mother to try and induce her son to sign the pledge.

In Birmingham it is proposed to convert the Temperance Hall in Temple-street into a Palace of Delight, to be worked by an amalgamation of all the temperance organisations in the town.

It appears that the London County Council, which is doing so much for temperance, has sacrificed £20,000 during its existence by the discontinuance of licences when public-houses fell into its hands.

A memorial has been presented to the Foreign Secretary by the Committee for the Prevention of the Demoralisation of the Native Races by the Liquor Traffic, asking that the Government will take steps for inducing the various Governments to join in protecting the islands of the Western Pacific from the importation of spirits.

It is strongly pointed out that the use of intoxicants lessens the skill of the working man. A large manufacturing firm in Cincinnati recently made the following statement:—"A drinking man will turn out from 20 to 30 per cent. less work than a non-drinker; and, in addition, his work is apt to be defective and require overhauling."

The injury inflicted upon working men by drinking habits is receiving increased attention in the United States. "In Chicago," says Mr. Samuel Small, "I saw a marching body of working men, 18,000 strong, carrying a banner inscribed, 'Our Children Cry for Bread.' And they marched straight to a picnic ground, and drank 1400 kegs of beer."

The twenty-sixth annual session of the Good Templar Grand Lodge of England has been held at Portsmouth. Canon Jacob preached on its behalf at St. Mary's, Portsea, Miss Weston conducted a Gospel temperance meeting, and the Mayor gave a reception to the delegates on Monday night. The report showed a membership of 164,803, of whom 47,873 are members of 2000 juvenile Temples.

The health of the community, the well-being of the community, the happiness of the community, mainly depend on what the members of the community eat and drink. The drink question alone is of enormous, of incalculable importance—of more importance than anything which Parliament can do or undo. Do away with the drinking system, said John Bright, and we should have a new heaven and a new earth; and people can do away with it if they like without Parliamentary assistance; and any assistance rendered by Parliament without popular sanction would be useless.

Mr. Thomas E. Murphy has completed a remarkably successful campaign in Danbury, Conn., and 5000 of the 20,000 people of that busy city are wearing the bits of blue ribbon. The largest hall in the city could not hold the crowds which flocked to hear him. One very stormy night 300 persons were unable to find standing room when the meeting began, and 1200 people were already inside. When in a men's Sunday afternoon meeting he asked those who signed the pledge during his first visit a month ago and had kept it to stand, two-thirds of the audience of 900 men rose.—N.Y. Independent.

A largely attended meeting, called by the Friends' Total Abstinence Association, was held lately at Manchester to hear an address from Anne W. Richardson, B.A., on "The Responsibility of Quakerism in Regard to the Temperance Question." Miss Richardson pointed out the prominent place Friends have taken in other philanthropic movements—for prison reform, peace, liberty of thought and speech, abolition of slavery, and called on the rising generation to throw themselves with a like devotion into the great crusade against intemperance. From the scientific standpoint she showed that alcohol was now admitted to be no food, and only had a place, along with other drugs, on the doctors' shelves. Miss Richardson reminded us how strong a force is quiet influence, silently impressing those around us for good or for evil. The rich inheritance we have entered into has not been gained by self-indulgence or self-gratification, but by brave men toiling while others slept.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. G. Everard is still somewhat seriously ill.

Bishop Swaby, of Guiana, reports that the party who sailed with him in the autumn are all well.

Canon Bardsley, D.D., has been appointed to the Archdeaconry of Craven, Yorks, by the Bishop of Ripon.

The Dean of Llandaff continues in a state of great prostration, although during the past week there has at times been an improvement in strength.

News has been received of Mr. Steggall's safe arrival at Port Said on his return to East Africa. Yohana, the native Christian lad whom he brought to England last year, is with him.

The Evangelical Churchmen of Exeter intend securing a central room during the Church Congress to serve as a meeting-place for their brethren, as well as for consultation and prayer.

The Bishop of Mauritius expects to leave England to return to his diocese at the end of next month. Mrs. Walsh, who lately met with a serious cab accident, is progressing favourably towards recovery.

Rev. John Adam Paddock, Bishop of the Missionary Jurisdiction of Olympia, in the State of Washington, died on Sunday, March 4, of apoplexy, after a lengthened illness. He was sixty-nine years old.

By the will of the late Mr. Samuel Weston the Manchester Royal Infirmary receives a sum of £50,000. A similar sum goes to the Bishop of Manchester, to be applied to such Church purposes within his diocese as he may think fit.

Bishop Tucker told the "Story of Uganda" at the Men's Service at St. Peter's, Highgate-hill, on Sunday week to nearly 800 men, who listened with keen attention to the Bishop's graphic and intensely interesting accounts of his journeys.

Rev. A. B. Hutchinson and his wife sail this week for their sphere of labour, Nagasaki and Fukuska, Japan. Mr. Hutchinson writes: "We go with hearts full of gratitude for many and great kindnesses shown us for the Master's sake, and we would ask the prayers of friends for ourselves and work, as well as for dear children left behind."

The C.E. Young Men's Society is passing through a crisis. Both secretaries retired on Saturday. The new secretary, Mr. M. P. Betts, will have as his assistant Mr. P. Etheridge, who has been associated for some time with the work of the Y.M.C.A. at Exeter Hall. It is understood that the C.E.Y.M.S. will in the future follow more closely the lines so successfully pursued by the Y.M.C.A.

The Record states that the news of the acceptance of Christ Church, Clifton, by Rev. T. C. Chapman, Vicar of Jesmond, has been received with the greatest regret by all Evangelical friends in the North. It is only five years since Mr. Chapman came to Newcastle, but in that time he made himself a wonderful power for good. As a diligent and conscientious worker he has few to surpass him.

The Bishop of Carlisle last week preached to a large congregation of men in Holy Trinity, Carlisle. Taking for his text the concluding words of the eighth verse of the fourth chapter of Philippians, he dwelt on the great part played in men's lives by thoughts. They were all responsible for their thoughts, which made them what they were. It was not what they did, but what took place in the heart, what regularly dwelt there, that made their characters and established their habits. With the great facts of history, of everyday life, of nature, let them try to understand something of astronomy, of geology, of botany, so that their minds might be like picture galleries.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The church at Wrington has been celebrating its 231st anniversary.

A new church and mission has been formed at Gatley, near Manchester.

At Spencer's Wood, near Reading, a new mission hall has been erected and opened.

At Pains'-hill, Limpsfield, good services have lately been held with encouraging results.

The report of Victoria Park Tabernacle shows tokens of steady work and cheering progress.

Rev. E. S. Bayliffe, formerly of Bristol, has engaged to supply the pulpit of Forest-hill Church for six months.

Rev. E. James, chairman of the Welsh Congregational Union, who has been ill for many months, hopes shortly to be able to resume his ministry.

Mr. John C. Bumsted has succeeded the late Mr. John Cunliffe as treasurer of the Evangelical Continental Society, and Rev. George H. Giddins has been appointed secretary.

Interesting meetings were held last week in Liverpool in connection with the visit of the new missionary ship, the John Williams. The vessel has now sailed for the South Seas.

Rev. A. W. W. Little, who has been recently residing without pastoral charge at Ivybridge, has been received by the Bishop of Llandaff into the communion of the Church of England.

Professor J. M. Hodgson, of Lancashire Independent College, who has accepted the principalship of the Theological Hall of the Scottish Congregationalists, Edinburgh, will enter on his duties in September.

Mr. Thomas Richardson, who for some years has been working in connection with the Tower Hamlets Mission at the Great Assembly Hall, was publicly recognised on Monday evening as the pastor of Rotherhithe Free Church, Lower-road, Rotherhithe, in succession to the late Mr. Golding, who ministered in the church for over twenty years.

Calls.—Rev. Mark Bairstow to Great Bridge, Staffordshire; Mr. H. T. Spencer to Wavertree, Liverpool.

Resignations.—Rev. Gilbert McAll, of Dawlish; Rev. Alexander Francis, of the English and American Congregational Church, St. Petersburg; Rev. J. Wayman, of Kentish Town.

BAPTIST.

Rev. R. Bailey has been warmly welcomed in his new pastorate at Park Church, Brentford.

Rev. H. and Mrs. Ross Phillips and Rev. E. Hughes have reached England safely from the Upper Congo.

After ten years' missionary work in Patna, Rev. H. and Mrs. Paterson have come home for rest and change.

A small Baptist church has been formed at Neuilly-sur-Seine, near Paris, in which the well-known littérateur, M. Paul Passy, is an elder.

Since the settlement of Rev. G. Hay Morgan at Woodberry Down Chapel, N., the work has grown largely. The members now number 500.

The church in Highgate-road proposes erecting a new mission-room in Fortess-road, Kentish Town, for the better accommodation of the mission carried on there.

Rev. T. Harmon, of China, and Dr. Harry Grattan Guinness preached on Sunday last at West Cliff Tabernacle, Bournemouth, on missions, to interested congregations.

Tidings have been received of the death of Sri Nath Sirkar, who for thirty-five years has been an evangelist in Eastern Bengal. As the result of his labours and influence hundreds have lost faith in Hinduism. He has been supported for many years by the Sunday-school in connection with Dr. Maclaren's church in Manchester.

The spring session of the Lancashire and Cheshire Association was held last week at Crewe. Rev. J. Thomas presided over a meeting of ministers, and Rev. J. W. Varley read a paper on "Some human elements of use in our work as preachers." At the afternoon conference Rev. Norman M'Leod gave an address on "The Federation of our Sunday-schools."

The neighbourhood of the South London Palace is one of the most thickly-populated in South London. Rev. W. Williams and his friends at Upton Chapel, Lambeth, have organised a series of Sunday afternoon meetings at the South London Palace. The neighbourhood has been personally canvassed from house to house by the Tract and Christian Endeavour Societies, and the public-houses well visited, the result being good attendances. The services are short and bright, with plenty of singing. Much good is expected from these services.

We learn from Rev. W. L. Lang, of Cheltenham, that the intrepid Colporteur-Evangelist, M. Masson, who has now for several years conducted the Bible carriage, the joint property of the Trinitarian Bible Society, and the Breton Evangelical Mission, at great personal risk and much discomfort, throughout Brittany, is now laid aside by illness, mainly contracted in his noble work for the Lord. A sad consequence follows this retirement. The funds not permitting the sending forth of another agent, the horse which has so often been pelted with stones, and boycotted in its food, has to be sold.

Calls.—Rev. A. Carter, of Sherborne, to Wimborne; Rev. G. Camp, of Coningsby; Rev. W. A. Wicks, of Ross, to Aston Park, Birmingham; Rev. F. Todd, of Suttleston, to Gosberton.

Resignations.—Rev. W. Carey Sage, of Toxteth Tabernacle, Liverpool; Rev. J. F. Shearer, of Bromley, Kent.

METHODIST.

Miss Garnett has concluded a capital mission at Bodmin.

United Missionary meetings have proved very successful in Nottingham.

At the Central Hall, Manchester, special services for the Welsh have been held by the Rev. John Evans.

The Mission Band Union had during the Easter holidays good evangelistic meetings in Southwark, and at Hounslow and Brixton.

Some 500 members of the Central Mission, Clerkenwell, went on Easter Monday to Wood Green, where they held capital meetings.

The work at Hinde-street, W., is described in the pages of Young Methodism as reviving under the care of Rev. W. Darlow Sarjeant. The cause had greatly declined owing to a changed locality, but now young men and women are being attracted, converted, and added to the church; over 200 of these being now members of the Society.

A special mission at Gladstone-street, Bristol, conducted by Miss Costin, has been attended with encouraging results. Twenty-seven new members have been received, and about twenty more have joined other churches where they had previously attended. Many children in connection with the "Christian Endeavour" were also received as juvenile members.

Dr. R. F. Horton spoke in Cleveland Hall last week. He congratulated the West London Mission on having utilised by its Sisterhood the services of women, and spoke of Mr. Price Hughes, having around him such a band of helpers, as just the man to organise a scheme like that of the Colony of Mercy in Germany for dealing with the unemployed, the tramps, and the paupers.

A great work is being carried on in Surrey Chapel, Blackfriars-road, under the ministry of the new pastor, Rev. J. Tolefree Parr. Every week sinners are being brought to God. The masses of people surrounding the church are realising that they are cared for through the ministrations of Sister Annie and fifty lady visitors, who visit 2000 families per month. There is a prosperous mothers' meeting, and also a poor children's mission, attended by 600 boys and girls. At the anniversary services Rev. F. B. Meyer heartily congratulated Mr. Parr upon the spiritual success of the last few months. In cash and promises the Good Friday effort raised £150.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Mrs. Edwards, wife of Dr. Charles Edwards, of Bala College, is gradually recovering from her recent illness.

Rev. A. Kellogg, D.D., who has been preaching in various London churches, has now sailed on his return to Philadelphia.

The church at Carlisle, of which Rev. J. Christie is minister, feels that the present building is completely outgrown, and proposes to enter on extensive reconstructions.

A seven days' special evangelistic mission is being held this week by Rev. R. Balgarnie in Oxenden Presbyterian Church, Haverstock Hill, N.W. Prayer is asked for much blessing.

Rev. Alexander Connell's monthly sermons to young men attract large numbers. They are followed by an "at home," when young men are made welcome, and have the opportunity of seeking any help they may desire.

On Wednesday last, at a meeting of Trinity Presbyterian Church, Notting Hill, N., a unanimous call was given to Rev. Geo. H. C. Macgregor, of Aberdeen, three-fourths of the congregation were present, and no other name was proposed. The church is in a neighbourhood which greatly needs such a minister, and his services would be a decided gain to the London Presbyterian body.

Calls.—Rev. A. Osborne to Martyr Church, Dundee; Rev. A. Stuart, of Stornoway, to Daviot and Dunlichity; Rev. G. Stirling to Junction-street, Edinburgh; Rev. Isaac Davies, of Wolverhampton, to Cynnon, Cardigan.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

The Friends of Birmingham have just given a second instalment of £1636 in aid of the "Darkest England" Social Scheme of the Salvation Army.

The correspondence in The Friend indicates an anxious concern as to the condition of Friends' meetings, and how to make them attractive and useful in supplying the prevalent spiritual need that so many feel.

Richard Thomas and wife, of Baltimore, are expected in a few days in Munster, where they will labour till Dublin yearly meeting. From thence they will come to attend London yearly meeting. Other American Friends are also likely to attend the annual gathering in Dublin and London.

Ulster quarterly meeting, held in Lisburn on the 18th ult., was a time of much interest, Harriet Green (of Saffron Walden) and George Grubb (Cork) being present as visitors. Besides those who are recorded ministers, about sixty take part in meetings in Ulster. The increase is about twenty in membership for the year, and a committee was set apart to visit meetings during the coming year.

The need of information on the distinctive teachings of Friends having been felt somewhat widely, lectures on various phases of Quaker history and doctrines have recently been given in Reigate, Guildford, Horsham, Dorking, Caple, and Coolham, and in every case real interest was manifested, and more of such information requested. It is hard to persuade the public that Friends' meetings are as open as any others anywhere and everywhere.

The sudden death from pneumonia of Benjamin Townson, the Head Master of Leighton Park School, Reading, on Easter Sunday, will cause deep sorrow in many a heart and home. "The marked progress which Leighton Park School has made since 1890 has been very considerably the result of Benjamin Townson's patient and wise attention." And it will be hard indeed to replace him in the important and growing school. Genuine and wide-spread sympathy is felt for the bereaved family.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

This year entrance will be made into Japan, Java, and Demarara.

Part of the Jubilee Fund which is to be raised will be utilised for the opening of two new shelters and a home for lost children.

The fine room over Blackfriars Station is admirably suited for the daily prayer meeting now held there, under the leadership of the prominent officers of the Army.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Leighton Park, Reading, on 25th ult., Benjamin Townson, aged 48, associated with the Friends.—At Melksham, W. R. Selman, a member of the Society of Friends.—At Prion, Rev. Jacob Jones, aged 69, for forty years a faithful minister of the Gospel.—At Jokorsham, York, Mr. John Cowgill, a devoted preacher for fifty-five years.—At Finchley, Mrs. Moseley, wife of the Wesleyan minister.—At Manningham, Bradford, on 24th ult.. Rev. Elijah Jackson, an honoured and useful Methodist minister, who retired in 1878 after forty-one years labours.—At Carlisle, Eliza Barlow, widow of the late professor of physiology in Edinburgh, and herself well-known among the Friends.—At Deal, Alderman Brown, who for fifty-four years had been a local leader in Christian work,—At Berkhamstead, on 20th ult., Mr. William Newman, who has left large bequests to various Christian churches and institutions.—At Wokingham, Alderman W. Moorcock, well-known locally as a helper of the Lord's work.—At Ravensthorpe, aged 46, Mr. John E. Dickins, a devoted leader in village work who had been much blessed in the neighbourhood.—At Markenfield, Ripon, Mr. Francis Foster, aged 72, a Christian leader, one of whose daughters is wife of Rev. Thomas Cook, the evangelist.—At Huddersfield, Mr. Thomas Armitage, aged sixty-four, for sixteen years superintendent of a Sunday-school and for some years President of the Huddersfield S.S.U.—At Newbridge Hill, near Bath, Rev. H. H. Moggs, who did good work for many years as vicar of High Littleton.—At Redcar, Rev. A. J. D. D'Orsey, aged eighty-two, who for many years did good work as a clergyman, and also as teacher of public speaking. His lectures to the open-air preachers will be remembered by many.—At Warwick Gardens, Kensington, on 27th ult. Rev. R. J. Andrew, the honoured superintendent of the Wesleyan circuit.—At Dublin, Rev. Hy. Lang, residentiary Canon, Christ Church Cathedral.—At Innishowen, co. Donegal, Mr. Robt. Henderson, almost 100 years of age, and a devoted Christian worker.

Appeals.

The King's Weigh House Flower Mission distributed last year 5125 bouquets. A small band of regular helpers take the flowers round each Saturday through the spring and summer. Gifts of flowers, foliage, etc., are much needed. These should arrive on Friday night, or early on Saturday morning, addressed Miss F. C. N. Armbrecht, King's Weigh House School, Thomas-street, Grosvenor-square, W.

Lock Hospital Home.—Mr. J. F. W. Deacon, one of the treasurers of the institution, issues an appeal in which he says:—"Our institution is designed not only to benefit those suffering from disease, but by means of the asylum or 'Rescue Home,' to rescue poor women of whom it may sadly but emphatically be said, 'They are lost.' There is an accumulated debt of £5000, which we are making special efforts to reduce, and contributions will be particularly helpful just now."

Violins for Use in God's Service.—In our lamp-light services in school-rooms and other places, we find that the best method for attracting a congregation is to sing Christian lyrics, accompanied by the violin. The tunes are purely Hindu, the words are purely Christian. By ploughing with their heifer we gain their attention, and often win their hearts for Christ. Most of our evangelists can both sing and play well. It is an important part of their training. Several of them are just now in need of instruments, and it has occurred to me that many readers of The Christian could easily supply that need. In many homes where these lines will be read, there will be lying unused the violins that we require. Christian friends, will you please pack them up, with any odd bows and spare things, and send them at once, addressed to me, Wesleyan Mission House, Bishopsgate-street Within? It does not matter what the quality of them is, we can make use of them all in the highest service.—Yours, fraternally, D. A. Rees, Wesleyan Missionary, Tumker, Mysore Province, India.

Convalescent Home, Epping.—Communications respecting this Home, mentioned in our last issue, should be addressed to Miss Helen Reynolds, Epping New-road, Buckhurst-hill, E.

The Christian.

☞ It is particularly requested that all letters relating to business matters should be addressed to the firm, Messrs. Morgan and Scott, and not to individual members. ## Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portrait and sketch of Fräulein T. von Blücher, a devoted worker among the poor of Berlin.

We commend to other readers who have the needed resources at command, the example of a correspondent in the West of England who writes:—

I take this opportunity of saying how much I appreciate your paper; we send about thirty copies away every week to missionaries abroad, who seem greatly to value this little service.

The letters we are frequently receiving from missionaries assure us of the great help and encouragement they derive from the articles and reports which they read in these columns.

"We do not need to stir up a missionary spirit. It is here already, and seems to have come to stay." So writes a pastor to the missionary who is supported by the daily gifts and daily prayers of the Prayer Union connected with the church over which he presides. This, in our judgment, constitutes one of the chief advantages of this method. We begin to value less those gifts which are drawn from the people by the eloquence of missionary appeals, and to place a higher value upon small daily gifts which are the outcome of a steady and continuous interest in the work. The obligation to do this work is not occasional, but constant. Any method that secures constant and prayerful effort to obey our Lord's last command is deserving of consideration and support.

Dr. Harry Guinness, preaching at Bournemouth recently, in stating the problem of missions, emphasised the fact, so often overlooked, that the Church's responsibility is not for the conversion of the world, but for its evangelisation. The distinction is an important one. It would be impossible to avoid a feeling of absolute despair if it were the Church's work to convert the world. After a century of missionary work, it is estimated that there are ninety-seven millions more heathen to-day than when the era of modern missions commenced. The conversion of three millions of heathen during this century is a matter for devout thanksgiving; but during the same period the population of the heathen world has increased by a hundred thousand. Our work is not the conversion of every individual, but the declaration of the Gospel of God's grace, with the solemn sanction, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."

According to the testimony of a lady at India, one of the chief difficulties the missionary meets in that country is the absence of any deep conviction of sin. The same is true in this country, though it may not manifest itself in the same way. It is encouraging to remember that conviction of sin is not our work, but the work of the Holy Ghost. "He shall convince the world of sin." He may do it by means of our arguments, but more frequently He does it in connection with the uplifting of Christ crucified. Not only for the healing of broken hearts, but for the breaking of hard hearts, there is no theme equal to this. It was when the women beheld Him die that they smote their breasts and returned; and it is when his people shall look upon Him whom they have pierced that they shall mourn. Nowhere does sin appear so "exceedingly sinful" as in the cross.

One of the most noticeable features of Continental news is the frequent reference which is made to peace and to disarmament. The commercial treaties between Russia and Austro-Hungary are said to point to peace. Italy and France are also on better terms. "I have heard it said on excellent authority," writes The Times correspondent, "that this time an understanding between the three Empires would assuredly lead, if not to disarmament, at all events to an indefinite suspension of military preparations." While these things are going on among rulers, Christian men are both praying and taking counsel one of another to bring about a change of this armed peace. Surely the concurrence of these various things may be taken as "a token for good."

Men who are fifty years of age can remember the proclamation of the Crimean War; it is just forty years ago; and to name it is to bring up memories of men and scenes that once were on all lips. Dr. Longstaff takes the opportunity of using the fortieth anniversary for writing in Knowledge a very useful article on "The Great Sanitary Lesson of the Crimean War." After all that we used to hear of Russian aggression and of the necessity for arresting it, when we recall the intense anti-Russian feeling of those days, it seems odd to read that, in the opinion of the late Medical Inspector of the Local Government Board, "the Crimean War was one of the most important agencies concerned in the development of sound sanitary method and practice in this country"; that its sanitary lessons constitute probably the most important legacy left to the nation by that war!

The crusades for the Holy Sepulchre opened up trade with the East, and brought in many Eastern ideas; the American Civil War, undertaken for the maintenance of the Union, brought about emancipation; the Crimean War, in which disease, engendered by ignorance and negligence, killed more than the cannon and the sword, taught us sanitation. What a mercy that God brings good out of evil; but what sane man will pretend that any of these good things might not have been gained without war at all? It is the reductio ad absurdum when you go to war, and end in learning how to lay drain pipes, and ventilate buildings, and dress wounds. In the piping times of peace we could do so. Truly God's ways are best, would we but follow them.

We sincerely trust that The Independent is right when it affirms that there are signs of a reviving interest in doctrinal preaching. It finds evidence of the change in the fact that in various representative journals both editors and contributors are pleading for doctrine; that ministers are giving more attention to it; that congregations are getting tired of the scientific and topic-of-the-times kind of teaching; and that even "practical preaching" is not relished now as formerly. The people want instructive and edifying discourses. If all this be true, and if it means a return to the Word of God in all its fulness, then, indeed, we shall be near to a revival of spiritual life and power. "What is the chaff to the wheat?" The effect of the Word of God is guaranteed to us in blessing; "it shall not return to the Lord void"; but we have no guarantee for any word of man, however clever it may be.

Whilst some who were ostensibly the guardians of a pure faith have been coquetting with the fashions of the day, and avoiding definite teaching, the sacramentarian school have been busy propagating an adulterated faith. No doubt their success has been greatly due to the fact that they have taught doctrine, though much of it has been false. We see, e.g., from The Church Times that the Rector of Staveley has been delivering to the colliers a course of Sunday evening addresses on doctrinal subjects, for which he has been cordially thanked. Working men, and almost all manner of hearers, want something for their minds to dwell on. The Bible is a book which requires the utmost stretch of thought, and well repays all that is bestowed upon it. To neglect its doctrinal parts is to neglect the parts which belong to strong men, and which make strong men, the parts in which the Reformers and the Puritans had a special delight.

The Church Times gives an interesting and suggestive paragraph on "What a Layman can do." It is an account of how a young man, "Catholic-minded and energetic," has succeeded in gathering a congregation and building a church in his spare time. Artisans constituted the class among whom he worked. Being asked by the vicar to superintend the Sunday-schools and conduct services in the Church schools, he consented to do so on condition that he was licensed, that he should conduct the services as he pleased, and that he should be allowed to raise funds for a permanent church. At the end of two years his worst difficulties were over. "A fairly good service was rendered, the Sunday-school doubled, and a congregation got together." "There is probably no other church in England, built and officered by men, where, so far as it can be, full Catholic teaching and practice is carried on, and this, too, by men who can only do so in their overtime." We cannot but admire the zeal, though we grieve that the teaching is "Catholic" rather than Christian. But if all this can be done in spite of the tethering influence of the Catholic idea, how much more might be done by laymen who have discarded that idea, and can work freely?

The Sydney correspondent of The Church Review gives, in his last letter, some plain evidences of the antipathy of his section of the Church to Protestantism. For some three years Rev. M. Archdale, of Sydney, has been trying to establish deaconnesses, but, says the correspondent, although he has had "the sanction of the Synod, the blessing of the Primate, and the full blast of the Protestant trumpet," he has not had much success. On the other hand, the Kilburn Sisterhood, which began work in Australia some sixteen months ago, have "excellent schools in full swing at Sydney and Hobart, have made many friends, and have met with more support than was expected." When the relative claims of deaconesses and sisterhoods were discussed at a Church Congress at Hobart, a large majority of the Congress voted in favour of sisterhoods. The correspondent remarks, "This is a healthy sign of the times. I do think the great Protestant dragon has been much wounded in Australia during the past year or two, and rightly so, for it is this monster which is trying to prevent the spread of the Catholic faith."

The intense hatred of all things Protestant is further illustrated in this correspondent's references to the clergy. After congratulating "a few laymen who had the pluck to speak" at the Congress, because "it is a treat to find an Australian layman leave business or horse-racing and interest himself in things concerning Holy Church," he proceeds:—

> If a man, not too old, is a failure in business, he seeks ordination by commencing as a catechist, and soon after he is a priest. The Bishop of Tasmania informed the Congress that it was his custom to ordain no man unless he was a member of a decent University. When Bishop Barry arrived in Australia, his first care was to try and obtain a better set of clergy. The great majority of Australian parsons who are not from the North of Ireland have been trained at a place in N.S. Wales known as Moore College. The training consists of making long prayers and reading Foxe's "Book of Martyrs."

As to the Congress as a whole, he says it was distinctly a parsons' Congress:

> Laymen were very few, nor is this surprising. If it is difficult to find an intelligent Australian priest, it is very rare to find a layman who is competent to read a paper or make a speech on Church affairs. As a boy it was my custom from time to time to meet folk who would speak of the bad old priest who would not allow the people to read the Bible. In Australia I have met many Anglican parsons who discourage layfolk from reading church books. Is not this Protestant priestcraft?

But if the Catholic idea prevails, how long will laymen have a place either in the Congress or in any other gathering? What will they have to do but quietly submit to the priest?

According to a report by the Society for the Prevention of Blindness, there are about 32,000 blind persons in this kingdom, and of that number two out of three are blind from preventible causes; that is to say, 20,000 of them ought not to be blind. How large an amount of misery might have been spared had these unfortunate persons been properly brought up. Several eminent oculists are of opinion that half of the blindness is due to infantile inflammation; in the United Kingdom 7000 persons are said to be blind from that preventible cause. Among the causes of blindness are living much in impure air, or in air impregnated with animal or vegetable exhalations, with smoke or mineral dust; abuse of alcohol and tobacco, especially the latter, which injures the optic nerve; reading small type; reading in a bad light or while the body shakes; constant looking at small objects. It is not comfortable to reflect what will be the visual condition of a generation of children whose fathers were smokers, and both whose parents pored over small-type novels and newspapers. The large proportion of children who now use glasses should warn us in time.

Rev. A. A. Dignum, of Salem, India, sends to Forward (India) a very effective paper on "The Disabilities of Pariahs," in which he says that the words of Surendra Nath Banarjee are true in a larger sense than the speaker intended, when he declared that the length of time that natives are excluded from their rights and privileges will very much depend on themselves. Mr. Dignum says:—

> There are rights higher than any political rights, the rights which all classes share in virtue of a common humanity, but which have been and are denied to their fellow-men by many of those who declaim eloquently on Congress platforms against the injustice of the Government in withholding certain political rights from the people of the land.

He then points to the disabilities of the Pariahs, and names two glaring instances; one was when a public well was sunk in a garden belonging to a certain union. The well is approached through a narrow gate, over which is a sign-board with the inscription: "Pariahs are not allowed to enter this enclosure, or to draw water from this well." The chairman of the union, when remonstrated with, defended the notice on the ground that "we have to accommodate ourselves to public opinion." Mr. Dignum remarks that "England may have given a tardy recognition to the demand for political enfranchisement, but India still withholds social enfranchisement from thousands of her own sons." The inconsistency must strike home, and the Gospel will win another gain for the oppressed.

The president of Bowdoin College, America, has an article in The Century on the "Unity of the Sects." He says:—

> Our present danger is not that we shall make too much of sects, but that we shall make too little of them. Sects are not the result of either perversity or folly. The fact is, God and his truth are very great; and man and the average mind of man are very small. To grasp the full revelation God has made of Himself in Christ and in his Church is beyond the power of average humanity.

The writer thinks that it is not by obliterating the lines that separate the sects, but by deepening our consciousness of the bond that holds them all together as differing members of one organic body, that we must expect to avoid the evils of sectarianism without destroying the life and vigour, the liberty and originality, the independence and enthusiasm of the Church. How much has temperament, education, association, position in society, to do with these differences? How much is the spirit of sectarianism nourished by living and moving within sectarian lines? A man who never looks over his own garden wall, or goes outside his own garden gate, will not have wide views of the world, or of the government of God in all things. Great religious efforts like temperance, which get us out from our particular places, seem to have a very broadening effect in the direction of charity, without endangering aught of faith.

Lewis F. Stearns says very rightly that the Psalmist's question, "What is man?" is asked anew in every age by every thoughtful soul, and that one satisfactory answer, and only one, has been given to it—that of the Bible.

> It seems to me that, as the centuries pass, we do not advance a single step beyond it. Human science and philosophy have told us much about man. They give us his place in the scale of being, they describe his animal functions, and analyse his mental powers; they trace his history and his achievements; they throw some light upon his probable future. But what man is, they do not tell us. The Bible, on the contrary, does tell us. It takes us up to a high point of view, and shows us man in his relation to God . . . . The secret of man is to be found in God.

No book speaks of human sin with such abhorrence as does the Bible, but none speaks of man with such love, or urges him to seek such a lofty destiny as eternal life.

THE MISSION IN KERAK, MOAB.

The council of the Kerak Mission, at a meeting recently held, owing to difficulties which need not be further alluded to, reluctantly concluded that its work could no longer be carried on satisfactorily, and agreed to dissolve as soon as the necessary arrangements could be made.

Soon after this the council learned that Mr. Lethaby, after the Turks had taken possession of Kerak and forbidden any further missionary labour there, offered the Mission to the Church Missionary Society, who, if they take it over, will probably employ their own agents, leaving the present missionaries to seek employment elsewhere, or to return home. To enable them to do this without loss, whichever course they may adopt, will require a sum of about £60 or £70. As the funds of the Mission are exhausted, the council trust that the friends who have helped in the past will now kindly come forward and provide the comparatively small amount thus required to wind up the affairs of the Mission.

The council regret much that it should be found necessary thus to sever their connection with the Kerak Mission, but after mature deliberation they are satisfied that this course is the only one left to them under the circumstances. The secretary is Rev. George Piercy, 50, Leyspring-road, Leytonstone, London, E.

On behalf of the Council—

F. T. Haig, Chairman.
George Piercy, Secretary.

THE PREMIER OF CANADA has sorely disappointed the temperance party by announcing to a deputation that "no prohibitory bill would be introduced this year," owing to the serious displacement the revenue involved.

CHILDREN'S CONVALESCENT HOME, BRIGHTON.—Miss E. S. Elliott asks us to announce the closing of the Children's Convalescent Home, 7, College-place, Brighton. She states that the furniture, for an object in harmony with the original purpose, would be granted at an exceedingly moderate valuation.

REV. F. H. NAYLOR has published (Brumby & Clarke, Hull, 1s.) a chromograph reproduction of the great temperance picture, "The Doings of Drink," painted by Mr. Robert Summers, "Darlington's Hogarth." "It is," says one writer, "a really marvellous production. The colours strike you so that the horrors of this 'devilish traffic' can never be erased from memory. The picture should be in the hands of every temperance worker and every Christian."

SPANISH AND PORTUGUESE CHURCH AID SOCIETY.—The first of a new series of monthly prayer meetings was held a few days ago at the parish room of St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street. There was an encouraging attendance, including Rev. A. C. Downer, who presided, Rev. E. A. B. Sanders, who gave an impressive address, Revs. E. C. Britton, J. Stock, and E. C. Unmack. Some of the words spoken so stirred the sympathy of a gentleman present, a comparative stranger to the work, that he handed in to the chairman, at the close of the meeting, a substantial subscription in aid of the work.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.—The Foreign Ministers at Pekin have addressed a very strong letter to the Tsung-li Yamen expressing their conviction that the Sungpu massacre and other outbreaks against foreigners in the province of Hupeh are to a great extent, if not entirely, due to the Chinese officials, and they demand—(1) That full protection be given to missionaries, their employés, and native Christians; (2) that natives who have been maltreated for their friendliness to the murdered men be allowed to return to their homes in Sungpu in safety; (3) that the Imperial Edict of 1891 shall be renewed and posted up throughout the various districts in Hupeh. The Ministers, however, do not see their way to set aside the settlement already made by Mr. Bock, the Swedish Consul-General, or to demand a new settlement.—Reuter.

Day of Thanksgiving.

This purpose to remember the years of the right hand of the Most High is surely of God. There is an evil leaven of forgetfulness and ingratitude even in the hearts of redeemed men. "They soon forgat his works" is, alas! true of Israel in all ages. I reckon it a hopeful sign, this feeling after God, this desire to bring to remembrance former mercies. It marked reviving in the soul of the Psalmist, a restoration from despondency, when he cried, "I will remember thee from the land of Jordan, and of the Hermonites, and from the hill Mizar." A desire to praise God, to be thankful unto Him, betokens always the presence and waking of the quickening Spirit. The singing of birds tells us that the winter is past and that the spring has come.

These times of refreshing, from 1859 to 1862, are worthy to be remembered with gratitude and praise. As in the life of each Christian there are special mercies to be noted, and for which special praise is to be offered, so is it with the Church. Moreover, as the life of God in every Christian is one, and yet each has its own special type, so is it with the Church as regards seasons of blessing. The work of God in these years, for which we would give praise, was singular in many things. Chiefly in this: the glory of God the Holy Ghost, and his sovereignty, as regards times, places, and means of working in the salvation of multitudes. No doubt, wherever men are brought to know Christ and Him crucified, unto eternal life, it is the work of the Spirit through the truth; but in comparison with all spiritual movements since then, I shall venture to say there was more of God in it and less of man manifestly seen. Even enemies and onlookers were compelled to say, "This is the finger of God." The work alike in England, Scotland, and Ireland, and America, was of a typical character, which has not since been witnessed.

Among other things special and noteworthy I mark (1) its spontaneity. As the Master taught concerning the growth of the seed, "it shall spring and grow up, he knoweth not how," we may say of this work. A step further back, the work began in many places without any known connection with any human instrumentality. In a few days a whole town became moved with an all-pervading sense of sin and guilt. Ministers and others were summoned to come and preach the Gospel. The people sat in their houses, under deep conviction of sin. The plough remained in the furrow, the fishing-boat in the harbour. Sin-stricken souls were meeting to pray or read the Word, without any to guide them, for in some cases their spiritual guides were either ignorant or opposed to the work.

(2) I note again the Divine sovereignty which was very manifest in the movement. Now it rained in one city and now in another. Here the fleece was wet with the dew of heaven; there the fleece was dry. Why it was so is known only to Him who searcheth the heart and trieth the reins of the children of men. We only know that He who is the Supreme Wisdom has the highest reason for all that He doeth.

(3) I notice again, what we may call, the depth of the work, or if you will, its thoroughness. The arrows of conviction sharply pierced the enemies of the King. I have been present and taken some part in many evangelistic meetings in subsequent years, carried on by beloved and honoured servants of God, and while I must gladly acknowledge that there is good reason to believe that many were savingly converted, on the other hand, the whole work was of a different type, less deep, less solid, less thorough in the submission of the whole man to the whole mind of Christ, and therefore less permanent. Again I do not profess to explain why it was so, why the work of God in the souls of men, at different times, should assume a different type. All one can say is, "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning"; "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight."

(4) Another notable thing was the honour which God put upon his Word. In hundreds of places might have been witnessed, in practical experiment, the truth of the text, "The Word of God is quick and powerful, sharper than any two-edged sword." I have frequently been present when the Word of God was spoken by unlearned men and with a stammering tongue, even by men who were able to do little more than quote the Word, but under the strokes of that Word men might have been seen almost literally to fall; while to the half-doubting inquirer who put the question, "What ails you?" the answer would be, "O, it is my soul, my soul!"

Now, to one looking back upon the past, the contrast between the work of God in those years of grace and in subsequent times is very striking. In the former case, while God had many notable servants who died valiantly, of whom some are still with us, while many more have entered in—there was no eloquent Apollos, no choice vessel, as in the days of Wesley and Whitfield; no calling of meetings, no advertising, no choirs, no elaborate preparations, no "running" a Revival. What then? It was God the Holy Ghost moving whole districts, north, south, east, west, by the breath of his mouth, and with instruments as weak as David's scrip and sling. But let me not be misunderstood in thus speaking. I thank God, with a full heart, for many beloved servants whom He has raised up to do great things for his name during later years; but I wish to point out the contrast between the work of God then and in more recent times, as I think it contains a lesson for all of us.

(5) Once more I note, as characteristic of those years, the manifest and marvellous power of prayer. An illustration of this occurs to me as I write. A company of us went from Huntly, to hold a meeting in a country district. The house was crowded. The preacher was my beloved brother Radcliffe. His address was clear and scriptural, but there was no power; we, his helpers, felt it; he felt it himself, and, stopping short, he said, "We must appeal to God," and as he prayed, the house seemed shaken. The Holy Ghost came down in power, so much so that unable to deal with the inquirers that night, for the whole house became a Bochim, he appointed an inquiry meeting the next morning at eight o'clock, and to the surprise of some the house was filled.

As we look back, beloved friends in London and the children of God everywhere who remember these years of the right hand of God, may well say and sing in the old Scottish version of 68th Psalm:

O God, what time Thou didst go forth
Before thy people's face,
And when thro' the great wilderness
Thy glorious marching was:
Then at God's presence shook the earth,
Then drops from heaven fell,
Then Sinai shook before the Lord,
The God of Israel.
O God, Thou to thine heritage
Didst send a plenteous rain,
Whereby Thou when it weary was,
Didst it refresh again.

But while we look back and offer the sacrifice of praise, let us avoid the danger of looking back and resting in so doing; as the children of decayed families not seldom remain idle and thriftless in their poverty, whilst they boast of their families and of the glory of former years. To praise is glorifying to God while it serves to strengthen faith and fill us with hope in Him who hath done great things for us. Looking back upon the "goings" of our God and our King in the sanctuary these forty years, I feel persuaded that what is needed by the Church of God is, that while we thank Him for all whom He has sent forth into his harvest, and while praying Him to thrust forth many thousands more, to look away from men and to look to Him with whom is the residue of the Spirit; to unite and to continue with one accord in the cry, "Oh that Thou wouldest rend the heaven; that Thou wouldest come down; that the mountains might flow down at thy presence."

The little Revival was greatly used of God to help forward the work of grace in those blessed and fruitful years, and The Christian, the child of The Revival, would surely do a most blessed work if it were owned of God to influence its readers to inaugurate a prayer union, not in form but in fact, to fix the eyes of their faith upon God the Holy Ghost. We hear God saying "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." If the Thanksgiving Service, not only in London but throughout the world, shall eventuate in this, then the dawn of a day of spiritual power and blessing will appear.

Whatever views beloved brethren may hold on the coming of our Lord, none of us believe that the arm of the Lord is shortened, that the power of the Holy Ghost is exhausted, that Pentecost is the greatest thing that He can do, that the flood of those years is the highest tide-mark of blessing which we or our children may hope to see. While at this time we offer the sacrifice of praise, may we have ears to hear our Master say, "Thou shalt see greater things than these."

I should like to say how cordially I join with you in the thanksgiving for the wonderful visitation of our God in blessing to souls that began in 1859.

I am commissioned also by many Christians here to convey to you their heartfelt fellowship in this act of grateful praise; being themselves living witnesses of that heavenly benediction, and owing to it their conversion and preservation to this hour in the service of Christ, and walking with God.

To that time and its certain evidences of God's special presence and power, the exceptional energy of the Holy Ghost, and the saving work of our Lord, we trace the complete change in the religious life of this country in many directions, continuing to this day. It is true that the results were almost confined to Protestants, and that the masses of our people remained outside, amazed spectators, though in heart untouched. But there was probably hardly a family of Protestants in any class of life in the county Kerry wherein one or more were not converted to God.

It is said that on one occasion a large number of the grand jury, when it was dismissed, went their ways preaching the Gospel in different parts of Ireland.

The charge was of course frequently made, then as ever, that no permanent fruits would remain coming from a time of excitement and religious enthusiasm. These predictions have been wholly falsified by the event.

To this day large numbers both at home and abroad are bearing blessed fruit in their lives of godliness, of which the seeds were sown in 1860-1863.

Of course these results are more visible and unquestionable where the converts and others previously Christians were gathered in prayer-meetings, and where Gospel and worship meetings were started and maintained. And yet even without these aids, it is marvellous, after the lapse of the term of a generation, how many remain to bless the days of the Revival.

One sad feature there is at this time specially present to our minds. How many have passed away from the harvest field never to handle the sickle of the Gospel again! They rest and rejoice in the presence of the Lord. We toil on. Last year it was beloved Richard Mahony, of Dromore, one of the most lovable, most devoted, and most gifted of men. This year dear Shuldham Henry, perhaps the most active of all our Irish evangelists at that time. And now Christopher Bland, of Derriquin, whose body, as you read these lines, will be on its way to its lowly seed-bed, to await the trumpet call at the coming of his Lord, of which he always delighted to minister.

There is another cause of sadness, to which I have alluded already. The Roman Catholics were not largely affected then nor since by the Gospel testimony. But we do not look back, nor would we dwell in weakening, debilitating regrets on the shadows of the past; we look out, and on, and upward.

God bless your meeting, and may your songs of praise bring down showers of blessing on your land, and your city, and on Ireland.

Geo. F. Trench.

We referred last week to some of those who were directly or indirectly connected with the Revival of 1859 and the few succeeding years; and for whom we gave God praise. Of course the names mentioned were but representative, they could not be exhaustive. They only included those who have fallen asleep; but every name suggests some other name, and if we mention a few more they will also recall others, perhaps not so publicly known, but very dear to the circle in which they moved.

There was Henry Hull, the young man's friend and helper; a witness of Christ wherever he found a listener; called to his reward in the zenith of his usefulness. John Offord, who grasped the truth in whose saving grasp he delighted to be held; and whose teachings are still treasured by all who remember him.

Henry F. Bowker, another young man's friend, who afterwards became the chairman of the Keswick Convention. Joseph Weatherley, another who sought out young men, and whose hand was in every good work.

P. P. Bliss, a true successor of the sweet Psalmist of Israel, a noble man, a born gentleman, who, with the gracious companion of his life, passed through fire and through water to the Home above.

Dr. Hanna and Thomas Toye, of Belfast, are unforgotten names. Dr. Horatius Bonar, preacher, teacher, and poet, whose hymns are like the sound of living water; and his brother Andrew, who always sought the sunny side of the characters he sketched, and whose Memoir of his early friend, Murray McCheyne, is a classic in Christian biography. Dr. A. N. Somerville, who preached in his evangelistic tours to men of other tongues the wonderful works of God.

Sturdy Robert Paton, who engineered the Moody and Sankey meetings so successfully, and to whom the cause of pure literature owes much.

Lord Cairns, one of England's greatest lawyers, but to whom the Gospel was nearer and dearer than the Law. Samuel Morley, whose name remains a synonym for generous philanthropy.

Richard Mahony and F. C. Bland, Shuldham Henry, and Dr. J. W. Cranage, names fragrant with holy memories, are alluded to elsewhere in our present issue.

Mrs. Barbour, of hospitable Bonskeid, whose constant suffering lent pathos to the records of her pen. Mrs. Merry, who mothered so lovingly in England and Canada the children whom her sister gathered in.

Peter Drummond, founder of the Stirling Tract Enterprise, Samuel Bowly and Edward Whitwell, two venerable men of Temperance, of which the Gospel was the essential part.

And let us not omit two helpers of the work, James Scott, of Glasgow, and Clement Davies, of Wandsworth, who recall the memory of many who in their young manhood and womanhood have been removed to the service of the upper sanctuary.

For each of these and for every other link of the endless chain of thy loving-kindness and tender mercy, we praise Thee, O God.

For the wheels of thy wondrous providence, so high that they are dreadful, with which thy redeemed living creatures are mysteriously united ("for the Spirit of the living creature is in the wheels"), we adore Thee, O God, who art above all blessing and praise. Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem; praise thy God, O Zion.

SONGS.

Psalm cxix. 54.

Songs of rest for the weary,
Songs of hope for the sad,
Songs of faith for the tried ones,
Songs of joy for the glad.

Songs of peace for the warriors,
Songs of light for the tomb,
Songs of health for the sick ones,
Songs of day for the gloom.

Songs of love for the lonely,
Songs of strength for the faint,
Songs of home for the outcast,
Songs of Heaven for the saint.

POST OFFICE ORPHAN HOMES.

The annual meeting of this institution was held on Thursday night, at the Y.M.C.A. in Aldersgate-street, Mr. Spencer Walpole (secretary G.P.O.) in the chair. During the past year twenty-four children had been placed on the fund, and twenty-two time-expired children had left, making 132 children now under the care of the institution. The chairman said that when he came into the Post Office a few months ago he expected to find that a great department of the State intimately connected with the work of administration displayed systematic organisation, but he was not prepared to find in the ranks of the postal service so much was voluntarily done to promote the interests and to alleviate the distress of the children of those unhappily removed from the service by death. He thought their system of boarding-out was far preferable to building great schools. Many of the girls were sent into domestic service, whilst the boys entered the Postal service.

HOME CRIPPLES.—Mr. C. L. Boyer gave on Monday, at the noon prayer meeting, Aldersgate-street, some account of the work he is carrying on among helpless and painstricken East End prisoners. He laid special emphasis on home visitation, the need for going after the lost, and the importance of making these afflicted little ones feel that "somebody cares for them." At the close of the address, two crippled little fellows sang "I have a Father in the Promised Land," after which Mr. Richard Weaver followed with a few hearty and vigorous words.

AFTER FIFTY YEARS.

A remarkable address was delivered by M. Berthelot on Friday last in Paris before the Syndical Chamber of Chemical Product Manufacturers, on "The World in the Year 2000." He opened by saying "he looked to chemistry for deliverance from present-day social evils and for the possibility of realising the Socialists' dreams, that is if a spiritual chemistry could be discovered to change human nature as deeply as chemical science could modify the globe."

This forms a not inapt introduction to the very different views expressed by General Booth in a recent interview with a representative of the Westminster Gazette. The journalist asks:—

"I want to know how the world has been wagging, from the Salvation Army point of view, for the last fifty years. But it is not fifty years, is it, since the Army was started?"

"In one way, yes, for it is fifty years since I was saved, but only twenty-nine since the actual Army came into existence. But my work began as soon as I was saved."

"Well, then, General, has the world become a little better since you were what you called saved?" The General jumped up from where he had thrown himself into an armchair, laughed aloud, and said, restlessly tramping up and down the room: "There you are. You've just hit it. Your expression, 'what you call saved,' just indicates the change. Fifty years ago people weren't afraid of talking about being saved. Nowadays it's bad taste, and you worldly people think it foolish even to use the expression. No; the world has not grown better since I was what I call saved. There was a little more real religion in the world then; people had more faith; they prayed more, and believed more in the efficacy of prayer. There certainly is more civilisation and there is more humaneness, but not more religion. If they would only believe more in the old-fashioned way of praying!"

"But does not an increase of civilisation and of humaneness make for righteousness?"—"I doubt it. As far as I can see this progress does not make people one whit happier. It only makes them race and hurry and hasten after more worldly goods. Fifty years ago a man took pride in his handiwork; it was his greatest pleasure to see that what he did was done well. Now, it is not the work he cares for, but the wages. Let the work be ever so badly done, that makes no difference to him, so long as he makes plenty of money."

"Next to the falling away of the old faith, General Booth, where do you see the most striking change when you look back over the last half-century?"—"In the amusements of the people. The rate at which gambling has increased is almost incredible. Where one man gambled and betted fifty years ago, a thousand do it now. And at that time it was only on the Derby, and later on, when the University Boat Race was instituted, on boat-race day, that people betted; now there is not a game or pastime that they don't bet on. Take football, cricket, and all the rest of the good old games. You do not go to watch them because you take an interest in the skill of the players, but because you have betted on the success of one of the contending parties. This is the same among all classes. The rich and poor alike do it.

"Again, among the middle and higher classes there is an enormous increase in all forms of immorality, and I am firmly convinced that modern writers—yes, journalists too, to some extent; at least some of them—are responsible for this. The writers of fiction are the greatest offenders. They have now got so far as to put a premium on immorality; their heroes are simply people who go in for 'irregularities' in morals. This is also why the average woman is inferior—morally, mind you, not intellectually—to the woman of a generation or two ago. She is less modest, less innocent, and her faith in the Divine is dimmer and fainter, whereas formerly she was better and more religious than man.

"There is, however, a substitute for the old religion. The devil himself has presented it to humanity. It is the spook. Let me explain. As human nature is constituted, it must look up to something supernatural. Now, the devil does not want it to do this. Therefore, he invents the spook. The spook is sufficient for the moment. Hence, just now there is less true, simple religion, less faith, and less of the childlike trust which made people happy formerly."

The Thanksgiving Meetings.

Reminiscences of 1859.

At this time, when many are looking forward to the great meetings of Wednesday, April 11th, it seems to bring before me a scene which took place on Tuesday night, September 20th, 1859, at the Boys' Refuge, Great Queen-street. Canon Samuel Garratt, in his letter of this week, is quite right on the subject of the sudden manifestation of the Holy Spirit in London, in 1859. There was nothing of human preparation for the marvellous visitation and the results which it pleased God to give us. I believe I am right in saying that the first instance in London of what is called the Revival, was seen and experienced in that place and building.

This is the simple history. I was at that time a Sunday evening teacher. The Refuge boys were gathered into classes in a large room below, which was used during the week as the shoemaker's shop. Upstairs was what we should call the principal large room where the great meetings were held. The children from the streets used to come in from Drury-lane, St. Giles, etc., and a splendid Ragged school (boys and girls) was held as well. I happened to go to hear the late John Graham, of Craven Chapel, tell at a week-night service of what he had seen in Ireland, where many were converted to God; and of the singular manner in which people were affected outwardly. He said that in schools it was the same, with the children; the Holy Spirit working mightily, leading those who were filled to confess their sins with bitter weeping, while others sang and shouted for joy.

I told the boys in my class about the wonderful work, and how blessed it would be if they all should be converted should it please God to send his Holy Spirit in this way to the Refuge. One little fellow in my class seemed very much touched, and said, 'Teacher, why don't you write to Mr. Graham and ask him to come and tell us? Perhaps we might all be made good and be converted as well as the Irish children." I thought a while, and then asked the boy if I should say that he wished me to write in the name of the others; to this he gladly consented. At the close of the school I mentioned the matter to Mr. Wood, as Mr. Williams was away for his holidays. Mr. Wood was delighted, and I wrote accordingly to Mr. Graham. The answer you will read.* I let Mr. Wood know at once and you will see what he said.† Before Mr. Graham's coming, the teachers who could gather together had earnest and believing prayer.

On the Tuesday the girls came from the Refuge; the Ragged School children sat at the rear, with their teachers; we were all there. Mr. Graham came in with Mr. Reid, a deacon (since gone), and another friend, Mr. Kendell (also gone). As soon as they mounted the platform and his name was given out, Mr. Graham quietly said, "Let us pray." The silence was something extraordinary. When he rose he gave out his text: "I write unto you, little children, because your sins are forgiven for his name's sake." As he spoke I trembled from head to foot. We were brought in a few moments into the immediate presence of a holy God. One little fellow in the front cried out, "My heart will break; Jesus, forgive me"; down on his face he fell, weeping. It was a wonderful scene. Some of the teachers said they were not converted, and gave themselves to the Lord. It was a baptism of fire; deep conviction of sin, and a receiving of pardon with joy. Mr. Graham went among the children; he wept for joy. We could scarcely separate. Early in the morning I came home, filled with wonder, love, and praise.

The boy who asked me to write was definitely saved; some of the very worst lads were completely transformed. I believe a great number among the Ragged School children were led by the Lord to trust Him. I cannot think of that wondrous time without the deepest emotion. It was Jesus Himself who passed by. As Mr. Garratt puts it: "It was the wind of the Divine Spirit, which, even more manifestly than it usually does, blew where it listed. The work, as far as I know, generally closed as suddenly as it began, but the effect remains." At that time Mr. Garratt's church was round the corner of the Refuge, and he saw something of the work.

One thing happened which I believe grieved the Spirit. The place was inundated with curious visitors, who came to see and hear, having been told of the wonderful visitation of God; that marred the work a good deal. We never had such a manifestation again, but still the real conversion did last, and for many years I followed the young believers in their lonely ways. God kept them safe, and used them to bless others.

I am very sorry I cannot be with you on April 11. My last meeting in England before sailing for Australia is on that night. I trust you will have times of great blessing. Gipsy Smith.

---

I am sorry to say that I am not allowed at present to attend any public meetings, so that I cannot take any part in the proposed thanksgiving meeting. J. F. Kitto.

St. Martin's Vicarage, W.C.

Most sincerely do I sympathise with the great object of that gathering, and earnestly pray that the Divine blessing may be largely enjoyed, and that it may be a new departure in the Christian work of London. J. H. Wilson, D.D.

I fear I cannot attend the meetings. What a time of blessing these five-and-thirty years have been! London was a lonely place for a young Christian in the early "sixties." To-day the danger is lest men should go with the stream and profess what they do not believe. R. Anderson.

Linden Gardens, W.

Having laboured in the Gospel for the last thirty years in the East of London, especially in connection with the "Shoreditch Bird Fair," and after four years in the Great Revival in the West of Scotland, I cannot help saying, "What hath God wrought!" While we have much to pray for, we have more to praise and thank Him for.

Stoke Newington. J. Knowles.

April 11 is the day before the departure of our boys for Canada. Mr. Fegan may be going with them, but in any case he will be too much occupied to be present at the meetings. He has heard of them with much interest and thankfulness, and trusts that they will usher in another time of refreshing and blessing through the presence of the Lord for our great city. F. D. Hollaway.

Southwark.

For many weeks I have been ill, and shall not have the pleasure of being present at the Thanksgiving Meeting, but I rejoice that it is to be held. It is over forty years since I commenced Mission work in Rosemary-lane, Ratcliff Highway. The late Dr. Habershon and I worked together in Darby-street Ragged School in the days of Mr. Jackson, the Thieves' Missionary. M. H. Hodder.

It is a great regret to me that owing to my being out of health, and compelled to take a period of rest, I cannot be present at the meetings on Wednesday next. I earnestly hope and pray that not only these meetings may be full of blessing to those who attend them, but that they may be the means of great spiritual stimulus to all the churches and religious organisations which are at work for the spiritual benefit of the East-end of London.

Victoria Park-road. T. B. Stephenson.

No one has more abundant cause than myself to offer up a joyful song of praise to God—in bringing me out of "The Sussex Hall" prayer-meeting in "the sixties" and sending me forth to labour for Him, first for a few years in Bethnal Green, in association with dear George Kelsey and others, and since then for permitting me to begin and carry on services amongst the young women in the City for eighteen years without a break. Praise the Lord!

Eleanor Fisher.

Though I cannot be with you as to the body, I shall remember the hours when you are together for praise and thanksgiving and prayer, and seek in spirit to participate. I trust that the gatherings may be full of the manifested presence of God, and that great things may follow the grateful remembrance of mercies received. We are tolerably diligent beggars, but poor thankers; you are avoiding this. The King, to whom so much thanksgiving is due, will doubtless be pleased that the trade of begging, good as it is, has at all events a rival in that of praise. W. Evans Hurndall.

I am sorry that, in consequence of other pressing engagements, it will not be possible for me to be present at the thanksgiving meetings. As one who has only lately left East London, after nearly thirteen years' happy and (through God's grace alone) not unsuccessful work at and around the Episcopal Jews' Chapel, Palestine-place, I should have esteemed it a great privilege to have been with you in person, as I shall be in spirit. I thank God that He has led you to convene the meetings. Surely it is a token for good—a token that He is about to do greater things still for East London.

Lambeth, S.E. J. B. Barraclough.

I am desired by Mr. J. Shrimpton to say how pleased he would have been to be present had his health allowed. For some years past he has only had Praise and Thanksgiving Meetings in connection with his work (Homes for Working Girls in London), believing that they are far more helpful to all Christian service than the formal annual meetings held from time to time. If the issue of your meetings is to induce Christian workers generally to remodel their annual festivities only for the praise and glory of God and less for the exaltation of men, this would mark the commencement of a new era in the privileges and usefulness of Christian service. Herbert Greenfield.

Westminster.

Eighteen years ago, at the time of my conversion, the East-end opened a new world to me. Visits to the Homes of Industry, to George Yard, and the Strangers' Rest, where Mr. Reginald Radcliffe pleaded the world's needs, were an inspiration. Later, the Lord gave the word, through dear Miss Clara Lowe, which sent me on his service to South Africa, and there, in his strength, work was begun, one of its beginnings being the Sailors' Rest.

It was an East-end worker who went out to superintend the Rest, and who gathered in the first-fruits of the work there. Now we number seventy workers scattered over three colonies in South Africa. M. S. Osborn-Howe.

Wimbledon.

I rejoice that God has put it into your heart to call believers together, and although I am unable to come to town for the meetings, I shall make a special point of calling on the people to join in praise with you, as I hope many others will do throughout the country. I shall read publicly parts of the article in last week's Christian, detailing subjects for which we praise our God. The article has filled my soul to-day as I read it, for I knew nearly every one of the holy men named in it, and something of all the wonderful movements of these years.

I think, too, there should be special thanksgiving for the work that has been done by The Revival and The Christian, and that you have not failed or turned aside from the truth in those papers through all these years.

I thank God that I have been kept in touch with all these great agencies, by means of The Christian. Oscar T. Snelling.

Swansea.

The wave of blessing which swept over us in London from 1859, may well call on us to remember the Lord's goodness with thankful hearts, and to call us afresh to earnest prayer for the renewings of the Holy Ghost at the present time.

How sweet the memory of prayer in Crosby Hall and meetings in George-street, Soho, Marylebone, Hanover-square, Sussex Hall, John-street Chapel, and the all-night prayer-meetings, from nine in the evening to five in the morning, and the blessing the Lord gave us in the theatres, and extension of work through the country.

We can acknowledge God's goodness in preserving to us beloved Mr. Radcliffe, who was so much used in initiating many of these movements, and who is now encouraging us to spread out into the wide

I am so delighted that you have had it laid upon your heart to convene a gathering of old friends for special praise and thanksgiving for blessing received, as the outcome of that marvellous year of revival, 1859. Every recollection of those joyous days thrills my inmost soul. What a true delight it was then to preach the Word under the mighty power of the Holy Ghost, sinners everywhere crying for mercy, and all God's people in the blaze of enthusiasm! It was at this season, January, 1860, that my precious Lord put it into my heart to start the work of the St. Giles' Christian Mission; to his dear name be all the glory.

How I ardently long to be with you, but I am too weak to attempt a journey to London. May I ask you to mention to my beloved comrades in the fight my oneness with them in their gladsome songs of devout praise? May our covenant-keeping God send upon all assembled a new baptism of power, and soon usher in another time of delightful awakening! Geo. Hatton.

Tunbridge Wells.

Thirty-four years ago this month I commenced work in Long Alley, and some awful times we had, yet some blessed ones. We had indoor and outdoor meetings in many of the courts now pulled down.

I look back to those years with joy of soul. There were but few workers then compared to what there are now. In that district eight out of every nine men said they were infidels—tailors, shoemakers, and French polishers, and all working at home; yet the Gospel of the grace of God laid low before Him, some of these crying for mercy.

At that time William O'Neill was at New Broadstreet Chapel, Dr. Alexander Fletcher at Finsbury Circus Chapel. Alderman Challis was close at hand ready to help. Nearly all I then knew, earnest in the Master's service, are either now with Him, or waiting for Him (I am referring to that neighbourhood). Meetings at Crosby Hall were blessed to many while the daily prayer meetings were held there. Never shall I forget the services at the Standard Theatre on a Sunday evening, crowded with ragged men and women. Who shall say how many were there saved of the Lord?

It was a real joy to my soul to see a desire to recall the blessed times when God wrought so powerfully in love and mercy in 1859. Thanksgiving, indeed, is becoming, for the gracious way in which He stirred up his people and awakened and converted those who knew Him not at these times; much of the present work was started then, as we all must feel.

It seems to me, also, that our thanksgiving should be made with much confession of failure, and sorrow for the poor and weak way we have maintained that which was then committed to our keeping. But I recognise in this movement a fresh awakening to the necessity of acknowledging God, by the Spirit's power, as the only mover, guide, and sustainer of real work. It will be such real pleasure to meet you and dear Reginald Radcliffe, with whom I remember such happy periods of communion and blessing thirty-four years ago. This alone—viz., the meeting in Christian love of those who remember the special and universally extended power of God in those days—will bring showers of blessing, "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace." I look for much blessing. A. B. Hawes.

The present state of my health precludes my being present bodily, though I need scarcely say I hope to be present in spirit, and so to blend with the many in adoring praise to God for the great things He has graciously done.

Allow me to suggest one matter presented strongly to my mind: that is, the offering of Thanksgiving to the Lord for The Revival, and for its successor, The Christian. I fear the great indebtedness to the Lord for these periodicals on the part of a considerable number of workers is not considered as it might be. Surely they have been the means of provoking to love and good works on the part of very many; and have had the happy effect of cheering and stimulating in their service for the good of precious souls. One feature alone (out of many) demands praise to the Lord. I note how helpful The Christian has been and is, from the fact that the large sum of £4619 16s. 2d. has been noted in its columns as received from some of its readers for various labours of love during the first three months of this year. May the meetings indeed prove a sacrifice of Praise of a sweet savour acceptable unto God through the meritoriousness of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Ryde, I.W. W. J. Lewis.

I have been watching the articles in The Christian with great interest, relative to the thanksgiving meetings about to be held. Those of this week are especially touching to me, bringing back with great vividness those times of blessing of which my beloved husband partook so largely, and was then so graciously used of God for blessing to others. I am not sure whether he was at the special meeting on January 6 (I rather think the reopening of his school may have interfered), but in the autumn of 1859 he had called together the ministers of various denominations and instituted a daily prayer meeting which was continued for some years; and in answer to those prayers, a wondrous revival broke out in 1861-2 and following years. Some of those dear Christian workers who remain unto this present will remember those seasons—Mr. Harry Nisbet, Mr. Wm. Greene, Mr. George Thomas (of Bath), Richard Weaver, Joshua Poole, and others; and also the erection of our mission hall in 1862, from which streams of blessing have continued to flow, praise God! which we shall never gauge here below.

I longed to ask you if, amid the praises which will ascend, you could mingle some for the blessings vouchsafed to us in Wellington, and for the beloved one raised up to be so largely instrumental in making channels, as it were, for those streams.

Wellington. Lucy A. Cranage.

Although only a youth, I can well remember the gracious influences of the Revival of 1859 and 1860. Some of the friends of the movement secured the use of our Old Seamen's Chapel, Ratcliff Highway, for special meetings, and among others, the addresses of Messrs. Harrison, Old, and Jeffcock were made a blessing to many seamen.

Limehouse, E. Geo. Jno. Hill.

I heartily join with you in the spirit of your thanksgiving service.

There is a spot where saints unite,
And saint meets saint in heavenly light.

Let there, then, be a day of thanks and praise, unitedly and individually, remembering the grace of Him who has said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

APRIL ELEVENTH, 1894.

Hark! from happy, loving voices,
Sounds of rapturous praise arise,
To the Source of every blessing,
High enthroned above the skies.
Hearts united, souls uplifted,
Praises bind all hearts in one,
For the succour, help, and guidance,
All his gracious hands have done.

Praise ascendeth; lips are joyful,
Praising for the glorious past—
Souls converted, saints encouraged,
Blessings free, and full, and vast.
Take, Almighty, Abba, Father—
Take our thanks, our hearts, our all,
As with glowing souls, united,
Sweetly we thy grace extol.

Dr. Reynolds enters heartily into the spirit of your programme, and regrets that the state of his health compels him to restrict himself (at present) very much to imperative duties in the College.

A New Translation

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

By Richard Francis Weymouth, D.Lit., M.A., Fellow of Univ. Coll. Lond., Editor of the Resultant Greek Testament.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

7. 2 Make room for us in your hearts. There is not one of you whom we have wronged, not one to whom we have done harm, not one over 3 whom we have gained any advantage. I do not say this to imply blame; for, as I have said above, you have a place in our heart to die
4 or to live with you. Great confidence have I in you: very loudly do I boast of you. I am filled to the full with the comfort: I overflow with the joy amidst all our affliction.
5 For even after our arrival in Macedonia we could get no relief such as human nature craves. We were greatly harassed; conflicts
6 without, fears within. But He who comforts the depressed, even God, comforted us
7 by the coming of Titus; and not by his coming only, but also by the comfort which he had felt on your account, and by the report he brought of your longing affection, your lamentation, your jealousy on my behalf, so that I rejoiced more than ever.
8 For if I did give you pain by that letter, I do not regret it, though I did regret it. I see that that letter, even though for a time it gave
9 you pain,— Now I rejoice, not in your grief, but because the grief led to repentance; for yours was a sorrow sent by God, in order that you might receive no detriment in any-
10 thing from us. For sorrow sent by God produces repentance leading to salvation, a repentance not to be regretted; but the sorrow of 11 the world finally produces death. For mark the effects of this very thing, your having sorrowed with such sorrow, what earnestness it has called forth in you, what eagerness to clear yourselves, what indignation, what alarm, what longing affection, what jealousy, what meting out of justice! Most completely have you wiped away reproach from yourselves in 12 the matter. Therefore, though I did write to you, it was not to punish the offender, nor to avenge him who had suffered the wrong, but in order that your earnest feeling on our behalf might be demonstrated to yourselves before God.
13 It is on this account that we are comforted; and in addition to this our comfort we have been filled with all the more intense joy at Titus's joy, because his spirit has been set at 14 rest by you all. For however I have boasted to him about you, I have not been put to shame; but as we have in all things spoken the truth to you, so also our boasting to Titus
15 has turned out to be the truth. And his strong and tender affection is all the more drawn out towards you when he recalls to mind the obedience of all of you, how with timidity and nervous anxiety you welcomed him.
16 I rejoice in my absolute and cheerful confidence in you.

---

6 Comforted: or, has comforted, if Wieseler is right in conjecturing, from the Apostle's change of tone, that Titus arrived just when the early part of this ch. vii. was being written.

8 I see: some authorities prefix for.—At the end of the verse supply, yet had a salutary effect. Other instances of such "aposiopesis" are to be seen in Exod. xxxii. 32, Mark vii. 11 (A.V.), Lu. xix. 42, Jno. vi. 62, Acts xxiii. 9.

13 Has been set at rest: implying and is at rest: see note on i. 19.

A PIONEER IN THE FAR WEST.

By Rev. A. R. Buckland, M.A.*

I do not propose to tell in detail the story of John Horden's work. He was consecrated first Bishop of Moosonee in 1872; he died suddenly in January, 1893, amongst his own people. He went as the one missionary on all the shores of the great bay; he left it dotted with mission stations. He began with a few Christian Indians; he lived to see heathenism renounced by almost all, and many of the Esquimaux also reached.

But despite Selwyn and Patteson, and Hannington and Valpy French, a bishop is sometimes deemed to have an easy life. Let us see how Horden fared. No one ever said less of his own hardships than he; yet they were stern enough. In common with the Europeans and natives, the missionary was largely dependent for food and clothing and the few simple comforts of life in the Far West upon the arrival of the annual ship. Every year the anxiety was great as its time drew near, and equally great the joy on the ship's appearance. Every year, too, much depended on the coming of the geese, for, salted down, they supplied food for many months. Want and starvation were familiar in most winters; epidemics scarcely less common.

Horden's letters show us a many-sided life. Now he is meeting the Indians as they bring in their furs, hearing of their sorrows and joys since last they met, reproving, rebuking, exhorting. Anon he is by the bedside of a dying Christian, hearing such words of faith, and peace and thankfulness, as repay a life of toil. Presently he is planning a tour of 1500 or 2000 miles, when "his lordship" will sleep a good deal in the open, and fare as the Indians do. Then he is nursing the sick and restoring hope in the face of an epidemic, which has taken courage as well as strength from all. Again, he is going steadily over his translation of the Bible, that he may leave it as perfect as possible before he is called away. He is a bishop, but he can "knit as well as any old women," manage a birch-bark canoe, turn the legs for a table, help the smith at the forge, cook his own dinner, compose the hymns for an ordination service, put them into type, and print them for his people. Of complaint—save that he cannot get all the help he wants for the mission—there is none; of thankfulness and contentment much.

Writing home in June, 1884, the Bishop gave a picturesque account of a five-days' journey inland to a station, Long Portage House, up the Moose River. Though in the month of June, the weather was cold; there was rain and snow, and a long canoe voyage was no child's play.

"Painfully poling or tracking-up" the canoe in the various rapids, or paddling between banks heaped to thirty feet high with blocks of ice, camping out at night, "his lordship" sped on, that at the end of the journey he might minister at the most to a handful of people. They gathered, when he came, in the trader's sitting-room, and then, when the baptisms, the confirmations, and the other services were over, the bishop set off once more for Moose. In the five days' journeying out they had met but one family; on the way back they came upon a body of Indians. There was a halt at once, a service of three hours' duration was begun upon the spot, and then the bishop's little band went into camp at 10.30 p.m., to be up and in the canoe again at four.

As nearly all the Indians in the diocese of Moosonee have now become Christians, we shall be quite prepared to hear them denounced in some quarters as persons of little independence or resolution. A single fact may usefully be introduced here. In 1886 the Bishop records the death of a native Christian, "only an Indian," but one whose story "might well read a good lesson to many a more highly civilised member of human society."

Eliza married a hunter. There came a hard winter; two of the children died of starvation; she and her husband grew more and more exhausted. It was seventy miles to the nearest point at which aid could be obtained. But Eliza tied her two surviving little ones on a sledge, and, preceded by her husband, set off to that point. Soon the husband's strength gave out. Then Eliza lit a fire, extemporised a shelter, placed her husband within it, and drawing the sledge behind her, pushed on for Albany. Her strength held out till she reached it, then she fell unconscious. When she revived, help was at once sent off to the husband, but they only found a frozen corpse. The children survived, and, like their heroic mother, grew up devout, consistent Christians.

* From The Heroic in Missions (1s. 6d. Isbister & Co.), a brightly-written and readable volume designed to show how far removed from weakly sentimentality is missionary enterprise. The veil here drawn back reveals the stern hardihood, the dogged perseverance, and the indomitable courage called forth by the exigencies of a missionary's life. The stirring portrayal embraces such heroes as Bishop Hannington and his martyred flock in Uganda, James Gilmour, Alexander Mackay, J. A. Robinson, Graham Wilmot Brooke, and others, who have sealed their work with their life's blood. Such men have won fame in earth and heaven. Their work goes on. It cries for successors. Mr. Buckland voices their plea with trumpet call.

THE PRINCETON PULPIT.

In the United States the Princeton Pulpit is a synonym for orthodox theology. At the invitation of some gentlemen in Philadelphia, who felt that the time had arrived for bringing before the people, in a philosophic but plain way, the defence of the great fundamental truths of Christianity, both as an antidote to prevailing doubt and as a reply to current inquiry, distinguished theologians of Princeton have given a course of lectures on Revealed Religion. Under the title of "The Princeton Pulpit in Philadelphia" such a course was begun on Sunday afternoon, January 28, and continued on successive Sabbaths for twelve weeks. They are given in Wylie Memorial Church, near the centre of the city.

The lecturers included President Patton and Professors J. O. Murray, W. H. Green, J. D. Davis, and G. Vos. In an article in the New York Independent, Dr. Burdett Hart says: "This reaffirmation of the fundamental truths of Christianity has awakened wide interest, has strengthened confidence in Biblical doctrine and in Christian faith, has stimulated inquiry and investigation on the part of unbelievers. Its direct influence is to checkmate the attacks of destructive criticism. There is revival power in it, and Pentecostal conversions may be expected. These able defenders of the faith once for all committed unto the saints object to no fair criticism; they invite and encourage it; but they demand that it shall be fair and thorough, and not an acceptance or reproduction of the conclusions of known enemies of Christianity."

SHALL I GO?

There are two blunders made by many as they take into consideration their duty towards the foreign work; that certain disadvantages are an absolute impediment, and that certain advantages indicate assured success. Many a man has gone and proved a mighty worker about whom friends, officers of boards, and associates have shaken their heads in doubt when he entered the field. Not a few in whom have centred the brightest hopes have returned a comparative if not an absolute failure. So some say, "The foreign field is something I cannot consider for a moment; I am not adapted to it, and could not make a success in it. The duty before me is to utilise myself as best I can, to go where I can employ my talents to the best advantage." This is wrong. The foreign field is beyond the consideration of no man; the question is not of success or failure in any man's use of himself, but in God's use of him.

Upon their emphasis of this truth will depend, in a great degree, the influence of missionary conventions, and upon its recognition by those who attend will depend in no small degree the success of the work during the next generation. If to the pioneers of half-a-century ago there was given an opportunity whose grandeur we are only now beginning to realise, to those who are called to carry on their work are given opportunities not less valuable or important. These belong, however, not merely to those on the field. In a scarcely less degree they are the privilege of those who, remaining at home, hold the churches here true to the duty laid upon them. Missions need missionary pastors at home not less than missionary workers abroad, men of equal faith, equal devotion to the one great work.

Shall I go? That is the question that each man must decide, first in the secret of his own heart, then in counsel with friends and the authorised representatives of the churches. Upon the spirit rather than the form of the decision will depend the future success. If it be that of absolute consecration, readiness to go anywhere or stay anywhere, according to the leading of God's Spirit, there will be no mistake.—N.Y. Independent.

AN OLD LETTER.

It has often been said that history repeats itself That it does so, even in the Church, the following letter, written by Joachim Neander to his pupils, will prove:—

"Dear friends, beloved and longed-for in our Saviour, and (if ye still walk, as I trust, in Christ's footsteps) acceptable brethren—The affection which I bear to you all, and the love of Christ require that even in absence I do not forget you.

You have, by the power of Jesus Christ, become the first-fruits of my labours in much infirmity. It was God's will that I should spend some years with you at Heidelberg, that I might show you the way to Heaven. Honoured brethren, I mean you all, my five dearly-beloved discipulos, remain steadfast in those things whereof your youthful minds have been convinced. Zealously follow Jesus in his world-despising, self-denying life; so shall He be your glory, your crown, your shield, your exceeding great reward.

"Oh, in the name of the Lord, and as you value your salvation, I pray you love not the world, nor the things thereof!

"Its 'fashion,' as Paul calls it, passeth away. Oh my dear friends, consider this early! Remember your Creator, and flee the pleasures of youth, so keenly pursued, alas! at Universities; but follow after righteousness, faith, love, and peace, with all who call on the Lord from a pure heart."

"Specially, I pray you to avoid the useless academical discussions which ensnare so many young students. Not in vain says Paul, 'Foolish and unlearned questions avoid.' Full well he knew that they 'engender strife.' Dear brethren, you will often see this in your experience of life. Study the Scriptures, the book of nature, and your own hearts. Contemplate the exceedingly plain and simple, yet most holy, life of our great Immanuel, and remember this, all of you, 'He who doeth the will of God abideth for ever.' Grace be with you all, dear brethren! Read each of you this letter, written by the loving hand of a brother who earnestly desires your salvation, and with whom you are well acquainted. "Joachim Neander.

"Düsseldorf, March 21, 1675."

The letter was like the man—simple, earnest, godly. But it is through his hymns that the pastor-schoolmaster is, perhaps, best known. One of these, "Lobe den Herren, den mächtigen König der Ehren," is generally used in Germany on the occasions of public thanksgiving. It is to be heard every hour from the chimes of the Garrison-Kirche of Potsdam, its beautiful melody being its composer's best memorial.

When dying, as it is supposed of the plague, he greatly desired to depart, and a thunderstorm of great violence coming on as he neared the end of his pilgrimage, he said:—

"I hear my Father's voice; would that it were his chariot-wheels coming for me!" They brought him nourishment, of which he was too weak to partake, but even on his death-bed his only thought was of his Saviour. He said:—

"It is not only 'taste,' but 'taste and see that the Lord is good'; and though I cannot 'taste' this food, I can 'see' it."

As his last hour on earth drew near, his doctor made inquiry as to how he felt; he replied in a clear voice:—

"Never so ready as now,—near have I been, but this is more than nearness; friend, I am all but there!"

He heard them singing one of his own hymns entitled: "The Ground of Salvation," and as they sang the verse—

> I am thy God, thy highest good,
> Thy debt to Me is paid;
> The blood oft scorned—that precious blood!—
> Hath full atonement made—

Neander said: "Now the Lord has made out my reckoning;" then, lifting his eyes heavenward, he added with difficulty:—"The mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed, but my kindness shall not depart from thee." And, smiling upon those around him, he closed his eyes, sighed, and went to God. M. B. G.

THE WARDEN OF BERMONDSEY SETTLEMENT has just had the offer on lease, at a greatly reduced rent, of a notorious public-house which a well-wisher has bought, sacrificing the licence. It is intended to utilise the house as a temperance club for the benefit of dock labourers.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 15.—ISAIAH XLVII.

The Degradation of Babylon (1-7).—Babylon was in her pride when these words were uttered, and the Medes an obscure tribe of mountaineers. But she is here described as a beautiful maiden, reduced from a magnificent throne to the extremities of degradation. Cyrus transferred the seat of empire from Babylon to Shushan; the splendid city, therefore, soon fell into ruins. (2) The millstones were made of convex and concave stones, corn being ground between them by female slaves (Job. xxxi. 10). In the East the head of a woman is the seat of modesty. "Uncover thy locks" should be rendered "Remove thy veil"; the extreme of indignity. The final reference of the verse is to the enforced fording of rivers as a slave, or as part of a great body of emigrants. (3) "I will not make truce with any man" (R.V.), i.e., there would be no means of averting the terrible disasters here predicted. (4) What a contrast is God's treatment of his own. Lowth supposes this verse to be the exclamation of a chorus breaking in with praises. (6) Babylon had fulfilled his purpose against his people; but with so much cruelty that they could not be allowed to escape condign punishment. (7) The ungodly think that there will be no hindrance in the way of sensual gratification, and therefore do not lay to heart God's warnings, which He does not fail to give. Oh, that men would consider their latter end!

A Solemn Warning (8-15).—Pleasure-seeking and carelessness are closely allied. (9) Widowed of its king, and childless through the loss of its people, Babylon should be suddenly and unexpectedly destroyed. "In a moment," i.e., in a single night, it fell beneath Cyrus. (10) Beware of wisdom and knowledge apart from reverence and godliness. They pervert the conscience and foster pride. (11-13) The astrologers professed ability to foretell the advent of days of disaster, but this would be concealed from them, and there are no charms that can avert Divine judgments. (14) Like stubble they would burn to a dead ash; so utter would be their destruction that there would not be a spark left to warm at.

Surely there is a double reference here, and the fate of Babylon anticipates the fall of Babylon the Great. When God has gathered the Bride for his Son, and redeemed his people, then will come the terrible judgment of the world powers, which nothing shall be able to avert.

MONDAY, APRIL 16.—ISAIAH XLVIII.

The Purpose of Prophecy (1-11).—God addresses his people, and reminds them of his predictions, and his mighty interpositions on their behalf, which were intended to show his superiority to the idols which they had substituted for Himself. The fall of Babylon was entirely hidden from the idol votaries. It was a divine secret, and therefore a standing evidence of the reality and superiority of Jehovah. (1) Lip service will never compensate for the absence of heart service or the love of the soul (John iv. 24; Dan. ix. 24). (3) God's predictions were fulfilled so unexpectedly that they could not have resulted from human agency. (6) God is always unfolding new and deeper secrets in his government. Happy are they to whom He reveals them. To them it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven. (8) God knew all that we should be before He began to love us, and He has been compelled to restrain much that love would otherwise have done, lest it should injure rather than bless us. How wonderful that He should have ever loved us; how pitiable that through our perversity we have missed much that we might have known! (9) "My name's sake" really is "for the sake of Jesus Christ." Because of what He is, God's justly deserved anger is averted from us, and all his dealings with us are determined by his resolution to reveal the riches of his wisdom and goodness in his loving forbearance. In the ages to come He will show what He is, in his dealings with us. (10) Though we are put through the refining furnace, we do not come out as pure metal should. How often the furnace of affliction is the time when God and the soul meet.

The Lost Ideal (12-19).—The universe is summoned as witness of God's dealings with his people. (14) God's love to us is the cause of his interposition on our behalf. (15) True, first of Cyrus, then of Christ. (16) From this moment we detect the voice of Christ, the Messiah, which is continued through the following chapter. His favourite title was Sent. (17) The Trinity is here invoked to teach and lead. Obedience is the secret of peace like a refreshing fertilising river; of righteousness like the ocean when it fills its bed; and of an abundant spiritual seed.

The Call for an Exodus (20-22).—Jews are called to leave Babylon, the harbinger of a greater exodus. 21) The marvels of the exodus from Egypt shall yet be realised. (22) The close of the first division of this book, repeated lvii. 21.

TUESDAY, APRIL 17.—ISAIAH XLIX.

The Proclamation of the Messiah (1-13).—We lose sight of Cyrus; only in the most meagre sense can these words apply to him. He engrosses our thoughts, of whom all other deliverers are but transient types. The Lord Jesus is speaking here. His birth, the theme of prophecy, named to Mary before his nativity; his lips, speaking words that cut his foes like a sword; hidden as an arrow in the quiver, or a sword in the sheath, so that He was not generally recognised, but ready to be drawn forth at the moment God saw fit; polished, i.e., free from rust; these are characteristics of all God's workers, sharp, hidden, waiting to be used, pure. (3) Christ was the ideal Israel. (4) Amid sighs of discouragement it is a comfort to know that God understands and will reward. (5) See R.V. Seek the glory that comes from God, and let God be your strength. (6) Quoted Acts xiii. 47: xxvi. 18. Whilst the chosen people remain in unbelief, and the time of their deliverance tarries, Christ is becoming Light and Salvation to the uttermost parts of the earth. (7) An anticipation of the coronation of the King of kings. (8) These words refer to the age in which we live, let us use them to the utmost (2 Cor. vi. 2). And let us ask to be associated with Christ in the realisation of the programme of these marvellous verses. (10-13) The return of the Jews at the end of the present age after the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled is the theme here. Sinim is China. The chosen people are to return from all the world, but there is a sense in which this is also true of the pilgrimage of the saints from every part of the known world to the Heavenly Jerusalem, under the convoy of God himself.

The Lament of Jerusalem (11-21).—For two thousand years beneath the yoke of the Turk, Jerusalem has seemed forgotten, but she is as constantly present to the mind of God, as to the exiled Jews, who were accustomed to puncture on their hands a representation of city and temple. All desolate souls may take comfort in these words. Their bereavement is but temporary, to prepare them to bear the tide of joy which is to set into them from the heart of God.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18.—ISAIAH L.

The Cause of Israel's Sorrows (1-3).—They did not arise from any caprice on God's part. This inquiry for the bill of divorcement is equivalent to denial that God had put the people away, as the Jewish husband would his wife, on some slight pretext (Deut. xxiv.). (1) God had not sold them, they had sold themselves; God was not tired of them, but they loved their sins more than Him. God never puts away the soul whom He has espoused. He loves with unchanging affection, but our sins involve us in the loss of the light of his face, and the liberty of his service. (2) He comes and calls, but we do not reply, and it is because of this stolid impenitence, that we suffer so bitterly. The power that wrought the wonders of the Egyptian exodus would do the same again, if only we were penitent and believing.

The Voice of the Messiah (4-9).—Note the fourfold repetition of the words "Lord God" (4), see R.V. Our Lord learnt as a disciple in the school of suffering before He taught. None so well as Christ has known how to comfort the weary. Because as Man, He learnt of the Father, He could say "Learn of Me." Each morning the Father waked his ear with some new sweet lesson. Would that we could appropriate these words. (5) Jesus had, and we need the opened ear. The reference is in all probability to the bored ear of Exodus xxi. 6 (Psa. xl. 6-8; Matt. xxvi. 6-12; xxvii. 26). That dear Face, though covered with foul abuse, was set stedfastly to his cross, because He saw beyond it a purchased people and a redeemed world. How truly God has vindicated the character of his Son from the aspersions of his foes, and as we stand in Him, we may appropriate these words as did the Apostle (Rom. viii. 32-34).

Light in Darkness (10, 11).—Very often did the Messiah walk through darkness, and we who fear and obey Him may expect the same. Not one star in our night; not one gleam in the long tunnel; often on the point of crying as He did "Forsaken." Then let us trust and stay ourselves on One to whom the night is as the day. What a contrast is the steady help of faith to the blaze of sparks that shine but for a moment.

THURSDAY, APRIL 19.—ISAIAH LI.

A chapter with three Hearkens (1, 4, 7), two Awakes, three designations of God. The portico to the central and grandest portion of this book.

A Summons to Hearken (1-8).—Follow after righteousness (1), you will come to know it (7). Seek the Lord, and his law will be written in your heart. The lowly origin of Israel is adduced as an argument for believing that God would raise them again from their low estate. If God could make a great nation out of one man, much more could He do it from the dispersed remnant. (3) What is in God's purpose is as good as done. (4, 5) God's law and salvation are always going forth; the one through conscience and the Scriptures, the other in the mercy that streams perpetually from his heart. (6) The transience of the material, as contrasted with the permanence of the spiritual. Earth and Calvary may disappear from the universe, but the events transacted there wil exert an imperishable influence.

The Divine Comfort (12-16).—Who can measure the effect of these words upon a world of sufferers? True originally of the exiles that momentarily anticipated destruction in the dungeons of Babylon, they have been verified in the experience of tens of thousands. We think with fear of the tyrant, and forget our God, who stretched forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth, and hushes the storms of the sea. (16) Addressed to Israel, and to the Messiah, its ideal and representative, these words are true in a measure of all faithful souls, through whom God is making the new heavens and the new earth. Fill our mouths with thy word, and cover us in the shadow of Thy hand.

FRIDAY, APRIL 20.—ISAIAH LII.

A Third Appeal (1-6).—Compare li. 9-17. This has never been fulfilled. It is God's ideal, which some day will come down out of Heaven. As the flower emerges from the black mould, so shall this vision of loveliness rise from amid the storm and sin of the world. How great a contrast to the doom of Babylon (xlvii. 1, 2). Here, as in the Book of Revelation, the two cities are contrasted. (2) The liberty wherewith the Son of God makes his people free. (3) As Israel's captivity brought them no emolument, so their deliverance should bring none to their foes. (5-6) God hears the cry of his people, as once in Egypt, and He comes down to deliver (Ex. ii. 24), and anticipates the day when He will vindicate his name, and shall be recognised as Joseph was by his brethren (Zech. xii. 10, xiv. 5).

The Herald and the Watchman (7-12).—The watchmen on the gates of Zion descry the advent of the messenger running in haste towards the desolated city, proclaiming the work of redemption, and the restoration of Israel. The interval of the centuries between Christ's first advent to redeem, and his second to restore, was not made known to Isaiah. To his vision these two stood together, as two mountains seen from a distance which are really separated by a valley. He therefore speaks of them in the same breath. (8) The watchmen break out into song. Face turns to face with smiles. Days of revival are days of mutual trust and understanding. (9) The contagious ecstasy spreads to the waste places. (10) And all the earth turns with eager view to see the results of the bared arm of the Almighty. (11) By long residence in Babylon, some might be unwilling to leave her. Alas! that we thus cling to the world with her corruptions. The vessels of Jehovah had been carried captive, but they were to be restored (Ezra viii.), and borne by white-robed priests. How careful we should be, to whom God entrusts the vessels of the true Tabernacle.

SATURDAY, APRIL 21.—ISAIAH LIII.

There is no doubt that this chapter applies to the Lord Jesus. The Spirit points its application (Acts viii. 34, 35). This portrait, painted 700 years before He came, retains its vivid colours.

Christ's Person (1-3).—Isaiah laments that so few have accepted his report about his Lord. But who could wonder when He grew up as a weakly shoot from the decayed trunk of the house of David? Christ's claims do not rest upon those attractions of personal beauty which fascinate human love, and yet the loveliness of his character reflected on his face must always have made it beautiful. (3) Note R.V. —Men turned away their faces from Him, because He came in lowly guise, a peasant's child, and they could not understand his sympathy with suffering and pain.

Christ's Sufferings (4-10).—They were ours (Matt. viii. 17.) As the second Adam, He stood before God charged with the guilt and penalty of sin. He bore our sins. They were made to meet on Him. Eleven times in this chapter his death is particularly spoken of as vicarious and substitutionary. The Shepherd laid down his life that the sheep might be spared. (5) Substitute my for our, and I for we. (6) Go in at the first all, and out at the last. (7) Imitate thy Lord's silence when falsely accused. (8) See R.V. (9) Because must be rendered although. The thieves on the cross, and Joseph in his grave. (10) The bruising reminds us of Gen. iii. 15. It was but for a time, and God rejoiced in his Son's obedience even unto death, because it vindicated his Law, and satisfied the yearnings of his heart for man's salvation.

Christ's Recompense (10-12).—We make his soul our sin-offering, when we present his sufferings to God as our plea. As He was numbered with the transgressors, so shall ransomed transgressors be numbered with Him in glory that shall never fade.

INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 22.

JOSEPH. RULER IN EGYPT.—Gen. xli. 38-48.

GOLDEN TEXT.—1 Samuel, ii. 30.

THE contrast between the condition in which the last lesson left Joseph, and that in which this lesson finds him, is remarkable. Then, he was an Egyptian slave; see how different his position now! In the land of his exile he is exalted to be vizier, or—as we should say—prime minister of Egypt, with most absolute rule over all the people (40, 41). Upon his hand is the King's ring (42), giving him power to enforce his measures with the King's authority. His vesture of fine linen (42) is intended to mark the high distinction conferred upon him. The necklace of gold (42), worn only by persons of rank, formed, with the signet ring, the insignia of his office. And to all this is added the public procession, in which he rode in the chariot second only to that of the King (43). Egyptian chariots are described by Dr. Kitto as of "light and elegant construction, and drawn by two horses. On grand occasions the horses were decked with fancy ornaments; a rich striped or chequered housing, trimmed with a broad border, and large pendent tassels covered the whole body; and two or more feathers, inserted in lion's heads, or some other device of gold, formed a crest upon the summit of the headstall." In such a chariot Joseph rides, and receives the homage of the people.

How this contrast was brought about makes it even more remarkable. It is an illustration of the Golden Text. In every position Joseph has not failed to honour God. His conduct as a prisoner won the confidence of the gaoler (xxxix. 21-23). Before his fellow prisoners (xl. 8) he was not afraid to confess God. Faithfulness in that which was least was, in his case as in every other, the condition of being entrusted with that which was greatest. But his exaltation also reveals the wonderful working of Divine providence. It was not by accident that he and the two officers of Pharaoh were brought together in prison—that he should have proved so correct in his interpretation of their dreams—that the butler should have forgotten him for two years—and that the dream of Pharaoh, and the incapacity of his magicians, should have brought Joseph to the butler's mind just then. In God's providence, everything is arranged at the right moment. He finds a way of honouring those who honour Him.

Pharaoh had two reasons for exalting Joseph. First, he recognised that the Spirit of God dwelt in him (38). The two dreams of the King, when interpreted by Joseph, were evident prophecies. It was proof of God's mercy that he thus warned Pharaoh of coming evil, and gave him a man capable of interpreting the visions. Probably he knew little who the God was in whose name Joseph spake; but he could mark the difference between him and the wise men of Egypt. The New Testament says much about the Spirit of God dwelling in men (1 Cor. iii. 16; vi. 19; 2 Cor. vi. 16). Claim it, and seek to live in full obedience to Him who dwells within. Others will not fail to recognise a Divinely indwelt man.

Next, he saw that Joseph was discreet and wise (39). The interpretation had been accompanied by excellent counsel (34-36). Pharaoh rightly judged that the man through whom God had revealed what was coming, and had given such counsel, was of all men the most likely to carry it out with success. There are no counsellors so wise as men of God. Nations sometimes forget this, and youths forget it, too. Find out those in whom the Spirit of God is, make them your counsellors. Their wisdom is wisdom indeed. Beware of those to whom godliness is regarded as folly.

The policy Joseph pursued in view of the famine was excellent. During the seven good years he took a fifth of the produce, and stored it in view of the seven years of evil (46-48). He exercised forethought, and prudence, and industry. These are the principles which the Gospel demands from all (Prov. xxii. 3). This is your season of opportunity; are you making use of it so as to provide for coming need?

How remarkably this story again typifies the Lord Jesus! The means taken to destroy Him led to his exaltation—the position to which He was raised was one in which He could bless not only his brethren the Jews, but Gentile nations as well—the very name given to Joseph (45) means "Saviour of the World," and can properly apply only to the Lord Jesus. God has put everything under his hand. Through Him all our soul's need can be supplied. Apply to God through Him—as our Joseph—and our soul's hunger will be satisfied.

DURING THE PAST WEEK meetings of exceptional interest have been held, under the auspices of the Women's Total Abstinence Union, in Weston-super-Mare, Bath, and Bristol.

HIS LITTLE CHILD.

HAVE you ever noticed how "John, whom Jesus loved," called those in whom he was interested "little children," or "My little children," just as if they were his own relations? There is a sweetness about the title which tells of the truest love for those men and women who came to listen to the old man's words.

These people John called "little children"; and in one respect they were this; for they had entered into the beautiful childhood described by Jesus, when He said: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven. Whosoever, therefore, shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven." The picture is a beautiful one, of hearts turned to God, and of self lost in the presence and by the grace of "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

A friend told me of a great friend of his, who, turning aside from his books and his daily enjoyments, resolved to give himself to God as "a little child," and then to give himself to the children. This he did, and after a time he had a very large gathering of children in a room which he had built. Here he taught them of the love of God, and of Jesus his Son. He was as a child to them, so that they could open their hearts to him. He understood them, and their meeting together brought glory and joy to Him whose will became their law and their delight. This child man taught the little ones the story of the Good Shepherd, by means of music, and toys, and love, so that each knew it perfectly, and loved it, and Him of whom it told them.

One of the little band, Jimmie Oram by name, was taken ill, and during his illness his one spoken thought was the Good Shepherd; he went through the whole story, and the father and mother, listening, were softened, and longed to know Jesus. The little boy died; but his parents went to his teacher—the childlike man—and told him all the story.

"We had this put on his memorial card," they said, pointing to the words, "Jesus called a little child unto Him."

"How did you know the words?" asked Jimmie's teacher.

"We asked Jimmie how he knew he was God's little child, as he used to call himself, and he said he knew he was, because Jesus had called him, and he had answered by giving himself. He pointed out these words," said the poor father and mother, "in his little Testament."

"What are you going to do now?" was the question.

"Jimmie said you would show us the way to Jesus," they replied. "Before he died, we used to trade on Sundays by keeping open our little shop, and never thinking of God. But Jimmie said God's children could not live like that, and that he was going to the Kingdom of Heaven to show us the way, and so we've never opened shop on Sundays since then."

This seems a very simple story. But life is made up of little things, and we never know how the very smallest action of ours may influence others for good or for evil. If, like Jimmie, we are God's children, we shall, like him, draw souls to God. Jimmie's sister became nurse in the family of the doctor who had been with Jimmie before he died, and nursed and loved his little Dolly, and taught her the story of the Good Shepherd, as she had heard it from Jimmie, and had since learned for herself. Little Dolly learned to love Jesus, and would get her father, the doctor, to write out for her the story of the Good Shepherd. "Daddy," she would say, "'wite out the 'tory, and then p'raps some of the poor, ill peoples you go to make well, will like to wead it. Tell the poor peoples of Jesus, Daddy!"

One night, in the midst of the story, the doctor was summoned away to a patient who was dying. He saw the end was near. "Oh," said the dying woman, "I'm going in the dark! Doctor, it is all dark—no hope, no light, and I am dying!" The doctor did not know what to do. "Tell me of God!" cried his patient; "You see so many die, you must know the way into Life. Oh, tell me!" Suddenly the doctor bethought him that he had put Dolly's story of Jesus into his pocket as he was called away. He drew it out, and, sitting by the patient's bedside, he read from John x., and ended with the words Dolly had told him to put, "Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein."

Tears fell from the eyes of the dying woman. "Your little child—God's little child—has sent me a message from heaven. My heart is broken—I can now go to God for the pardon and the peace I need, and I do go to Him." Before she died, this lady came to God as a little child. The doctor's heart, too, was turned. He saw the power of the love of God in the soul, and praised Him that he was able now to carry messages of peace to his patients through his little child. M. B. GERDS.

MY DESIRE.

Jesus, I want to be holy;
Jesus, I want to be true
Jesus, I want to be ever
Keeping the end in view.

Jesus, I want to be seeking
Lost ones, and tell them of Thee;
Jesus, I want to be showing
How happy a Christian can be.

Jesus, I want to be working
While it is called to-day;
Jesus, I want to be ready
All thy commands to obey.

Jesus, I want to be trusting,
Knowing thy will is the best;
Jesus, I want to be waiting,
When Thou shalt call me to rest.

Jesus, I want to be loving;
Jesus, I want to be kind;
Jesus, I want to be keeping
Calvary's scene in mind.

Jesus, I want to be willing
Ever to do and to be;
Nothing or anything, always,
Only to glorify Thee.

Jesus, I want to be singing,
Yea, singing for very joy,
In glad anticipation
Of pleasures that never cloy.

Jesus, I want to be watching,
Longing for Thee to come;
Jesus, I want to be ready,
If death should summon me home.

Jesus, I want to be patient,
Right meekly to endure
All that thy will disposes,
In confidence all secure.

EVANGELISATION OF SAILORS.—The Christian Harbour Lights held a muster on Thursday at the Seamen's Christian Friend Society's new headquarters, under the presidency of Mr. W. H. Seagram, who gave an address, helpful to believers and admonitory to the unsaved, on "Ready." After several addresses, seamen and others gave excellent testimonies. Personal dealing with anxious inquirers followed. Temperance pledges were taken, and several were enrolled as members of the "Harbour Lights."

MR. THOMAS M. WINTLE.

THE CHRISTIAN MISSION OF MONMOUTHSHIRE.

Many of our readers are now familiar with the name of this Mission, and, indeed, not a few have become helpers thereof. Possibly, however, they may not be conversant with its story, and the remarkable way in which it has been used of God among the teeming industrial populations of the eastern valleys of Monmouthshire. An outline of the salient facts in its history will, doubtless, be of deep interest to many friends.

Mr. Thomas M. Wintle, the founder and superintendent of the Christian Mission, Pontymoile, was called from the rolling-mill to do a great work among his own people. As the son of a publican he knew something of the evils of drink, against which he has been for so long a fearless witness; and having served many years in the iron and steel works, he is thoroughly conversant with the industrial habits of the people. He was converted in 1875, through special services held in Swansea by members of the Evangelisation Society, and particularly through the preaching of Mr. Charles Edwards, now of the Soldiers' Home, Winchester.

Returning in 1876 to his native valleys, Mr. Wintle found himself expected to stand treat all round, by way of

"PAYING HIS FOOTING."

The suggestion being made by a brother foreman—a Welsh "bard" by the way—afforded him the opportunity of hoisting his colours as a temperance man; colours he has nailed to the mast from that day to this. A temperance prayer meeting was organised in Pontymoile, and out of this humble beginning the whole work of the Christian Mission has really sprung.

An old Methodist who attended this prayer meeting, expressed disappointment that the Gospel was not preached. This led to Mr. Wintle attempting, in much trembling, to witness to Christ, and his very first address was used of God to the conviction of a young iron-worker, who began (to the preacher's confusion) to cry out for mercy. This first convert is to-day a useful worker for Christ, and his conversion was the means of moulding the whole effort on Gospel lines. The ragged, neglected children next attracted Mr. Wintle's attention, and an old granary in rear of his own house was cleared out and fitted up roughly to serve as a Sunday schoolroom. The boys were, however, by no means willing to forego their liberty, and much persuasion was necessary to get them to come at all. The first capture is graphically portrayed as a with matted hair, black face, and clothed in the remnants of an old pair of trousers—only that and nothing more. That boy became a useful open-air preacher, and is now well known in Canada. The whole of his family were by and by converted, and all of them are still serving God.

Thus, rough as the scholars were, the school prospered; but one afternoon a boy said, "Why don't you get father and mother to come here?" This led to an evening Gospel service being announced, and the old granary was speedily crowded out. The people came from far and near, eager to know what the roll-turner at the Lower Mill had to say. The need for some larger place became clear; it was taken to God in prayer, and in June, 1879, an iron hall was secured and erected, the manual labour being largely done by the people themselves. The three grand objects announced in the first report were—to care for neglected children, to rescue drunkards, and to preach the Gospel.

Next came open-air work, and the very first service at Cwymyniscoy, a small village near Pontymoile, became in a remarkable way the means of the conversion of a desperate character, now one of the brightest and most devoted helpers in the mission. This is not the place for details, but these, as given by Mr. Wintle in a forthcoming narrative of the mission, are of exceptional interest. Indeed, this future volume, the MS. of which is now before us, is rich in marvellous stories of grace. The conversions recorded in connection with open-air work are of the most encouraging nature, and many so converted still live to give glory to God.

The interest thus aroused in the surrounding districts led eventually to the opening of branches of the mission in Pontnewydd, Cwmffrwdoer, and George-street, Pontypool, as well as, later on, in that large industrial centre, Dowlais. As the work became known, such influential helpers as Lady Henry Somerset, Messrs. R. and J. Cory, Mr. R. C. Morgan, Mr. C. Dauncey, Capt. A. G. West, and Mr. H. W. Case, were led to come forward and aid in extending the operations.

The iron hall at Pontymoile having become utterly inadequate for the mission work, much prayer was made, and eventually in a very remarkable way, showing clearly the hand of God in the matter, a splendid site was secured and erected. This was opened in March, 1891, and inaugurated by special missions held by Messrs. J. A. Vicary, Charles Inglis, Richard Weaver, and James Jones, and greatly blessed of God. Here the work continued to grow and develop; the Sunday schools flourish, the children's services and other efforts for the young have been much used of God, while among the rough lads many trophies have been won to the Saviour. Bible-class work is very systematically carried on, the converts (many of whom know little of the Book) being eager for Bible teaching.

With all this, however, the temperance work, with which the mission began, is kept well to the front; and there is full need, for intemperance is the peculiar curse of such industrial centres. It is recorded, to the glory of God, that have been set free" by the power of the Gospel; and many telling incidents of this kind might be given.

(From photograph by Messrs. A. & G. Taycor, Wesley Chambers, Newport, Mon.)

The dark spiritual condition of towns and hamlets, scattered here and there in the valleys, had earnest attention; and in the course of time two Bible carriages were provided. These did useful service for some years, becoming the means of blessing to many in remote parts of South Wales; but owing to the great depression this Bible carriage work is at present suspended—not for long it may be hoped. Meanwhile the Christian activities of the voluntary workers find vent in open-air and cottage meetings in all manner of out-of-the-way places, as far as they can manage to reach by walking.

THE FACTORY GIRLS.

Apart from all this, a very pressing, though difficult, work has been going on for years among the factory girls. These are employed in considerable numbers in the tinplate works, where not seldom they are exposed to grave moral peril, while their homes afford them little shelter or comfort. Special efforts have been made to provide a safe and pleasant evening resort in the Christian Institute, Pontymoile. Some have been converted and are now following Christ. This is a preventive work, and its importance will be apparent to all.

RESCUE WORK.

But rescue work has also to be done. Many girls who have fallen have been taken in hand and got into Homes. Year after year the reports of the Mission show usefulness in this direction; some of the worst characters having been saved. But the work grows, and especially since the closing of a large number of tinplate works through the operation of the McKinley Tariff. The difficulty of getting rescued ones placed out in Homes is more and more serious, and preventive cases are even more so; and in fact a Rescue and Preventive Home has become imperative for South Wales. Now, in the providence of God, there is at Pontypool a most suitable building, lately used as a Baptist college. This could be had were funds forthcoming. The sum of £2000 would purchase the freehold and building, and fit it up for use as a home for forty or fifty. We doubt not that He who has so wonderfully led in the past will touch some hearts to provide this pressing need for a Preventive and Rescue Home for factory girls.

THE RELIEF WORK.

Another very touching phase of the Mission is the Relief Work and Free Meals. The terrible depression in the tin and iron trades resulted in the closing of most of the works on which the population depend, and thus brought hundreds of families to the brink of starvation. These efforts to feed the hungry have been again and again described in our pages, and must ere now be familiar to all readers. Hence we need not recapitulate. Suffice it to state that the works are still closed, and the direst distress exists in many a home. But for the free meals provided daily at the Christian Institute many must have perished from sheer lack of food. These meals have now been given for thirty-three weeks; the whole of the necessary labour being done voluntarily by the workers, many of whom are themselves suffering sorely. Besides, those who are in work, partial or otherwise, out of their poverty contributed nobly to aid their distressed fellows. There is yet great need for liberal help in feeding the hungry and clothing the naked.

We trust these few facts as to a mission God is very wonderfully using in the salvation of sinners will stir many friends to sympathy and prayer. Mr. T. M. Wintle, the superintendent, may be addressed, The Christian Institute, Pontymoile, near Pontypool, Mon.

KURKU AND C.I.H. MISSION.

An esteemed correspondent writes:—"The last weeks of 1893 were a time of testing; so little money was sent. The Lord, however, made Mark xi. 24 very real to us, and a telegram received on December 28 from Ellichpur, telling of a generous gift to the mission of 10,000 rupees from a servant of the Lord in America, who knew nothing of the special need, showed how He had again proved Himself to be Jehovah-Jireh.

"At the same time, from two different sources, He sent the word in Ex. xiv. 15, "Go forward," and we felt that He would have us open up new stations in the jungle-covered hills to the north and west of our present stations. Two young men, Messrs. Windsor and Dickenson, had each heard the Lord's call to go, before anything was known of the gift; and, while they were sailing to India, Mr. Müller, our superintendent, has been making a tour of twenty-six days, and traversing some 275 miles among those wild 'ghats,' with two young native converts, preaching the Gospel to attentive listeners by the wayside as well as in about eighty villages—in many places among people who have never heard the Word of Life before, and who often fled at the first sight of the white-faced man. In one village they assented to all he said, and, bowing down before him, declared that they were all "monkey-people," and could not understand what he meant; but finally he got them to confess that they knew what sin was and that the monkeys did not, and they then said they were ashamed of the name they had given themselves. One day on the road they met and saluted the Gond King of Makrai, who was driving his bullock-waggon in person, preceded by a spear-swinging herald and others, and followed by a retinue of thirty or forty, some of whom carried his bedstead and others boxes of provisions. But on seeing the Kurku missionary he galloped off as fast as he could, casting furtive glances back from time to time at Mr. Müller who was not a little amused at the whole scene.

"Three sites were selected as suitable stations in these wild hills, and the people in each case begged the missionaries to settle amongst them. Our annual report for 1893, giving fuller information as to the work, will, we hope, soon be published, and can be had on application to the Hon. Sec., 10, Drayton-park, N."

The Late MR. THOMAS BLAMIRE,

PIONEER MISSIONARY IN SPAIN.

MANY hearts were made sad by the departure, a few months ago, of this rvant of God. In writing a short sketch his life, as bearing on his Christian work, egin with him in 1866 in Carlisle.

Thomas Blamire was then far from God, d deep in worldliness. But that year was so the beginning of grand things in Carlisle. ordon Forlong brought great blessing to the wn; Rev. Wm. Reid, the author of "The ood of Jesus," soon after came; Dr. W. P. ackay, afterwards of Hull, was another in- rument in the hands of od.

Among many others Mr. amire was turned from tan to Christ, and had the eat advantage of being in e full swing of this time revival. His old comnions were either conrted or left him. He was roduced to Sunday-school rk, and was also encouged to preach. One point his preaching was its great rnestness.

He spent the two years 70-72 in Mr. Spurgeon's llege. I had been at the llege three months before came, and was there to lcome him. Towards the se of the College course we d daily prayer together, at God would lead us his n way. We asked for a le field, where there would plenty of room to work thout interfering with ier workers. The leading got was towards Spain.

We arrived in Barcelona n. 24, 1873. People told of civil war and of fight- that had just taken place the streets. Shortly after s, news came that King adeo had abdicated the rone; a little later that e Republic had been proimed. The Carlists had en against the Governnt. All Barcelona was rred; and the streets were thronged. A ge Bible coach belonging to a Scotch society s filled with books and tracts, and the achman, a Spaniard, drove four of us down the Rambla, the principal thoroughfare of rcelona. We took the steps on the coach turn. It was animating to hear Blamire h his fine powerful voice cry, "Toda la blia en 8 reales" (The whole Bible for 8d.)! As the ability to speak Spanish ne, reading and preaching followed, and . Blamire was always there.

As we felt we could not acquire the lange properly in Barcelona, where the talan dialect is so much spoken, we nt to the Capital in May. At that time re were many workers in Madrid, so Mr. amire, Mr. Carlyle (now of Rio Tinto), and rself determined to begin open-air work all the villages near the Capital, a thing heard of, so far as we knew, except in Madrid, where Mr. C. E. Faithfull often preached.

Said he, "Let us go where there is no preacher. Let us never interfere with the work of any other servant of Christ." To this determination he adhered thenceforward. We heard that there was no work at all in North-West Spain; so, early in 1875, we visited several places, returning viâ Oporto to Madrid. There we waited on God daily for about six weeks for guidance, till we were fully persuaded that we should begin work in Corunna.

While in Madrid, he found in 1873 the future partner of his life—Miss Rosetta Levason, already engaged in mission work. When we started for Corunna he had a wife and young child to take with him.

What a commotion the Gospel made in Corunna! The governor threatened to put us in gaol; many hundreds filled the square in front of the house and meeting place; week after week people flocked from all parts to hear. The priests and Archbishop of Santiago excommunicated us heartily. The newspapers wrote, some in a friendly way and others the reverse; but all served to make the meetings known. The Gospel was preached, and the Scriptures were sold in thousands of portions. Best of all the Lord worked, souls were saved, and a small church was formed at Corunna. Next were visited the villages and places near, and a work begun at Arteijo, which God blessed. These two meetings have been going on ever since, first under Mr. Geo. Spooner (now in South America), and next Mr. Geo. Chesterman, who is still in charge.

Vigo was next fixed upon, in 1877. A meeting place was taken. The priests were up in arms; the alcalde (or mayor) called on the landlord; the priestly party got their chief political agents aroused as enemies; newspapers went to work, and there was a lively time even before the meetings began. But they did begin, and our Corunna experience was repeated; rather more than that. We were moving about selling Bibles, giving tracts, and speaking to the people, when the chief of police and two policemen came with a warrant for our apprehension.

We were taken and paraded through the town to this man and that man, and then taken to a village about two miles off by the chief of police. We had to make a declaration. We declared that the Bible was the best book in the world, that we desired that everybody in Spain would come to Jesus Christ and be saved by Him alone, and many other such things. That satisfied the magistrate of the place that we were in for it. We were let out on our "word of honour" as bail. Our meetings in Vigo were in full swing, and just at their commencement.

On a Sunday morning at sunrise, the chief of police presented himself with another warrant. We were to appear before the Governor before sunset. That would shut up all the meetings for the day, and frighten the people; and was cleverly planned to destroy the work. The Governor's office was more than twenty miles away, four hours by coach. The coach left at 11 a.m.; and there was no return coach after 2 p.m. The British Vice-Consul telegraphed asking that we might be permitted to visit the Governor the next day. The return telegram came in time, and on the Monday the chief of police watched us into the coach. His Excellency said it was a serious case; he had sixty-five witnesses against us; there would be fourteen years' imprisonment unless we promised to leave the province.

"If your Excellency," said Blamire, "can force us out of your province, do so; but we will never budge an inch of our own accord."

His Excellency telegraphed to Madrid, and we, on bail, returned to Vigo. The Minister telegraphed from Madrid that the lawsuit could not go on; we were free, and praised God for the deliverance.

Morgadanes is a village about nine miles from Vigo. In 1878 some people came from it asking us to help them. By the influence of the priests and the authorities they had been prohibited from reading their Bibles together; they had been stoned, and at that time found it dangerous to go out of their doors. We went over, and gave notice to the magistrate that on a certain day we would begin meetings in a room we had rented for the purpose. We had our first meeting, which lasted about two hours, most peaceably. But on the way home a gun was fired from behind a hedge. As we went up the hill—very steep—stones were rolled down and thrown down upon us. At the top we found a mob, with stones bulging out of their pockets, stones in their arms, stones in their aprons, directed by three priests, one of them armed with a gun.

After a moment's parley, we ran off towards the main road, about two miles over the mountain paths, which indeed we were not at all certain of knowing again. Another large group were also waylaying us at one of the turns in the road, and the others were following with the priests, crying, "We'll have the skins of those English to day." But we committed ourselves to the Lord, turned our umbrellas, opened of course, to the showers of stones, and ran on. We got to the road, and Mr. Blamire said, "Well, thank God, we're here. I thought we should never have seen it again." A trap was waiting for us, and so we got home. The newspapers at Madrid were full of the matter; the Roman Catholic papers openly defended the priests, while others said a Government that allowed such things could not be too loudly reprobated. The Government sent armed police to the village, took the gun from the priest, while the alcalde and judge were ordered to see personally that we were protected on our visits, and that they should keep the door. From that time the people have been left to read the Bible in peace, and a small meeting has continued in the village ever since.

We thought Vigo had had a fair share of our time, and we consulted as to what place should be visited next. We felt, after having prayed much about it, that Pontevedra, the capital of the province, was the place. We got a house and meeting-place, and saw the Governor. This was the place to which we had been sent as prisoners. "Do you mean to say you are beginning with your heresies in the capital, and above all times on a Sunday?" "Yes, your Excellency, Sunday is the best day for preaching the Word of God; the people are most free that day." His Excellency threatened; the archbishop, the late Primate of Spain, who was then Archbishop of Santiago, came to Pontevedra and cursed us and all who should let us houses or sell us bread. This was the same man who in Corunna cursed our landlord to the seventh generation. Nevertheless, the Gospel was proclaimed to hundreds of people who crowded to hear, and souls were saved.

In Pontevedra we had taken a house and locale for two years. We took another house and locale in Villagarcia. Mr. Blamire continued to live in Pontevedra, and I lived in Villagarcia, but we arranged the meetings so that we could take part together. Here we were nearer the Archbishop, and the nearer you get to his palace, the more ignorant the people seem. "These people that pray to the Devil have come here," said some. "A hundred years ago it was prophesied that Anti-Christ would come this year, and two of them are in Villagarcia," said a neighbouring priest. "Please leave my house," said our landlord. "I would not let them have it for five dollars a day," said the landlady. "If they only believed in God!" she exclaimed. This kind of thing brought the people from all surrounding parts; and what a pleasure it was to see dear Blamire arriving, after a walk of fifteen miles, on the eve of the first meeting! Who could help preaching? As the grand announcement, "God so loved the world" was commented on, the people seemed surprised. At the end of the meeting they went away saying, "Now we know the priests are liars." Souls were saved, and the Gospel was carried in all directions! for each of these places became a focus of light, where light had not been before at least for centuries.

We agreed that Vigo needed help; so I lived there, and Mr. Blamire went to live in Marin, where the work thenceforward must be considered Mr. Blamire's own special work for God. In it he had much help from Miss Lydia Brooks, now Mrs. Wirtz, of Carril; from Mr. Millne, Miss Morgan, and Miss Wreford, not forgetting his wife, whose fearless spirit was a great help amid the persecutions attendant on the work.

How that meeting-place in Calle del Puento was filled when first opened! Stones rattling against the doors, the terrible din of old petroleum cans, whistling, shouting, and all the etceteras imaginable—these will give some idea of the difficulties of the work. But the Lord saved souls constantly in that little fishing town.

Mr. Blamire got right in among the people. He had his study full of men, who came to talk over matters. His preaching was afterwards greatly enlivened by relating these conversations, and was thus understood by the people. He used even to write letters for those who could not write; they got to trust him and consult him and get his help in their private matters. The Lord turned everything to the furtherance of the Gospel there. I mention one thing out of many. The priests got up a grand to-do, and blessed the sea for the Roman Catholic fishermen, and cursed it for the Protestants. The next day the Roman Catholic men caught no fish, but the Protestants came home with their boats full. So the people said all over the place: "If you want to get any fish you must be an Evangelical." At Marin there is a lively congregation of Christians, with over 100 in fellowship, and as many more of those wh. have given their names in as adherents, and who regularly attend the meetings.

Santo Tomé is about three miles from Marin, and here Mr. Blamire preached every Sunday afternoon. God blessed the work. But time would fail, and so would space, to tell how a woman offered her own house in which she lived to be pulled down that a preaching place might be built on the site; how a man gave another site; how it was built through Mr. Blamire's self-denial, in every way, and through the exertion of the people; how there was rejoicing at the opening. A cyclone came, and this meeting-place was blown down, killing two people and causing the enemy to rejoice. But Mr. Blamire soon had it up again, and at the end of September, 1893, when last he and I preached together, it was full of people.

Shortly after this occasion Mr. Blamire went over to Oporto, and worked hard for the Master he loved to serve. I heard he had been very ill; but was recovering. He had had so many attacks previously, we were not alarmed. Neither was his wife, who was then on a visit to England. A friend wrote to me: "He whom thou lovest is sick . . . but my own opinion is he will get over it." Before that card came, a telegram from the same friend said, "Blamire is with the Lord," Subsequent letters told that he did not think his end was so near; he gave no last message for anyone, but quietly slept away, the watchers not able to say exactly when he breathed his last.

His work for Christ will go forward. He looked to God for every penny he needed for it all his time in Spain. It is God's work; and the Lord will not allow it to suffer.

GOSPEL TRAINING COLLEGE, DUNOON.

This college makes steady progress under the care of Rev. Duncan Macgregor. There are now eighteen students, and three others have been accepted. Applications are very numerous. There are two resident tutors, and some well-known ministers give occasional help. The course of training includes Hebrew, Greek, German, French, Gaelic, music, elocution, theology, homiletics, English literature, Church history, practical training in preaching and pastoral work.

One of the students has recently settled in Arnold, Notts. Another in California. Two others are in temporary charge of churches while carrying on their studies. While the education is thorough in the usual branches, no student is expected to apply unless he has fully consecrated himself to the service of Christ. The course of training depends as to its length and features on the individual student. Some will be sent to Glasgow University, but no effort is made to secure any degree, except a good Gospel degree and great boldness in the faith.

The funds needed are being sent weekly, and thus far there has been no lack. The Lord provides. Principal, tutors, and visiting teachers are giving their services free, being otherwise provided for, so that all the subscriptions are spent on the students. One half of the students are from England, the other half from Scotland, none as yet from Ireland. Will Irish Christians take note?

An effort is now being made to secure college buildings, which are expected to be secured during this year. Steps are also being taken to add a Ladies' Training College to that already in existence. Will any devoted Christian lady who has means of her own be good enough to write to the Principal, if God lays it on her heart to offer for such work?

Thus far it has been found that churches and mission stations are wishful to receive the services of the students, and it is hoped that ere long the students will make their own openings. It has been found that the students have greatly helped the church of which the Principal is pastor, and there have recently been considerable additions to it. The attention of ministers who have likely young men in their congregations is drawn to the college, where, if the range of subjects is somewhat different from the usual curriculum, it is at least thorough, and suited to the needs of those who wish to become labourers in the harvest field.

A WARNING.—A Jew named Goldman is moving amongst assemblies, sometimes professing to be anxious, sometimes newly converted, and latterly even preaching. Glasgow, Aberdeen, Carlisle, and Hereford have been visited. Those who do not want to be "cheated," should let him severely alone.—Northern Witness.

DECIDE FOR CHRIST!

By Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D.

There are two striking stories contained in the same chapter in the New Testament. One is the sad story of the young ruler who came to Jesus, inquiring the way to eternal life. When the Master repeated to him the Commandments, the ruler glibly and confidently replied that he had kept them all! Then Christ—who knew his besetting sin—touched him on the sore spot; He bade him change his much-loved wealth for treasure in heaven, and to "follow Me." That was the young man's chance. It was now or never. Poor rich man! He decided against Christ, and went away sorrowful—or "frowning."

The other story is of the blind man who hears the shuffling of hundreds of feet crowding the road before him. He is told that Jesus of Nazareth passeth by. At once he bethinks him, Now is my chance. He cries aloud to the passing Saviour for mercy and relief. All attempts to silence his clamours are in vain. He is in dead earnest, and if not healed now he may never be. So he grasps his golden opportunity, throws off his beggar's cloak, springs up, and hastens to Jesus. In five minutes faith has its reward; into his opened eyes pours the flood of light, and he marches along with his Divine Healer, "glorifying God."

These two stories stand side by side, as vivid object-lessons to scores of my readers. You are seriously thinking about the most momentous question that can agitate any mind, and that is, Shall I make a new departure in Christ? You have the power of choice, for you are a free moral agent. Every true Christian in this world is a Christian because he or she decided to be one. Every impenitent soul is such because he or she prefers, like that foolish young ruler, to say "No" to Jesus Christ. If I had the gift of foreknowledge, and I could infallibly announce to you that you will be for ever lost, you would not close your eyes to-night. Yet it is just as certain as that to-morrow's sun will rise, that you will be lost unless you say "Yes," with heart and life, to Him who offers to save you, Decide now; it will be harder to do it to-morrow, and you are not sure that to-morrow will see you in this world. It was "now or never" with both the young ruler and with blind Bartimeus. You expect to be saved. You intend to be saved. You fully intend that at some time or other you shall become a Christian. Your sin against your own soul is procrastination; and your sin against the loving Son of God is that you are refusing Him. These two sins will send you to perdition, my friend, if you persist in them.

Then, too, remember that you cannot become a Christian without the help of the Holy Spirit, and that Spirit is now pressing you to accept Jesus Christ. When you feel compunction for sin; whenever you feel that you ought to live a different life; when you have an aspiration towards something higher, nobler, and holier, it is the moving of the loving Spirit on your conscience. Open your Bible and read, "My Spirit shall not always strive." Read again, "Now is the day of salvation." Read again, "Quench not the Holy Spirit." Heaven grant that you may not read these tender warnings by the light of the judgment scene, and that your eternity may not be haunted by the ghost of a lost opportunity! For when you reject Christ, you lose not only heaven in the next world, but lose the best and purest and happiest and most useful life in this world. Even if there were no immortality for your soul, you ought to make the most of this life by becoming what Christ alone can make you.

Already you have decided against Christ more than once. You would not be an unconverted person now if you had not been refusing Jesus Christ up to this hour. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock!" Then you have shut Him out of your heart. You may intend to open the door at some time, but remember that Jesus Christ gives last knocks!

During a season of awakening in Yale College, two young men were awakened at the same time. They both agreed one evening that they would go and call upon one of the professors and ask his counsel. When they reached the professor's gate, one of them, an amiable young man, leaned over the fence and said, "I believe that I won't go in." His companion, who had been somewhat wild, replied, "You can do as you please; but as for myself, I feel that I need all the counsel that a man of experience can give me; I am resolved to go in." They parted at the gate: and they parted for eternity! The same chance came to both: the one flung it away, and the other grasped it. The student who went in and opened his heart to his kind teacher, decided for Christ, and from being a frolicsome youth, became a faithful Christian, and afterwards a successful minister. The other young man quenched the Holy Spirit, became hardened, fell off into vicious ways, went off in after years to the West Indies, and died a miserable inebriate! Human life has its pivot-hours, when decisions reach into eternity. Those two young men made their decision that evening, and Jesus Christ took them at their word. It was the young ruler and beggar Bartimeus all over again. The judgment day will unfold millions of just such decisions as that youth made when he went back to his room and locked Christ out of his heart.

Lay down this paper, and betake yourself to honest prayer. Ask Jesus Christ to let you follow Him, and to forgive your past sins, and to give you the transcendent and glorious gift of eternal life. Delay not one hour. Life and death, right and wrong, heaven and hell, are set before you. Decide for Christ! What thou doest, do quickly. If you shut your ears to the voice of that inviting Saviour, and to the voice of your own conscience, you may be deciding to be lost for ever!

"Too late! too late! will be your cry, Jesus of Nazareth has passed by!"

THE CONGO-BALOLO MISSION.

The friends of this Mission assembled in Exeter Hall on Tuesday week to bid farewell to a party of four fresh missionaries starting for the Upper Congo. After prayer and the reading of Isaiah xxxv., Mr. George Williams, who presided, briefly and sympathetically introduced the proceedings.

Mr. F. S. Arnot indicated how, in the providence of God, poor dark Africa, so long closed, has been opened to the Gospel, very largely through the formation of vast mushroom empires, necessitating an opening of trade routes by these dusky potentates, and thus making unwittingly a highway for the Gospel. So in Livingstone's day, in the Bakolo and Barotse countries, then in Matabeleland, and the Garenganze, or M'sidi empire, all of which became portals for the missionaries into the interior, though much against the will of the despot rulers. As to the people themselves, the interior has been not inaptly described as "the region of the unemployed," and so indeed it is. They have nothing to do, to aim at, to occupy their minds, yet they are bold and ambitious, and rather inclined to reckon themselves as "the people of the earth, and wisdom will die with us." The initial difficulties of Mission work are beginning to merge into a wave of blessing, and God is about to do great things in the heart of Africa.

Mr. Peter Whytock spoke of reality. During his stay in Africa he found the spiritual needs of the Balolo people to be terribly real. Millions of them are dying without Christ, and without having even heard of Him, for there is no one to tell them. We have as yet but touched the fringe of these teeming tribes, dwelling in great darkness, amid horrid cruelty and cannibalism, and yet with very tender hearts, feeling sorrow and despair just as we do. Their needs are very real, and so also are the trials and difficulties to be encountered. What great undertaking is without these? Many precious lives have been laid down—but in war, in commerce, and in the construction of the railway now being pushed forward, this loss of life is reckoned as part of the cost, and regarded as inevitable. Why, then, should it affright us? Along the line of the Congo river many lives have been gladly laid down, but what are the results to-day? Hundreds of Christian natives all along the river. We have sowed in sorrow; we are reaping in joy. The sorrow is deep enough as we realise to-day when we hear of the consecrated Gustav Haupt, who has been called away when he seemed ripest for service.

But if sorrow and trial be real, we have for these a very real Saviour, who is giving us on the Congo very real encouragement. You will remember that in many respects the power of temptation is very, very great in these lands, and the missionary is sorely and often tempted to turn aside from his great work. Then it is he learns afresh the power of a real present Saviour, and as he "keeps in" with Christ, as we say in the North, he finds Him a precious bright reality, mighty to keep, mighty to save, and mighty to the pulling down of those strongholds of the devil which we know so well on the Congo.

Then, while our difficulties are real, our joy becomes very real. Never shall I forget my joy when first at Ikau three boys came to me of their own free will and said, "White man, we want you to tell us the way to be saved." That was better to me than quinine or anything else. Two of these lads are now deacons in a flourishing church onthe Congo.

Now surely all this implies a very real and serious responsibility. We who have Christ are debtors to the peoples of Balololand, in darkness, ignorance, and sorrow. We have what they need; and it is ours to give them it or send it to them. May God stir your hearts in this matter; and whether you yourselves go or not, surely you will give and pray, as you have never done before, for those who, in your stead, go to far-off Lololand.

Dr. Harry Guinness recalled his own visit to the mission stations on the Congo, and the scenes of revival he witnessed there. The Congo-Balolo Mission is but five years old, and it has now four stations, one being a thousand miles from the coast. Last year more than a hundred natives confessed Christ in baptism. We are translating portions of the Scripture, and our brother Haupt completed just before his death a translation of the Gospel of John. Thus we are doing something, and laying the foundation of what we believe will yet be a great and useful native church.

Miss Elliott, from Hawick, told how the Lord laid Africa on her heart years ago, how all difficulties were removed; how she was brought to Doric Lodge; and how when an appeal came for four more women workers she was led to offer and was accepted. What might lie before her she knew not, but God leads and that is enough. If God had work for her there, she knew she would be spared to do it; but if He wanted her He would take her, and that would be well. The calm bright spirit in which our sister spoke was a grand witness to the power of God.

Not less so, however, was the testimony of the next speaker, Miss Cook, who, being declined by medical advisers of the Mission, has been so firmly persuaded that God has called her that she is now going as an associate, on an independent basis, the means having been sent in specially in answer to prayer.

WITH AN ENTHUSIASTIC DEVOTION, reminding one of the heroic self-sacrifice of ancient days, this young sister declared that God had given her the clearest possible indication of his will, that she was certain He had bidden her go, and was delighted to be in his will. Though every physician in the world forbade her, she could not conscientiously stay at home, because God had called her to the Congo.

Mr. E. A. Ruskin told how six years ago God spoke to him through an address given by Miss Leitch, in West Norwood. Business led him to Eastbourne, and he entered on village and other work; but all the while Congo was on his heart, and he thanked God he was now starting for Balololand.

Mr. D. Hayes indicated how the Lord laid the Congo people on his mind, how he was led to offer to go as the representative of the Bournemouth Y.M.C.A., how he entered Harley House and shared the same room as Lofanza, who was wont to say, "You come Congo." Now he was going, and his heart was brimful of joy; going with a message of salvation for dark Africa. In epigrammatic phrase his motto would be, not "Africa for Jesus," but "Jesus for Africa."

The students, both of Harley House and Doric Lodge, gave the departing missionaries various texts and portions; and these having been commended to God in prayer by Pastor M'Cracken, of Cork, the proceedings concluded.

THE LONDON SPECTACLE MISSION SOCIETY exists for the gratuitous supply of spectacles to needy persons who cannot purchase them. It was founded in 1886 by the late Dr. E. J. Waring, and during last year there were 531 applicants for the benefit afforded by the Society. An interesting feature is that those who apply for a second pair willingly pay the charge of sixpence imposed in such cases. Copies of the report may be had from the hon. sec., Miss C. Waring, 197, Sutherland Avenue, Maida Vale, W

Dr. Barnardo's Homes.*

BY W. J. GORDON.

During the twenty-seven years that have elapsed since Dr. Barnardo met with the street arab whose pitiful story set him thinking and working for the helpless and destitute of East London, he has received for charitable purposes more than a million and a quarter of money. What has he done with it?

He has rescued, trained, and placed out in life 24,211 children; he has educated and partly fed and clothed in free day and night schools children not actually destitute to the number of 60,871; he has provided outfit, passage money, and effectual supervision for 6805 emigrants to the colonies; he has established four free lodging-houses, and given homeless women and children 100,301 free quarters and 442,766 free rations; he has established four industrial brigades, and aided to an independent livelihood 4893 of the boys who have passed through them; he has sent 2320 sick children to his seaside homes; and he has provided 1,118,926 free hot breakfasts and dinners during the winters to children of the labouring class out of work. He has established six mission halls, in which he has had ten million attendances; he has also established two coffee palaces, in which he has refreshed and entertained five million people; he has organised a guild of deaconesses whose house-to-house visitations exceed 20,000 a year; and last, but not least, he has founded a free medical mission, in which thousands of cases are dealt with and an enormous number of prescriptions are dispensed annually. Out of £1,271,000 he has spent on buildings—homes, schools, hospitals, and convalescent retreats—on freehold sites first acquired (all of which sites and buildings have from the very outset been handed over to trustees) only £187,000, and in addition to this he has freehold land and buildings in Canada to the value of £21,000.

Every year his work increases, and as his good report goes all over the world, so do the subscriptions come in from

THE UTTERMOST CORNERS OF THE EARTH.

Last year he had 74,500 separate donations, and 49,000 of these were in sums under a sovereign, and not 1000 were over £10. The increase in his revenue is as regular and continuous as its distribution. Last year he dealt with 8947 fresh cases of waif children, and maintained and educated 6949 children in his Homes. On December 31 he had 4705 children in residence, and 2085 boarded out under his care; and his death rate for the year was only six per 1000.

The different branches of this immense organisation for well-doing now exceed fifty in number. First there is the Home for Working and Destitute Lads at from 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, where the general offices are also situated. During the second year of the work, from July, 1867, to July, 1868, the income here was £214, and the letters written in regard to it averaged about three a week. In 1892 the income was £132,880, and the letters received were 139,610, and the parcels over 16,000; while in another department the case-histories of nearly 9,000 boys and girls were dealt with, partly by correspondence and partly by personal investigation.

The waiting-room is a huge place with a long serpentine settee facing a series of glass cases, in which are displayed for sale the jewelry and odds and ends forwarded for the good of the charity. Here no destitute child is ever refused admission; but inquiry always follows, and, in order that imposture may be minimised, this inquiry is stringent and thorough. The rule is,

"ADMIT FIRST; INQUIRE AFTERWARDS."

The admission is without payment, or promise of money, or patronage, or voting, or election, and the doors are open day and night.

In the main building there is accommodation for 400 boys of from thirteen to sixteen years of age, who sleep in four dormitories containing 100 each. The dormitories are as clean as a prison, the floors like chess-boards with the little beds, each bed with its blue coverlet and varnished locker; the whole is kept in order by a system of sergeants and corporals, the work being done by the boys, who are up at half-past five in the morning and have the beds made and all tidy before breakfast. The rest of the building is mainly devoted to class-rooms and workshops. Twelve different trades and handicrafts are here taught under proper instruction. In the kitchen you will find the boys doing the cooking and the baking; in the yard you will see the forge and the young blacksmiths at work; and on different floors you will get a glimpse into roomy shops busy with brush-makers, and carpenters, and saddlers, and mat-makers, and shoe-makers, and tailors, and tinsmiths, and wheelwrights, and wood-choppers, and, high up over all, you will find a printing office, the machines in which are driven by the engine in the basement, which provides the power throughout. Besides the shops and the school-rooms there is a large recreation hall fitted up as gymnasium; and below stairs is a tiled swimming-bath, close to which is the lavatory, where the slabs are of thick glass and the water-jets high enough to give each boy a shower-bath.

The smaller boys have an establishment to themselves—Leopold House Orphan Home, at 199, Burdett-road, where there are 450 of them from ten to thirteen years of age. The very little boys from five years old to ten are away at Gorey in Jersey, where 120 of them have a peculiarly healthy resort, with the common by the sea for a playground.

Having thus accounted for 970 boys from five years old to sixteen, let us return to Stepney Causeway. At Nos. 6, 8, and 10 in this street you can obtain admission at any time. "For twenty years the lamp of No. 10 in token of welcome to homeless applicants, for whom a bed and food are always ready." No. 6 is generally used as a lodging-house for lads pending inquiries into their antecedents. No. 8 is used by the girls during the same period, and No. 10 by the younger boys. In these three houses 1850 boys and girls slept in 1892, and the free meals given the applicants at the All-Night Refuge numbered 11,285.

But the open door is not only for the little ones. At Nos. 622, 624, and 626, Commercial-road, is the Labour House for Destitute Youths, where lads of from seventeen upwards are sheltered and tested for a few months, and if found to be honest, decent, and industrious, have situations found for them at home, at sea, or in the colonies. There are over a hundred of these difficult subjects here as a rule, employed in chopping wood, and making boxes and mineral waters. During last year 665 of them were dealt with, 205 of whom were sent away as emigrants, and since the home was started twelve years ago, 3000 lads have been helped here and given a fresh start in life.

The houses we have as yet mentioned are on the barrack system; for the girls, the cottage method is employed. At Barkingside, near Ilford, there is of some fifty separate cottages, and five larger households, with accommodation for nearly a thousand inmates, each cottage being supervised by a "mother," who has from sixteen to twenty-five girls under her charge. This pretty little settlement has lately been made more complete by the addition of one of the prettiest of children's churches, to be followed in due time, it is hoped, by a hospital and new schools.

Another brigade of the Barnardo army is encamped at Sturge House, in the Bow-road, where there is a Free Registry and Home for Servants, whence about 400 are sent to situations in a year or helped in other ways. For older girls there is another shelter in Alfred-street, Bow-road; and then, as coping with another difficulty, there is the Factory Girls' Club and Institute at Limehouse. In addition to these, there is the Beehive in Mare-street, Hackney, to which go the girls above the Ilford age; and, further, there is the Rescue Home.

The infants used to be sent to Ilford, but there is no room for them there now, and to see them you must journey to Babies' Castle at Hawkhurst, in Kent, where you will find about 100 in residence, some of them very young indeed. Of the sixty-nine admitted last year, eighteen were little mites less than a year old, and one of them had only been in the world thirteen days.

Yet another branch, and that back again in Stepney Causeway, where is the old infirmary, rebuilt in the Jubilee year as Her Majesty's Hospital. Here there are seventy-four cots, and the in-patients for a year number 758, while the out-patients bring the total cases up to nearly 5000, which share no less than 761 separate diseases amongst them, such is the multitude of our ailments, or the mystery of their classification.

Then, also in Stepney Causeway, is the City Messenger Brigade, ninety-six strong, the members of which are generally placed out in good situations before their stay of eighteen months is over; and of much the same class is the Shoeblack Brigade in Three Colt-street, Limehouse. With these we may group the Burdett Dormitory, in Burdett-road, where sixty or seventy lads sleep every night, and which is also used as an overflow branch from the Stepney and other homes.

Then there are the Children's Free Lodging-houses, one in Commercial-street, Whitechapel, the other in Dock-street. Last year these two houses provided 50,000 free meals and 36,000 free beds for those for whom no other door was open save the casual ward or the common lodging-house. At these houses girls and young women in absolute want are sheltered, children are given a temporary refuge, and those who have wandered from home are restored to their friends. Another outpost is in Grove-road, where the Children's Fold receives 100 little boys of ten and under until they are moved on to Leopold House. In Copperfield-road is the Working Lads' Institute, besides the well-known schools for the children of the district, nearly 800 of whom are under instruction in the week day, while the Sunday attendance exceeds 2000. At these schools 69,000 free meals were supplied in 1892, besides over 5000 gifts of boots and clothes.

In addition to all this, a vast amount of mission work is carried on among the men and women. There is the People's Mission Church at the Edinburgh Castle, which twenty years ago was a notorious gin-shop and music-hall, where the year's return shows nearly 300,000 attendances at the services, and over 100,000 attendances at the temperance, social, and educational meetings. Then there are St. Ann's Gospel Hall, the Earl Cairns Mission Hall, the Gloucester-place Mission Hall, and the East-end Medical Mission in Shadwell, where the patients number over 10,000 a year, and the prescriptions dispensed exceed 22,500; in addition to over 8000 relief orders for food and coals. Besides all these, there are two homes for deaconesses, one in Limehouse and one in Mile End-road, from which some 15,000 visits are made, and in connection with which about 1800 religious services are held during the year, in addition to the distribution of 12,000 free orders for food, and hospital, and other tickets. The work also includes two coffee palaces, the Edinburgh Castle in the Rhodeswell-road, and the Dublin Castle at Mile End, which are practically run as workmen's clubs, one of them having a good gymnasium.

But these are mere offshoots, necessary and natural;

THE MAIN WORK IS WITH THE CHILDREN.

Of these 2000 odd were last year boarded out in 118 rural centres, while over 300 of the weakly were treated for a change of air at the convalescent home at Felixstowe. Farther to the north of this, at Yarmouth, is one of the shipping agencies from which some of the bigger boys are found situations on fishing-smacks and small coasters. Another of these shipping agencies is at Cardiff, where berths are mostly obtained for them on long-voyage trading vessels. The number that go to sea is, however, very small. Last year only 113 were so disposed of, forty-five going from Yarmouth, and the rest from Cardiff and the various London Docks. In other situations in this country, over 1400 girls and boys were placed; and these beginners in life are not lost sight of, but are encouraged to continue in touch with the Institution, and one of the not least interesting events at the annual meetings is the distribution of prizes to some 200 or more old boys and girls who have kept their situations with credit, some of them for nine years.

But a large number of those that pass through the homes leave the country as emigrants. These are said to be "the flower of the flock"; only those are sent who are in robust, physical, and mental health, who have proved themselves to be thoroughly upright, honest, and virtuous, and who have been specially trained for colonial life either in the workshops or at the farm-school at Bromyard in Worcestershire, which Mr. Richard Phipps has maintained at his sole expense for the last twelve years. In Canada the homes have

* This article is reprinted from the current issue of The Sunday at Home. The Secretary of the Institutions has revised the figures, some of which were slightly understated.

THREE EMIGRATION CENTRES.

The girls go to the one at Peterborough in Ontario, the boys either go to Toronto or to Russell in Manitoba. Last year 596 boys and 131 girls were sent across the Atlantic to swell the army of similar young colonists, of whom over 98 per cent. were doing credit to themselves and their training and supervision, for these new-comers are not simply placed in situations immediately and left to shift anyhow. Their work and whereabouts are known for years, and they are visited and corresponded with until they are of an age to be left to their own guidance. The girls are mostly placed out in service, for which they have been carefully prepared; the younger boys go to Toronto, the elder are passed on direct to Russell to work on the Industrial Farm of 10,000 acres until they become able, under a special colonisation scheme, arranged with the Canadian Government, to take up a settlement of their own. All the emigrants do not go to Canada, some 440 odd have journeyed to the Cape and Australia, but these have either gone individually or in small groups. The Canadian scheme is now worked with large parties numbering over a hundred at a time, and thus no moral influence is lost by too early a relaxation of the leading-strings.

The secret, in fact, of this great success is the continuance of tone until the character is fully formed. The religious teaching throughout is and the candidates and their friends, or guardians, when discoverable, are told this while the inquiries are being made; and if there is any reason to suppose that the child is a Roman Catholic, they are advised to withdraw their application and seek assistance from their co-religionists. But occasionally these guardians are content to mislead and keep their religion in the background until it pays them to declare it. Then it is that we may hear of habeas corpus, and the vexatious legal proceedings arise, which happily have cost the charity nothing up to the present, inasmuch as their expense has been borne by a fund specially subscribed for the purpose among a select few, which fund has always had a balance on the right side.

And in fact every penny subscribed for the homes goes to the homes and is accounted for in detail, as are all the amounts received from the industries and other sources; and every branch has its separate account of income and expenditure. The daily expense of keeping all the branches going is of course heavy; it is never less than £250, of which £150 is required for food. A large amount; but consider what is achieved with it!

Average out the cost per head of the recipients of this truly practical charity, and compare it with what is met with in so many quarters elsewhere. Send £10 to Dr. Barnardo, and you will defray the entire cost of emigrating a boy or girl and placing him or her in suitable employment in Ontario, including outfit, rail fares and ocean passage. Send him £13 10s. and you defray the entire cost of supporting a boy or girl boarded out in some rural district. Send him £16 and you support a healthy child in his homes for a year. In short, a child is fed, clothed, lodged and educated in Dr. Barnardo's Homes for less than tenpence three-farthings a day.

EAST LONDON TABERNACLE.

Pastor A. G. Brown's return to his people has been marked by blessed gatherings at the East London Tabernacle. On Saturday evening (31st ult.) the prayer meeting was attended by over 1200 people. On the Lord's Day's the Tabernacle was packed morning and evening. Monday being the annual Thankoffering Day, Mr. Brown sat in his vestry (as has been his custom for many years) from morning to night. By 7 a.m. offerers were waiting, one of the first having walked from Islington. Throughout the day they continued coming in a steady stream. Four crowded prayer-meetings were held during the day. At the close, the amount raised was:—In bank notes, £20; in cheques, £105 11s.; in postal orders, £3 14s.; in sovereigns, £155; in half-sovereigns, £64; in five-shilling pieces, £7 10s; in four-shilling pieces, £1 16s.; in half-crowns, £37 10s.; in florins, £27 18s.; in shillings, £17 10s.; in sixpences, £3 19s. 6d.; in threepennies and coppers, 12s. 2d.; the total being thus £445 0s. 8d.

THE GOSPEL IN HAITI.

Rev. L. Ton Evans, of Jacmel, Haiti, writes of a new departure in connection with his work:—"Although our regular chapel services number six weekly, we have lately started semi-open-air meetings, which are held in the worst part of the city, if we can call one part worse than another. The truest description of things morally here can be best got in the first of Romans. Three services are held on week nights, with an additional one oftentimes on Sunday evening while the usual service goes on at the chapel. While conducting these I often stand on the threshold of a small, low shingled and not over clean shanty or hut, with some one of the people at my side holding a tiny tin lamp. The audience is a medley of Jamaicans, Barbadians, Dominicans, Lucians, and Haitians, who sit around the door or stand in the street.

"One of our greatest needs just now is a day-school for the training of our own and other children who wish for a Protestant education. It is not only most discouraging for us to see those who attend the Sunday-school once a week being obliged the other six days to attend a Roman Catholic place and receive their instruction from a priest, but most inconsistent. I have been corresponding with one or two friends in England re a suitable person. Should these friends succeed, such a person would hardly come to Haiti without having his or her salary guaranteed. During the last few days a native has been brought to our notice who is a thorough Christian, and also competent for such a position, especially for a few years, after which he can be removed into the interior, but we are again debarred from entering into negotiations by this question of salary. Should a school be started, I am certain that in six or twelve months at furthest, by means of Government grant and a small fee from pupils, it would be entirely self-supporting,

"The resources of the few brethren here will soon be taxed to their utmost capacity in trying to build the much-needed mission house, which cannot, however, be attempted without help from outside. A generous friend in South Wales has promised £50 towards this object; we shall require at least £200 more. Ignorance, superstition, and idolatry abound. The Vaudoo worship is of the most licentious character, and invariably leads to the sacrifice of human life. Snakes are used to represent the god worshipped. A little from here, and on the border of the city, we heard the noise of another party of devil-worshippers. These practices are by no means confined to the interior."

LIVERPOOL SHELTERING HOME.

A cablegram has been received from Mrs. Birt telling of her safe arrival in Canada with a party of 106 boys and girls from the Sheltering Home, Liverpool.

Friends who were on board to see them sail agreed in remarking what a fine-looking band of young settlers they appeared. Indeed, there has been much pleasure and comfort in the work among the children during the past winter; they have manifested an eager desire for improvement, and the interest in the Scripture lessons and Mrs. Birt's Sunday-class has been deep and marked. Most of these children can repeat many passages of Scripture, and their memories are also stored with many hymns. The prayers of Christian friends are asked that these impressions for good may not vanish away like early dew, but may be enduring in their new surroundings.

Miss L. M. Birt remains in Liverpool during Mrs. Birt's absence, and is daily admitting footsore and hungry little ones to the "Sheltering Home." Any help from kind friends will be much appreciated towards providing for the outfits and passage money of the forty-fourth band of children.

PRAYER UNION FOR LONDON.—The object of this Union is to promote earnest united prayer for all the inhabitants of the great City, especially for the upper classes, every Thursday, that God will abundantly pour out his Holy Spirit upon them, that they may be saved and sanctified, and that those who are already followers of Christ may be stirred up to work more earnestly for Him among those in their own immediate circle. Also for an awakening in the churches and a special blessing on the clergy and ministers. Subscription for the year 1s., to defray expenses of printing and postage.—Apply, Mrs. H. Vaughan-Jackson, Potters Bar, Middlesex.

MEETINGS IN BOURNEMOUTH.

Sunday to Tuesday, April 1 to 3, were important missionary days in Bournemouth. The societies represented have been the Baptist Missionary Society, the Baptist Zenana Work, and the Congo-Balolo Mission. The services at the West Cliff Tabernacle on Sunday were conducted by Rev. F. Harmon, of China, and Dr. Harry Guinness, of Harley College. The collections were on behalf of the Baptist Missionary Society, and made the total for the financial year just closed of £82 from the West Cliff Tabernacle. In addition to this, the quarterly meeting of the Missionary Prayer Union was held in the afternoon. The report showed that the daily gifts of the members for the past quarter, with the addition of the afternoon collections and a few other items, made the total for the quarter of £30 11s. 2d. This goes for the support of Mr. Hale, of Agra, the missionary who represents the Prayer Union.

On Monday Dr. Guinness held two meetings on behalf of the Congo-Balolo Mission. In the afternoon he gave his lecture on Africa, part of which he repeated at the evening meeting. Both the lecture and the views by which it was illustrated were most interesting. Many of the views were from photographs taken by the doctor during his recent visit to Africa, and helped to give a most graphic picture of the country and its people. It is to be hoped that some friend of missions and missionaries will lay to heart the doctor's contrast between the houses of the Balolo Mission and those of the Baptist Mission on the Congo, which, by being raised some feet from the ground by means of numerous piles, diminish to a very large extent the danger arising from the unhealthy state of the climate. A sum of about £1500 is needed to rebuild the houses of the Balolo Mission on this improved plan. Will not some friend or friends come forward and provide the amount, and so help to preserve the lives of these devoted labourers? It would be, not a waste of wealth, but a wise measure of economy.

Additional interest was given to the evening meeting by the fact that of the two outgoing missionaries, one of them, Mr. Hayes, was connected with the Bournemouth Y.M.C.A., and will still be partly supported by the members of that institution. After he and Mr. Ruskin had spoken, a few appropriate words of farewell were spoken by Rev. W. C. Minnifie. It is certain that these two brethren will be frequently remembered in the prayers of Bournemouth young men.

The Baptist Zenana work was represented on Tuesday afternoon, when the report showed that the ladies of Bournemouth had raised during the past year over £60. Of this no less than £28 comes from the church at Boscombe, under the pastoral charge of Rev. N. V. Robinson, B.A. The meeting was remarkable as expressing true Christian unity. It was held in the school-room of the Congregational Church, presided over by Rev. J. Ossian Davies, and addressed not only by the Baptist ministers of the town, but by Miss Bland, from Agra, connected with the zenana work of the Church of England.

The missionary spirit is growing in Bournemouth. In this fact many of us find reason to hope for large blessing. G. W.

TIBETAN PIONEER MISSION.

Dear Sirs,—The Manora, with our Tibetan Mission party on board, arrived safely at Calcutta on Saturday week. A prayer meeting for Tibet is held here at 8 p.m. on the first Friday in every month; another prayer meeting will, until further notice, be held on the third Friday of every month, at the rooms of the Y.M.C.A., 59, 60, Cornhill, E.C., at 7 p.m. Tea at 6.30. The latest news of the pioneer party will be given, and it is hoped that all friends, who can, will come to this meeting.

I hope in a few days to send all our donors a financial statement of the mission funds, and some account of the voyage out to India and other matters of interest.—Faithfully yours, William Sharp.

Roswyn, Beulah Hill, Norwood, S.E.

THE SOCIETY FOR THE RELIEF OF DISTRESS.—The thirty-third annual report states that last year grants were made amounting in the aggregate to £2750. The relief is administered by almoners visiting the poor in various parts of London, and without reference to creed or nationality. All the expenses of the society are defrayed by a guarantee committee of noblemen and gentlemen. The secretary is Mr C. H. Gosset, 78, Jermyn-street, S.W.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.

The fifteenth anniversary of this flourishing offshoot of the Children's Special Service Mission was held on Thursday in Exeter Hall. The afternoon meeting was largely attended, many young people, who might be regarded as the elder members of the C.S.U., being present, with local secretaries from all parts of the land, as well as S.S. teachers, parents, and Christian workers among the children.

Rev. E. A. Stuart, who presided, read the portion for the day (2 Cor. ii.), and pointed out four important rules for workers, given in verse 17. First, the work must be undertaken in sincerity, with a single eye to His glory, and not for our own advantage or pleasure. Second, it must be of God, that is, we must be commissioned to do it by Him and not merely by man. Third, it must be carried on in the sight of God and with a view only to his approbation. Fourth, the worker must be in Christ, realising he can do nothing without Christ.

Mr. H. Hutchinson made a brief statement showing the goodness of God during the past year. There are now all over the world in connection with the C.S.U. some six hundred thousand reading the Bible day by day. At home there are about four thousand branches, and we have added some twenty-three thousand members in this land during the past year. Numbers are not the main thing sought after; but it is something to praise God for, to know that so many are reading the Word regularly, pondering it, and praying over it. Moreover, these branches are centres of Christian effort, as well as training grounds for missionary service. It is matter for rejoicing that so many of the members have already been thrust forth into the mission field. The work abroad is also progressing most satisfactorily. There is, however, one drawback, and that is, that the finances of the Children's Special Service Mission have fallen short this year, the income being from £800 to £900 less than last year. Surely such a fact has only to be mentioned to call forth instant response from the friends of the children.

Rev. G. F. Pentecost, D.D., opened his address with a few pointed words to those—and they are not extinct yet—who are always inclined to doubt and question the conversion of children. Passing on, he emphasized the value of the little ones being taught to memorize the Holy Scriptures, and thus lay up a store of Bible knowledge for the days to come. Three incidents from his own evangelistic career supplied fresh illustration of the possibility of early conversion and of the exceeding simplicity and strength of the faith of the little ones. Thus the speaker came to the logical conclusion that children may be saved, that they need to be saved, that they are worth saving; and that such a work as this is one of the most blessed forms of Christian service in the whole world.

Hon. and Rev. W. Talbot-Rice spoke of the value of beginning early, so that along life of usefulness may be spent in the service of God. He exhorted all present to be very diligent in spreading abroad a knowledge of the Word of God, seeing that these young people will very shortly meet the wave of doubt and scepticism, and there is danger of their being engulfed if they are not firmly founded on the Rock. In the course of further remarks, the speaker suggested that one of the very best ways of spending a holiday and getting real good out of it, is to take an active share in the children's services at some seaside resort.

The Chairman, speaking of the value of Bible study, enlarged on the fact that the Old Testament was the Bible of our Saviour, the book He loved, meditated upon, and quoted from. Probably He never possessed a copy of the Scriptures, knowing it from diligent perusal of the synagogue roll. And in order to read this, He had to study hard the language, which was even then a dead language. Yet so familiar did He become with his Father's Book that all his teaching was based on it, all his texts drawn from it, all his expositions concerned it. Alike in his public ministry and private life this Word of God was his stay. Seeing, then, that our Lord and Master thus treasured and pondered the Word and found profit therein, do we not well to make its study the aim of our lives and strength of our souls?

Mr. A. G. Dodderidge maintained that the grand plea of the C.S.U. is its singular usefulness. Of this he gave several instances, showing how not a few now doing good service were led to God through reading the Word as members of the C.S.U. After describing various phases of the work in many parts, he mentioned that at St. Leonards there are now 800 members; while in Edinburgh, as the result of a recent mission, a splendid and vigorous branch has been started among the public schoolboys; in Ealing there are 720 members doing a good work; at Brighton over 200 members were added last year after a special mission; and one village branch (with six villages) has 250 members. These things, he felt, ought to encourage and animate all workers in the C.S.U.

Mr. R. Naylor, of Derby, spoke of our chart (the Word of God), our call, our life work, our separation, and our readiness to confess Him wherever we may be. The afternoon meeting then closed with prayer.

The evening meeting was presided over by the Dean of Norwich, who addressed his hearers as "Lovers of the Bible," and expressed his astonishment when he learned how widespread an organisation this Scripture Union was. He believed it to be a splendid work, and wished it increased success. Mr. Frank Anderson, of Exeter College (Oxford), spoke about the temptations of a boy at home before going to a private school, then at the private school, at the public school, and at the University. He argued that the best means of overcoming all was to have received, while a boy at home, the Word of God as written for himself, and to trust in the Christ of whom it spoke. Rev. W. H. Stone impressed upon them the importance of being glad in the Lord, so as to do all in their power to refute the argument so much used by the Evil One, which made the young people think religion was a dull thing. Soldiers marched best to music, and the more of gladness we have in our hearts and shining through our faces the better we shall serve the Lord, and the more will our efforts be blessed. The other speakers were Messrs. Barclay, Naylor, and Arrowsmith, who spoke heartfelt words of counsel and encouragement.

THE LORD MY SHEPHERD.

The Lord my Shepherd is, and I his sheep,
He loved me, sought me, found me, and now keeps;
And I can sing
I shall not want.

'Tis his own hand that maketh me lie down
In greenest pastures, or by desert pool;
So I can say
He feedeth me.

'Tis his own hand the fitting medicine gives,
Restoring my sick soul by chastening—sweet
If I can still Rest in his love.

'Tis his own hand that leadeth me by paths
Of righteousness, and peace, and holy joy;
So I can trust
I shall not stray.

Yea, though I walk the valley path of death,
I see, beyond, the glorious light of day;
And I can shout,
I'll fear no ill!

For Thou, my blessèd Lord, art ever nigh
To comfort, chasten, help, and strengthen me;
So I can wait,
Fearless thy call.

Though foes surround me, Thou dost spread thy board,
And bid'st me eat, anointed with thy grace;
Shall I neglect
Such fare divine?

Thou mak'st my cup run o'er—thy goodness still Fills it brimful, by day and night alway;
Surely I know
Thy mercies well!

But, best of all, thy house is my abode
To-day, to-morrow, and for length of days;
And I shall dwell
With Thee for aye!

A HOME OF REST was opened at Ramsgate in January, at Restholme, 1, Arkdow-terrace. The house is well situated, having a view of the sea in front and a garden at the back, and it is within three minutes' walk of the sea front. The arrangements of the house are very comfortable and homelike, and the terms very moderate. Application should be made to Lady Wills, Restholme.

GOSPEL WORK, ROTHERHITHE.

Rotherhithe is a locality in the south-east of London, not generally known to the Christian public as a field of evangelistic work. It ranks with some of the East-end neighbourhoods for poverty and squalor. In this part of the metropolis the late Mr. G. S. Golding carried on a most successful Gospel mission. It began in a small way and soon increased. For years the late founder gathered into an iron building, capable of holding about 1500 persons, a congregation of working men and women, who have sustained the place, and God greatly blessed his efforts. He was just contemplating the erection of a permanent hall when influenza attacked him in December last, and in a few days his earthly work was finished.

Mr. Golding was peculiarly adapted for the work, An Irishman by birth, and educated for the medical profession, he was a splendid platform man, quick, sharp, brimful of native wit, and a most acceptable preacher of the Gospel. It can be easily imagined that it was no easy task to fill the gap made by his death. The friends at Rotherhithe, however, at once selected Mr. Thos. Richardson, who had often preached for them, and who is so well known in connection with Mr. Charrington's work at the Great Assembly Hall for the last eighteen years, to fill the vacancy. We think they have well chosen, for Mr. Richardson's preaching powers have long been recognised at such places as Exeter Hall, Agricultural Hall, Morley Hall; in fact, both in London and the provinces our brother has been greatly blessed. A Scotchman, full of fire and tremendous earnestness, with a sound Gospel message, he is likely to advance the cause of Christ at Rotherhithe in a way that perhaps few other men could have done.

It was no wonder that on Monday week the Rotherhithe Hall was crowded in every part to give him a welcome. Four hundred members and friends sat down to tea, after which Mr. W. H. Seagram presided. Mr. Richardson said he was very grateful to the friends who had rallied round him in such large numbers, especially those from the Great Assembly Hall. From the first he had received their sympathy, and it was most gratifying to him to know that he still retained their friendship. During the short time he had been preaching at Rotherhithe God had signally blessed his efforts, and the week night services had increased. If this state of things continued they would have to go into larger premises. All the different agencies in connection with the work, he was glad to say, were flourishing.

Mr. Seagram said he was a new friend, but hoped to be a true friend. Mr. Richardson, he was sure, would be blessed; but he would be in a great measure what they made him, for the people largely made the preacher. They were not to be mere critics, but to bear him up in their prayers and help him all they could. After other speeches, a most profitable and enjoyable evening was brought to a close.

DR. D. A. MOXEY.

Dr. Moxey has been for some weeks conducting the ordinary services on the Lord's day in Duncan-street Baptist Chapel, Edinburgh. His addresses to believers as to life and service, have been most heart-searching, while his plain and pointed appeals to the unconverted have been the means of awakening several to earnest inquiry. The Lord has been present in power with his servant. A number, specially of young people, have been waiting to the after meeting, at the close of the evening services, some of whom it is believed have been led to Christ. The Lord's people have been praying for some time that He would revive his work in their midst, and now they are cheered by seeing their prayers answered.

Dr. and Mrs. Moxey are on the eve of sailing for the United States, where they purpose spending a few months. The prayers of many will follow them that they may be used there for large blessing.

TORQUAY.—The Chelston Evangelistic Mission, established some years ago by the Dowager Countess of Castlestuart, is being much blessed. The hall is situated in the midst of a growing working-class population. The open-air services are largely attended. Souls are being saved and believers built up. Mr. Levi Powell ist he evangelist. The mission is under the wing of the Country Towns' Mission.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

INDIA.

With the title "The Salvation Army in India," a series of graphic letters by Mrs. General Keer has been issued from the International Headquarters, London. Mrs. Keer is a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Somerville, and, with her husband, has spent a good many years in India. She has spent some months in viewing the Indian battle-ground, and bears strong testimony to the devotion and zeal of the European and native officers of the Salvation Army. In a letter from Nagercoil, Travancore, she says:—

"I am perfectly amazed at the strength given to endure that the officers have. A fine girl (Geikie) from Dundee lives with her native girl-lieutenant in a village. She loves her people and her work, and they almost worship her. Yet that beautiful affection has been got and retained by the most indescribable sacrifices of personal comfort on her part. . . This house is a large native bungalow. All my meals I eat on the floor. I wear no shoes. The mud floor is comfortable. Mats are about. Native clothes are a mercy in India! I never could have made a day and night railway journey, slept on a railway-platform on camp bed, and travelled by bullock-bandy for twenty-two hours, without great distress, in European clothes. But I did not suffer as I was.

"The high-caste people have caused tremendous persecution, but seeing the pariahs stand firm, and marvelling at the change in them, they are now asking for meetings to be held for themselves. The pariahs are economical and good financiers, and make capital local officers already. Devil-dancing is just Spiritualism and Mediumism. I have got heaps of information about it. It is a great expense to a village, as so many sheep have to be sacrificed. Now, with temple and village spiritual fund handed over to the Army, they will soon be self-supporting and a strong missionary power religiously.

"They have an army of these witch and wizard people converted—Satan really dispossessed of their bodies. These people make capital sergeants, being accustomed to lead their villages. These people are music-daft, and there was so much of that in the devil-worship; it was a great attraction. Now, all these nice tunes are better for really beautiful Christian words, and, like the singers themselves, the devil is dispossessed and Christ enthroned. Hallelujah! If anyone testifies to what he is not living the rest would at once stop him! Holiness-conscience works beautifully in these late children of darkness. If once they feel condemned, they go and confess the backsliding. It is a real movement of God's Spirit, as remarkable as—much more so than—the Irish revival, because these are heathen brought to God in fifties and hundreds, and they stand well and suffer and give and astonish their caste neighbours and co-pariahs. The great want is officers to go to the villages.

"I have reached the people of India at last, and long to go on to new villages and see the harvest reaped. This activity of the Army is reacting on others already. Out of these pariah villages will come India's deliverers! 'The last shall be first, and the first last.' Oh, it is all well—well worth having come for! Certainly God, not man, has put the golden sickle into the hand of The Salvation Army wherewith to reap the Indian harvest!"

GENERAL BOOTH'S JUBILEE.

An interesting series of meetings in connection with the Salvation Army was held on Monday and Tuesday in the Queen's Hall, Langham-place. The object of the meetings was to celebrate, not only the sixty-fifth birthday of General Booth, but the jubilee of his conversion to Christ, and to help forward the formation of a fund which shall assist "the General" in his social schemes. On Monday morning the General was enthusiastically received, and gave one of his characteristic addresses, in which he dwelt upon the fact that their work must always be of a fighting character. They had to go against the stream, and the world was against them; but if their lives were to be made more acceptable to God, they must be content to fight.

Large as was the gathering in the morning, it was far exceeded by that of the afternoon. General Booth again conducted the service. Having read a portion of 2 Corinthians vi., the General commented thereon. They might, he remarked, say that they knew all about theology and so on, but they would be asked where was their heart. That was the standard by which they would be measured. They had the promises of God before them, contained in his word, and all they had to do was to present them at the bank and cash them. Another crowded and impressive meeting was held in the evening.

MEDICAL MISSIONS IN CHINA.

In a letter dated Lao-ho-kóu, January 7th, Dr. Parrott writes:—

"I have thought much and prayed much about the question of our staying here. It is the most central place, and the largest between Hankow and Si-ngan. There are lots of small cities and towns either side of the river all the way up from Hankow where the Gospel is not preached. We might seek to occupy one of these, but if we did so, we could not expect to reach nearly so large a number of persons as in a place like Lao-ho-kóu, to which place merchants and others come from all quarters.

"There is no place which could be so well used as a basis of operations for Si-ngan as this, so that until the way is open for us to go on to Si-ngan and others come to take on the work here, I feel inclined to stay. Indeed it seems to be the only open door before us.

"Lao-ho-kóu is said to have a population of 100,000. The C.I.M. friends have a mission-house at Kuang-how, three miles from Lao-ho-kóu, and a preaching-room in Lao-ho-kóu itself. Two of the three C.I.M. brethren are here for only a few months; the third has not yet learned much of the language, so that if we do not stay here not much will be done to reach the large population of the place."

Dr. Parrott's address is, care of China Inland Mission, Hankow, China.

WORK FOR CHINESE WOMEN.

Writing from Shanghai, China, on February 15, Mrs. Dalziel says:—

"We have had the privilege of another year of sowing the good seed amongst heathen women. Our work is a kind of local itineration in districts thickly populated; many are willing to listen to the Gospel story, for which we are thankful and full of hope. While our special object is to reach the women, we get crowds of children, who seem to be interested, and they often lead us to their homes; indeed some follow us from house to house for quite a long time. I have no doubt that many little ones will receive impressions which will lead them to inquire further about the doctrine. I should be glad for the prayers of those who are specially interested in children.

"Hitherto the Lord has helped and blessed us in our work, and sent means for carrying it on; therefore with thanksgiving we will trust Him to supply all our needs for this year also. Pray for us that we may be filled with the Holy Spirit, and be endued with power from on High."

Mrs. Dalziel may be addressed, care of Rev. S. Dyer, British and Foreign Bible Society Depôt, Shanghai, China.

SAILORS IN SWEDEN.

Work among sailors on a small scale has been carried on for several years in the port of Malmö, having been started at the time of one of Mr. Reginald Radcliffe's visits to Sweden. About four years ago the need of larger rooms was greatly felt, and soon after a very suitable hall, holding about 200 people, was provided. Since then the Lord has greatly blessed the united efforts of those of his children who take part in the work. Meetings are being held every night, taken in turns by friends connected with the various denominations of the place.

The number of sailors attending the meetings is considerably increasing year by year. They are mostly Scandinavians or English. During the last three or four months, on account of the end of the great coal strike, a number of English ships have visited the port, and we have constantly been having good English audiences. As never before these British friends have shown their interest, and our hearts have been greatly cheered by seeing definite result by way of some of them being brought to trust the Lord.

We earnestly request the prayers of those of our readers who take an interest in work among our seafaring brothers, that his name may be continually made known from sea to sea. H. R.

MOSLEM AND DRUSE ORPHANS.

Miss Taylor's Orphanage for Moslem and Druse Girls, Beyrout, is an excellent institution, the work of which we have frequently described. The following incident from the report for 1893 illustrates the difficulties with which Miss Taylor, and others who work among children in Syria, have to contend:—

"We had quite a scene in the school the other day. A youth and a friend came with the mother of one of the girls, to get my consent to have the daughter engaged to the youth. On questioning him, I found he had never been to school. I said he must prove himself worthy of the girl, and I gave him three months to learn to read and then return to me, when I would see whether he was worthy of the girl. His father was a well-to-do business man in the mountain, and has to get someone to make up his accounts and write his letters, as is common in this country. He said his bride would teach him to read. Well, three months passed, and back came the youth, with his uncle and cousin and the father and mother of the girl, to take her right off. He had learned to spell out words of four letters, and said he would soon learn to write and read! I did everything in my power to get them to let the girl stay for two years more, as she is only fourteen years of age, and I felt it a disgrace to take the girl so young. I thought they came for my consent, but they had brought everything necessary for the marriage, and it was no use talking. We had prayer with the girl, and after much kind counsel I allowed the mother to take her with her. I gave her a new Bible, and hope she will make good use of it. I believe her to be a very good girl, and her knowledge of Scripture often surprised me. She came to me very young, and was six years in the school. Will you aid us in pleading for her from time to time, that the lessons she was taught here may not be lost, and that the seed sown may appear in time and bring forth much fruit?"

As an instance of the encouragement received from time to time, the following is given:—"This morning I visited one of our women, a widow; two of her girls are with me and have been in the Institution four years. They are Moslems. The room was clean, but cold and damp. No wonder she had an attack of pleurisy. She was getting better of fever, and came to the meeting on Sunday and saw the doctor. When I spoke to her of the Great Physician, healer of both soul and body, she said—'I know Jesus Christ. He is my Saviour. Will you pray for me that I may have patience to bear this pain, and if I die will you take care of my children?' The gratitude of the poor woman was overpowering. One of her expressions was, 'O, mother of the poor, long life to you. May the Lord Jesus send you all you need.' . . . One mother said that while her girl was very ill she sang beautiful hymns with a sweet, sweet voice, and would tell her mother time after time to get her ready to return to school."

The general secretary and treasurer of the work is Mr. William Ferguson, Kinmundy, near Mintlaw, Aberdeenshire.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For open-air work in Shrewsbury and the villages around.—For open-air work in the West-end.—For blessing on a series of Bible-readings.—For blessing on a mission in St. Clement's parish, Oxford, until April 22, conducted by Mr. J. Brown, of the Evangelisation Society.—For blessing on a mission at St. Luke's, Manningham, Bradford, by Mr. J. Neech, commencing April 15.

WAPPING.—Mr. H. Bacon, evangelist in charge of the Congregational Hall, Old Gravel-lane, Wapping, E., writes: "The Congregational Union have here a capital building, capable of holding some hundreds of persons; but it has been decided to close it, unless the result of a special mission, commencing April 15, shall justify continuance of effort. That, ostensibly, will be the reason for ceasing the work, but the underlying fact is that a dozen men and women cannot at present be found 'to spend and be spent' for Christ in the neighbourhood. The Ritualists and Romanists are positively boasting that they have almost succeeded in driving us out of the place. Where are those Christians who want to be introduced to the heathen in our own land? Let them come to Wapping! I am sure, if we can only secure the voluntary help of true, whole-hearted, single-eyed workers for visiting, open-air meetings, etc., Mr. Mearns, Mr. Gates, and the committee would gladly reconsider their decision. I shall be glad to hear from persons willing to help."

MR. THORNE AT BARNET.

A Gospel Mission remarkable because of its perfect unity, was held in Barnet by Mr. Henry Thorne, from March 18 to 26, in connection with the P.S.A. Ministers and leading members of all Evangelical denominations heartily worked together for the success of the mission. A large number profess to have received definite blessing, while many Christians have had their spiritual life quickened. Not a few have been led to consecrate their lives afresh to the Master's service. The mission was preceded by a week of united prayer meetings, which proved a season of much refreshment, and many of the prayers then offered received definite answers during the following week.

The services were held each evening in the Town Hall till Friday, the 23rd, when, as the hall would not contain the crowds, the trustees of the Wesleyan church kindly lent their building for the purposes of the mission. The closing meeting of the series was held on Monday, March 26, and took the form of a thanksgiving service, short addresses being delivered by Rev. J. Matthews, Rev. C. E. Mees, Messrs. E. C. Jukes, E. B. Rogers, H. W. Taylor, and J. Terry, besides the missioner. Helpful Bible readings were held in the schoolrooms of the various denominations during the week, and were well attended. As results of the mission there have been established a united prayer meeting, held on Sunday mornings at 7.30, and a monthly united Gospel service, to be held in rotation at the various places of worship at the conclusion of the usual evening service.

The annual meeting of the Thorne Evangelistic Mission was held on Friday evening at Exeter Hall, and both for interest and attendance exceeded any previous meeting. Mr. George Williams, the president, occupied the chair. Mr. Thorne's report comprised a large field of work of missions held in the metropolis and in the counties of England and Wales, and he was able to give abundant testimony as to how God had owned and blessed his work.

Rev. J. Gossett Tanner spoke of the direct character of Mr. Thorne's teaching and preaching. Rev. John Jermyn gave testimony to the blessing which had been imparted, more particularly to the members of his church, in the revival of spiritual life. Rev. J. Matthews and Mr. E. B. Rogers gave the meetings some of the blessed results which had accrued from Mr. Thorne's mission recently held at High Barnet. Dr. Barnardo, who was unable to be present, sent a helper who supplied some interesting facts to prove how much Mr. Thorne had been appreciated at the Edinburgh Castle.

UNION HALL MISSION.

The annual gatherings of this Mission were held at Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road, on Thursday last. Much interest was manifested in this work, which was commenced in the time of the great awakening in 1859. Many friends assembled both afternoon and evening. The meeting in the afternoon was held in the large room adjoining the hall, which was quite full. Much praise and prayer were offered, and very earnest addresses were delivered. Mr. W. Blair Neatby, Mr. John Churchill, Mr. W. H. Harley, Mr. Charles Inglis, and Colonel W. D. Forster took part.

In the evening meeting the large hall was well filled. After prayer Mr. Robert Bilke read a brief report of the work during the past year, showing that God had given much prosperity, both among the adults and children, in the halls, in the open-air preaching, and in the house-to-house visitation. The balance-sheet showed a deficiency of over £40, and the report speaks of curtailing the work for want of means. Helpful addresses were delivered by various friends.

WAYSIDE VILLAGE MISSION.—A new mission hall is being built in St. John's-road, Tunbridge Wells, as the headquarters of this Mission, carried on by Mr. John McAuliffe by means of a Bible carriage and colporteurs. The object is "purely evangelistic work amongst the working people"; and the hall is identified with no particular denomination. The cost of the building and the land is nearly £3000. A branch of the work has during the last month been commenced at High Brooms, where the Brick Company have placed a mission room at Mr. McAuliffe's disposal. About 100 children belong to the Sunday-school, the Sunday evening services are well attended, and the mothers' meeting and other branches have been inaugurated with promise of success

CAMBERWELL RAGGED SCHOOLS.

There were ragged schools before the Ragged School Union was formed fifty years ago, and one of the oldest in the metropolis is that which still briskly carries on work at Camberwell, with a history behind it of eighty-four years. In spite of its years, it gives to-day no sign of old age. A few years ago the school was rebuilt, and it now stands in the front rank as to accommodation, appliances, and scope of work.

To many Camberwell still carries a flavour of gentility and fresh air, but this institution is right in the midst of a district which excels in all the nastiness that goes to furnish a London slum. It is certainly the right place for a ragged school.

Friends from far and near met on Tuesday week to celebrate the completion of another year's work and to take counsel as to the future. The report read by Mr. A. H. Ward, joint secretary, was most encouraging. As many as 600 children come to the open doors every Sunday, and there is a band of hope of more than 200 members. Bible-classes are well attended, and thrift, housewifery, and domesticity are taught in a variety of ways to the young people.

Perhaps there is no branch of the work which gives a better insight into the poverty of the people than the mothers' meeting. More than a hundred attend every Monday afternoon. The women are largely engaged in laundries, rag shops, pill-box making, and street hawking. In many cases they are the bread-winners, as the husbands are "odd jobbers," whose employment is always uncertain. One woman of seventy years supports herself and husband making seed sample bags at 10d. a gross. Her hands are never idle, not even at the mothers' meeting.

The meeting was characterised by a fine tone of hopefulness. Mr. E. Rawlings, Revs. G. W. Kelsey, J. Bryant French, Mr. W. A. Bewes, and Mr. W. C. Collins, friends new and old, gave most encouraging addresses. Mr. John Kirk, who has been a worker in the school for eighteen years, appealed for help, personal and monetary, so that the work may be carried on efficiently. A larger income would enable the crêche to be opened, which the hard-working mothers desire so much.

SERMON APPETITE IN WALES.

In some English towns and villages the least powerful attraction is a sermon: in some parts of Wales it is the strongest. More people will flock from long distances to a preaching festival than to a circus or a fair. Each of the three chief denominations in each county holds an annual convention lasting two days, in the course of which nine sermons are delivered, frequently two or three at one service, thus making twenty-seven sermons for each county; and 324 altogether, besides the regular Sunday and week day services.

They greatly err who preach to a company of colliers with less careful preparation than to a well-dressed congregation of tradespeople. Sermons are the chief educators of the Welsh, their principal recreation, and the chief topic of their social converse.

PRAYER AND PREACHING.

The writer has heard from a thoroughly authentic source the following instances of usefulness through the agency of a City missionary. In a certain suburb there was a man notorious for drinking, swearing, and intense enmity to religion. It was his pride to break up a meeting. He has assaulted the preachers, and put them out by main force.

An agent, who was his chief victim, persevered in prayer and personal effort till his faith was honoured by God in the sound conversion of this foe to the Gospel. He became an anxious inquirer, a true penitent, and an example of godliness. His companions jeered, and declared he would soon give up religion. One of them vowed he would make him swear and fight as before; so, without provocation, he suddenly hit him a severe blow with his fist, giving him a black eye, and expected this would rouse his anger and bring on a fight. Instead of this the convert, though a powerful pugilist, remained perfectly still, retaliating neither by word nor blow. The missionary asked how he was able to bear such an injury. He replied: "I prayed very hard, and my hands were quite helpless; I could not move them if I had wished."

THE STRANGERS' REST.

A special interest attached to the meeting last Friday evening, because Mr. J. Theo. Isaac had returned with renewed health from his recent journey to Egypt. The time was chiefly occupied in hearing about this ancient and wonderful Bible land. Mr. John M'Call, who presided, gave a most interesting description of his visits to the Great Pyramid; we have not space for details.

Mr. Isaac said that his journey had been for health-gaining rather than sight-seeing, but he had enjoyed lovely weather, and seen many things of great interest. At Naples he found a good work being done at the Strangers' Rest by Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Burrows; and the Strangers' Rest at Port Said is doing a good service amid many discouragements. Not least was the impression gained from the earnest Christians to be found among the English soldiers in Egypt. He attended a delightful meeting, where fifty soldiers were engaged in prayer and the hearty singing of Sankey's hymns.

After an appeal from Mr. Isaac for more lady workers, Mr. Rivolta told what was done at the Strangers' Rest at the recent holiday season. Mr. R. C. Morgan spoke briefly concerning the meetings for thanksgiving at the Great Assembly Hall.

HELP FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

During the past year more than eight hundred admissions have been recorded at Miss Mason's Houses of Rest for Christian workers in St. John's Wood and Eastbourne. Many of these have been missionaries and Zenana workers from all parts of the world; besides those who are toiling on in our home mission fields. One writes:—"No one can tell what a comfort your House of Rest has been to me upon my return home after years of absence to find scarcely a relative or friend living whom I left behind me." Another says:—"Hundreds of the Lord's labourers are daily thanking God that He ever put it into your heart to provide a home for us when by stress of sickness or weariness we are driven for a time to seek a quiet resting place."

I might fill pages with similar testimonies, but I desire to mention the latest addition to our agencies, viz., the Aged Workers' Home. This provides a life-long home for Christian workers when over sixty years of age. There are already seven in the Home, all considerably over sixty and some over seventy years of age. God has given abundant blessing upon every department of the work; but increased help is much needed at the present time, especially for the seaside house at Eastbourne which has for years proved an untold blessing to Christian workers of all denominations. About £300 is also needed for the building fund of the Aged Workers' Home. Several aged ones are anxiously waiting for their comfortable room, and will be admitted as soon as this sum is paid off.

POLICE SEASIDE HOME.

The fourth annual meeting of this Institution at West Brighton was held on Tuesday, April 3; Dr. Robert Anderson presided. Addresses were given by the Countess of Chichester, Capt. Drummond, Dr. A. B. Stoney, and Miss Vaughan Barber, of the C.P.A. Reference was made to the Christian atmosphere of the Home and to the rich spiritual blessing which has rested on the work; many weary sin-sick souls have found rest in Jesus, and gone forth with renewed bodily health and new spiritual life to witness for the Master.

There remains a small debt of £250 on the build-fund, and any help towards this object will be received by the hon. sec., Miss May Griffin, 51, Clarendon-villas, West Brighton.

SOCIETY FOR THE PROTECTION OF BIRDS.—The third annual report shows that this society has 9159 members, with 483 associates, whose subscriptions are the only fixed income for maintaining the work. The society aims at obtaining an extension of the existing laws for the protection of wild birds and their eggs, also, and immediately, "to use every legitimate means of bringing public opinion to cry 'shame!' on the fashion which causes its votaries to incite the destruction of untold numbers of—say egrets, for the sake of obtaining 'a soft thing, that waves,' as head-gear; or, swallows and sea-fowl for 'Mercury' wings, torn off often (Yarrell tells us) from the living birds, which are then flung aside to perish slowly in festering heaps; or, robins for general purposes as exhibited this Christmas at a well-known emporium, sixty-two on a stand with further supplies in drawers, at 1s. 4½d. a-piece." The Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals renders valuable co-operation. The secretary of the society is Mrs. F. E. Lemon, Hillcrest, Redhill.

THE CORK STREET-PREACHING.

The following account appears in Monday's telegraphic correspondence to The Times:—

The members of the Open-air Evangelistic Mission resumed their services on Sunday evening. Rev. R. C. Hallowes, who gained some years ago a good deal of notoriety at Arklow in connection with similar evangelistic services in that town, came to-day to the aid of the Cork members of the Mission, and when his identity was discovered he became the object of special attention from both the police and the mob. The missioners met, as usual, on the South Mall. There was then a goodly number of people on the scene, which is within view of the headquarters of the police force. Two hymns were sung without interruption, but when Mr. Hallowes began to speak, the police, who were among the spectators on Parnell Bridge and within earshot of what was being said, advanced on the preachers, the mob, in a menacing manner, closing around them at the same time. The preachers were moved on amid cries from the crowd of "Throw them into the river." Mr. Hallowes protested against the action of the police, denied that he and those associated with him were causing any obstruction, and claimed the right to address the people in the open air. Amid a scene of considerable excitement, the hats of the preachers were knocked off and kicked about the street, and, despite the efforts of the police to protect them, some of their number were assaulted. Eventually the missioners were driven into Moore's Hotel and the door was closed.

After an interval Mr. Hallowes left the building by means of an open window and, standing on the steps, addressed the people. The police endeavoured to dislodge him, but he pointed out that he was on private property, whereupon the police confined their attention to keeping the people back and the thoroughfare clear. A respectably-dressed young woman dashed forward and struck Mr. Hallowes with her umbrella. She was renewing the attack when he seized the umbrella, which got broken in the struggle which ensued, and a service, which lasted over an hour, was conducted without any further interruption. Three members of the mission who got detached from the main body were followed through the streets by a small crowd and were severely beaten, their policemen who followed in the wake of the crowd making no effort to protect them. With this exception, the conduct of the police to-day was very praiseworthy; they used no unnecessary force with the preachers, and at several points saved them from a severe drubbing and probably from serious injury.

In the House of Commons last week Mr. Barton asked if the Irish Chief Secretary intended to take measures to prevent a repetition in Cork of the scenes of violence and bloodshed which had taken place on the occasion of open-air missions and preaching.

Mr. Morley replied that during those painful and deplorable scenes the police had acted in a way which had won the approval of both the Protestants and the Catholics of the city of Cork. He confessed that he did not see how he could give instructions to the constabulary which would lead them to act more efficiently than they had done. There had been enormous exaggeration over the matter, but the hon. member might rest assured that everything would be done to restore peace to Cork.

CHESTERFIELD RAGGED SCHOOL.—On Sunday morning (April 1) the quarterly prayer meeting, breakfast, and conference of the Lodging-house Mission was held. The leaders of the Mission bands, who hold a Gospel service in the eight lodging houses in the town every Sunday evening, gave encouraging reports of the work, concluding with an address by the Hall on Christian work. This Mission has now been working usefully about fourteen years.

ISLAM IN NORTH AFRICA.—The Evangelical Mission to Musulmans in Kabylia, is a Swiss Agency which has for some years done good work. The Swiss Society of Evangelical Missions, which has for many years supported the work, has had regretfully withhold assistance owing to its resources being pledged even to maintain its own missions. Mr. H. Mayor, missionary at Moknéâ (par Azazga, Haut-Sebaou, Kabylia, Algeria), says in the report for 1889-"We have not yet been able to open the day-school, but, as in the past, we are still anxious to have a school directed by a French teacher. This, however, can only be realised when the friends of our work provide the means. If the opening of a school be long delayed, the French Government will step in and supply the need; whereas the natives would prefer to send their children to the station, where some of already receive Biblical instruction on Wednesday and Thursday. Many parents beg us to realise this project." An interesting work is carried on among the sick.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA.

Those who are interested in this great gold centre, and who have relatives or friends there, may be glad to hear that lately a party of eight workers, under the leadership of Mr. Dudley Kidd, have been sent there by the South Africa General Mission. Friends are asked to pray for this city, where there are so many prodigal sons, and where iniquity abounds, and also to ask that the Lord will supply the needs of the party.

In order that those who may be led to pray for them may know what to ask for, the following extract is taken from an article by Mr. Kidd in The South African Pioneer:—"With regard to our needs, we must first of all get a hall—to alter our present broken-down building will need a considerable sum of money. With our first month's current expenses, we shall need over what we have in hand, about £500 or £600. We feel that it will be almost impossible to do any real work without a hall, and no suitable one can be hired. We shall have to start our work literally in the street. This alteration of the present premises, is, however, only preparatory to the building of a larger hall, to hold some eight or nine hundred people; yet the alterations we propose to make now form a part of the larger scheme, which will cost some £5000 or £6000. This big scheme will place the work on a self-supporting basis. Our regular expenses will be about £1000 a year to start with, and our Home Council think it best to see if we cannot make the work at Johannesburg self-supporting."

In case anyone should wish to communicate with Mr. Dudley Kidd, his address is, Box 1089, Johannesburg, South African Republic.

EDINBURGH FREE BREAKFAST MISSION.

The Drill Hall Breakfast is a well-known mission agency in Edinburgh. For the past twenty years not a Sabbath has passed without a free breakfast being provided for the poorest and most needy in the city, the meal being followed by the proclamation of a free Gospel for sinners. During last year the recipients averaged 900 weekly.

One valuable feature of the work is the opportunity it affords poor and despairing people to get into contact with Christians who are ready to do what they can for them. The report says: "So well known is the Drill Hall Breakfast in all the haunts of wanderers and vagrants, that any such coming into the city are sure to hear of it. One instance which occurred recently will illustrate this point. A young woman with a little girl and an infant, at the close of the breakfast expressed a desire to one of the workers, that her little girl might be got into a Home. The woman was unmarried, the father of the little girl was dead, and she had lost sight of the father of the infant. She felt how far she had gone astray, and was sincerely anxious that her little girl should get away from the lodging-house in which she was staying. The little girl was got into Mr. Quarrier's Home, and the mother who had formerly made her living by begging, being now relieved of her charge, was enabled to get a situation, and to provide for her infant. She is now doing well."

The annual meeting of the mission was held last week, Sir John Cowan, Bart., of Beeslack, presiding. The total number of guests during 1893 was 47,733. Of these 22,427 were men, 9122 women, and 16,185 children. There was a weekly average attendance of 900. The abstract of accounts showed the income, including donations and a balance from last account, to amount to £773 8s. 10d.

The mission has several useful adjuncts, including mothers' meetings, temperance works, Bible and sewing classes. Tracts are distributed among the guests. To the more regular attenders old numbers of monthly magazines are lent. The hon. treasurer and superintendent of the work is Mr. Robert Wilson, 3, Queen-street, Edinburgh.

MR. A. HORNSTEIN, who some months ago renounced Christianity, has now started the West Central Mission for Promoting Christianity among the Jews! That he should again avouch his faith in Christ is good if proved genuine; but that he should at once assume the rôle of the evangelist is greatly to be regretted. In a circular setting forth his purposes, he criticises Jewish missionaries in general, attributing to them base motives, and denouncing their methods, or what he declares are their methods. Mr. Hornstein's hostile statements will not take the place of a record of work done for Christ. This can be given by many who are contemptuously referred to in his circular; but Mr. Hornstein has no such record to give. As we have said before, we cannot commend this effort to Christian support. Its organiser should be a learner and not a teacher in the Church of God, and we caution our readers against responding to his appeal.

Letter to the Editor.

THE BRITISH ARMY.

Dear Sir,—Might I ask Christians everywhere to pray earnestly, with great faith in the promise, "ask and ye shall receive," and remembering that "according to your faith, be it unto you," for the officers of the British Army, that they may be led to the Saviour, who died for them? Thank God, there are some Christian officers, but their number is exceedingly small; there are many whole regiments without one Christian among its officers, besides numberless battalions in the same condition.

In working among soldiers it has been brought home so forcibly to my mind how much the officers are to be pitied; there are Soldiers' Homes and other agencies to reach the men, which are greatly blessed of God; but there are no means of reaching the officers, who are, oh! so utterly careless. Because of their position and general social surroundings there seems no way of personally bringing them to realise the importance of their soul's eternal welfare. I would plead with all Christians everywhere to join in fervent prayer that God will pour out the Holy Spirit mightily upon the officers of our Army, and lead them to give their hearts and lives to his service.

A Friend of the Soldiers.

UNEXPECTED FRUIT.

Reading of the trials and discouragements of lonely workers, the following episode, though small in itself, it may be an encouragement to many a missionary, showing how little they know when and where seed sown may spring up. A Spanish Evangelist, not in his own country, was travelling on his Master's business, and conversing, as is his wont, about the Lord Jesus to some Spaniards in the diligence en route. When they alighted a man at the far corner joined Sig. R., and, grasping his hand, said, "These are precious truths you have been speaking; let us hold fast to them, and encourage one another in the Lord. I heard of this way at a mission hall at ——."

The place he mentioned is a very lonely and trying mission station, for which reason I do not give its name; but it struck me that in the case of many a soul saved the worker will never know of it until the great day when sower and Reaper shall rejoice together.

REVIVAL IN NEW YORK.

The fifth week of the evangelistic revival meetings (says a New York contemporary) has shown that the anticipations of good to come from it have not been too highly placed. Each day as it has passed has furnished some new feature, or, if not a new feature, additional proof of the wisdom of the methods adopted, and of the energy of those engaged in carrying on the work. One fact stands out with great prominence. The greatest success of the movement has been in that heterogeneous population that gathers in the lower wards of the city. Particularly around Chatham-square the Italians and Hebrews seem to be under the influence of the Gospel as never before. At last the churches are reaching the masses. Arrangements for the sixth week are very similar to those for the past week. They include meetings in Association Hall and Hooper Union, open-air meetings at Madison-square and Astor-place, besides union meetings in a large number of churches.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE BIBLE STAND was erected more than thirty-one years ago, and since then, by its agency, nearly twenty-five millions of Scripture portions, cards, and leaflets have been disseminated. The report for 1892-3 not only tells of extensive work at home, but of Bible carriage effort in France, and distribution, by the aid of friends, in Italy, Spain, Switzerland, Germany, Greece, Egypt, North Africa, and elsewhere. Communications regarding the work should be addressed Mr. Wm. Hawke, Bible Stand, Crystal Palace, S.E.

A RAILWAY MISSION CONFERENCE was held last week in Cheltenham. Capital accounts were given of the work in many parts. A number of delegates gave accounts of their own conversion in the Railway Mission, while others testified to special conversions and benefits received which had come under their notice. At the evening meeting at the Central Hall, which was crowded almost to overflowing, addresses were given by Messrs. S. G. Sheppard and A. A. Head, while Miss F. J. Dolby gave an account of the work of the Convalescent Home at Hastings. A public meeting was held at the Montpelier Rotunda, when addresses were given by Revs. C. V. Childe, E. T. Griffiths, Messrs. J. B. Winterbotham and S. G. Sheppard.

THE Y.M.C.A.

The P.S.A., in connection with the Birkenhead Y.M.C.A., is growing in interest and good results.

The authorities in Asia Minor have recently imprisoned a youth because a letter of his contained a reference to his connection with the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Fred. J. Rayner has resigned his position as secretary to the Bristol Y.M.C.A., having accepted an appointment as travelling secretary to the "Zambesi Industrial Mission."

Six members of the Sunderland Association are engaged as missionaries in South Africa. The two young men to whom farewell was said at the Congo Balolo meeting the other evening were also Y.M.C.A. members.

The Sunday Afternoon Bible Talks in the Camden-road Association Rooms have lately been deeply interesting and fruitful. The mid-summer Sunday morning breakfast at Camden-road is fixed for June 24, that being Midsummer Day.

The Wakefield Association held its eighth annual meeting in the Music Saloon on Tuesday week. Mr. Alfred Haley occupied the chair. Mr. Tomes, the general secretary, reported a slight increase in membership, but a deficit of £268 in finances, chiefly through the purchase of Grove House for the head-quarters.

The thirty-eighth annual meeting of the Brompton branch was held on the 3rd inst. at the rooms of the Association. Colonel Macgregor, C.B., presided. This is numerically a small branch, but the report tells of a vigorous and earnest work being carried on. The Association partakes of the nature of a "club," of a home, and the members truly dwell together in unity. Finance seems to be a general difficulty, and this branch is not an exception. The treasurer or the secretary will be glad to welcome any fresh support to this vigorous and healthy branch of the Y.M.C.A.

The Clapham Y.M.C.A. had at its annual members' meeting a very good attendance. The report, read by the secretary (Mr. Geo. Hoppen), showed that the past year had been the most prosperous and successful in the history of the branch—prosperous in the highest and fullest sense of the word, the spiritual part of the work being the most attractive and thriving. The Sunday Afternoon Bible Class (conducted by Dr. Cronin) had doubled its numbers, the spirit and tone of the men gathering, the earnest and helpful conversation over the inspired Truth, making it the most valuable of all the meetings. The other branches were also reported as flourishing.

At the monthly meeting of the National Executive, held on Friday afternoon at Exeter Hall, a variety of interesting subjects were discussed. Amongst them was the question of recreations, which arose from a report to the effect that a few Associations had recently endangered their spiritual work through insufficient care in providing for the social requirements of their members. A strong pronouncement was made against the opening of smoke-rooms in the Associations, and the introduction of entertainments of a theatrical character, as being most prejudical and harmful to the work. Smoke-rooms are rigorously excluded by the fourteen hundred American Associations.

The travelling secretaries' reports were very encouraging. Mr. D. A. Black, for Ireland, had to tell of much blessing on the work of the Irish Associations throughout the past winter, and of the prominence which was everywhere given to the spiritual part of the work. Mr. W. H. Roberts, for the south-west of England, reported that his district had never experienced a more prosperous quarter than that just closed, and gave details of three recent successful annual meetings at Exeter, Dawlish, and Sidmouth. Mr. J. C. Moor, for the North of England, and Mr. F. C. Bennett, for the Midlands, had visited and helped many centres, while Mr. W. Hind Smith (acting pro tem. for the National Council as secretary at Exeter Hall) and Mr. George Holmes spoke of good work done in London and the south of England.

THE Y.W.C.A.

The Duchess of Albany will present the prizes to the members of the Factory Helpers' Union at Exeter Hall, on Saturday, April 21, at 5 p.m.

The quarterly social evening of the Belfast Institute was attended by between 200 and 300. During the evening twenty-six joined the Missionary Workers' Band, and twenty-three the Association, making a total of 124 new members and associates since the new year. The amount realised in the missionary department last year was £241. An interesting address was given by Mrs. Bell, of the Qua Iboe Mission, who was accompanied by a native girl.

The fourth Missionary Conference in connection with the Foreign Missionary department of the Y.W.C.A. (South of England) was held last week in Brighton. The meetings were devoted to prayer and Bible readings. The afternoon conference was presided over on Wednesday by Mrs. Gregory, the subject being How to work a Missionary Department, and to develop Missionary interest in Y.W.C.A. branches. On Thursday the Countess of Chichester presided, and the subject was How to stir and deepen the Missionary Spirit amongst our P.U. members.

There was a deep spiritual tone about the entire conference, an almost pathetic appeal being made by some of the speakers to sympathise with Jesus in the work which is so near his heart. The past year, Miss Etches said, revealed an increasing interest in missionary work in the branches. Mrs. Thwaites gave practical hints for future work, urging more defined Bible study in the classes, with a view to making the members "apt to teach" as well as giving them, in these days of scepticism, a firm grasp themselves of doctrinal truth. While placing spiritual qualification first, she urged the absolute need of specific training for those wishing to enter the mission field. Mrs. Tottenham gave interesting details of the Y.W.C.A. Testing and Training Home, showing that thirty-one girls have passed through it during the two years of its existence, of whom eight are already in the mission field and six hope to go out in the autumn.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Rev. Dr. Patrick, of Free St. Paul's Church, Dundee, we regret to learn, is prostrated by a serious attack of illness, and will be laid aside from active work for some time.

Mr. Wm. Quarrier's first party of boy emigrants to Canada this season has safely arrived. About £1000 is still needed for the expenses of the outgoing party of 130 girls.

It is stated that Free St. George's congregation, Edinburgh, have decided to renew the call which they gave to Rev. Hugh Black, Sherwood Church, Paisley, to be colleague and successor to the Rev. Dr. Whyte.

In Pray and Trust for April, published by Mr. J. H. Smith, of the Dundee Y.M.C.A., there are some very interesting early reminiscences of the late Dr. Andrew Bonar, by one who was his manservant at his first charge in Collace.

Mr. W. T. Stead has paid a visit to Edinburgh, giving an address on "The Story that Transformed the World," and holding conferences on civic reform. Speaking at Carrubbers Close on Saturday, he said that active temperance in this country was far ahead of that in America.

A house-to-house plébiscite of the district in Glasgow where the magistrates propose to introduce closing public-houses at nine instead of ten p.m. has been made. Out of 800 papers delivered 513 were returned; 406 vote for a reduction in licences, and 70 against, while 402 desire earlier closing and 74 oppose it.

By the will of the late Dr. Samuel Moore, one of the most popular and respected physicians in Glasgow, the residue of his estate, amounting to about £45,000, has been devoted to the institution and support of a Convalescent Home for Nurses whose health has temporarily or permanently broken down in the exercise of their profession.

A largely-attended public breakfast was given last week at the Congregational Theological Hall, Edinburgh, in honour of Dr. Barrett, of Norwich. Dr. Barrett said he was glad to see that a reaction in favour of Evangelical religion had set in among the churches, which was operating most powerfully, and was calculated to gladden all Christian and patriotic hearts.

In reference to a largely-attended meeting in Dundee to protest against the granting of any further liquor licences, The Advertiser of the city says:—"It is not against the humble publican, but the property-holder, who is often a kirk elder, and the big liquor firms who hold a string of licences each, that licensing reformers must strike. And it is no men of straw that have to be fought, for there are big interests bound up in the trade."

There are many live points in Rev. J. J. Mackay's of Glasgow, magazine, The Christian Voice, for April. He asserts that the church membership of liquor-sellers is fast becoming a burning question in Scotland. Speaking of fires caused in Free Church manses through tobacco smoking, he urges that the smoking room provided at the General Assembly should be abolished; it is making provision for the lust of the flesh. The North of Scotland, according to Mr. Mackay, is at present in a critical but hopeful condition. There is an open door for wisely conducted evangelistic work; if the opportunity is not fully embraced soon, religious indifference will probably result. He sees a ray of hope in the recent conference on spiritual life at Forres, and the coming conference at Strathpeffer; he hopes the latter favourite resort will become on a small scale a Highland Keswick.

IRISH NOTES.

It is proposed to establish a Methodist City Mission in Londonderry similar to those in existence in Dublin and Belfast, and Rev. P. E. Donovan has been designated to take charge of it.

A convention for the deepening of spiritual life was held last week in Cork, and was largely attended. A similar conference was also held last week in Dublin, when addresses were delivered by Rev. H. C. G. Moule, of Ridley Hall, Cambridge, and by Dr. Wynne, Bishop of Killaloe.

The Belfast Methodist City Mission is engaged in the erection of a new iron hall in Belfast to seat about 2500 persons. This, it is expected, will prove a great boon to the Mission, as it will give it a permanent home and centre from which to work—an advantage which it has never yet had.

The General Synod of the Irish Episcopal Church met in Dublin last week for its annual session. The most important matter which came before it was the motion for amending the thirty-sixth canon of the Church so as to prevent Canon Smith, rector of St. Bartholomew's, Dublin, from setting up a cross in front of the communion table in that church. The proposal, however, was lost by a majority of 181 to 97, or nearly two to one.

The annual Dublin meetings of the Irish Church Mission were held last week. Reports of the work were given on Tuesday by the society's missionaries in Dublin, Galway, and Connemara, and in connection with the itinerating work in fairs and markets. On Wednesday, a deeply interesting meeting was held of children from the homes and schools of the Mission. Nearly 800 of the 1300 children under the society's influence in Dublin and Kingston were present, and they were examined in the 100 texts and other subjects, acquitting themselves most creditably.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

The preparations for the Christian Endeavour convention to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, in July next are being conducted on a large scale.

Christian Endeavour is making rapid progress in the Midlands. At the annual meeting of the Birmingham and District Union of C.E. Societies, it was reported that twenty-one fresh societies had joined the Union.

The growth of the C.E. movement continues at the same remarkable rate that has attended it for the past few years. There are now more than thirty thousand local societies, with a total membership of 1,836,600. The number of local societies has increased 1869 in the past three months.

Says The Church at Home and Abroad: "The Christian Endeavour Societies are quickening into life and improving the methods of work in the Church of to-day; but they are doing more, they are training for the Church of the future members who will be able to work as well as worship; Sabbath-school teachers who will have something to teach; elders who will be able to conduct prayer-meetings and to help the pastor, and deacons who will know how to pray and when to stop."

In connection with the meetings last week of the Yorkshire Congregational Union, a conference was held on the Christian Endeavour movement. Mr. A. E. Hutton, M.P., spoke in the warmest terms of the value of the movement. Rev. A. Galbraith said that in October, 1893, 27,841 societies were registered, with an aggregate membership of 1,650,000. In 1888 only eighteen societies were registered in England; in 1893 there were between 700 and 800, and since the commencement of the year the registration of new societies had been going on at the rate of three a day in England. Rev. Henry Webb said that the idea of the C.E. Society in England was, "All at it, and at it always." No "active member" was allowed to be an idle member.

The latest development of the Christian Endeavour Movement takes the form of a great holiday conference somewhat upon the lines of the famous Chatauqua Movement in America. The benefits of co-operative travelling are seen once more in the offer of twelve days' Swiss Holiday, with second-class return ticket and first-class hotel accommodation, for ten guineas. On August 22, a great open-air meeting of workers and members from the various C.E. Societies will be held amongst the snow-clad mountains of Grindelwald. Dr. Charles A. Berry will preside, and the speakers will include Revs. Hugh Price Hughes and W. Knight Chaplin. A course of lectures will be delivered by Sir B. W. Richardson, Sir Robert Ball, Mr. Edward Whymper, Mr. Edmund Gosse, and Mrs. Fenwick Miller. The parties, which will leave London every Tuesday and Friday during the summer, are open to the public. All particulars can be obtained of Mr. F. A. Atkins, 2, Amen Corner, E.C.

PERSONALIA.

Canon Leigh, the well-known temperance advocate, has been appointed Dean of Hereford.

Mrs. Mountford (née Miss Von Finkelstein) is ecturing in Canada on "Customs in the Holy Land."

Rev. George Wilson, of St. Michael's Established Church, Edinburgh, has recently had a severe illness, and is still very weak.

Archdeacon Green, of Ballarat, who has spent his ministerial life in New South Wales, has been elected Bishop of Grafton and Armidale.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey having had a most encouraging season of Gospel work at Norfolk, Va., are now in the middle of an interesting work of grace at Richmond, the capital of that State.

Mr. J. W. Godfrey, Governor of the Girls' Village Homes, Ilford, has suffered sore bereavement in the death at Bombay of his only son, who was but eighteen years of age. Many will sympathise deeply with the mourning parents.

Rev. H. Price Hughes has gone to Wales for a fortnight's tour on behalf of the London Mission. On his return to London the Friday night devotional meeting will be transferred from Princes' Hall to the lecture-hall at Craven Chapel.

Dr. Griffith John is coming home to take part in the centenary celebrations of the London Missionary Society. There is a strong hope in many quarters that this veteran Chinese missionary may be elected Chairman of the Congregational Union for the coming year.

Dr. McCosh, late principal of Princeton College, has in the press his last word to the public. He has now attained the ripe age of eighty-three. For half a century Dr. McCosh has been a prolific writer, mostly on Scriptural and metaphysical subjects. In turn he has attacked the arguments of Locke, Mill, Tyndall, Huxley, and Hume.

Mr. Peter Whytock, who has recently returned from the Congo, will be staying in London during the present month and the early part of May, and would be glad to address meetings in London or the suburbs, either with or without limelight views. Any who wish to hear his story of work in Bolololand, should write to Mr. E. A. Talbot, Harley House, Bow, E.

Rev. Thomas Cook writes from the Antipodes, to the effect that his voyage throughout was most pleasant and invigorating, with the exception of three days, when a rather severe storm prevailed. The evangelist held services on board the vessel, and thus endeavoured literally to sow beside all waters. He also preached at Naples, the steamer staying at that port long enough to permit the evangelist to embrace the opportunity.

Father Lambert, a very popular Redemptorist, and formerly an officer of the Papal Army, has left the Church of Rome. He came as an inquirer to Father O'Connor's Mission in New York, where he was taught the way of life more perfectly. Father Lambert's colleagues speak highly of him as a learned and conscientious priest, while they express chagrin at his withdrawal from them. He seems a true man and savingly converted. Others are following his example.

Dr. Baedeker hopes to start for Berlin this week, on a visit to some of the Christian workers there. Thence he proceeds to Prague in Bohemia, and afterwards to Frankfort, Strasburg, and Düsseldorf, being away altogether about a month; he desires the prayers of friends for God's blessing on his visits to isolated workers on the Continent. Are there not other Christian brethren or evangelists who could take a month's tour in Spain or Germany, so as to refresh the labourers in these lands?

Mr. Anthony Comstock, on March 2, closed forty-two years of public service. It is impossible (says an American paper) to put a proper estimate upon the services that he has rendered to public and private morality. Much of his work cannot be tabulated. He has been the only resource of many Christian parents whose sons have gone astray. More than once we have met him late at night on his way to look up some mother's boy or father's daughter, and, if possible, to pluck them as brands from the burning.

Mr. Spencer Walton, of the Cape General Mission, writes from Boston, U.S.A., on March 28: "We are returning to England in the New York, and hope to arrive on or about April 25. We have had many blessed times in Canada, especially with Drs. Gordon and Pierson at several large missionary conventions, besides having taken missions and missionary meetings in Toronto, Ottawa, etc. Much interest has been stirred up on behalf of our Mission, and we have five candidates offering for South Africa, and the four friends have promised to support four native evangelists. After a few months in England we return to South Africa."

THE SOUTH LONDON ABSTINENCE SOCIETY is doing good work, as appeared at the meeting held last week in Clapham-road Church.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has completed a seven days' mission at Oxenden Presbyterian Church, Haverstock-hill, N.W. (Rev. D. Wilson pastor). His next mission will be held at Rothwell, Northamptonshire.

Mr. John G. Stanger, of the Evangelization Society, concluded a fifteen days' mission in Watton, Norfolk, on April 8. This is the third mission held in this parish by Mr. Stanger. As on each previous occasion, his earnest, faithful Gospel addresses have been listened to with great interest, and it is believed that much good work has been done.

The Isle of Man.—Mr. W. H. Ruscoe, of Shrewsbury, has for the past three weeks been conducting special evangelistic meetings in the Wesleyan Mission Hall, Ramsey, Isle of Man. The meetings were well attended, and night after night men and women were anxiously inquiring the way of peace. Mr. Ruscoe is open for other engagements during the summer months.

Brockville, Canada.—Messrs. Hunter and Crossley have closed a series of revival meetings in Brockville. The services were largely attended from the commencement and many were unable to obtain admission. The evangelists denounced card-playing, dancing, theatre-going, drinking, and other evils in strong terms. The peace of God has entered many hearts and many homes in the town.

OBITUARY.

MR. F. C. BLAND.

Many will deeply regret to hear of the falling asleep of this beloved and honoured brother, who was called away last week, in Dublin. For nearly fifty years he had been in the forefront of the battle, standing as a giant for the truth. The funeral took place on Monday in Mount Jerome Cemetery, Dublin, and was largely attended by those who sorrowed for him, not merely as a friend, but also as a trusted leader. We hope shortly to give a sketch of Mr. Bland's life and labours.

MR. GEORGE GRAY, BARGEDDIE, COATBRIDGE, N.B.

Last week this saint of God, for over fifteen years an invalid, entered into rest. He has been confined to his bed for several years past, and in that weak condition was a noble minister for God. Chiefly were his words blessed to the saints who visited him; he inspired them with new zeal and fresh devotion in the Lord's work. Many seasons of blessing were experienced, as occasional meetings were held in his home for his benefit. Once the breaking of bread was observed, and few will readily forget the real blessing vouchsafed.

MR. GUSTAV HAUPT.

We learn, with keen sorrow, of the death of Mr. Gustav Haupt, of the Congo-Balolo Mission. Nothing is as yet known of the circumstances of his sudden departure. He laboured for some years in connection with the Mission, and, while being much encouraged by attendant blessing, he experienced many disappointments. About three years ago he came home on furlough; on returning he took out a wife, a lady of missionary heart and aims. She predeceased him; but he bravely continued to preach Christ to the people for whose evangelisation he had devoted his life.

MRS. GREGORY, CLAPTON.

We hear with regret of the recent death of this devoted worker in connection with the East London Women's Christian Temperance Union. It is stated that Mrs. Gregory became an abstainer seventeen years ago at a meeting convened by Mrs. Gregson at Dr. Barnardo's, and addressed by Mrs. Grattan Guinness. She immediately began Temperance work among women in Clapton and Hackney, out of which grew the Clapton Branch of the B.W.T.A. She also started the Young Abstainers' Union in the neighbourhood. She loved "prevention" rather than "cure," and delighted in training the workers of the future.

MR. W. D. LONGSTAFF, SUNDERLAND.

This helper of many peacefully entered into rest on April 2, at the age of seventy-one. His daughter writes:—"Our father was one of the first members, and treasurer for several years, of Bethesda Chapel, Sunderland, under the late Rev. A. A. Rees, and for forty-five years was in membership there. He was among the first to welcome Messrs. Moody and Sankey to England in 1873, and continued their true friend ever since. He took no part in public work, but was well known and beloved among the sick and aged poor, whom it was his delight to visit. He was an interested reader of long standing of The Christian, and also sent several copies weekly to workers in distant lands.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

The seventh convention of the Dominion Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Canada will be held June 1 to 5 in London, Ontario. It is hoped that Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset will be present.

Strong efforts have been made by the temperance workers in Douglas to reduce the number of licences, not, however, with any great success as yet, although the public attention aroused will doubtless lead eventually to good results.

The Manchester Women's Christian Temperance Association and Police-court Mission has recently held some very interesting and encouraging meetings resulting in the formation of a new branch and the addition of many members.

The Grocers' Licences Abolition Bill was introduced into the House of Commons, and read a first time on Thursday, April 5. It is in charge of Mr. David Thomas, who presented it on behalf of the Women's Total Abstinence Union.

The recent death of Mr. William Crow, Howdon, has removed one of the oldest Tyneside Temperance advocates. He signed the pledge at one of the first meetings held at Howdon by some of the "Seven Men of Preston," and ever afterwards was to be found in the front rank of the Temperance cause.

The annual meeting of the Society for the Study of Inebriety was held last week in Chandos-street. The president, Dr. Norman Kerr, occupied the chair. Brigade-Surgeon Robert Pringle read a paper on "A Study of Pauper Alcoholic Inebriety and its Treatment." Dr. Kerr said an institution in London, similar to that in Paris, to which persons found intoxicated might be taken for remedial treatment, should be inaugurated without delay.

The annual report of the Newcastle Temperance Alliance makes the discouraging statement that during the past year there has been little or no diminution in "the poverty, degradation, lunacy, crime, and the mortality, resulting from the licensed sale of intoxicants," and that in whatever relation it is examined, the year's review of the drink bill of Newcastle is as unsatisfactory as ever, no less than £1000 a day being spent in that city on intoxicants.

Alcohol is a poison in the body, and its harmful effects are in direct ratio to the amount taken, and the frequency with which it is introduced into the system. These facts should be taught to every man, woman, and child in the country, until they are accepted as undisputed and undisputable facts. When this lesson is well learned, there will be no difficulty whatever in obtaining an overwhelming public sentiment in favour of the effort to pulverise the rum power.

The annual meeting of the National B.W.T.A., on Thursday evening, May 10, will be full of interest. It is to be held in the New Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W., and will partake largely of the character of a national farewell to Miss Frances E. Willard, who is shortly returning to America. Lady Henry Somerset, as president of the Association, will be in the chair, and addresses are to be given by Miss Willard, Canon Wilberforce, and Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Bart, M.P., president of the United Kingdom Alliance; in addition, Madame Antoinette Stirling will sing during the evening. This meeting will be preceded on Tuesday, May 8, by an all-day meeting for thanksgiving and prayer, open to all.

The Toronto News, which does not believe Ontario is yet ready for prohibition, but favours the early closing of saloons, says that the liquor interest has "raised 5000 dollars, which is to be used to convince certain aldermen that the early closing of saloons would be directly contrary to the best interests of the people, would be immoral, unwise, irreligious, and tyrannical." D. J. O'Donogue, a labour leader, who has for years had a high reputation for sagacity in the Dominion Trades and Labour Council, says: "You may quote me as strongly as you like for any measure of restriction or abolition. The liquor traffic has always been the enemy of those who toil for a living. The saloon is the greatest menace to the community that I know of."

Miss Weston says in "Jottings from my Log" for April:—"We have had, at Portsmouth, during February, the help of Mr. J. Louis Fenn, of the National Temperance League. This gentleman is not only a Christian, but a scientist. He is able, by lantern, diagrams, and experiments, to demonstrate all that he advances. His lectures on 'Alcohol as a Food,' 'Alcohol and the Brain,' 'Alcohol and the Digestion,' and many others, have been listened to with rapt attention by our blue-jackets, who followed him from point to point. At the close of each lecture 'a question drawer' was opened, and questions streamed in, which were ably answered by the lecturer. He also took Bible classes, gave evangelistic addresses, etc. This month Mr. Fenn is spending at Devonport."

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Bishop of Bombay has reached England on a long leave.

The Bishop of Lahore has come home on an eight months' furlough.

Canon Fergie, Vicar of Ince, who is staying at Southport, seems somewhat better.

Archdeacon Blakeney has gone to Harrogate for change of air and complete rest.

A new mission church has been opened in Totteridge, Hazelmere, High Wycombe.

The news from Rev. George Everard is causing much anxiety amongst his friends. It is feared he may have to resign.

The Norwich Diocesan Conference was held last week. The Bishop in his address dealt with various present day matters.

Mr. P. V. Smith, Revs. H. E. Fox and F. S. Webster have promised to speak at the forthcoming Evangelical Conference in Southport.

The Lower House of Convocation and the House of Laymen (Northern) have been discussing a proposal to permit "laymen" to preach in the churches, and have rejected it.

A meeting of the Melanesian Mission was held last week at the Church House, for the purpose of wishing "God speed" to Rev. Cecil Wilson, the newly-appointed Bishop of Melanesia.

The first of a new series of monthly prayer meetings on behalf of the Spanish and Portuguese Church Aid Society was held at St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street, on Tuesday week. There was an encouraging attendance.

Rev. E. Bigoe Bagot, rector of St. Mary's, Beswick, has for some months been suffering from a throat malady. On Sunday week he attempted to conduct the service, but after an ineffectual struggle his voice completely failed.

Rev. J. R. E. Cotter Hodgins, vicar of St. Cyprian, Liverpool, has been somewhat seriously indisposed, and is still unable for the discharge of his pastoral duties. It is hoped, however, that a few weeks' rest will bring him round again.

Lord Roberts laid, on Saturday, the memorial stone of a new church of St. Mary Magdalene, Chatham. A church has stood on or near the spot for about a thousand years, and in the surrounding churchyard are buried many hundreds of soldiers.

Canon Warr, vicar of Childwall, has been laid aside through indisposition, and, taking into consideration his advanced years, his numerous friends could not fail to be anxious. He is now, however, convalescent, and has been gaining strength steadily.

A meeting to protest against the action of the Dean of Manchester in refusing at the recent vestry meeting to receive a resolution with reference to the preaching of "heretical doctrine" in the Cathedral, was held in the Cotton Waste Exchange, Market Place, last week.

The Bishop of Bath and Wells announces the formation of an Incumbents' Sustentation Fund for the aid of the many livings in the diocese to which most inadequate stipends are attached. How sorely such aid is needed may be seen from the fact that out of the 495 benefices 230 are under £200, and sixty-six under £100.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. J. Morlais Jones, of Lewisham, has been appointed chairman of the London Congregational Union.

The missionary ship John Williams visited last week Bristol, Swansea, and Cardiff, exciting much interest.

Mr. J. O. Vince, evangelist at Worsenden, near Biddenden, has accepted an invitation to labour in the China mission-field.

Rev. T. Mann, of the Tabernacle Church, Trowbridge, closed his ministry there on Sunday—that being his eightieth birthday.

Rev. H. Le Pla, who has been doing good work at Gospel Oak, N.W., has broken his leg while cycling; he is progressing towards recovery.

Rev. B. L. Thomas, who was for some years pastor of an English church at Brecon, has been elected president of the Congregational Union of New Zealand.

Union Church, Plaistow, reports 570 members, of whom fifty-seven have been added during the year. In the Sunday-schools there are 1039 scholars and eighty-five teachers.

Mr. Albert Spicer, M.P., has issued an earnest appeal to the Congregational churches to provide £25,000 for the London Missionary Society by special promises before the close of May.

Victoria Park Church, Approach-road, has celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. At the public meeting Mr. Edward Spicer, J.P., presided, and Revs. T. Nicholson, Hardy Harwood, and T. Evans (pastor) were among the speakers. During 1893 the church received over fifty into fellowship.

The annual meetings of the Yorkshire Congregational Union were held last week in Huddersfield. The presidential address by Rev. T. Nicholson had for its theme "A Democratic Church for a Democratic Age." Rev. Thomas Windsor, of Skipton, was elected as chairman for next year. Missionary matters being introduced by Rev. W. J. Woods, led to an interesting discussion. The Home Mission meeting proved very successful.

Mr. Edward Spicer, J.P., presided at the annual meetings of the London Congregational Union last week, at the Memorial Hall. The annual report stated that with regard to the Tercentenary Celebration of the Congregational Martyrs—Burrowe, Greenwood, and Penry—arrangements are in progress for the insertion of a marble tablet to the memory of Penry in the fascia of Marlborough Chapel, Old Kent-road. The total sum raised by the Union and the Church Extension Committee during the twenty-one years amounted to £246,858, including £27,138 for philanthropic work during the past ten years. Nevertheless, the deficiency of religious accommodation in London was now 1,400,000, and Congregationalists ought to supply 184,615 sittings.

Calls.—Rev. C. J. Clarke, of Steeple Bumpstead, to Wolverton; Rev. W. Stacy, of Exeter, to Gomersal, Leeds; Rev. W. Greig, of Leytonstone, to Thames Ditton; Rev. John Gibson, of Cheltenham, to Ross; Rev. W. H. Jones, of Berkeley, to Newport, Salop.

Resignations.—Rev. S. Hooper, of Heaton Mersey; Rev. J. Craig Kelly, of Union Church, Canterbury; Rev. D. Parry Jenkins, of Okehampton.

BAPTIST.

A new chapel has been opened at Barron Gurney.

A new church and Sunday-schools have been opened in St. John's-road, Epping.

Lord Wantage has given a site at Long-lane (Berks) for the erection of a new chapel.

Rev. W. Y. Fullerton has had an enthusiastic welcome meeting at Melbourne Hall, Leicester.

At the Bramley Tabernacle, Lee, interesting anniversary services have been held. The work is reported as progressing well.

We hear that the Sunday scholars connected with Highgate-road Church raised last year for foreign missions the sum of £98.

At Parson's Hill, Woolwich, twenty-four persons were baptized on Thursday, March 29; and on Sunday, April 1, thirty-two new members were received into the church.

At Turret Green, Ipswich, a good work is being carried on under the pastorate of Rev. W. E. Bloomfield. The membership now stands at 308, an increase on last year. In the Sunday school there are 420 scholars.

Anniversary services have just been held to celebrate the formation of the Kimbolton church in 1692, and the settlement of the present pastor in 1889. A service was held, presided over by Rev. T. G. Gathercole, and addressed by the ministers of the town and neighbourhood.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Ministers and Missionaries' Prayer Union will be held in Bloomsbury Chapel, on Tuesday, April 24, at 3.30 p.m. Rev. F. B. Meyer will take the chair, and an address will be delivered by Rev. W. Y. Fullerton, of Melbourne Hall, Leicester. All Baptist ministers and missionaries are heartily invited.

A few Sundays ago, while preaching in the first Baptist Church in Hamburg, Rev. C. A. Kemnitz was struck by paralysis and expired shortly. "For forty-one years," writes Rev. J. H. L. Pielstick, "Brother Kemnitz worked under great blessing in Templin, during which 1700 were converted and added by baptism to the church there."

A most profitable and refreshing day was spent on Tuesday week at the Mission House in an all-day prayer meeting for ministers. The following ministers presided, each for an hour:—Revs. W. Cuff, E. Medley, W. Stott, James Baillie, and J. T. Briscoe. They gave brief addresses, their subjects being respectively "Spiritual Freshness," "Religion in the Home," "Enthusiasm for Christ among our Church Members," "How to Conquer Indifference to Religion," and "The Extension of Christ's Kingdom in London." The larger part of the time was spent in earnest prayer.

Calls.—Mr. J. G. Wells, to Wealstone, Harrow; Rev. W. White, to Watchett and Williton; Mr. E. T. Beckett, to Ascot; Mr. A. B. Tettmar, to Clare, Suffolk.

Resignations.—Rev. E. Brown, of St. Anne's-on-Sea, Lancs.; Rev. J. Rose, of Sandhurst.

METHODIST.

At Thorncliffe, near Sheffield, a new chapel is about to be opened.

Hamlet Church, Liverpool, was opened on Sunday week with interesting services.

A new chapel is being erected at Summerbridge, Yorks, to meet the needs of a growing work.

New chapels are being built in West Ham, Wrekenton (Gateshead), and Bucknall (Hanley).

A mission being held by Miss Lily Cook in Pitt-street Chapel, Liverpool, is awakening much interest.

Last week the President of the Wesleyan Conference opened a new chapel in Galgate, Barnard Castle.

The Wilts and Somerset Home Mission is doing grand work. It is now the strongest (Wesleyan) mission centre in the West of England.

An Evangelistic Mission at Helston, conducted by Mr. J. Whiting, has resulted in the addition of over twenty members to the church. Some at Trebarvah also have professed faith in Christ during services held by Mr. W. Cann.

The Wesleyan Church in New Zealand has lost one of its pioneers by the death of Rev. John Aldred, who has just passed away in his seventy-sixth year. He was one of the little band of missionaries despatched by the Wesleyan Centenary Conference to Australasia in 1839.

At various places near St. Colomb a blessed revival movement has recently taken place. Souls have been saved at Whitemoor, Trethosa, Newmills, Mawgan Cross, and Trelion; while at Fraddon, the Wesleyans, the Methodist Free Church, and the Bible Christians have held a united mission with good results.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Dr. A. Stewart, of Ballachulish, was the preacher of the Gaelic sermon on Sunday afternoon in Crown-court Church.

Rev. W. Dickins Lewis, D.D., during a visit to Rome, is preaching in the Presbyterian Chapel and in a large Italian mission house.

Rev. Ebenezer Ritchie, of the Original Secession, has applied to the Newcastle Presbytery for admission into the Presbyterian Church of England.

Cowbridge-road Hall, a branch of the Cardiff Mission, was opened on Sunday week, Rev. Cynddylan Jones, D.D., preaching to crowded congregations.

It is stated that the report to be presented at the ensuing Synod will show a decided increase in Presbyterian membership in England. The total is 67,582, an increase of 600 in one year.

The oldest living Welsh minister, Rev. Thomas Hughes, Trowsfyrydd, North Wales, now in his 92nd year, has been in the ministry 73 years. Earlier in the century he was known throughout the Principality as "Hughes of Machynlleth," and his oratory commanded general admiration.

The approaching Synod of the English Presbyterian Church may be expected to take a step forward in the matter of the removal of its College from London to Cambridge. At the recent meeting of the College Committee it was resolved to recommend the Synod to agree to the removal.

In a sketch of Dr. Pentecost's church in Marylebone, contributed to the New York Observer, Mr. John Paton makes this interesting statement:—"Of domestic servants Dr. Pentecost has over three hundred regular attendants upon his ministry, and the wealthiest lady in his church does not receive more attention from the pastor than do these girls. Every one is regularly visited, and amusing are the stories which the pastor relates of his chilling reception by the stately powdered flunkies at the door, as he inquires for the humble housemaid or nurse in the great London mansion. Often it has been necessary to threaten an appeal to the lady of the house before the liveried London footman would admit the minister. But in no case has tact and decision failed to carry the day, and deeply interesting has been the story of the pastor's visits to the servant girls of his flock, very many of them among the most pious and devoted members of the church."

Calls.—Rev. James Milroy, of Frenchie, to Pleasance, Edinburgh; Rev. J. C. Peat, to Kilmarnock, Doune; Mr. E. P. Jones, to Hermon, Bethesda; Rev. W. S. Williams, to Seiwen, Neath.

Resignations.—Rev. H. M. Mackenzie, of Southwark; Rev. P. H. Hutchinson, of Hallside.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

According to last week's Friend, the Society has about seventy missionaries in the foreign field. The 5th inst. was devoted to prayer on their behalf. Home and foreign missionaries united with other friends at Devonshire House in three meetings. Great unity and love prevailed.

The venerable Elizabeth P. Cash, of Croydon, late of Dorking, passed away on the 5th inst. in her 99th year, removing one of the noble worthies and pioneers of the great temperance reformation. The hand of death has recently been busy in taking away those who have "borne the burden and heat of the day" in many moral and social reforms.

London and Middlesex quarterly meeting was held on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., in the evening, and was extremely well attended. The large meeting-house at Devonshire House was nearly full on the basement, and the interest was manifest among all present. The appointment of the Home Mission members of the Yearly Meetings committee could not be completed, and had to be deferred to the adjournment of the quarterly meeting on the 8th prox.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

General Booth expects to visit Belgium at Whitsuntide.

Miss Lucy Booth, the General's youngest daughter, who has for some time past been directing the work in India, sails for England on the 17th inst., to be present at the anniversary meetings.

The doorkeeper of the hall in Christiana has been stabbed by a man for the part he had taken in the conversion of a fallen woman, and one of the officers stationed at Stettin has died through inflammation of the membrane of the brain caused by a blow from a rough a fortnight before. Two thousand people attended his funeral.

The Health and Police Committee of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco have handed over the old Receiving Hospital (a four-story structure) to the Army, rent free, to be utilised for the reception of "waifs and strays and out-of-works," for which they (the committee) agree to pay twelve and a-half cents per head for board and lodging.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

At Salisbury, on 3rd inst., Mr. C. Moody, aged fifty-five, a valued preacher and class leader.—At Wolstanton, Burslem, on 30th ult, Mr. James Malkin, aged sixty-six, a devoted Christian.—In Waterloo Church, on 1st inst., suddenly, while kneeling in prayer, Mr. G. A. Hulberts.—At Bath, Rev. W. Sutton, aged sixty-eight, who in past years did good pastoral work in Australia, and in late years at Bradford-on-Avon.—At Towyn, Rev. John Roberts, a useful and laborious pastor.—At Rochdale, Mrs. W. A. Scott, a willing helper of the Lord's work.—At Overley, Kendal, on 2nd inst., Susanna Frankland, a member of the Society of Friends.—At Streatham, Mr. John Dommett, a well-known leader in Christian work.—At King's Lynn, Rev. W. G. Dickin, a valued Wesleyan minister for thirty years.—At Farnham, on 1st inst., Mr. C. Houghton, aged sixty-nine, an earnest worker.—At Newmills, Gilford, co. Down, Mr. Kent Park, an earnest Christian worker.

DONATIONS RECEIVED BY MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT TO MONDAY, APRIL 9, 1894.

 Donations should be sent by Cheque or Post Office Orders, not by stamps.

 Will donors oblige by stating explicitly and fully the titles of the institutions to which they wish their donations to be applied? Mistakes which sometimes arise will thus be obviated. Will they also bear in mind that our Donation List is made up for the Printer on Monday morning? Any amounts received afterwards will be acknowledged in the subsequent week's number.

 Cheques, Money Orders, or Postal Orders should be made payable to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings, London, E.C., and crossed "City Bank"; this will effectually prevent loss.

"In Memoriam."—"Christian Blind Relief Society" was not mentioned in first letter.

Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portraits and sketches of Miss Deborah Alcock, author of "The Spanish Brothers," and the late Mr. William H. Howland, of Toronto.

We understand that a startling development in the proceedings of the National Anti-gambling League will shortly be made known, which will attract universal attention from all sections of the Press and public.

It is not very encouraging to the social reformer to be told, on the authority of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that the revenue yielded last year by beer was £80,000 above the highest on record, even though the amount derived from spirits showed a considerable decline. We wish we could hope that the proposed additional taxation on both kinds of liquor will bring about a decreased consumption.

We have pleasure in announcing that small parcels of back numbers of The Christian can be obtained gratuitously, on application to our publishers, for careful and judicious distribution. At this season of the year, when evangelists, members of the Y.M. and Y.W.C.A.'s, and other Christian workers are entering upon their summer campaign in the towns and villages of our country, we feel sure that many will be glad to co-operate with us in making still wider our circle of readers.

On another page (29) will be found a startling announcement from Dr. Barnardo, which we trust our readers will prayerfully read and consider. The Romanists, who have so harassed him about the children, are now endeavouring to buy over his head at a high price, one of the places necessary to his work. We earnestly hope that, by the good hand of God, and the help of all who value our Protestant institutions, this great calamity may be averted.

The presidential address delivered on Tuesday last by Dr. J. A. Spurgeon, to the pastors and students of the Pastors' College, was worthy of the occasion and peculiarly appropriate. Its subject was the prayer of Moses, "Shew me thy glory." The application was to this effect—that, as Moses could not enter upon his arduous ministry without having known God, not only by walking with him forty years at the back of the desert, but by seeing his glory, which, indeed, was his goodness, so the young men assembled in conference should not dare to enter upon their ministry of the Gospel until they had seen God's glory. Dr. Spurgeon's allusion to the subsequent sight granted to Moses on the Mount of Transfiguration, of the glory of Jehovah-Jesus, was as suggestive and inspiring as it was happy and well conceived.

A well-wisher of children sends the following:—

Dear Sir,—I feel that a note of warning ought to be struck in reference to a fast-growing evil in our missions for children, that of teaching them to take part in entertainments for the supposed good of the mission. Surely its tendencies are to instil or increase the love of worldly amusements, from which we would fain keep our children. Who can be surprised if in after years they are found on the stage, or in low dancing and music-halls. Oh! for more trust in God about carrying on his work.

We quite agree with our correspondent. We have known the dramatic instinct and faculty, developed in a Band of Hope, to be consummated on the stage of a music-hall.

An esteemed correspondent calls attention to the fact that the date of our present issue marks the centenary of the founding of the house of Samuel Bagster and Sons, the celebrated Bible publishers. A Christian young man, with cultured literary tastes, the late Samuel Bagster commenced business on April 19, 1794, at the age of twenty-one. To-day, all over the world, thousands thank God for the man who provided specially useful editions of the Bible, and valuable Bible helps for the use of careful readers and students. In 1821 a great fire destroyed in one night much of the toil of years, but the brave spirit rose above the disaster. Like his wife Eunice, who died at the advanced age of 100, Mr. Bagster lived in the sphere of faith in God. His memory is blessed, and the polyglot products of his enterprise remain as monuments in his honour.

It has become so familiar to read of the Babylonian Pantheon that there is a certain freshness in the mere suggestion that the early religion of Babylon was monotheistic. Such, however, was the practical conclusion of a learned paper by Mr. Theo. G. Pinches, the eminent Orientalist, read on Monday last at a meeting of the Victoria Institute. It would seem that the minor gods of Babylon were regarded as manifestations of the one supreme deity, Merodach, whom Mr. Pinches thinks is one and the same as Ya, or Jah. Research has not as yet brought to light materials for a full generalisation; but the idea that Abraham was the first monotheist has, without reference to Bible story, already been disposed of. That polytheism should in time have overlaid the primitive revelation that there is one God, is assuredly what might be expected in circles outside the favoured Hebrew nation.

The present controversy as to Christian education in the London Board Schools has been thus defined by The English Churchman:—

It means nothing less than this, that the Church of England, in alliance with the Roman Catholics, is going to fight against the Protestant Nonconformists in alliance with the Secularists. What a melancholy prospect. Both are unholy alliances. Both are alliances which Churchmen and Nonconformists in days of yore would have repudiated alike, with all holy indignation. No Protestant Churchman ought to promote the advance of Romanism, and no godly Nonconformist ought to favour the growth of Secularism.

With the latter proposition none of our readers will disagree. We think, however, that we are now in greater danger from Sacerdotalism than Secularism, and from Priestcraft than from Unitarianism. Secularism and Unitarianism are open enemies, and Sacerdotalism and Priestcraft are feigned friends, of Evangelical Christianity. The former denounce the essential truth of the Gospel, the latter, like white ants, eat away its heart and substance, while leaving its outward and polished form.

The same paper publishes from a correspondent, "whose years and whose sound Protestant convictions demand the utmost respect," a letter which contains the following statement:—

The British people will not accept clericalism, and when they find that the "priest" is acquiring a right to dictate their religion, they will make short work of him and his claims.

We wish the truth were not exactly the reverse of this. The priest is acquiring by leaps and bounds, if not the right at least the power, to dictate the religion of the British people. The Church in Britain is rapidly being Romanised, and the British people do not make short work of the claims of the priest. The human heart is the same in the British people as in any other, and He who searches the heart and tries the reins of the children of men declared long ago, "The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: AND WHAT WILL YE DO IN THE END THEREOF?"

The time is rapidly approaching when Darwinism will "go over to the majority" of discredited philosophical theories. The new issue of The Critical Review contains an article by Professor M'Kendrick, of Glasgow, on Dr. James Hutchison Stirling's book, "Darwinism: Workmen and Work" (10s. 6d. T. & T. Clark, Edinburgh), which is described as "undoubtedly the most trenchant criticism of Darwinism that has yet appeared." It is quite rousing to read a charge of narrowness brought home to Mr. Huxley, who "was glad of anything that promised to be 'a working hypothesis' towards the extinction of a supernatural causation by a natural one." Thus, fanaticism may be attributed to scientists no less than to theologians! Not that we learn this for the first time. Dr. Stirling writes as a scientist and a philosopher, and his work is a strong and telling rebuke of atheism. He says: "I cannot but smile when assured by Mr. Darwin that there is not necessarily such a thing as design in this universe,—now that the law of natural selection has been discovered!"

While the Christian's aim should be to glorify Christ, whom God has glorified, the tendency of modern philosophy is to glorify man, who, through sin, has "come short of the glory of God." As for the much-vaunted theories in biology, which prominent theologians have swallowed under the sugar-coat of "evolution," they seem to us both opposed to the latter and inconsistent with the former. "Accidental variation" being now laughed out of court, we may expect modified ideas to come into fashion regarding natural selection and the survival of the fittest. We would fain hope that the fate which is continually overcoming vain conceits of the ungodly sort, may impress the young and inexperienced, and induce them to pause before implicitly accepting views that, lacking substantial basis, are pressed upon attention under the shadow of great names.

---

The Leisure Hour continues its well-informed and interesting series of articles on "The Peoples of Europe." This month there is something on topics of great moment, topics which touch the very pith of the German nation. Under the heading of "Socialism" we are told of professors and men of letters "holding liberal views" who would not express them in the family, and who educate their children according to church principles. There are even some who require that their wives should make active profession of a faith they themselves do not believe, and yet withhold from these same wives all intellectual culture as 'unsuited to women-folk.'" This state of things is not unknown elsewhere than in Germany; but what a deplorable condition of hypocrisy, cowardice, injustice, and cruelty to women it reveals. Such "liberalism" and "culture" carry their own condemnation on their face.

---

The writer on "German Life" believes that, notwithstanding all the Emperor's efforts, a religious spirit has not grown up in Germany; it is still the land of freethought or religious indifference. The effect of closing workshops on Sunday has only been, as yet, to make the public-house more frequented. The working classes have looked on church-going as a recreation for the rich only. "Among the upper and middle classes there is a marked increase in the religious spirit, and in Germany many halls have had to be rented for Divine service, owing to the overcrowding of the churches." Church-building is proceeding rapidly. There can be no doubt that religion has not a propitious climate and soil in Germany. Royal sponsorship and rationalistic teaching are both unfavourable. The nation seems to us to need a Whitefield and a Wesley.

We doubt if there ever was a time when Christian thought, and principle, and hope had such an indirect influence upon society as now; agnostics, infidels, and social reformers, whose only religion is some form of social reform, use Christian terms in their own sense without apparently quite knowing where they have come from. It is with a feeling of astonishment that we sometimes meet an old and familiar Christian idea in a quite novel form and setting. There is a danger in this unconscious plagiarising. Dr. Mackennal has well said:—

> Even in its modern non-Christian form, the doctrine of the solidarity of man lacks the warrant of its own permanency; the worship of humanity is a substitute for religion rather than religion. . . . . Wanting the sanction of a Divine purpose, our hope for mankind languishes and dies out. Human life becomes one great tragedy, and tragedy is not religion; all our emotion is swallowed up in profoundest pity, and pity without faith must either degenerate into contempt or fade into despair.

The truths learnt from our Master must not be emptied of their proper meaning.

[392]

The Missionary Record states that of the eight millions of Persians seven millions are Mohammedans, 40,000 American Christians, 30,000 Nestorian Christians, 15,000 to 20,000 Jews, 7000 fire worshippers, besides a band of Protestant Christians, gathered mostly around the mission stations of the American Presbyterian Board of Missions. "The chief barrier to the growth of Christianity in Persia is the law dooming to death any Mohammedan who turns Christian. Mirza Ibrahim, who turned Christian this summer, died at the hands of some fanatical fellow prisoners; but when his case was brought before the present Prime Minister of Persia, who is one of the most liberal of Persian politicians, he expressed surprise that he had been allowed to live, and referred to the law. Direct mission work among Mohammedans is forbidden. Only non-Mohammedans are by law the subjects of missions." Yet the Gospel is finding its way even among the Mohammedans, who are in a restless religious condition. "Not a few of the missionaries are facing the problem of aggressive work among them, notwithstanding the baptism of blood which would likely be the first result of success."

Miss Betham Edwards, in her new book on the progress which has been made in France since the fall of Napoleon III., gives the following statistics:—

> 781 French towns possess Protestant churches, exclusive of English places of worship. The Reformed Church (Calvinistic) has 887 pastors, 35 colleges, 55 colleges for boys, 7 colleges for girls, and 12 chapels attached to garrisons. The Lutheran Church has 90 ministers, the Free Church 47, the Methodist 31, and the Baptist 33. In addition, there are 6 independent churches and 16 evangelical societies. The Protestant community, moreover, numbers many missionary and evangelical societies, 44 orphanages, 60 hospitals, crèches, and homes for the aged, 20 reading-rooms for soldiers, 93 Christian associations, and 118 newspapers.

No doubt this represents a very powerful force, but when placed in the midst of a population of forty millions, and resisted by a church which is enshrined in the superstitions, if not in the affections of the people, how small and inadequate it is! France, we always think, will have to be missioned by English women if it is to be evangelised. Hundreds of them already have the necessary equipment in knowledge of the language; all that is wanted is deeper sympathy with the saving purpose of Christ, and then would be heard his call.

A variety of causes has helped to stamp upon the face of our modern society the marked characteristic of "Indifferentism." Our rapid increase in population, the ever-growing competition in the race for life, the widened gulf separating rich and poor, and the latent scepticism in matters appertaining to religious belief and practice, all tend to a departure from the earnest, positive individuality that marked the characters of our ancestors.

We know nothing of the accuracy or otherwise of the following sentences from Mr. Stead's new book on Chicago, but they illustrate an important truth. He says:—

> If Christ came to Chicago He would find that many of the citizens have forgotten the existence of any moral law apart from that which is embodied in the State or municipal legislation. In Chicago everything that is not illegal is assumed to be right, no matter how dishonourable it may be, no matter how infamous it may be, or cruel it may be. They believe in the State; they have ceased to believe in God.

Assuming this to be some fair representation of the state of things, it shows that while it may be difficult and even dangerous to go before the conscience of a nation in legislating for it, law is a mighty, ever-active educational force. The decisions of law go far to fix, if they do not create, the moral condition of a nation. There are always some in a nation who never reach even the legal standard of righteousness; and if that were lower they would fall lower still. Moral and religious education prepare the way for legal enactment; and the two should never be far apart.

Apart from the moral, or anti-moral, influence of many modern novels, there is immense harm being done by the passion they create and foster for something exciting. Solid reading is at a discount, and will be so for many a day, until this craving for excitement dies out. The novel is sought by only a small number for the grace or force of its style, and for the delineation of character; it is the plot, the incident, which keeps the interest on the strain. No sooner is one finished than another is begun with avidity. Bible reading and novel reading seldom go together, we fear.

Herr Steude, of Dresden, in criticising several works on theology, speaks highly of the work of a layman (H. Wagner), but takes exception to his views on prayer. Wagner thinks that those who pray with unreserved confidence are like young children. "With maturing knowledge we do not pray for anything which is only possible by setting God's laws aside, but only for that which does not contradict them." To which Steude very powerfully replies:

> Did Christ set up such limits for his own and his people's prayers? Did he omit or guide his prayer by regard to the impossibility of its being heard? For Him there was but one ruling thought—the thought, not of Nature's laws, but of God's power limited by his love . . . Whether the hearing of his prayer involves a change in the natural course of things the believer does not think of. During his prayer he is ruled only by the sense of his helplessness and need, and the thought that Almighty God is his Father in heaven.

We recognise the value of the thought of God's power limited by his love, but, so far as we remember, the representation of limitation given in Scripture is that "righteousness is the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins."

B.W.T.A. AT DERBY.—The National Executive of the British Women's Temperance Association held its meetings last week in Derby, services being conducted by well-known ladies on Sunday, 8th inst., in various churches in the town. Drawing-room meetings and other engagements occupied Monday. On Tuesday a largely-attended reception was held in the Temperance Hall, and on Thursday Lady Henry Somerset spoke at a great meeting in the Drill Hall.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION has arranged for another of its annual tours to Rome. These excursions, which are intended mainly for the benefit of Sunday-school teachers, have now become a part of the regular organisation of the Union. The excursion this year will take place at Whitsuntide, and will include visits to Paris, Genoa, Rome, Venice, Florence, Lucerne, and Brussels. It will extend over a period of seventeen days, and will cost £18. Under the personal guidance of Dr. Russell Forbes, the excursionists will spend two days in visiting the places of historical and classical interest in the Eternal City, and Rev. H. S. B. Yates, editor of The Sunday-school Chronicle, will act as conductor of the party.

KING'S CROSS RAILWAY MEN.—The tenth anniversary of the King's Cross G.N. Railway Mission was held at the Culross Hall on Monday week. Rev. Marcus Rainsford, jun., gave an address "I am the way." After a few remarks from Miss E. H. Stones, the lady visitor, an earnest address was delivered by Rev. J. T. Snow, on "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." We trust that the appeal which was made to railway men to make their calling and election sure, was not made in vain, considering that in the majority of cases these men carry their lives in their hands, and never know what a day may bring forth. The report presented showed good work and tokens of blessing and growth.

Israel and the Gentiles.

THE VINE, THE FIG, THE OLIVE, AND THE WILD OLIVE.

The return of the Jews to Palestine, and the re-cultivation of that glorious land, is a subject which is attracting general interest. Not only is the railway open from Jaffa to Jerusalem, but the prospectus of the Acre-Haifa-Damascus Railway is now before the public. A few years ago it was only students of prophecy who believed that those desolate places would be again inhabited; now the colonisation of Palestine is no longer a matter of faith, it is proceeding rapidly before our very eyes:—

Hear the Word of God, O ye Gentiles, and declare it in the isles afar off; and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock. (Jer. xxxi. 10).

The great "Eastern Question" will before long resolve itself into the still unsettled one between Jew and Gentile. The Scriptures are very clear on this point, and contain a great deal relating to the crisis when God will settle the controversy once for all, previous to that glorious reign of righteousness, when the Lord shall be King over all the earth.

Jerusalem has been trodden down by Gentiles for nearly "seven times." From the days of Nebuchadnezzar to 1897, or thereabouts, two thousand five hundred and twenty (2520) long years will have elapsed. Will the Jews then nationally take possession of their land? What if they do? Meanwhile we may profitably turn to Holy Scripture and inquire as to what is said of Gentile as well as of Jew in the days that are coming, for the days may indeed be "at hand, and the effect of every vision."

In the parabolic fable of Jotham (Judges ix. 8-15), we find the olive, the fig, the vine, and the bramble; in Romans xi. we have the olive and the wild olive. Israel was the olive, Israel was the fig-tree, Israel was the vine; the Gentiles are the wild olive branches.

Israel, as the vine which God brought forth out of Egypt, though it was planted in a very fruitful hill, and was called the "well-beloved," and though it was patiently tended and carefully protected, yet brought forth only wild grapes—no fruit to perfection—till He came, the true Vine the true and faithful Israelite, to confirm the promises made unto the Jewish fathers, and that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy. Israel failed as the vine except in the One whom they despised and rejected.

And what shall be said of Israel as the fig tree? Could Israel produce fruit of righteousness by the deeds of the law? No; there was "none righteous, no, not one," save the One, the Holy One, who was righteous in all his ways and holy in all his thoughts. Was the fig-tree with its show of leaves, "nothing but leaves," to remain? No, it "withered away," and no fruit shall grow on it hereafter—for it is a new covenant that God will make with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah.

Israel as the vine has failed, as the chosen nation it did not produce the fruit of righteousness. Israel under the law, as the fig-tree, failed utterly, but what shall be said of Israel as the olive-tree? Israel, as descended from Abraham, as the subject and object of God's sure promise? Can the promise be made of none effect? No; the promises of God are without repentance. The olive-tree, the emblem of promise, of abundance, of happiness, of blessing, and of prosperity, is Israel as the object of promise, which is by God's grace alone. The fig-tree is cut down, but the olive-tree stands to this day; some of its branches have been broken off, but God will graft them in again.

The promise was to Abraham and to his seed, which seed is Christ. All who are Christ's by God's grace and calling are Abraham's seed and heirs according to promise. But the wild olive, as the Gentile, not as the Christian, has boasted and will boast itself against the branches.

The Gentiles will not continue in God's mercy, and when the "fulness of the Gentiles is come in" there shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and turn away ungodliness from Jacob. C.

Spiritual Astronomy.—1.

THE TEACHING OF THE SUN.

By Rev. J. F. T. HALLOWES, Birmingham.

Since Dr. Chalmers published his celebrated "Astronomical Discourses," the science of astronomy has made considerable progress. As the secrets of the starry heavens are revealed, so do they more and more declare the glory of God, furnishing ampler illustrations of spiritual truth. I propose to show this by pointing out how in the light of modern astronomy the sun sets forth Him concerning whom the Psalmist testifies, "The Lord God is a Sun" (Ps. lxxxiv. 11), and whom the Prophet Malachi (iv. 2) calls "The Sun of Righteousness."

Christ does in very deed resemble the sun.

I. The sun is the great source of light.—All the other heavenly bodies give us a most insignificant light when compared to that of the sun. The united rays of all the stars do not nearly equal the glory of the moon. And the firmament must be studded with six hundred thousand full moons before we could receive an amount of light equivalent to what now we have from the sun alone. Truly the sun may say, "I am the light of the world." Actually our Lord does say, "I am the light of the world." He shines with such paramount effulgence that all who persistently refuse his beams have only those lesser lights to rule their night, which serve to make the darkness visible rather than to disperse it. The ancient prophets declared of the heathen of their day that they "sat in darkness." And were they here now they would still affirm that "gross darkness covers" the adherents of Buddhism, Hinduism, Confucianism, and of all Christ-excluding philosophies such as that latest-born luminary Theosophy, whose pale and sickly beams are so admired by many who have never seen the golden splendour of the Sun of Righteousness. Let Christians beware of speaking as if the victims of heathenism have simply an inferior day spiritually (just as the distant planets Neptune and Uranus have naturally). The Bible emphatically declares that they are not children of the day at all, but dwellers in the night. How great, then, our responsibility to send them the Light of Life.

II. The sun can clothe objects with a beauty and glory not their own.—How greatly the fairest landscape is indebted to the sun. The brilliant hue of the flowers, the bright green of the grass, the yellow of the ripe corn, the purple of the thick cloud, are all due to the sun. Their varied colours are not so much in the objects coloured as in the sun that paints them. The sun is the great artist, who day by day paints a fresh picture as large as the world, and as beautiful as nature. So, too, the fairer hues of holiness in the heart of the Christian are due to the shinings of Christ, the Sun of Righteousness, who is thus named not only because of his personal righteousness, but because also of his power to communicate his righteousness to us. And as it is necessary for the maintenance of the many-tinted colours of the natural world that the sun should continue shining, so it is not less needful for the maintenance of the various graces that adorn the heart of the Christian, that the Lord his righteousness should continue to shed his light upon him. Let Christ, the true sun, set or be totally eclipsed, the colours of grace will vanish. Let Him even be clouded or partially eclipsed, and they will be toned down, losing much of their vividness and beauty. The great art of the Christian life is to get a maximum of spiritual sunlight day by day. We can point out the place in England—Falmouth—which enjoys more than any other spot the solar light. God only knows the person who enjoys more than any other Christian the light of Christ.

III. The sun is the great source of heat.—The sun has a heat far greater than anything we can produce by fire or by electricity. Its immense circumference, and it is 2,500,000 miles round, is enveloped by glowing gas. From this vast ocean of liquid fire flames sometimes rise, measured by tens of thousands of miles in height. One of these flame-spires actually reached an altitude of 350,000 miles. So great is the heat of the sun that on this distant planet its rays, concentrated by a large burning-glass, will melt even flint, and dissipate it into gas.

Yet greater is the spiritual heat of the Sun of Righteousness. If your soul is chilled by an arctic winter, if your very feelings are frost-bound, there is warmth enough in Christ to thaw the mountains of snow and ice within you into floods of penitential tears. Were all the planets immense balls of ice, they might all be melted in a very brief time, by moving sufficiently near to the sun. Draw near, then, to Christ. Let his fire find out your frost. Spiritual coldness is simply distance from Christ.

THE GOSPEL IN ITALY.

Easter is over, and now, at leisure, we can see what has been done in the Lord's name. In our valleys of Piedmont some hundreds of new members have been added to the Church. In some parishes there is a joyous revival going on. In my own parish, at San Germano Chisone, we have had a great many blessings, and many are praying and working for the Master.

In August next we hope to inaugurate the first Protestant Refuge for Aged Poor in Italy. In our mission work among Roman Catholics, God is blessing the efforts of our friends preaching the pure Gospel. In Turin a priest denounced our pastor, but when discussion was suggested, he at once declined, thus showing once more that Rome simply imposes her dogmas and errors.

At Brescia the municipal council has rented a Roman Catholic Church for our service, and hundreds of Romanists are flocking to listen to the lectures of Dr. Gay. An officer, a lawyer, and many soldiers have been brought to Christ. At Revere, in Lombardy, notwithstanding the curses of the Canon and priest, the peasants assemble in great numbers to listen to Good Tidings never heard before. I never in my life saw such attention during preaching.

I have good news from Tuscany, chiefly from Florence. A good many suburbs are asking for help, and really a new pastor is needed. Yes, even in sceptical Italy, there is an awakening as well as a deep need of the knowledge of Christ. Romanism, however, is dumb in that regard. The resurrection of Italy lies not in peace with Rome or the Pope, but in accepting the pure Gospel of Christ, the only Saviour. We have faith in that resurrection, and pray for it. C. A. Tron.

WORKINGTON.—A special Gospel Temperance Mission has been held here with capital results.

Thanksgiving and Revival.

We have devoted several columns to the report of the Thanksgiving meetings held last week for the mercies and blessings of the past five-and-thirty years. But everyone who was there, and those who were present in spirit though not in person, must feel how inadequately the report expresses the importance and the significance of those inspiring gatherings.

They reminded us of the revival in Hezekiah's day: "So the service of the house of Jehovah was set in order. And Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people; for the thing was done suddenly." There was no long previous preparation; no skilful organisation; no popular speakers were announced; no absorbing topics of the day were advertised; no new thing was set forth as an attraction. To some 1859 awaked the memory of a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined. But to the great majority 1859 is a history, not an experience; something of which their fathers had told them, not something they have themselves passed through, though they have participated in the blessings of the Gospel which made memorable that and the succeeding years.

What, then, drew the people so readily and so heartily together? What made them so joyful when gathered? so reluctant to separate? It was the Name that is above every name; it was the ineradicable instinct of oneness in Him, for we are members of his body, members one of another. The eager, anxious throngs were drawn from all quarters, because Jesus of Nazareth was passing by.

Just as in the elect but backsliding and apostate nation there has ever been a tenth—the Shear-jashub—"the-remnant-shall-return"—so there has always been the tenth man to return and give thanks and glory to God; but are we not to see the waking up of the other nine? We have robbed God of the sacrifice of praise, which is the chief of the tithes we owe Him; for the life is more than meat, the spiritual is more than the material; and when the spiritual tithes are faithfully brought in the material will not be withheld. When we bring the tithes into the storehouse—and under the Gospel the tithes are not a tenth, but ourselves and our all—then God has promised to pour out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it, and to rebuke the devourer for our sakes: "and all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of Hosts." (We do not rob our brethren of Judah of their portion in this Scripture, because we accept Joseph's portion—blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings to the utmost bound of the everlasting hills.)

God has been preparing his people for this uniting service of thanksgiving. Two years ago our brother, Dr. Moore, editor of The Christian Commonwealth, called upon us, burdened with the desire to promote the unity of the children of God who are scattered abroad. A little later a series of special meetings for Revival was held on several Monday afternoons, under the leadership of our late beloved friend, Robert Paton. All over the land there are remembrancers of the Lord, who cry day and night for the peace of Jerusalem, the City of Peace. Some of them came up to give thanks with their brethren last week; others gathered in smaller or larger companies in the places where they dwell.

Nothing promotes the spirit of love and harmony and unity, so much as giving praise to God. "It came to pass when the priests were come out of the holy place . . . it came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound, to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals, and instruments of music, and praised the Lord, saying, 'For He is good: for his mercy endureth for ever:' that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the Lord: so that the priests could not stand to minister, by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God."

We regret that we have not space for many interesting letters of testimony, reminiscence, and suggestion. The desire is expressed by many that similar Thanksgiving Meetings should shortly be held in other parts of London, and certainly that they should be repeated next year. We refrain from making any further announcement at present; but while we shrink from anticipating the leadings of our heavenly Father, let us all wait in expectant prayer for his sure guidance.

We cannot close these remarks without emphasising the Pentecostal character of the meetings in the two chief features of the day of Pentecost—that Jesus was glorified and that the gathered company were all of one accord. There was not a jarring note, and the manifestation of the spirit of love and power was not lacking. Let us live in love, let us dwell together in unity, seeking those things which make for peace, and the God of love and peace will be with us.

Clustering Closer now we cling,
Swarm and hive AROUND OUR KING.

☞ The expenses connected with these meetings have been £150, towards which £40 have been contributed. Any further donations, sent through the publishers of this paper, will be duly acknowledged.

[The following papers were sent to the Thanksgiving Meeting last Wednesday, April 11, the writers being prevented by illness from being present.]

From Pastor FRANK H. WHITE.

I had hoped against hope that I might be able to be with you in bodily presence this morning, to unite in thanksgiving and supplication, but the will of the Lord is otherwise. My weakness and weariness are so great just now that I dare not attempt the effort. It is a deep disappointment to me. If any one amongst you has cause for praise—I more. No tongue can tell what I owe to the grace of God bestowed during those memorable days.

May the Spirit of the living God and Father fill the place where you are assembled and overflow every heart, until, like a mighty tidal wave, not only London but all England is made to share in the blessing of another divinely deep and enduring revival of pure and undefiled religion, with a thousand-fold increase of the best characteristics of that wonderful awakening, in grateful commemoration of which you are met together to-day. The one feature thereof which, on looking back, most impresses my mind at this moment was the large measure of the spirit of united, fervent, importunate, and believing prayer which marked its initiation and after progress.

The Revival of 1859 to 1862, following upon the Lodiana invitation to prayer in November, 1858, and which had its commencement in the meeting together of four or five godly young men in Ulster to pray for the revival of the work of grace in their own souls, is to be remembered not so much as a time of preaching to men as one of pleading with God. Preachers were raised up, it is true, eminent as soul-winners; but multitudes, not only in Ireland, but in England and Scotland, were brought to Christ, apart from any special instrumentality other than the simple testimony of young converts in connection with daily and weekly united prayer meetings, which were started all over the kingdom. Dear Henry Hull was largely instrumental in establishing not a few of these gatherings. He, with others, visited some of the scenes of the Irish Revival, and came back to tell of the remarkable tokens he had witnessed of the Holy Spirit's awakening and converting power. I remember his writing to me before his return and deploring that while he was seeing sinners brought to Christ by scores at a time, London Christians were content with their twos and threes, and adding, "O dear friend, get them all to pray; dare any not to pray, charge them all to cry to God as they have never cried, and He will bless them as He has never blessed."

In the years 1860-1862 the Holy Spirit wrought mightily in some of the business houses adjacent to the Stafford Rooms, and numbers of young people were converted to God. I well remember four youths calling upon me late one night in deepest anxiety of soul, and with tears asking, "What must we do to be saved?" They had been listening to no appeals, nor could I gather that anyone had been speaking directly to them of their soul's danger. While engaged in their ordinary duties they had been suddenly, I believe, smitten with sore heart conviction of sin; they had tried to laugh themselves out of their anxiety, but their sense of guilt before God only increased the more, and they were constrained to seek someone to guide them into the way of peace. All four that night rejoiced in God their Saviour. Fourteen years ago I met with one of them as a local preacher among the Methodists, and to my great joy learned that his three companions were at that time prominent Christian workers—one in the ministry of the Gospel, and another a Y.M.C.A. secretary.

Another leading feature of that Revival was deep solemnity. There was great and real joy, but this was conjoined with a holy awe—an overwhelming sense of the Divine. GOD was written very large in all its workings. "Full of God, full of God," was the remark once made in my hearing by a Welsh worker as he left one of the Friday evening prayer-meetings at Stafford Rooms, which was, as you well remember, for a long time the scene of some remarkable seasons of awakening. In saying this, I do not do so with any desire of comparing the past with the present, but to emphasise a question which, if I had been allowed to speak to you, I should have urged upon your consideration.

Is not this our great need now? Since the blessed days of which I am writing, agencies and adaptations in Christian work have multiplied wonderfully, but God the Holy Ghost is still our great necessity. To be filled with his grace and power is still the one—the only—main essential to a deep, pure, and widespread revival. May this be the gracious outcome of this day's meeting, and to the glory of God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost.

From Mr. REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

It gives me great concern in consequence of my physician's prohibition, to have to deny myself the great privilege and great joy of being with you, accompanied by Mrs. Radcliffe on the 11th, in the dear East End of London. "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together. I sought the Lord and He heard me" (Ps. xxxiv. 3, 4). Now this very day let us exalt his name together. Let the whole assembly, for all He has done, give Him the glory, and with hands outstretched towards heaven, crave and expect nothing less than blessings for the whole world. "Thy will be done on earth."

What is burnt into my soul is a clinging to the words and examples in the New Testament; and this at once brings us to come together for united prayer, as you are now doing. This was so at Pentecost, and surely will be in your gathering, in special accordance with the Saviour's command to "tarry at Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." Their tarrying was most gloriously answered by every man and woman, among them being then and there filled with the Holy Ghost, and was followed up by the immediate dispersion not only of themselves, but of thousands of others, accompanied often by dreadful persecutions. But the results, we may well suppose, were the manufacture of tens of thousands of slave Christians and their masters, and of soldiers in the Roman Army, and the rapid spreading of the Gospel in Asia, Europe, and Africa.

I may be asked, why do I so often reiterate this one thought? Why should we not rather limit our prayers to asking for ministers and missionaries. My reply is, that Satan is manifestly getting the private members of the churches in Europe and America, and over Christendom, to shirk the responsibility which the Holy Spirit claims from every Christian individual, whether man or woman, literate or illiterate, diligently to spread the Gospel. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Many will remember reading that when Raikes originated Sunday schools every teacher was to be paid, but, happily, the movement soon collapsed for want of money. Thereupon someone else re-started it by proposing that the teachers should do it from love only, and so, instead of remaining like a broken-down coach upset on the roadside, it has become a mighty instrumentality, and spreading now perhaps farther then ever.

Why should we not, therefore, in Mr. Charrington's Hall, pray not only for the few workers in London pecuniarily supported, but that every true Christian who will be present at any of the meetings may be filled with the Holy Ghost, and henceforth keep in step with those blessed persecuted thousands of the first and early centuries? If not, how can we honestly or reasonably expect either London, or Britain, or the world, to be evangelised?

This is so plain in the New Testament that it is marvellous how we can quietly think of evangelising either the Jews, Mohammedans, or the heathen, or the populations of Europe, without it. Beloved Hudson Taylor so sweetly and candidly in the pages of The Christian confessed that he began in the old rut by salarying the native Chinese; but that his eyes were opened to see that the pay hindered their usefulness with their countrymen, and that afterwards, when their salaries were withdrawn, and they supported themselves, though they then gave a far smaller portion of their time, the result in conversions was far greater.

Now if a similar blessing as at Pentecost were emptied out on the East of London now, thousands might speedily be converted, and the sound and effect thereof reach not only throughout London, but round the world. Do not think I am being carried away—I am sticking to the very words of the Lord's prayer, "On earth thy will be done," and sticking with precision to his command, "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature, and lo, I am with you alway, to the end of the age."

Let us mark well that at Pentecost the blessing came direct from Heaven, and to-day if we would be equipped for God's work like the hundred and twenty in the upper room, the blessing and enduement of power must likewise come to us also direct from Him who ascended "to shed forth this which ye now see and hear."

My last word is, "Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it." (Ps. lxxxi. 10).

The Churches and Missions.

One of the most able and zealous advocates of the missionary cause recently remarked, when the subject of the churches and missions was the theme of conversation, "As for the churches, I have given up expecting them as churches to do their duty in connection with missionary enterprise." The significance of the remark lies in the fact that it was made by one who was well acquainted with what the churches were doing.

We need say nothing to show how serious a condition of the churches is implied in such a remark. Opinions may vary as to the measure in which that remark is to be regarded as true. But none can face the actual facts—can compare the number of church-members with the amount of subscriptions—the proportion of money spent upon missions as contrasted with that spent in order to make the surroundings of their own spiritual worship agreeable and attractive, without being compelled to admit that the churches are very far from meeting worthily the claims of foreign missions. The methods hitherto adopted have failed to awaken and to sustain any strong active interest in the work for which every church exists.

We have lately advocated a method of daily praying and daily giving, and of associating with each church some special missionary, to be regarded as that church's representative. We are convinced that upon some such lines a remedy for the existing evil is to be found. Interest can be aroused and sustained, and gifts can be very largely increased. This is no mere opinion, for, in the church where this method has had a fair trial, exactly this result has been obtained.

A few testimonies may be useful in further evidence. They have been given spontaneously by members of the Prayer Union to the pastor or secretary.

"I am so glad," says one, who obtains her living by keeping a lodging and boarding-house, "that I am in this Union. I never felt that I could take £1, or even 10s., out of my purse to give at one time. It is so much easier to give every day." Her box has had from 7s. 6d. to 10s. for every quarter.

A domestic servant, who, though earning little, yet gives regularly in her box, said concerning the quarterly meeting: "I did enjoy the meeting so much. Since I have begun to pray for Mr. H——, and to put into my box daily, I get more and more interested in missionary work." The delight with which she said it was evidence of her true interest.

A lady who has the box on her drawing-room table finds it useful in furnishing opportunity for testimony to her visitors. More than once she has expressed the pleasure she has in putting her money into the box, and with every coin there is offered an earnest prayer for the missionary in India.

A girl of sixteen, away from home, wrote to a friend also in the Prayer Union, and said, "I quite miss my box every morning. I know I can put in the amount when I return, but it is so much better to put it in every morning. Don't you think so?"

These testimonies could be multiplied, but it is not necessary. They are enough to show that it is possible to increase the interest of our church members in missionary work. We suggest that others make trial of the same means.

GOSPORT SEAMEN'S MISSION.

In a report for the half year ending Dec. 31, Mrs. Cook says:—

"Since the removal of my dear husband, the greatly beloved founder of these missions, the loss of his whole-hearted devotion to this cause has been keenly felt; yet we must testify to the infinite mercy of our heavenly Father in the grace and comfort He has vouchsafed to us personally, and praise Him for the strength and encouragement given us to continue this work in all its branches.

"At Gosport we are rejoicing in the addition to our numbers—not only at all our meetings, but also that many are brought out of darkness into the light and liberty of the sons of God. Mothers' meetings, temperance meetings, Gospel services, Bible classes, praise and prayer meetings, visiting the ships in harbour, especially the merchant ships and fishing boats, and holding services on lightships when practicable, fill in our time during the week, children's services, meetings for believers, Gospel services, and Bible classes, occupy us on the Lord's day; and God has been pleased to bless these efforts to extend his kingdom and bring the lost to a knowledge of salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ.

"The school, which has been rebuilt, is again opened as an infant free day school; it is also used as a reading room every evening for men and boys; we hope by this means to gain an influence over many who are so easily drawn into the public-houses in that neighbourhood. The work at the Bethel is continued as usual. At Deauville, the French missionary and his wife are actively engaged.

"The Herald of Mercy is still at Folkestone until the Fishermen's Bethel is finished. I much regret the heavy debt which still remains on the Mission; incurred through the many and unexpected extras required in finishing the steamer Good News. And while feeling the loss of many kind helpers who have been called home, we are assured that others will be raised up to fill their places, and so enable us to carry on this his own blessed work."

Mrs. Cook's address is 47, Stoke-road, Gosport.

THE MISSIONARY BUREAU.—A meeting to bid God-speed to Miss Robinson on her departure to join Miss Reade's Mission in South Arcot took place on Tuesday, April 10, at the office of the Society, 186, Aldersgate-street. Miss Robinson, who is going out for the third time, had a most encouraging testimony to give of the Lord's dealings with her, not only in India, but in the Mauritius and Italy, and of the blessing accompanying her labours. The secretary announces a monthly noonday prayer-meeting, on the first Tuesday of each month, in connection with the Foreign Missionary Prayer Union, at the same address. It is hoped that Mr. H. G. E. de St. Dalmas will be present on May 1. W. R. J.

IN THE DISCUSSION OF "METHODS" in a recent Sunday-school convention at Chautauqua, Wm. D. Porter described his method of teaching temperance in the Sunday-school. I have, he said, six principles in my thought: "First, believe with all our hearts that total abstinence is taught in the Word of God. Second, believe that the only safety for the young is that it is unsafe to take the first glass, as the Word of God says: 'Look not thou upon the wine when it is red.' Third, believe with all our hearts what the Word of God says: 'No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.' Fourth, believe with all our hearts that we are just as much bound to teach the principles of total abstinence as any other truth in the Word of God. Fifth, believe with all our hearts that it is no use to teach what we find in the Word of God unless we practise it. Sixth, believe with all our hearts that every truth that we find in the Word of God, which we teach lovingly and prayerfully can ever be lost, but will bring forth fruit."

PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

By Richard Francis Weymouth, D.Lit., M.A., Fellow of Univ. Coll. Lond., Editor of the Resultant Greek Testament.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

8 But we desire to apprise you, brethren, of the grace of God which has been bestowed in the
2 Churches of Macedonia; how, while they are experiencing great trouble, the exuberance of their joy even in the depths of poverty has overflowed to enhance their rich
3 liberality. For to the utmost of their power, as I can testify, and beyond their power, they have given of their own free
4 will. With earnest entreaty they besought of us the favour of participation in this
5 service rendered to the holy ones; and that, not merely as we had expected, but their own selves first of all by the will of God they
6 gave to the Lord and to us. This led us to beg Titus, as he had previously commenced, so also to go and complete among you this act
7 of beneficence also. Yes, just as you abound exceedingly in faith, readiness of speech, knowledge, unwearied zeal, and the love that is in you, implanted by us, see that this grace also flourishes in you.
8 I am not saying this by way of command, but to test by the standard of other men's earnestness the genuineness of your love also.
9 For you know the condescending goodness of our Lord Jesus Christ, how for your sake He became poor, though He was rich, in order that 10 you by his poverty might grow rich. But in this matter I give you my judgment; for my so doing subserves your own design, seeing tha not only you have commenced operations, but you already entertained the desire a year ago.
11 And now complete the doing also, in order that, just as there was then the eagerness in desiring, there may now be the accomplish-
12 ment in proportion to your means. For, supposing the earnest willingness, the gift is acceptable according to whatever a man has,
13 not according to what he has not. I do not urge you to give in order that others may have relief, and you undue pressure, but that,
14 with equalisation of burdens, your superfluity having in the present emergency supplied their deficiency, their superfluity in turn may be a supply for your deficiency, that there may 15 be equality; as it is written, "He who gathered much had not too much, and he who gathered little had not too little."
16 But thanks be to God that He inspires the heart of Titus with the same deep interest in 17 you; for he welcomed our request, and being thoroughly in earnest he goes to you of 18 his own free will. And we send with him the brother whose praises for proclaiming the Good News are heard throughout all the
19 Churches; and more than that, who was chosen by the vote of the Churches to travel with us, sharing our commission in dealing with this generous gift, to promote the Lord's
20 glory and to gratify our strong desire. For against one thing we are on our guard—against any one's throwing blame on us in respect of this large and liberal contribution
21 which is under our charge. For we seek not only God's approval of our integrity, but man's also.
22 And we send with them our brother of whose zeal we have had proof often in many matters, and who is now more zealous than ever through the strong confidence he has in you.
23 As to Titus, he is a partner with me, and my colleague in labour for you: as to our brethren, they are delegates from the Churches, men in 24 whom Christ is glorified. Exhibit therefore before the Churches a proof of your love, and a vindication of our boasting to these brethren about you.

4 Favour of participation; lit., favour and participation.
5 Their own selves: namely, for any personal service that it was in their power to render.
7 That is in you, implanted by us; I believe this to be the true reading. Another reading is, (the love) that is on your part in our case: to us, as in A.V., is a hardly possible rendering.
15. Too much....too little: lit., more....less. Compare Ps. lxi. 2, R.V. and marg.
19 Vote: lit., show of hands.
23 Delegates: lit., apostles.

HEARD IN THE DARK.

BY MRS. HARVEY-JELLIE.

The vessel was proudly riding the waves, bearing her varied crew to their desired haven. Night with its speaking silence was over the deep sea, and one of the passengers stood alone on the deck. It was twenty years since Ronald Horsom crossed that ocean path, to seek a livelihood in a foreign land. In the still hour under the sparkling heavens, he was listening to voices from his past experience, and like a panorama before him lay the scenes of those twenty years.

First of all, he saw the little home with all that made it distinct from other houses, and the grave and anxious faces that used to look at him with wounded love in his days of youthful sin and folly. Then the start for the new opening, the farewells, the journey towards the unknown, the days of toil and weariness, a passage lonely, dark, and long, leading up to an event around which gathered all the radiating light of after consequences. It was on one cold night, he could almost feel the chill that had then come over him, when, after months of disappointing work, he faced a hopeless blank. Fearing to return to his room, for which he had promised to pay that night, he stood, an object of despair, at a street corner, with his last chance apparently gone. The peril of that moment caused a shiver to go through him, even though long safely passed. Once more he prayed a blessing on the one who, at that critical time, came up and gave a cheering word, and afterwards led him to the great source of a pure and holy life. From that scene, he traced the precious experience that followed, for then he met Christ, and the light of life shone into his soul.

Now he saw another picture, dark and solemn. Lying back there, it seemed enshrouded in mystery, for God gave him that new home of love, and in his thankfulness and joy he had praised the Lord. Yet over the harpstrings of his gladness there came the weird touch of a death-blast, turning the music into a bitter wail, after the delight of his eyes was removed by a stroke. He recalled his desolation, and viewing it afar, unconsciously he drew his wrap about him as though some sudden storm approached; yet all was quiet, above and around.

It was a dark scene, but sacred to his heart; for God took him from mid-day glare to midnight gloom that He might tell him something in the dark: tell him words and secrets he never guessed at before. In those wonderful times, when other light was shut out, he heard Jesus whisper in his ear, marvellous words of heights and depths of love, of life, grand and beautiful, of eternity, sublime and near. Ronald Horsom heard Him say, "What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light, and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops" (Matt. x. 27). He knew what it all meant, as the vision of his bygone years stretched before his prayerful gaze; and, burdened with the blessed secrets, he was going back to the place he started from, to obey his Master's command.

The vessel entered harbour, and the chastened man, altered in appearance and in heart, purified and made strong, gave freely of all he had received. His dying mother was comforted, and he watched over the infirmities of an aged father. Out of a full heart he spoke to young and old, to sorrowful or glad ones. To-day his joy is to speak the Word and many rejoice for what God said to him "in the darkness." Souls are saved by the preaching of words he received direct from God. For all his pain and loss he is receiving an hundredfold now and assuredly, in the world to come, he will receive eternal life.

MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS

The report of last year's work in connection with the Mildmay Mission to the Jews appeals very strongly to the sympathetic interest of Christian readers. The Central Hall, in Philpot-street, E., the new centre of operations, has five floors and forty-one rooms. It cost about £10,000, and there is no debt upon it.

The daily round of effort is thus summarised:—"The home work consists of house-to-house visitation, conversation with individual Jews and groups of Jews in the streets, open-air services, New Testament and tract distribution, occasional personal calls upon the middle and higher-class Jews, besides the use of the post in sending suitable literature. The indoor work at the Central Hall consists in meetings of Jewish believers on Sunday mornings; evangelistic meetings on Sunday evenings, Wednesday evenings, and on Saturday afternoons; sewing classes for Jewesses on Tuesday afternoons, inquirers' class, Bible classes for Jewish women, for Jewish boys, and for Jewish girls, night school for Jewish children, besides the important medical mission with doctors, deaconesses, and dispensers. On the same premises we have the storing and distribution of thousands of garments for the poor and the book store, which is in touch with New Testament distribution throughout the world. Associated with the Medical Mission we have the Convalescent Home at Highgate, a very great boon. The Children's Home on Newington Green is blessed of God in gathering the lambs into his fold. The localised mission in Liverpool is carried on with devoted and prayerful energy, and our itinerant mission has visited Jews, once, twice, or thrice, in nearly every town and city where they are located in Great Britain and Ireland."

The work of the various agents is succinctly described, showing large totals of Gospel efforts and charitable acts. The Medical Mission is a particularly promising department, and the steps taken to befriend poor immigrants from Russia have a pathetic interest. During the year 19,506 Hebrew New Testaments were forwarded to different parts of the world for distribution, and most of them have been placed in the hands of Jews able to read the Holy Tongue. In conclusion, Mr. Wilkinson emphasizes his principle and method, expressed in the Apostolic formula, "to the Jew first." He also gives some particulars of significant developments in regard to the Jews and the Land of Promise. We extract a few sentences:—

"We stated in our last report that there were eighteen colonies of Jews in Palestine, now Mr. Schor speaks of twenty or twenty-five. But these are not the only Jews in training for farmers. For many years past thousands of Jews in Russia have been cultivating the land as farmers, though under great difficulties and restrictions. Besides, there are four colonies in Argentina, with a total of 200,000 acres. The Colonisation Association, however, possesses a further 200,000 acres at present unoccupied. There is also the 'Colony Hirsch' in North West Canada; there is another also in New Jersey, U.S.A. So we see the Jews are in training, in Palestine and out of it, for cultivating the land of their fathers."

The report is very readable, and makes it abundantly clear that the esteemed director, Rev. John Wilkinson, is as fully as ever absorbed in his much-loved service, which has now extended over upwards of forty years. He has a large staff of devoted helpers, whose individual stories are admirably told. The office of the Mission is 79, Mildmay-road, N.

PLUMSTEAD.—The King's Highway Mission, which began twenty years ago in cottage meetings, has gone on steadily, and has been greatly blessed. The work has lately grown so that the premises have become too small. A friend has given a site and £200 towards building a larger hall, but further aid is earnestly desired. The secretary is Mr. H. T. Grubb, 8, Southland-road, King's Highway, Plumstead.

PASTOR THOMAS SPURGEON.

If the dwellers in "the land beyond the river" take cognisance of what goes on in the world they have left, the spirit of C. H. Spurgeon must have greatly rejoiced last Thursday evening. Such a gathering to give such a welcome to his son Thomas, as settled pastor of the church, must have caused him joy, as it certainly did to those who were present in the body. Like all others who are deeply interested in the fortunes of this central pulpit of Christendom, we have eagerly watched the proceedings of the last year or so. We have sorrowed at the possibility of a divided people, through conflicting views as to the pastorate. Our gladness is now correspondingly great when the crisis is over, and the Metropolitan Tabernacle is once more in possession of a minister, with no apparent loss either in numbers or in enthusiasm.

The meeting of Thursday evening was indeed a memorable one in the history of this historic congregation. The giant building was crammed from corner to corner and from floor to ceiling. When Mr. Thomas Spurgeon, accompanied by his uncle, his brother, the officers of the church, and other friends, came down the gangway from the vestry to the platform, the feelings of the throng found vent in clapping of hands and waving of handkerchiefs. Mr. T. H. Olney having taken the chair, the vast congregation joined in the hymn,

O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come, sung to the grand and stately old tune of "Martyrdom." Prayer was offered by Rev. Jas. Stephens, of Highgate.

Rev. F. B. Meyer stepped to the front, "daring to come before the Chairman," as he said, because he had to leave for another engagement. His words were few, but golden. He said they had been praying much at Christ Church of late for Mr. Thomas Spurgeon, and now they rejoiced greatly at his settlement. He wished to give the young pastor the right hand of fellowship in the stupendous task he had undertaken. They of the little boat at Christ Church deemed themselves partners in the work with the great Tabernacle ship; when Mr. Spurgeon and his workers had too big a haul of fish, he hoped they would beckon to him and his comrades at Christ Church to come and help. The success of one church is the success of all.

Then came the Chairman's turn, and he made a very happy use of it; mingling homely pleasantries and memories with words of the heartiest and warmest welcome to the new pastor, both on account of his own qualities and for the sake of his illustrious father. He said they were looking forward to happy and prosperous times in the church, and those who loved Mr. Spurgeon wished to be left alone so that they might do the work before them. Mr. Olney read out the names of a number of well-known friends belonging to different denominations who had sent regrets at being unable to be present. The Home Counties Baptist Association had sent a special resolution of congratulation and good wishes.

There followed thereafter several speeches, all of them admirable in tone and substance. Dr. James Spurgeon spoke as ex-co-pastor of the Tabernacle for a quarter of a century, as president of the College and the Orphanage, and as uncle of the new pastor; in each capacity his greetings and good wishes were of the warmest kind. He told the congregation not to expect that Mr. Thomas should attempt the impossibility of doing his late father's work, but to let him do his own work in his own way. His father's memory ought to illuminate and not overshadow him. When any got a blessing under his preaching, let them cheer him by the news of it without delay. After a solo from Rev. W. J. Mayers, Pastor Charles Spurgeon, of Greenwich, gave a capital little address; and he was followed by Pastor Frank Smith, of Peckham Rye, who evoked a hearty cheer by referring to the services recently rendered to the church by Dr. A. T. Pierson. Rev. J. Bond, speaking on behalf of the Wesleyans and other Nonconformist bodies, was as fervid as any Methodist could desire, and as catholic as Christendom.

The Chairman having handed to the new pastor a cheque for £100, as a small expression of esteem on the part of several friends in the church, it became the duty of Mr. Thomas Spurgeon to reply. Again the cheers resounded loud and long, and the handkerchiefs fluttered like a thousand white banners in the breeze. The pastor's opening remark was quite Spurgeonic, and showed that in ready wit at any rate he is the son of his father. Holding up the little oblong bit of paper, value £100, he said it was "the first check that the happy meeting had received." A man who could conceive this witticism and utter it in the coolest tone at such a trying moment is equal to any emergency; certainly Mr. Spurgeon's speech was, under the difficult circumstances, a masterly one, and indicated far greater reserve power than we had suspected him to possess. He was glad, he said, that he was at liberty to do with the cheque exactly as he pleased. He would do with it what he felt sure his father would have done—hand it to the treasurer of the church for those institutions that were most needy at the moment; that being his determination, he could only say he wished it were £200.

In the half-hour's speech that followed, Mr. Spurgeon went into a little review of the circumstances of his call to the pastorate, so far as they related to himself. He thanked all his friends for their congratulations, and even thanked his detractors for having saved him from the woe that comes to those of whom all men speak well. At the same time he hoped they would not keep on at it. He proceeded to tell how he had been constrained by all the circumstances to accept this call to the pastorate, notwithstanding its heavy responsibilities. He had never himself lifted a finger to secure the call; he had of late been granted a quite unusual measure of bodily health; God had granted him some success during the trying season of probation; very important to him also was the fact that this proposal was agreeable to both his parents, and he quoted various utterances of his late father on the point. Over and over again he had said to his loved ones in private, "When anything happens to me the people at the Tabernacle will send for son Tom." All these things showed him plainly that the voice of the church at this time was the voice of God.

As to the future Mr. Spurgeon said they would proceed on the old lines; teaching the old doctrines, using the old methods, singing the old tunes, and sticking to the old Book. So far as he was concerned they would also have the old helpers; and he appealed to the people to rally round him, so that there might be no breaches in the ranks.

And so ended one of the happiest and most enthusiastic of congregational meetings. We are sure every reader will pray that the bow of the young pastor may long abide in strength, and that he may be anointed and qualified to continue unimpaired the great and far-reaching work begun by his lamented and honoured father.

THE LIVERPOOL CONVENTION.

Gordon Hall is always a bright spot, but particularly so at Convention times, when God's children from various parts of the kingdom, and representing a variety of outwards organisations, are gathered together. During the whole of the week which has just closed, crowded meetings were held, over which Mr. Robert Wilson presided, and practical addresses on the Christian life and its fulness of blessing were given by Rev. J. J. Luce, C. Inwood, G. H. C. Macgregor, Musgrave Brown, Dr. White, and others, which were very helpful.

On Wednesday a large number of local clergymen, Presbyterian, Congregational, Wesleyan, and Baptist ministers accepted the invitation of Mr. Stephen J. Menzies to luncheon. Afterwards opportunity was afforded of expressing one's difficulties and differences in regard to the teaching of sanctification, etc. A very profitable hour was thus spent, and it was good to see the happy Christlike spirit which pervaded the gathering. Surely it is a blessing indeed when denominational differences are forgotten in the all-absorbing truth of our oneness in Jesus.

Friday was devoted to missionary work, and very inspiring were the addresses given—on India, by Rev. A. R. Cavalier; on North Africa, by Mr. Glenny; on the Congo, by Dr. Harry Grattan Guinness; and on China, by Mr. Sloan. Several of the deaconesses who are in training at Mrs. Menzies' Homes gave their testimony, in a bright and decisive manner, as to the call they had received to go to the regions beyond. It is interesting to note that the testimony of the deaconesses was that it was at such gatherings as these that they had been called to offer themselves for the foreign field. A very happy conference was brought to a close with an earnest address from Mr. Macgregor.

SCRIPTURE READERS IN IRELAND.

Much work for Christ is done in Ireland, but no work is in the hands of more devoted men than is that of the Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland. The beginning of the work carries us back to the second decade of the century; and the seventy-third annual report, issued a few days ago, gives a good idea of the promising conditions under which the Gospel is to-day presented to the working classes or peasantry of Ireland.

We read: "During the past five years there have been, on an average, forty Scripture Readers regularly at work in their respective fields of labour. They have again and again expressed their gratitude for the willingness of those they visit to hear the Scriptures read, and to join with them in a brief simple prayer for a blessing to accompany the reading of the passage selected. Everywhere they meet with hearts open to receive the good seed.

"What the city missionary is in poor, densely-populated quarters of great cities, what the home missionary is in many country places, with scattered populations, a very small minority of whom are found attending any place of worship, that the Scripture Reader is in various parts of Ireland. He may safely be said to be never without work ready to his hand whilst there is a sick person to whom he can say a word of comfort from the Book, or by the bedside of whom he can offer a prayer.

"His work is simple, direct, positive; to read the Word, whatever the creed or no creed of the one to whom he goes, whatever the denomination or no denomination of those he may happen to fall in with. He has to meet every form of unbelief, every anxious state of mind, with no words of his own, but with what the Lord Himself says, and in that lies his safety and his power. Whatever may be the conversation started, after a very little while he will turn to some incident connected with his work, either on the quay, on shipboard, in the hospital, the wayside, or the poor lonely cabin in some deserted nook. He is not so much at home upon any subject as upon his own work—the text he quoted in any particular case of distress, and the comfort it imparted; the reproof which a text administered to a blasphemer, and the good resulting from it."

As usual the report gives extracts from the journals of the Readers and the reports of Superintendents. One of the former says: "As usual, I have paid regular visits to the sick, and many have been the prayers that went up to the throne of grace for me, and many 'God be with you's,' and similar expressions too numerous to mention, from these afflicted ones.

"T——E——, now deceased, thanked me often for all my visits to him; he was ailing a long time, and I think I paid him a visit almost every week. On one of these visits, our subject was 'assurance'; he could not say he had it, but he said to me when leaving, 'Well, I know more to-day than I knew before; come soon again.' I was with him on the evening of the night in which he died; he was quite conscious, and he said to me, 'We won't meet here again, but I hope we will above.' One of the most encouraging bits of my work is the Men's Bible Class. I have a membership of thirty-nine, ranging in age from fourteen to fifty years. One result of this work is a Young Men's Christian Association, which is increasing in interest as well as membership. Another result is that several have joined Rev. T. Richardson's Bible and Prayer Union."

Communications should be addressed to the secretary, Captain Jas. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin.

THE FEMALE STRANGERS' LODGING-HOUSE, 105, Piccadilly, Manchester, exist for the sheltering of respectable women and girls, strangers in Manchester. It is seventeen years since the Home was founded by the late Bishop Fraser. During last year the thirteen beds were occupied 3167 times; 148 persons were sent from the railway by station-masters, porters, and waiting-room attendants. The total number of names on the register is 1115, against 1124 last year. The hon. treasurer and superintendent is Miss J. E. Wright, 9, Addison-terrace, Victoria Park, Manchester, who writes to us: "It would delight me if there was in every town a cheap boarding and sleeping house, close to terminal railway stations, where respectable women could be received, and, when needed, helped to stand on their feet. The blessing of our Heavenly Father has abundantly rested on our work."

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 22.—ISAIAH LIV.

The Restoration of Israel (1-8).—Israel is here compared to a wife put away for infidelity to the marriage vow, but forgiven and restored. During the time of her apparent desertion, Gentiles are gathered to her, so that the days of the Babylonish captivity, as well as those which are now passing over Israel, have been remarkable for the spread of true religion amongst the Gentiles. In reading this chapter we should remember v. 17, which teaches that its promises apply to all servants of God. (2) In the pastoral life of the East the tent is enlarged as the family grows. When Peter was restored he became the channel of such blessing that the memory of his sin was almost effaced. (5) What consolation there is to those who are married to Him that was raised from the dead (Rom. vii. 1-4), to know that God is willing to be to them all that a husband is to his wife. Lean hard, O desolate heart, on the Holy One! He who made, redeems. (7) When once He loves, He never leaves. He may appear to forsake, but from the mountain He watches the tossing boat. (8) The wrath is little, and for a moment; the mercy is great and everlasting. Everlasting kindness will never wear out, or get tired.

The Covenant Mercy (9, 10).—The Deluge had its counterpart in the afflictions of Israel, but the rainbow of covenant love arched their sky. So we in Jesus Christ have sailed the waters of the Flood, and are standing on resurrection ground. The just wrath of God expended itself on our Saviour, and can never visit us. We are for ever to the windward of the storm that spent itself on Calvary, and when the whole material universe has vanished like a wreath of morning mist, God's peace will fill our hearts, and his mercy be the theme of our song.

MONDAY, APRIL 23.—ISAIAH LV.

A Gracious Invitation (1-3).—In the former chapter God comforted his chosen people. Here He issues an invitation to the world. In chap. liii. we have the cross; in chap. liv. the church, in which Jew and Gentile meet on equal terms through faith; here we have the world. "Ho!" A very earnest call to attention. The one prerequisite is thirst, that is, a sense of need. We buy by renouncing our own supplies, and being willing to accept God's as a gift. God has opened a store in our world, and unlike earth's traders, will only deal with those who cannot pay. We go to God for water, and He gives wine and milk. What a contrast there is between the freeness and sufficiency of the Gospel provision, and the costly and unsatisfying results of human activity and scheming! (3) 'Tis not enough to listen, you must come! Faith cometh through hearing, and life through faith. God's covenant with David is a type of that with Christ, and with those who are one with Christ by a living faith. It is mercy, it is sure, and it is part of an everlasting covenant.

A Glorious Leader (4, 5).—Our Lord, the true David, is a witness to us of the love of God. He is our file Leader (Acts iii. 15), who has gone before us into the glory. He is also our King, whose commands we must obey. It is only as we do so that we can taste the satisfaction of the water, wine, and milk. Jesus stands in the midst of men and calls them. Throughout the present dispensation they have been running to Him. There is an irresistible attraction proceeding from his cross and throne, due to the drawing grace of God the Father, who has glorified Him, by setting Him at his right hand. Oh, that all men would heed the gracious call while the King is so near and his sweet voice is breaking in music on their ears.

Tender Assurances (6-13).—God may be found. He is near. He will have mercy. He will abundantly forgive. Let us not judge Him by our poor limited standards. His dealings with us are as superior to our treatment of each other as the infinite distance of heaven from earth. There is here a certain promise of pardon to those who repent and return. The thoughts must be cleansed as well as the ways.

TUESDAY, APRIL 24.—ISAIAH LVI.

Preparation to Enter the Kingdom of God (1-8). The people must be prepared for the coming of God. John the Baptist must precede Christ. The bride must array herself in her beautiful garments, ere she can meet the bridegroom. Dost thou want Christ to come to thee? Put away thy sins. 2. We must keep the Sabbath of the inner rest, and live blameless lives. (3) These two classes were expressly excluded from the privileges of the Hebrew congregation (Deut. xxiii. 1-8). (4, etc.) Under the Gospel there would be none of the disabilities of the earlier dispensation. God loves to select those who have lost all hope, and are bereft of all joy, to be the recipients of his most precious gifts. As to nature thou mayest be lonely and fruitless, but as to grace thou mayest have a great family of sons and daughters, and be gratefully remembered. (6) You may have been a Gentile stranger, but if by faith you join yourself to Christ, if you will set yourself to love and serve, and live in his rest, then you learn the secret of joy, and you will be admitted into the inner shrine and court of his temple. (8) The true house of prayer is not a material, but a spiritual structure. All holy souls, of whatever country or race, are welcome there. They come of all nations, and kindreds, and peoples, and tongues, to stand before the Lamb. All outcasts may be included in the gathering arms of the Good Shepherd (John x. 16; Eph. i. 10). Not only Israel's outcasts, but all outcasts. Your prodigal child, Christian!

The Gathering Storm (9-12). The beasts here are idolatrous nations hostile to the Jews, summoned to chastise them. Watchmen are the prophets; they are compared to dumb watchdogs who do not bark when peril threatens the flock, Gain should have no foothold in the heart of the true shepherd, else it means pain to himself and the flock. Wealth and luxury had silenced the prophet tongue, and drowned the prophet sense in fatal lethargy. So the people perished unwarned.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 25.—ISAIAH LVII.

The denunciations of the closing verses of the previous chapter are here continued.

The Removal of the Righteous (1, 2).—It is a great loss to a community when good men are withdrawn from it. Alas! when the salt is lacking or the light is quenched. Notice (R.V. marg.) that the godly are expected to be merciful. If we realised that God withdraws his own from coming trouble, we should be more resigned in our grief. So Abijah's death is represented as a blessing (1 Kings xiv. 10-13). When the Enochs are taken away, expect a deluge. (2) "He entereth into peace." What a contrast to the storm and strife of life! The grave is a bed, where the body rests till the resurrection morning.

The Scornful and Obstinate (3-13).—Spiritual unfaithfulness is the sin denounced in these verses. (4) This spiteful derision was probably directed against the righteous. (5) Lev. xx. 2. The oaks in groves where the idols stood, and impious rites celebrated. There, little children were burnt. (6) Stones shaped as idols and carefully polished were the selected gods of Israel in these dark days of her history. To these, standing in the valleys, the people made their offering. (7) The lofty mountains were crowned by altars. (8) The people hung up their tutelary gods behind their doors, in the very place where God had directed them to write his laws. (Deut. vi. 9) Compare thy bed and their bed. The Jews admitted idols into their land, and went after the idols in other lands. (9) The king is probably the Assyrian or Egyptian monarch with whom the Jews were perpetually contracting alliances, but who involved them in yet deeper ruin. How careful should we be to give all our love and trust to God. He is jealous of any interference with his rights. (10) The people made long journeys after the gods of other peoples. They got no good from them, and yet refused to abandon them. (11-13) God is silent, but He suffers in our rejection of Him.

THURSDAY, APRIL 26.—ISAIAH LVIII.

An Exposure of the Uselessness of Mere Externals in Religion (1-7).—Oh for trumpet tongues to denounce the sacramentarian heresy of our time, beneath the cover of which men think that they have religion. In every age there has been the divorce of the outward rite and the inner temper. The Jews refused to enter Pilate's Hall, but they were plotting the murder of the Messiah. The true fast is that of the soul which foregoes its own pleasure, and puts away strife and contention, and hides its privations from others. Not the bowed head, but the bowed heart; not sackcloth and ashes for the flesh, but sorrow, contrition, and deep repentance. (6, 7).—Real religion is careful in its dealings with dependents, and graces the inner circle of the home. In all lives there are the outer and inner circles indicated in these verses. Let there be no breath of suspicion upon your dealings in business, and mind not to hide yourself from your own flesh, i.e., your own kindred, the souls whom God has entrusted to your care. What the prophet calls a fast we should call entire consecration, the putting away of all known evil, and the fulfilment of all known duty, the opening the heart to God's two-edged sword.

Consequent Blessing (8-14).—The breaking morning light; the healing of the wounds that sin has caused; righteousness as the courier and leader of the pilgrimage; God's angels bringing up the rear of the march; the nearness of God saying, "Here am I" to the slightest cry; these are some of the blessings that come to the consecrated heart. (11) Press these promises to your heart, they are for you, O Christian soul! If you live for others God will live for you. If you impart your very soul to sustain and comfort others, then God will recompense you exceeding abundantly. Never a moment without guidance, or a dry place without satisfaction! Your life, fragrant as a garden newly watered, and beneficent as an exhaustless spring. Your spiritual children going forth to build and to restore. (13, 14 Be very careful to keep the inner Sabbath, whatever happens see to it that the Peace of God keeps it entrance, as Nehemiah's servants did the gates o Jerusalem against the Syrian salesmen, that no voic may break its peace. Do not do your own ways, fin your own pleasure, speak your own words. The delight shall break out like the flowers of spring Delight in God's Sabbath, and you will delight i Himself, and will ride in the chariot of salvation sitting in the high places of the resurrection, and fe from God's table.

FRIDAY, APRIL 27.—ISAIAH LIX.

Israel's Sins (1-8).—Our sufferings do not com from the failure of our God, but because of our sins Ah, the separating power of sin! Everywhere disintegrates, and shuts off the heart of God an man. (4) This means none pleadeth a just suit. Th law courts that should have been the place of justic were full of lies and vanity, what then must hav been the condition of the rest of the community. ( Instead of stamping out evil in the egg, they hatche it. The egg, when its contents were revealed, yielde the poison of vipers. (6) The spider's web may we stand for the good works which men weave to cove themselves before God, but which are flimsy and u substantial. (7, 8) Oh hapless state of the ungodly Their feet and thoughts and paths are fatal to th peace of others, and the well-being of the community but they are no less fatal to their own peace. Th way of peace is entered at the cross, and maintaine only by daily fellowship with the love of God, whic is peace on earth.

Israel's Confession (9-15).—Here the stricken natio pours out its complaint before God. First confessin the bitterness of their sufferings, and then the dark ness of their sin. Oh! it is well when we bear th rod, and learn the lesson written in the black-lettere book of affliction. The roar of the hungry bear fo food, the mourning of the dove for its mate, are a descriptions of the complaint of the penitent. (1 Consider your transgressions as multiplied befor God. Think of the loss and sorrow to Him. Con fession should not only be general, but particula (14) What a vivid personification of various attribute excluded from the court of justice, or lying stabbed i the streets.

21.—This is a priceless promise. which should b pleaded by every parent, and its offered blessing claime Has He put his Spirit on thee, and his words in th mouth. Believe that they shall never learn it, eve to thy last breath thou shalt speak for Him, an generation to generation shall pass on the tradition of family piety.

Dawn (1-2).—Darkness broods upon the valley but the Holy City is bathed in the light of daw her turrets and pinnacles sparkling with gold. Suc is Christ's advent to the Church or the lonely sou He shall arise upon thee.

Gathering of the Peoples (3-9).—There is a ma vellous attractiveness in true religion. Israel sha yet become the centre and head of the nations, eve now far-off peoples are pouring their tides of popu lation into the open portals of the Church. (5 Se R.V. 6.)—Midian stands for the East, Tarshish th West; different lands are laid under contribution fo their best. # INTERNATIONAL S. S. LESSONS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 29.

JOSEPH FORGIVING HIS BRETHREN.—Gen. xlv. 1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Luke xvii. 3.

THE incidents connecting the former lesson and this have brought to light some important facts. (1) The Fulfilment of Joseph's Dreams (xliii. 26).—By means that seemed calculated to lead to a directly opposite result, and at a time when possibly the dreams have passed from the memory of his brethren, God has brought about the fulfilment of his own prophecy. Be sure that God is able to make good every word He has spoken. No device, however subtle; no combination, however strong, can effectually resist Him.

(2) The Conviction of Joseph's Brethren.—At their first visit to him, when they suppose him to be unacquainted with their language, they referred to their sin as though it were only just committed (xlii. 21-23). At their second visit, when the cup was found in Benjamin's sack, they do not fear to attribute their distress to their sin (xliv. 16). There is no refuge from sin save in the wounds of Jesus; have you fled to Him?

(3) The Change in their Character.—Joseph waited for some proof of this before he felt it wise to make himself known. Judah's intercession, which cannot be read without deepest emotion, gave proof of their tenderness toward their father, in their dread of adding to his distress; and of their love to Benjamin, as seen in their readiness to suffer in his stead. The appeal mastered Joseph. Commanding all the Egyptians to go out from him, he made himself known as the brother against whom they had sinned, whose love for them remained unchanged, for whom their father had mourned so long, and whom God had now exalted in order that he might minister to their help and comfort.

Look at the story as a picture of what takes place between Christ and the sinner.

I. THE DISTRESS OF THE BRETHREN.—As soon as Joseph made himself known they were speechless and troubled. Two things explain their distress: (1) They Begin to See their Sin in its True Light. What had they done? They had hated him because he reproved their sin; and when his dreams predicted his future greatness they had hated him the more. They now see that the predictions are fulfilled, and that in fighting against him they have been fighting against God. Was not that the kind of conviction felt by the Jews when Peter declared the exaltation of Him whom they had crucified (Acts ii.)? Remember that our sins helped to crucify Him. How terrible our guilt appears when we see how God has exalted Him!

(2) They Felt Themselves in His Power.—He can take what revenge he pleases. All the power of Egypt is under his hand; he may use it against them if he please. Why should he not treat them as cruelly as they had treated him? They can claim nothing better from him. We are equally in the hands of Jesus, whom our sins have crucified. All power is his, and He can use it against us if He please. Justly may we tremble and be speechless before Him.

II. THE COMPASSION OF JOSEPH.—When they expect judgment, because they know they deserve it, they find mercy (4, 5, 15).

(1) His Former Treatment has been Preparing Them for it.—He had appeared harsh; but every harsh, unkind word had been prompted by love. It was needful that they should know their sin in order to receive his pardon. Does not Jesus often deal with men so? Sometimes trial and distress bring our sin to remembrance. Only the wounded can receive the healing.

(2) He Eases their Mind as to the Result of their Sin (5, 8, 9).—Their action had two sides. On their side it was as guilty as could be. It was prompted by hatred of their brother and by opposition to God. But there was another side to it. Behind all the wickedness of men God stands, and by their sinfulness brings about his own purposes of blessing. He did the same in connection with Jesus. (See Acts ii. 22-24; iv. 10, 27, 28). This does not make man's guilt less, but it makes God's wisdom and grace appear greater.

(3) He Forgives in the Most Gracious Manner (4, 5). Love breathes through it all. Their sin is mentioned not for the purpose of distressing them more, but to remove all doubt as to his identity, and to shew how God's grace has triumphed over it. When they fear him, he invites them near. How all this resembles the manner of our Lord's dealing with us. This is the kind of revenge He takes. Have you met Him and received his forgiveness?

For the Young.

IN AN AFRICAN SYNAGOGUE.

MY YOUNG FRIENDS,—I wonder if ever you have visited a Jewish synagogue on a Saturday morning at the hour of worship, and listened to the service? If not, perhaps you would like to know something about it, only if you wish to come with me you must leave Old England and come away to an old Roman—now French-Arab—town in North Africa. Here we have six synagogues, but we will go to the largest, situated in a tiny street, where, unless guided, you would find it difficult to arrive.

If you wish to see the very commencement, you must be there at 7 a.m.; but if we wait until 8 o'clock we shall not lose much, especially if we do not understand Hebrew. We will take our seats just inside the door, the lowest seat (Luke xiv. 10), and the place of the beggars. Someone may ask us farther in presently. Already some 300 Jews are gathered, and are monotonously repeating the prayers after a rabbi, who sits amongst a group of learned men at the side of the building. The place is a long, high building, with two rows of huge pillars to support the decorated roof. In the middle is placed the pulpit, or high rostrum, the seats being placed around in such a manner that they nearly all face the pulpit. As each man enters the door (women are excluded) he places his hand on his heart, and, after kissing it, passes to his place.

One thing will strike your attention, it is the "praying shawl" that everyone wears across his shoulders. It is white, of silk or wool, of a long oblong shape, having blue stripes in it at each end. On each of its corners is sewn a piece of blue or red silk with a little worked round hole in it such as you find in the border of a tent through which a cord has to be passed in order to stake it to the ground; from the hole hangs a number of woollen threads tied together in fifteen places. The fifteen knots thus formed represent the numerical value of the sacred name Jah, or Jehovah.

The four strings of the four corners—for each corner is alike—are held in the hand of him who prays, and when he has to mention the name of God he presses these four cords across his eyes and then kisses them. The little holes in the corners of the silk through which the cords are run, are to remind the worshipper of the "tent" life of his fathers in the wilderness, and consequently of his own tent life. So Christ is said to have "tabernacled among us" (John i. 14; cf., 2 Cor. v. 1). Whilst we have been noticing these minor things, the assembly has finished its prayers, and suddenly we see a man—the door-keeper—walking around the synagogue amongst the worshippers, crying:—One! two! three! four! five!! Whatever can he mean? We shall find out later on!

The whole assembly rises; for at the end of the synagogue a rabbi is taking two immense rolls out of the cupboard, each one on two sticks, so that as one stick is unrolled the other is rolled up. The rolls are each enclosed in a purple velvet bag, upon which is worked a Hebrew text. Each stick is surmounted by a silver head, covered with tiny bells, which tinkle as the favoured bearers walk solemnly up the aisle to the rostrum. Each worshipper tries to get near in order just to touch the sacred Scriptures—for that is what the rolls contain—after having touched they reverently kiss the hand.

Just at this moment the large entrance doors, hitherto half closed, are thrown wide open, so that the large group of women that have gathered outside may approach sufficiently near to see, though not to touch, these mysterious rolls. When once the rolls have passed, the doors are again shut, and that is all the part the poor Jewish women have in the morning worship. I fear you will think the little boys very rude and naughty, for they not only walk about the synagogue during the worship, but run up the stairs of the pulpit, and, as though quite at home, they sit down by the side of the rabbi who is reading the rolls, or play with the little silver bells that have been placed aside during the reading, and no one forbids them!! Others, who are old enough to decipher the Hebrew characters, have a little prayer shawl over their shoulders, and sit very "manlike" by the side of father or brother, imitating every movement of the older people around him.

Now one worshipper comes forward and mounts the rostrum, and unrolls the huge scroll that lies on the desk in front of the rabbi. After a few minutes he is followed by another, to whom he gives place, and so on until seven have been. As each one descends he kisses his favourite rabbi or his principal friends, and then takes his seat. But why seven? The last five pay for their privilege; the first two do not. The reading must be commenced by the first two, who are of priestly descent, before the others can follow. It was for this reason that that strange doorkeeper paraded the synagogue just now, seeking for five worshippers who would pay for the privilege of unrolling the sacred rolls. The money thus obtained is given to the poor, or is used for the support of certain rabbis, or for other expenses. Those who thus pay are supposed to have amassed great merit, either for the cleansing of their own sins or for those of another whom they may mention in their prayers.

But I fear you will be tired of all this unintelligible jargon that is going on around you, and if they all shout or chant some of their prayers as loudly as they did when I first went there alone, I fear your head will ache as mine did. You will have also remarked another thing. When we enter a place of worship we take off our hats. When the Arabs enter their mosques they take off their shoes; but the Jews do neither one thing nor the other! It is not from want of reverence, but in their habit.

In finishing our visit, I want to remind you of one thing. Do not forget to give these dear people of God a very large place in your heart and your prayers, for even yet as they read the books that speak so much about Christ, their eyes are covered as with a veil, and they see not our Saviour. They are ever coming to but never arriving at the great sacrifice. There are about twelve millions of these people in the world, and more than one million in North Africa. We have hundreds in Tlemcen, but there is no missionary amongst them except an occasional visit from us, or from a travelling missionary. Do not forget them, for God has said of Israel. "They shall prosper that love thee."—Yours heartily, W. G. POPE.

DEATH OF A YOUNG MISSIONARY.

All friends of Africa will hear with deep regret of the death of Samuel Collins, the African youth who interested so many hundreds of our young people about two years ago. The sad event occurred on Feb. 17, in his home at the Cameroons, where he had been invalided from mission work on the Congo. At the age of twelve, Sam was sent to England in 1888 by his father, a deacon of the native Baptist Church at the Cameroons. In due course he entered a school at Kingston-on-Thames. During his four years' stay there he won the good opinion of all. He was most intelligent, kind, and generous. His progress in study was rapid, and he showed much ability in all branches of learning. His favourite book of study was the Bible. Whilst at school he learned to trust the Saviour, and at his own request was baptized at Bunyan Baptist Chapel and received into the church.

Sam often went to missionary and evangelistic meetings, and never failed to delight the young people with his native hymns and earnest addresses. He left this country for his African home in May, 1892, and received a hearty welcome at Cameroons. He immediately began to work for God amongst his people, and established a Young Men's and a Young Women's Christian Association, and superintended a choir of 500 voices. Being anxious to do mission work on the Congo, he joined the American Baptist Mission. He was sent first to Banza Manteka, and afterwards to Matadi. For seven and a-half months he worked nobly amongst the natives, and his letters were full of cheer and hope for the future.

Attacked by sleeping sickness, he lay ill for some months. He was then sent to the coast, from which he was taken to the Cameroons, where he passed away soon after landing. The close of so bright and promising a young life has caused great grief at Kingston, where he was much respected.

SOMERSET HOUSE, W. NORWOOD.

To a three-storied building in Norwood-road, not far from the famous necropolis of that name, has lately been given the title of "Somerset House." It is the first independent headquarters possessed by a branch of the British Women's Temperance Association, and it is to perpetuate the name of the president of the Association, Lady Henry Somerset, that the title has been given to it. In addition to the strictly temperance work, it is, however, the centre of many good and Christian activities carried on for the benefit of the community by Mr. and Mrs. Woodford Fawcett. For years past this estimable couple have been expending strength and energy in the prosecution of varied Christian agencies in West Norwood; a brief sketch of the leading features of the work will be of interest to our readers.

Some seven or eight years ago Mrs. Fawcett was led to begin a work of befriending respectable domestic servants, when out of place. Many girls in service are far from their parental home, and when circumstances deprive them of a situation they are exposed to serious difficulty and peril unless some place of shelter and friendly counsel is available. The need for such a centre of help was pressed on Mrs. Fawcett, and with her sympathetic nature she responded. Part of a house in Norwood-road was secured, and for three and a-half years good work was done, not only in the direction indicated, but in direct Gospel effort as well. A conference hall was built on a vacant piece of ground, and from it radiated much good influence on the neighbourhood.

These premises had to be relinquished after a time, and a move was made to Lansdowne Hill near by, where the work went on for another three years. The location was not a very convenient one in many respects, and another move was made to the large house, 152, Norwood-road. Lady Henry Somerset attended on Monday evening last to open the house in a formal way, and to encourage the workers by her counsel and sympathy.

The temperance work has various branches. First of all there are the regular operations of the B.W. T. A. The "School of Method" held at the Memorial Hall some months ago resulted in the formation of a Young Ladies', or "Y" branch, which forms an excellent outlet for the endeavours of young ladies having some leisure at command. A working women's branch has also been recently formed, and it is making good progress. Out of this came a "Working Y" branch for the benefit of such young people in humbler households as are not attracted by the Band of Hope. So that the circle of temperance effort among the different social grades of women is tolerably complete in connection with the Tulse Hill and Norwood branch of the B.W.T.A., and all now find a meeting place at Somerset House for their periodical gatherings, classes, etc.

The work on behalf of domestic servants is, of course, continued, and there is sleeping accommodation for some seven or eight servants out of place. There is a registry which is free to all servants, and the demand for domestic help is always greater than the supply.

One of the rooms in Somerset House is fitted up as a meeting-room, and here are held the weekly Gospel meetings on Sunday evenings, prayer meetings, mothers' meetings, Bible Readings, meetings for the deepening of the spiritual life, etc. For years past, Mr. and Mrs. Fawcett have conducted an open-air service on Sunday afternoons during the summer season, on a spot opposite the gates of Norwood Cemetery. Many a Gospel trophy has been found as the result of these assemblies and of the subsequent Gospel services indoors. The workers can tell of between 200 and 300 at least who have during these years been thus arrested, saved, and sent forth to Christian life and service. One man went to the penitent form when under the influence of drink; he was not only sobered but saved, and from that day the appetite for alcohol was taken away.

One room in the house is given up to the sale of religious books, papers, etc., and it is desired to develop this important branch. A colporteur is employed—himself a fruit of the Gospel work, and he visits the houses of all and sundry with his pack; as yet he is not self-supporting. Another worker is a coffee-stall keeper, whose field is the Leigham Court Estate, not far off, where extensive building operations are going on. In the winter a soup kitchen is established.

It will thus be seen that the work centring in Somerset House has many ramifications, and is bound to exercise much happy influence all around.

Mrs. Fawcett is very anxious now to constitute the house a home for a limited number of Christian ladies possessed of a small income, who would value Christian fellowship, and engage in such work as they might find congenial, either in connection with Somerset House or any of the Christian churches of the district. The house is finely situated and commodious, so that accommodation could be given to eight or a dozen ladies who could pay from 12s. to 15s. per week, and devote themselves to the well-being of the people. There is a good garden with conservatory, etc., and the home feeling would in every way be cultivated. Fuller information can be had from the Hon. Superintendent, Somerset House, 152, Norwood-road, S.E.

The presence of Lady Henry Somerset in Norwood on Monday evening excited much interest. She attended the new headquarters, and, in the presence of a few invited friends, gave a stirring address, highly commending the forward move made by Mrs. Fawcett, and predicting that her example would soon be followed all over the country. Rev. W. Stott besought God's blessing on the extended enterprise, and the place was thus, under happy auspices, dedicated to its many holy and helpful uses. Mrs. Fawcett stated that about forty domestic servants had passed through the house since Jan. 1; she thought that every Christian Church ought to have some such institution attached to it, where real practical help could be given to those who are in need of it.

An adjournment was made to the Wesleyan Church at Tulse Hill, where a large company had assembled, and where earnest addresses on the work of the B.W.T.A. were given.

ITALIAN NAVVIES.

Sir,—In consequence of your kind insertion of my letter about the Italian navvies, in your issue of March 15, donations have been received amounting to £25 2s. 6d. This will not pay for one missionary, and as we wish to send at least £20 worth of Bibles and Gospels, the sum of £150 I stated will be quite needed; for we find this year the work is not to be carried on at one point, but by two different Cantons, Berne and Valais. Last year 700 men were employed at one road. Therefore, two missionaries are a necessity. Religious freedom is allowed at both points.

We earnestly appeal to our Christian friends again for volunteer superintendents of the Mission. Surely among the numerous travellers who each year spend the summer abroad, and whom God has blessed with a talent for languages—two or three can be found to testify of the love of the Redeemer. They need not consider themselves tied all the week to the Mission, but would be able to make what excursions they pleased. These large bodies of men will disperse to all parts of Italy again in October, and workers will have the privilege through them of proclaiming the Gospel and sending the Scriptures to that lovely but spiritually dark land.—Faithfully yours, Elizabeth Garnett.

THE SALFORD DOCK MISSION has of late had for its centre the Ordsall Old Hall. A large iron hall, capable of holding 800 people, is in course of erection, on a site given for a term of years by Mr. G. C. Haworth, a warm friend of the work. The missionary and his helpers aim at bringing young and old to the Lord, and so they conduct schools and meetings of various kinds, sewing classes and Bands of Hope. The sixth annual report says:—"We are anxious to work in harmony with other Christian agencies, and our visitors are most careful not to seek to secure as attenders at our meetings those who have been attending elsewhere, but to devote themselves wholly to those who are outside every Christian organisation. Our missionary and deaconess are the only visitors to a very large number of very poor streets, and were their visits withdrawn this poor district would be wholly without Evangelical visitation." The hon. superintendent of the Mission is Mr. Louis P. Nott, Gorsefield, Pendleton.

MISS KRIKORIAN'S MISSION.

In submitting my third half-yearly report I would call attention to the following departments:—

Our Temperance Society is going on with increased interest. The encouraging aspect of it is that the members themselves have taken it up with great enthusiasm, and are carrying it on with energy. Instead of the public meetings of the last year we have only a Bible-class, in which the members are being taught the life-giving word of God. On Saturday nights and on Sundays they go out to find others who are enslaved by the devil of alcohol, and bring them to the churches. They do this work gladly and cheerfully, and effectually. They speak to their fellow-men from their own bitter experiences, and out of the happy and glorious liberty they now enjoy.

Some of the conversions have been very wonderful. I will relate one as an illustration. Two weeks ago I went to see a drunkard who was about forty years of age, with no family of his own. He lived with his aged and totally blind mother. This man drinks raki (Turkish drink), and smokes opium and hashish. He used often to get drunk, and in that condition was always violent and cruel, and often beat his poor mother severely. When I went to see him I found him in a most miserable condition. I spoke to him of the Bible and its teachings, but he said he did not believe in God, nor heaven, nor hell. Although nominally a Christian, he knew very little about the Bible or Christ. After a long talk he was persuaded to come to our society. Other members of the society visited him, encouraged him, and he began to come to our meetings regularly. The result is that he has left off drinking and smoking and opium, and is coming regularly to our church. We hope the evil spirit has gone out of him, for he seems now to be clothed and in his right mind. The other day I asked him if he was happy in his new life; his eyes fairly shone as he said, "I am only sorry that I found this joy so late."

Our Society feel the need of a separate building for their work very much, and they are planning to raise money for such a building.

Last November, as I was passing through a neglected part of the city, my attention was called to some children who were playing in the street on the Lord's Day. In talking with them I found they were gambling, and that some of them had already learned to drink. I took them to my house, got them interested in some stories and asked them to come again. The following Sunday nineteen of them came, and from that time the number has increased so much that, through the kindness of a friend, I have hired a house in their vicinity and we now meet every Sunday, and the number in attendance has already reached 100. They are a very rough set of boys, as any one would see at a glance. I hope the Lord will bring many of them to his fold. By the help of friends, a day-school has been opened in this district, and about forty little boys and girls are now being taught there.

We have also circulated the pledge among the children of our better families, who have not been accustomed to drink, and by weekly meetings are endeavouring to enlist them intelligently and permanently on the side of temperance and Christian work. We already have forty members to this society.

I am holding weekly meetings for Bible-reading in two different places for women, and in one place for men. In spite of the unusual cold of the season, the attendance has been very large. Besides this, there is the Society to Discourage Evil Speaking. The meetings are always interesting, and in addition to this, personal visits to the poor and sick as far as time and strength will allow.

I praise the Lord for all the help and encouragement He has bestowed on me. I earnestly desire the prayers of God's people that I may have larger strength and grace for this very important work. During the past six months the contributions to our Missions have been very small, only £10. Mr. J. McDonald, Southville, Wimbledon, S.W., will gladly supply further information, and receive help.

Rebecca Krikorian.

FRÄULEIN TONY VON BLÜCHER,

A DEVOTED WORKER AMONG THE POOR OF BERLIN.

OUR portrait this week introduces a Christian lady who has for many years carried on an excellent Gospel work in Berlin. A relative of the famous Field-marshal von Blücher, she combines much of his prowess with a singularly gentle disposition.

Fräulein Tony von Blücher was brought to the Lord nineteen years ago, when a remarkable wave of blessing was passing over the Land of Luther. That was a time when many churches in Germany were awakened to new life and energy; and it was the starting point of several evangelistic agencies which have since been owned of God in a signal manner. Miss von Blücher lost her parents while quite young, and was brought up by three aunts, in whose veins flowed the blood of the old Pomeranian nobility. The care which these ladies expended upon their charge was in turn requited by a hearty spiritual solicitude and Christian affection.

Among the workers in Germany during the time of revival was Dr. Baedeker, whose long career of Christian service has been specially characterised by attention to the needs of neglected peoples and classes. He found Gospel openings among high and low in Berlin. One of the drawing-rooms in which he gave Bible readings was that of the aunts of Miss von Blücher; a number of fervent hearts assembled for instruction and mutual encouragement, and before long there was a desire on their part for active manifestation of the life of faith in the Son of God. This led to work among the neglected poor, for whom Dr. Baedeker opened meetings in the Moravian Chapel, giving them coffee and bread while preaching to them the good news of salvation. Miss von Blücher was one of those who took an active part in this kindly work, by giving away invitation tickets and serving the guests when they had assembled. Thus was this high-born lady brought into contact with the poorest of the population of Berlin, and her sympathy drawn out without stint on their behalf. Distributing tracts in the street, and engaging unostentatiously in deeds of kindness, was her novitiate in a missionary undertaking which has since developed varied forms, and been instrumental of much good among young and old in Berlin.

Miss von Blücher's first independent effort was a small Sunday-school opened in the residence of her aunts. The attendance was soon more than a private dwelling could accommodate, and a separate room was hired, and speedily crowded. The mothers of the children asked that something might be done for them, and mothers' meetings were organised. Then came an appeal from the men. Why could not they attend the meetings at which their wives and mothers were instructed in the Scriptures? Feeling that the line must be drawn somewhere, Miss von Blücher determined to draw it here; she could not throw the women's meeting open, nor could she begin another. One young man, however, attended once on sufferance, and stole in repeatedly in spite of rebuke. Then he undertook to bring, as the nucleus of a men's class, a number of companions who were anxious to study God's Word. Miss von Blücher felt herself constrained to accede to the request, and at length a men's meeting was started; and it has since become a very important department of the work.

The landlord of the house in which the meetings were held feared that his property would be depreciated in value through the continual congregation of poor people on the spot. So Miss von Blücher had to remove to another part of Berlin—to Bülow-Strasse; the old attendants still turned up regularly at the meetings, and new ones have continued to join. The work was started on broad evangelical lines, and so it has ever since been carried on, ministers of various denominations occasionally lending a hand. There are five meetings every Sunday, and others on each evening of the week. Hundreds of children are regularly instructed in the Sunday-school; and as they are brought under distinctly spiritual influences, so with the elders the definite aim is to lead them to conversion to God. Though poor, the friends of the mission make substantial sacrifices in order to maintain the work.

Miss von Blücher has had the courage to act contrary to German prejudices. For a female to undertake such work as she has so diligently prosecuted among women and children was "bad" enough; but to add to her enterprise evangelistic efforts for the good of poor men, was "worse" still! As a consequence, she has been severely and rudely criticised, and, indeed, shamefully treated in the public Press. As recently as four years ago her meetings were invaded by men of position, who, in the name of that which is "regular," denounced Miss von Blücher and her helpers, and prophesied the closing of the hall, and an end being put to the meetings. The newspapers caricatured the work, and the members of the mission were illtreated in many ways. For four months the school was closed, but at length, by order of the Minister of Worship, it was reopened. Writing on these experiences, Miss von Blücher says:—

> During the time of persecution the blessing from above was greater than ever; and I date from that time the most important deepening and growth of the work. Though we do not suffer in this way at present—the law gives us liberty—yet I am sorry to say that in a smaller way much persecution still goes on. In the day-schools, the children are publicly asked to tell who is going to Bülow-Strasse; and punishment is threatened to any who come to us on Sundays. Also families are visited and told that their children will not be confirmed (a dreadful thing for German churchpeople) if they attend our Sunday-school.

In the undaunted spirit of her great ancestor, Miss von Blücher has gone forward, and she is still bold and very courageous. Her friends have given her the name by which the great Field-marshal was known—"Marshal Forwards"—yet in personal appearance she strikes one as being feeble and timid. That she is daring as well as gentle is accounted for by the fact that she lives by faith in the Son of God; this has equipped her for battling with deep-seated prejudices and overcoming a succession of obstacles in her work.

Two at least of the men from Miss von Blücher's Men's Class are now being prepared for mission work; one is at Northfield, under Mr. Moody's teaching. Many women and children owing their spiritual enlightenment to this devoted lady have gone forth to be witnesses and servants of the Lord.

As will have been inferred from what has been written. workers like Fräulein von Blücher do not meet with an over-abundance of sympathy in Germany. But while being subjected to much scoffing, and enduring a full share of opposing criticism, our friend has all along enjoyed the privilege of spending and being spent in the service of the Lord. From a life of ease and comfort she has advanced to a life of self-denying frugality for Christ's sake. She has been a succourer of many, and, on account of her adhesion to Evangelical Alliance principles, her work has not had the support of any section of the Church of God. Last week signalised a further forward movement by the opening of more extensive premises in which to carry on the various meetings. English friends desiring to encourage this brave lady in her work of faith and labour of love, may send their gifts to Dr. Baedeker, Weston-super-Mare, who will acknowledge them in due course.

The opening of Miss von Blücher's new hall drew great numbers on Saturday last, although its situation is quite at the outskirts of Berlin. The hall is built to hold about 300 people, but it was so crowded that about 500 filled it. Under Dr. Baedeker's presidency the platform was occupied by Count Bernstorff, Count Pückler, Colonel von Knobelsdorff, Pastors Schewe, Rohr, Rohrbach, Burkhardt, and others, representatives of the various branches of the Church of God, yet they spoke as with one voice, giving glory to the One Lord.

Miss von Blücher's testimony of God's wonderful leadings, and how from very small beginnings He has enlarged her coast and at the same time has commanded her to go forward, and given strength sufficient for the task, was very touching, and called forth deep sympathy and praise. This new hall in a new district was felt to be an important step in advance, an "Ebenezer" on the way, a mighty witness in this large city of the power of God in using a feeble but humble and willing instrument.

LANSDOWNE HALL, W. NORWOOD.

For a year Pastor Fuller Gooch has carried on his ministry here with many undoubted tokens of the Divine blessing. At the anniversary gatherings on Wednesday, last week, there was a large muster of friends, and various well-known workers came to sympathise by presence and by speech. Among these were Col. Morton, Sir Robert Phayre, Pastors Stott, Douglas, Stone, Dr. McKilliam, and others. At the evening meeting Pastor Gooch was handed an envelope containing a cheque, as a special token of affection from the church and congregation, and to be applied to personal uses.

The report for the past year drawn up by the pastor, and circulated at the meetings, is full of interesting details of the work and its varied developments. It states that thirteen classes for the Scriptural instruction of the young are regularly held in the hall and in private houses; there has been manifest blessing on the labours of the teachers. There are associations for young men and for young women, each carrying on work of an individual and agressive sort. Among the fruitful agencies are also a flower mission, a young people's Scripture union, a conversational Bible-class, a missionary auxiliary, a library, a mission house close to the hall in which a night school, mothers' meetings, etc., are sustained. The usual Lord's Day and weekly services have been well sustained, and souls are continually being drawn to Christ. A Saturday night praise and prayer meeting is an interesting and important feature of the work, and one which has been a channel of much spiritual refreshment. The numerous agencies show a large measure of congregational vitality and activity, and the desire throughout is that God may be glorified in the salvation of men and women.

The financial side of the work has also been marked by progress. The premises, costing £1700, have been paid for, and £350 is paid towards the redemption of the freehold site. Pastor Gooch and his helpers enter on the work of another year with grateful and hopeful hearts.

THE SUDDEN CALL.

About fourteen years ago, in the city of Copenhagen, an English evangelist, Mr. R. R——, was holding services in the Public Hall, and crowds flocked to hear the Gospel. Among those who went regularly to the meetings was a poor working woman, who appeared to drink in every word that she heard at the services, and who yet remained as at first, apparently unmoved.

One evening (Sunday) one of the workers spoke to her, as had been the case before, without any apparent result; but to-night she responded. "I have been here every night," said she; "but nothing has happened yet. My friend S——, and many others, came here and learned to know the Saviour, and to love Him. Why is it I cannot get saved, as well as they?" "Do you earnestly desire Christ as your Saviour from sin?" inquired the worker. They were speaking in the inquiry room, where the woman was sitting in a corner, alone. "Sin!" she exclaimed; "What do you mean? I am not a sinner. I have never committed a sin in my life, but have always walked uprightly and faithfully." "I do not doubt that," said the worker: "still, you are a sinner, and alone as such can you come to Christ."

Then he pointed out to her and read such Scriptures as, "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God," emphasising the fact of there being "no difference"; "All we, like sheep, have gone astray; we have turned everyone to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all," and many others equally plain.

"Have you ever," he asked, "spoken unkindly or unjustly of your friends and neighbours?—in such a way that, had they been able to ask for an explanation, you would have had to modify, or even withdraw, your words?"

"Yes," said the woman; "but who told you what I had been saying last night about old H——?"

"No one told me anything; I only ask, and your conscience pleads guilty. That is sin number one, for it is a transgression of the law of charity, or love" (Matt. vii. 12). The woman looked uneasy, but the worker went on:—"It is proved that the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked (Jer. xvii. 9). Do you think your heart is so different from other hearts, that this does not describe it?" "No, my heart is not wicked—it may be a little faulty." "Well, the Bible says, 'confess your faults one to another,' but your sins you must confess to God. Have you ever had a bad thought about anyone you know?" "Well, yes, I have, often; but that is hardly a sin?" "Christ thought so. He classes 'evil thoughts' with murders, thefts, adulteries, blasphemies (Matt. xv. 19). Have you ever grudged anything to another who needed it, or tried to gain for yourself by taking advantage of another?"

"Well, I have done the best I could for myself. In this world we must all do that; every one for himself, or how should we get on? Religion does not notice that."

"Christ does," replied the inexorable worker. "Read this," and he pointed her to Luke xvi. 14, 15. "Have you ever derided those who were seeking to follow Christ, or mocked at them for their consistency, even in a joking manner?"

"How do you know all these things?" asked the poor woman. "If I have, others have done the same. There is no harm in a little joking at the pious ones."

"Christ thought differently—see," and he pointed out to her the words of Matt. xxiii. 13. "I suppose you have never, so to speak, let your tongue run away with you?"

"Yes, I've been given a bit that way; nearly everyone I know does the same; it is no great matter."

"Christ thought and taught the opposite of that, as these words," and he placed his finger on Matt. xii. 36, 37, "plainly tell you."

"That is a very wonderful book," said the woman. "I never knew it had so much of everything in it, and yet I have looked into it now and then when I have worked at the pastor's house."

"The reason of its being wonderful," replied the worker, "lies in the fact that it is the only book which plainly sets forth the evils of the heart, while it points to the cure. Do you still feel that you are not sinful enough to need the Saviour? He yearns very tenderly over you."

"Yes, I see I am not perfect—I am very sorry. But do you mean that He cares about a poor woman like me?"

"Indeed He does! Poorer and more sinful women (in the eyes of the world) than you came to Him, and He blessed and saved them." And the worker pointed out to her Luke vii. 36-50; John viii. 2-11; Luke xiii. 10-17; and many other examples of bodily and spiritual healing.

"It is wonderful," she exclaimed. "He was like a brother among them, and yet He was God! And you say He cares for me!"

"Yes, you are as plainly meant, in these Gospels, as those to whom He spoke, whenever He taught the people. And He meant you when he said, 'Whosoever will do the will of my Father which is in Heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother' (Matt. xii. 50). I think that establishes your relationship. Only, if you are not a sinner, you do not need a Saviour, therefore you can have no part nor lot in this plan of Love."

The woman looked puzzled—the worker was meeting her on her own ground. He put into her hand a leaflet translated from "The Sinner and the Saviour," and, wishing her good-night, left her. He felt he must leave her to the Lord alone, now.

The next night she was at the meeting, but she was not alone—she had brought her husband. Her face was beaming with joy—she was like Lydia, whose heart the Lord opened, "so that she attended to the things that were spoken." "Oh," she cried, "all these years I was a sinner, and never knew it! The Gospels showed me my heart, and all these years I might have walked with my Saviour, but I was blind." Her husband regarded her as a wonder; he could not yet understand. He spoke to her friend, the worker. "You know the churchyard at the end of the Fredericksberg-Allee? that was her religion. Our little child is buried there, and that is where her heart was. But this morning she did not go with flowers, as usual. She said, 'My work is with the living now; our little Max is with God. He has given me other work to do.' I cannot understand her. She is quite changed, and so good to me. It is all very wonderful!"

It was wonderful, but very real and true. The Gospels are full of such wonders, and the Acts repeat the story. Yet there are those who cannot believe in what they call "sudden conversion," and who deter converts from coming to Christ with their sneer—"It will not last!" They believe in a man who suddenly changes his political opinions—who turns from Tory to Radical, or vice versâ; but they ignore the fact that when God opens a human heart, and takes up his abode therein, only He can shut that heart's door, and it is changed for evermore (Acts xvi. 14; Rev. iii. 7). The poor Danish woman is still a living proof of this. "Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling (R.V. guard you from stumbling) and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

Lord, raise our faith to highest joys,
To larger views of Thee;
Oh let us reach the heights and depths
Of love's own mystery.
And be thou cheered, desponding soul,
God's way and time are best;
Still do thy work and trust in Him,
And He will do the rest.

THE GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL MEETINGS,

APRIL 11, 1894.

THERE were numerous evidences beforehand that the meetings fixed for April 11 would be occasions of very unusual interest. To the praise of our God be it said, the expectations cherished were fully realized. The attendances at the Great Assembly Hall were large, morning, afternoon, and evening; and the faith that utilised so spacious a place of meeting was amply justified. The personnel of the audiences was very remarkable in its representative aspect. The proposal to convene these praise gatherings had evidently struck a universal chord among the active evangelistic workers throughout London, and also in many places more or less distant. Scattered freely through the congregations, as well as on the platform, were men and women of experience and repute as active and successful workers in the varied departments of Christian work. Such acoming together of devoted workers of all sections of the Church of Christ seldom happens, and this alone would serve to make the meetings memorable.

THE MORNING MEETING.

The first gathering of the day was fittingly presided over by Mr. James E. Mathieson, who was surrounded on the platform by a large cohort of well-known workers. After a brief time of silent waiting on God, the petitions and thanksgivings of the assembly were admirably voiced by Rev. R. Balgarnie, lately of Scarborough, and now evangelist among the churches. "We come," he said, "to crown Thee with our song, with our love, and with our life. We bless Thee for the materials out of which we may construct songs of praise to thy Name, for all thy goodness in the past; and for memories that cluster around the time when the windows of heaven were opened, and great blessing came upon this city, this land, and other lands." The speaker's fervid ascriptions of thanksgiving, and his earnest petitions for renewed personal consecration and for general revival, found an echo in all hearts and in many audible "Amens."

Psalm ciii., the great thanksgiving anthem of the Psalter, was then read in alternate verses by those on the platform and those in other parts of the hall. This was followed by the rousing strains of the last hymn in the little book of "Hymns, Old and New," prepared for the occasion:—

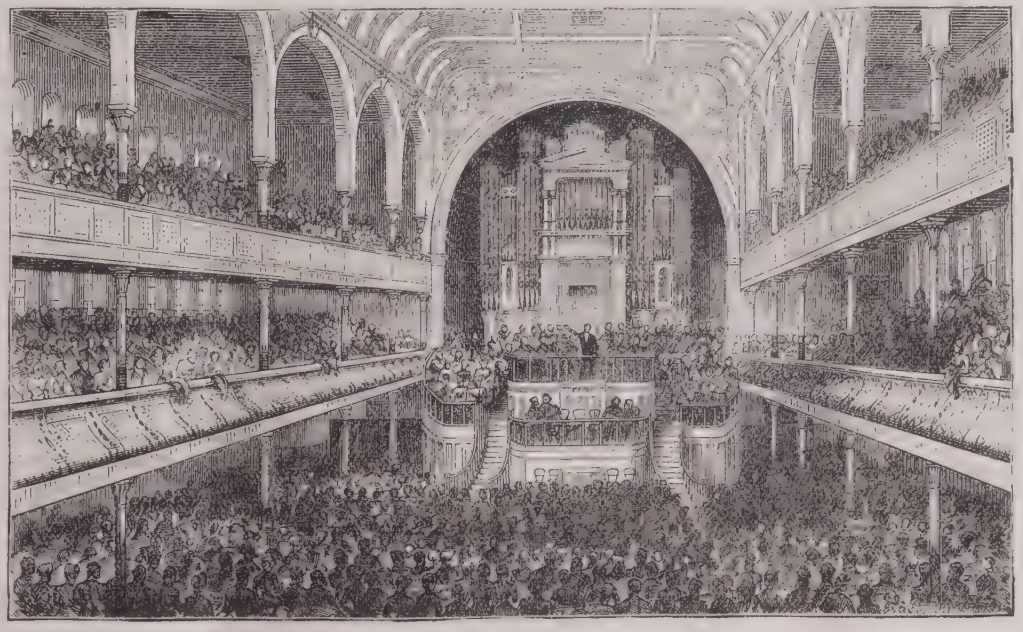
We have heard the joyful sound:
Jesus saves! Jesus saves!
Tell the message all around:
Jesus saves! Jesus saves!
Bear the news to every land;
Climb the steeps and cross the waves;
Onward!—'tis our Lord's command!
Jesus saves! Jesus saves!

The Chairman read several appropriate Scriptures, and in a few words expressed hearty thanks to Mr. F. N. Charrington and Mr. E. H. Kerwin for so readily and kindly granting the use of the Assembly Hall for the day. Mr. Charrington is now at the Antipodes, and, happily, is much improved in health.

Mr. R. C. Morgan briefly stated the objects of the day's convocation, which are well known, of course, to every reader. God's guidance, he said, had been most manifest throughout all the arrangements. The one central thought with those convening the meetings has been, "Wilt Thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in Thee?" the emphatic words being the last two, "in Thee." The centre and essence of every revival is our drawing near to God, and God drawing near to us.

We swarm and hive around our King.

The great feature of the 1859 Revival was the unmistakeable manifestation of God and of his saving power. People were constrained to say, "This is the hand of God"; that is what we all desire to experience again, as we gather for these meetings. Mr. Martin Hope Sutton, of Reading (one of the conveners, and unable to be present), wrote: "I had hoped to come and tell a little of what I remembered of the Revival of which this gathering is one of the fruits; but I believe God will in his own time and manner give an outpouring of his Spirit, compared with which the former Revival was but as the first fruits." Let us all say "Amen" to that. (Many hearty "Amens.")



GREAT ASSEMBLY HALL, MILE END, E.

After some words as to the course of the proceedings, Mr. Morgan added that among the many who had written gratefully as to the movement of 1859, a continental correspondent said she purposed to join in spirit in the thanksgivings of the day, and hoped to get "two or three" to unite with her; doubtless there would be many little companies meeting in the same way throughout the land, being of one accord, and desiring to swell the song of praise. An interesting letter from Pastor Frank White, too long to be read, was referred to by Mr. Morgan; it will be found on a preceding page.

In the absence of Dr. H. Grattan Guinness, Mr. Morris, one of the helpers at Harley House, read the following brief message from him:—

I would rejoice to be with you in this Thanksgiving meeting, but am detained in Ireland. I well remember the Revival of 1859. It was a great reality. Its waves swept over the land; travelled far, and broke even on the most distant shores. Blessed be God for that glorious manifestation of grace, and for every other which has followed it. With all our heart let us give Him thanks and praise, and render to Him all the glory. But let us not confine our thoughts to those manifestations of his grace. Let us remember the far greater revival of the day of Pentecost, and that the arm of the Lord is not shortened, nor his ear heavy. He has given us the early rain; may He send us the latter rain, even floods of his Spirit upon the dry ground, making the wilderness to rejoice and to blossom as the rose.

We at Harley House (added Mr. Morris) have seen very much of the results of God's great work since 1859, and our hearts unite with yours in giving thanks to our Father for the wondrous manifestation of his grace. But our desire, as it is the desire of all of us, is that there may be a larger and more abundant manifestation of God's grace in London, in England, and right out into distant lands.

A season of approach to God by various friends on the platform took the form largely of hearty thanksgiving, mingled with confession of human imperfection and failure, and petition for future mercies. Among those who led the upward thoughts of the assemblage were Capt. Hawes, Rev. J. More, and Mr. E. P. Telford. The last-named specially thanked God that He had deigned to use all sorts and conditions of men and women as the instruments for doing his saving work among their fellows.

MR. REGINALD RADCLIFFE.

Mr. R. Heber Radcliffe was present as representing his venerated father, who, to the genuine regret of all, was expressly prohibited by medical advice, from coming up to London for the meetings. Portions of the letter, reproduced elsewhere, were read by Mr. Radcliffe, jun., who wished to add his own personal note of praise. It was one of the veteran workers in the 1859 Revival, Mr. Grant of Arndilly, who, when staying at his father's house, definitely led him to Christ. The Revival of 1859, he had been told, was characterised by little organisation, and many of the human agents were not orators; but the arm of the Lord was manifestly made bare, and signs and wonders undreamt of were done. "I remember my father telling me what happened to him in Scotland one Sunday afternoon. He went out into the country to preach to some shepherds in a little church. The day was very hot, and about half the congregation went to sleep. My father began to speak, but he was obliged to stop; his mouth seemed to be shut. He said, 'Let us pray.' In Scotland, in those days, they always stood for prayer, and the standing woke them all up. Then the Lord opened my father's mouth, and he had not spoken more than three minutes when the Holy Ghost fell on the little company, and out of the forty present some thirty perhaps were converted. And the converts of those days stand. When I have been in Scotland from time to time, I have been asked, 'Are you the son of Reginald Radcliffe?' And then the questioner would add, 'I was converted in 1859.'"

After this interesting little recital everybody was prepared to join heartily in the well-remembered song struck up by Richard Weaver, who was in excellent voice—No. 28 in the special collection:

My heart is fixed, eternal God,
Fixed on Thee;
And my eternal choice is made,
Christ for me.
He is my Prophet, Priest, and King,
Who did for me salvation bring;
And while I've breath I mean to sing,
Christ for me! Christ for me!

Further prayer and praise were offered by Dr. McKilliam and Rev. G. C. Grubb. The utterances of the latter were intensely fervid as always.

AN EAST END TESTIMONY.

The next to speak, on the invitation of the Chairman, was Pastor A. G. Brown, of the East London Tabernacle. The spirit of thanksgiving, he said, which brings us together, entirely cuts away all ground for boasting. We are not here to speak of anything that we have done, but rather to bear testimony to our indebtedness to God. We sometimes make the mistake of looking on man as bringing the blessing, whereas it is the blessing that brings the man. The sovereign Lord sends the revival, and also sends those through whom He works. We would do well to note what is recorded in Act xiv., 27th verse. Paul and Barnabas had been having marvellous blessing. When they returned to Antioch to give an account of their service, what do we find? "When they had come and gathered the church together, they rehearsed"—most of us would have written, "all that they had done for God"; but that is just what they did not do—"they rehearsed all that God had done with them." That is a very different thing. It is dangerous work to talk of anything that we have done for God; indeed, strictly speaking, no servant of the Lord here has done anything for God. But we may safely, like Paul and Barnabas, tell what God has done with us.

Mr. Brown went on to say that he was too young a Christian to speak about 1859; he was then a godless young fellow. It was into the sixties before Mr. Stevenson Blackwood was God's channel through which the blessing of salvation came to his heart. In 1866 the Lord brought him to East London, where by the grace of God he had continued to this day. What he had done for God was nothing, but in a spirit of thankfulness and feeling that he was a great debtor to the Revival, he could say that it had pleased God to convert between 5000 and 6000 souls whom he had had the joy of baptizing during the years he had been in East London. The Lord send us another Revival on Holy Ghost lines. That of 1859 followed the simple preaching of the Word of God, in absolute dependence on the Holy Ghost. The Lord repeat this.

"FIDDLER JOSS."

Our East-end brother was succeeded by Joshua Poole, known to so many in past years by his familiar sobriquet, "Fiddler Joss." Mr. Poole is now on the retired list through bodily infirmities; but no one who heard him on this occasion could doubt that his spirit is as warm, and his utterance as fervent, as in his palmiest days. In a flood of red-hot speech he recounted in outline some of the Lord's dealings with him, from the time that he was brought to God in Wakefield House of Correction and onwards. He said he went into that institution a blaspheming fiddler, and came out a preacher of the Gospel. Very stirring indeed was "Joss's" tale of Gospel warfare and victory which the Lord wrought through himself and his devoted wife in different parts of the provinces and in various centres in London, notably in the tent at Limehouse (which led to the purchase and rebuilding of the Edinburgh Castle), in Seven Dials, and at Greenwich Theatre. Joshua asked for prayer on his own behalf in his days of feeble health and enforced cessation from service, and closed with this stanza:

> The world is full of beauty;
> It might be full of love,
> If we all but did our duty
> As the angels do above.

Then followed another time of thanksgiving and petition, in which a number of brethren took part; among others, the Hon. R. Moreton, who specially prayed for God's ancient people, and all work on their behalf.

FRUIT OF AN AFTER WAVE.

Dr. Baedeker said he was not a witness of 1859, but in succession to that there came an after-wave in 1866, which swept him away. "I was then a broken-down man in the hands of the doctors. They had treated me for diseases which they said could not be healed. But somehow the Lord healed me, and He not only did that, but He has kept me all the time since then, so that I have forgotten all about my lungs and my heart, and the Lord has been pleased to launch me forth to go and do his business, as far as I am able to do it. I have been enabled by his grace to carry the same message which He used so mightily in London, to the ends of the earth, and to the darkest places of the earth—into the prisons of Siberia and other dark dens where people are hid. I want to give praise and thanks to God to-day for the dear brethren who are exiled and in prison; for their faithfulness under heavy trial. They are in a hot fire of affliction; and yet rather than give up their faith in the glorious Gospel, they go through prison and exile, and they suffer intensely. Let us praise for them, and then join in prayer that it may please our Heavenly Father speedily to stop this persecution in Russia, and that these dear people may be liberated. They have been spreading the Word of God quite on Apostolic lines. Whatever a man had received of the Lord, that he gave out to others, and so in a marvellous way the Gospel has covered the land, and no limit can be found to the work of these dear Stundists. They are simple folk, but they will go a hundred and two hundred miles to tell out what they know of the Lord Jesus. This mighty wave has grown, and is growing still. Whilst they are under heavy oppression, the more they are oppressed the more they increase, like Israel of old. Let us pray for them that are in bonds, as bound with them."

INQUIRERS IN THE GREEN ROOM.

Mr. C. Russell Hurditch said his heart was almost too full for utterance; he seemed to have been living the past thirty-seven years over again. In connection with the passage mentioned by Pastor A. G. Brown, he had been drawn to the text: "The Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad." He felt both glad and sad—glad in looking back at what the Lord God had wrought, and sad in remembering how much more He might have wrought if his servants had been more faithful and prayerful and loving. After recounting some of the many agencies that have arisen in London and elsewhere since 1859, Mr. Hurditch referred to some of the leading workers and teachers of that time, making special mention of Denham Smith and the fruits of the Revival in Ireland. He alluded—as did other speakers during the day—to the first Fulton-street prayer-meeting in New York as one very marked agency in the American Revival. As one reminiscence of the London work, Mr. Hurditch said he remembered Mr. Reginald Radcliffe preaching in the Marylebone Theatre. He gave out his text and had only spoken a few words when the people were broken down, and scores flocked into the green-room to inquire the way of salvation. It was seen of a truth in those days that the excellency of the power was of God, and not of man. Three characteristics of the time were faith, prayer, and love; if these were equally characteristic of work to-day we should see another revival more glorious than before.

Mr. Blackham, of West Bromwich, said that he had lately been deeply impressed with the need of woman's work in the London slums, and told of his efforts in the North of England to awaken interest in that department of work.

The following letter from Rev. Peter Thompson, of the East End Wesleyan Mission, was read, in his absence, by his helper, Mr. Joseph Jackson:—

> I am exceedingly sorry I cannot join you in the meetings at the Great Assembly Hall. A sudden bereavement and plans of work arranged before I knew the dates of the meetings combine to make it impossible. I shall be much with you in spirit, and hope to share with you all the fruits of praise and renewed devotion. I read with deep interest the paper in The Christian suggesting causes for praise and thanksgiving, and many earlier memories were awakened. I recalled the wonderful work of the late Alexander M'Aulay in the East-end of London during eighteen eventful years, and the large and blessed results that abide with us still. The history of "Paddy's Goose" and "The Old Mahogany Bar," with their converted music-halls, is most precious as a record of God's love and power, and we rejoice with unfeigned gratitude in the powerful revival of the work of God at St. George's and Stepney.
> I am specially thankful that we retain No. 41, Wellclose-square as a centre of work in the Mission. This was the house of Thomas Jackson, the thieves' missionary, in which the late Lord Shaftesbury, Mr. T. B. Smithies, and others held their first midnight meetings, and accomplished some of the best work of the City Mission. I wish I could say in few words all that is in my heart, of gratitude to God and delight in his work.

Mr. Jackson confirmed the statements of Mr. Thompson as to the great things that have been wrought in that part of the East End through the work at "Paddy's Goose" and the "Old Mahogany Bar." He said they were constantly finding out in these dark localities proofs of the power of Christ and his Gospel to transform the lives of men and women. They were full of expectancy that London, over which so many were agonising in prayer, would ere long become a city of God.

Another hymn having been sung, the proceedings of the first meeting were closed with fervent prayer and thanksgiving by Rev. D. B. Hankin, of Mildmay.

THE AFTERNOON MEETING.

In the afternoon, a large audience again assembled. Mr. George Williams, who presided, read Pss. lxvii. and cxxvi., and a season was spent in prayer and praise, led by Messrs. E. H. Kerwin and C. Inglis.

Mr. Montague Beauchamp rejoiced in the world-wide results of the Revivals of 1859-60. Beginning in these lands, the influence spread out in ever-widening circles even to those who dwell in darkness. Psalm cxxvi. has been read by the Chairman; is it not peculiarly a missionary psalm? Do not such words as these: "Then said they among the heathen, The Lord hath done great things for them," belong specially to those who labour in pagan lands? It may sometimes be hard to get the heathen to listen to what we say, but they cannot fail to see our joy, and take notice of the fact that we have something which they have not. It is a solemn thing to come together thus from all lands to recall the past, to render praise, and to seek strength to go forth once more to witness for Him wheresoever He willeth.

Captain Hawes believed that one distinguishing mark of those past awakenings was deep love of the written Word of God. I find in Isa. lvii. a real key-note for our meeting: "Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people. For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." The Lord is ready to work in our midst—more ready than we are to ask; but we need the expectant spirit, we need to be broken down as we have never been. I remember the time when the very reading of such words as these would have broken down many hearers.

These remarks were suitably followed by the singing of the coronation hymn, "All hail the power of Jesu's name."

A STORY OF CONVERSION.

Rev. E. H. Hopkins came next with the story of his own conversion:—We look back with very great gratitude to God for his wonderful doings in 1859-61. Personally, I have to praise God that I was brought, in the latter year, through the instrumentality of a coast-guardsman, to a knowledge of the truth. I was a mere youth, but I noticed he had something I did not possess. He asked me to come to a prayer-meeting—I had never been in a prayer-meeting before. When we got there he told me the people expected me to conduct the meeting and speak. I was utterly amazed, but he took me into a room and prayed that I should not be afraid of man, and should not be ashamed of Jesus. I knew I could not say, "Come to Jesus," but I felt it was a good thing, and resolved to say, "Let us go to Him." Very well, I got over the hymn and prayer, but what was to follow? I recalled a message I had heard on the beach, and gave the substance of it. I had exhausted my ideas and seemed likely to break down, when a voice said, "May I say a word?" I was thankful indeed. It was the coast-guardsman, and he gave us a red-hot testimony that seemed to set us on fire. I continued going to the meeting some time; several were brought to the Lord, and soon I was myself. So we look back on those days with thankfulness; but we do not look back to rest on them. God is still the same; He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think. Let us look up, let us expect; He is ready and willing to open the windows of heaven, and pour down his blessing.

THE ENEMY FRUSTRATED.

Rev. Robert Balgarnie told how some thirty years ago waves of blessing broke over Scarborough. How did the blessing come? In this way. We began the year with a united week of prayer, and the Churches were brought nearer to one another, and nearer to God. The blessing was such we could not close the meetings. We went right on for thirteen weeks without interruption, coming together with one accord in one place, and God gave wonderful blessing, so that all the churches had ingatherings of souls, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundredfold. To show the power of God, let me mention that during the first week of these united prayer meetings a masked ball was held in the town. It was felt by many to be an outrage on public opinion, but it proved so successful that another was announced for the following week. We cried to God to frustrate it. We waited on Him to the last moment; and I remember walking from the prayer-room to the ball-room, to find that only two couples had turned up, and the ball was abandoned. The whole town seemed to feel that God was near, and that He had shown Himself stronger than the enemy.

Now there is a spirit of expectation abroad in the churches; many are waiting on God, and longing, not for the showers merely but for the floods. God has promised, "I will pour floods upon the dry ground." One sometimes sees the barges stranded on the mud. They lie high and dry; but let the flood-tide come along, and they will float on the waters. So the churches are stranded and sticking in the mud; let the flood of God's fulness sweep along, and they will rise above the deadness, formality, coldness, and indifference, which hinder the blessing.

Rev. Thomas Richardson said, in the course of his address, that he started to work for God in London in 1854, and has been labouring in the East End since 1859. None, save those who knew the state of things then, can form any true idea of what God has done in the East End. I believe there is no part of London where more devoted and evangelical work is being done than in the Tower Hamlets division. God has blessed marvellously every section of his Church. There are splendid clergymen, but there are also splendid ministers and mission workers. One thinks of such men and women as Archibald Brown, Dr. Barnardo, George Holland, and Miss Macpherson, as well as of the Salvation Army. We are not ashamed of our God, and we shall never forget the blessing He sent us with Mr. Moody on his two visits. We are praising God for his marvellous works, for the labourers sent forth to every part of the world, and for the many who are now reading his Word in all lands.

A season of prayer followed, with the hymn:—

Oh, worship the King, all glorious above!
Oh, gratefully sing his power and his love!
Our Shield and Defender, the Ancient of Days,
Pavilioned in splendour, and girded with praise.

Rev. Marcus Rainsford desired to press upon the attention of his hearers one of the most precious passages in God's Word. There are seven great realities, seven marvellous truths in it, "For God so loved the world, that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Here there are seven of the most blessed truths: 1. The greatest possible gift—God gave his Son. 2. For the greatest possible number, "the world." 3. On the easiest possible terms, "whosoever believeth." 4. For the most blessed deliverance, from eternal perdition, "shall never perish." 5. The greatest possible blessing, "everlasting life." 6. On the highest possible security, i.e., on the witness of Christ Himself. 7. From the highest possible motive, God's love, "God so loved the world."

THE SACRIFICE OF PRAISE.

Mr. Henry Varley said that in the last chapter of Hebrews, we are exhorted to "offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually"; yet while we had floods of blessing in 1859, this is 1894; and I do not recall any such meeting as this between 1859 and 1894. May we not expect from these gatherings, floods of blessing? We, ourselves, should be continual sacrifices of praise, at leisure and in the midst of work. The more we are filled with the spirit of praise, the more our work becomes one of joy and power attracting men to the living Christ.

I remember going to Ireland in 1862, and many of us will never forget the part beloved Henry Bewley took in those days. In the north of Ireland I found that men seemed on fire; and the first question generally asked was, "Have you found Christ?" There was no doubt whose work it was, whatever cold scientists may say about it. In looking back on these times we bless God for the glorious results, for men and women set to work, for the great numbers who have stood fast and true to God: we bless Him there has been so small a proportion of bickerings and jealousies, and that through the wear and tear of years so many are with us still to magnify his name.

Mr. C. Boardman recalled how eagerly he looked in 1859 and 1860 in The Revival for the weekly accounts of the work of God in Ireland and elsewhere. For his own part, on behalf of many in Stratford, he had to thank God for the visit of Mr. D. L. Moody, and the erection of the Conference Hall as a centre of Christian activity and usefulness. He did not see any reason why 1859 should not be repeated in 1894, were we but true to God and thoroughly united one with the other.

After another hymn, and prayer by Mr. James E. Mathieson,

Mr. C. Cook said that we have to praise God for the Gospel in the open air, and for the work of Gawin Kirkham, with whom many of us have been in the forefront of the battle. He remembered twenty-three years ago, when he stood with a few others on a racecourse to witness for God. Then we had to run the gauntlet; now we are welcomed. Then think of open-air testimony at the street corner, under arches, in open spaces, and in the parks. God has very greatly blessed his Gospel under the blue sky, and we thank Him for that.

Mr. A. Brunton, who has done good work in New Zealand, told how the wave of blessing spread in 1859 from this land to the Antipodes, how he was converted there, apart from any human agency, and how great blessing extended into many parts in the south, and the fruit of those days is still to be found flourishing.

Mr. W. Wheatley told how work among prisoners began, how he himself was led into it, how it had spread, how access had been gained to prisons and cells, and how hundreds, once despairing prisoners, had been saved, and are now serving God.

Mr. C. J. Brooks confessed himself as born in 1859, when he "accidentally" heard a clergyman tell in a chapel near Holborn, of a visit paid to Ireland, and of the scenes he had witnessed there. This led the speaker to think seriously, and months after he was brought to the Saviour. Since then he has been working for God, and now is in charge of one of the Church Association's mission vans.

Richard Weaver here sang another of the hymns indelibly associated with those earlier years:—

Jesus, thy precious blood alone,
Does for my many sins atone;
For He's taken my feet from the mire and the clay,
And He's set them on the Rock of Ages.

And Thou from sin wilt set me free,
O Glory! Christ hath died for me.

Lo! glad I come, and Thou, blest Lamb,
Wilt take me to Thee, whose I am.

Nothing but sin have I to give,
Nothing but love shall I receive.

Now will I tell to sinners round,
What a dear Saviour I have found.

I'll point to Thy redeeming blood,
And say, Behold the way to God.

The two lines of the refrain were taken up by the audience with the old-time fire.

Mr. George Williams rejoiced that God had put it into the heart of his servants to call these meetings. He was thankful so many are ready and willing to render thanks to God for the blessing of the past thirty-five years. Much has been done for which we praise God. There are many noble institutions, and work of all kinds is being done, and we bless God for it all. But while we praise Him we feel we want revival. We hope and expect this day will be the beginning of another wave of blessing. We pray He may send his mighty power and bless our city and land, and revive his work all over the world.

Prayer followed by Revs. W. Blake and W. Middleton, and the proceedings were adjourned to the evening.

THE EVENING MEETING.

In the evening a still larger assemblage was presided over by Lord Kinnaird. Hymns old and new having been sung right heartily, prayer was offered by Mr. Edward Trotter and Mr. Henry Varley. The Chairman then drew attention to 2 Chron. xx. 15-22, and John xvi. 15-27. Anybody, he said, who had the privilege of seeing God's work in 1859, must admit that it was founded upon the Word of God. Whether they came from Scotland or Ireland, the preachers had a message; they honoured God's Word, and God honoured their efforts.

Mr. T. B. Miller, though converted before '59, had the privilege of visiting Ireland at the time of the Revival. As there was not a drop of rain for about six weeks—a remarkable thing in Ireland—almost all the meetings were held in the open-air. Everyone wondered at the goodness of God in giving such a long period of sunshine. Contrasting '59 with the present, Mr. Miller said it would have been impossible thirty-five years ago to convene such a meeting as the present. God be praised that Christian people to-day assemble in large numbers irrespective of ecclesiastical distinctions.

One thing that struck the visitor to the north of Ireland thirty-five years ago was that the new convert never ascribed his or her conversion to a human agency. It was not, "I was converted through Mr. So-and-so." It will be a real blessing for us to learn wherein we have departed from the simplicity that God showed us in the time of the revival.

Again, there were

in the north of Ireland; perhaps no individual man can be singled out as having been specially used of God at that time. As he afterwards saw in Scotland, the anxious soul was frequently blessed by one who had been converted the night before! If we trusted God more—remembering that it is "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts," there would be a wonderful change in Christian work to-day.

Sorrow is mixed with joy in the retrospect; and excepting Richard Weaver, he could hardly see one with whom he worked a generation ago. Of so many it must be said that their work is done and their rest begun. In conclusion, Mr. Miller remarked that with all our organisation and arrangement, the danger is that we should fail sufficiently to trust in the present power of God the Holy Ghost. We may lay the fire with great care, but He alone can kindle it to a flame.

Mr. Fennell, of Newport, followed with the story of his conversion twenty-four years ago, and his subsequent experiences as an evangelist. He referred with joy to the work of the venerated Robert Aitken, of Pendeen, whose mission in Newport, Monmouthshire, led to the conversion of many hundreds of people.

After a season of prayer, petitions being offered by Rev. Dr. Moore and Mr. Joseph Merry, a vigorous address was delivered by Mr. E. H. Kerwin, designed to encourage young men in work for Christ. Brought to a knowledge of the truth in 1868, the speaker entered upon work in East London with four others, and at a time when little or nothing was being done outside the church organisations. One of his companions was Mr. F. N. Charrington, and undertakings begun in a small way have since grown to a degree that was never anticipated. Believing that it is God's purpose to revive his people, Mr. Kerwin called upon young men to join the band of Christian workers, and be channels for blessing to those around.

Rev. J. More, of Cheltenham, one of the "Huntly Band," in the course of a burning address, said: A pathetic feeling has come over me to-day by being carried back in mind, and by the fact that I am the only one of the Huntly Band here. Dr. W. P. Mackay, of Hull, and several others of our number, have gone home. Dr. Alexander Whyte, another of the band, still works in the spirit of 1859, as also does Dr. Williamson, of Belfast. I often realise the difficulty that friends must have in understanding what we talk about, when we refer to the Revival of 1859. I would like to bring two or three scenes of that time before you. When Reginald Radcliffe first came to the North, he was advertised to speak at a week-evening meeting in a country church. I had before, and was much struck by the sight of a man in light tweeds doing such a thing. When he had spoken for ten minutes he stopped, and I regarded this as significant of the failure inevitable in the case of a man who had never been to college! Then Mr. Radcliffe burst into tears, and exclaimed, "How can a poor man like me tell you about the glory of our Christ Jesus?" For twenty minutes following his utterance flowed like a tornado, and at the close he said: Other friends will speak to those who are anxious; such as wish to leave may go, as we sing—

As when the Hebrew prophet raised
The brazen serpent high,
The wounded looked, and straight were cured,
The people ceased to die.

Not half a dozen of the audience left the church; indeed, in those days the difficulty was not to persuade them to remain, but to induce them to go.

That was the first time I endeavoured to deal with inquirers, and it was a great relief when I saw them burst into tears. At that meeting there was a big man, whom I hesitated to approach. I worked round and round him, and he sat alone, like a statue. At length I was face to face with him, and said, "Do you want to close with Christ?" He threw himself forward, and sobbed as if his heart would break. I went for Mr. Williamson to deal with this case. Whole congregations in Aberdeen fell before the Word of God, hundreds and thousands being, so to say, swept into the kingdom through the preaching of Reginald Radcliffe and those who accompanied him.

THE SECRET OF THE WORK

was this: Whenever Mr. Radcliffe purposed to visit a place to address meetings, he sent lithographed letters to friends all over the country; so that wherever he went he was followed by loving, hearty, believing prayer. When we went into a meeting we were sure that it would be filled with the glory of God, and we were never disappointed. There was a poor woman named Jane Mill, who lived up a common stair, upon whose prayers we always counted. It is said of some that they are frequent in prayer, but this woman was never off her knees!

Those who have read the "Life of Duncan Matheson" will know what pandemoniums the feeing markets of Aberdeen were at that time. We sent our best preachers to these fairs, and encountered many obstacles. On one occasion we could not get within two hundred yards of the people; but while on our knees, and fearing defeat, we heard the voice of the coachman of the Duchess of Gordon holding forth in all the glory of Her Grace's livery. Then two pipers came on the scene, whereupon Duncan said, "Now see if God or the devil will win the day!" We sang the Old Hundredth, and the pipes retired! Through sheer spiritual necessity people pressed forward, and were introduced to the living Lord Jesus Christ. It was computed that in one period of six weeks were gathered into the visible Church of Christ. Let us hope that there are vaster blessings in the covenant than we have as yet received, and that God waiteth to give them!

Mr. T. M. Wintle, who was converted in 1875, described his interesting evangelistic work in Monmouthshire.

Colonel Morton dealt with work amongst soldiers. In 1859 an officer spoke to him of Christ; nobody had ever so spoken to him before. In the following year the officer spoke to him again, and was the means of bringing him to a knowledge of the truth through John v. 24. God has greatly blessed the Army and Navy, and to-day it is quite exceptional to find a regiment or a ship where there is not a Bible class, and there are Soldiers' Homes in many places where meetings may be held. There is an officers' Prayer Union, and a recent development is an Army and Navy Missionary Union.

Mr. William Noble outlined his life-story, and rejoiced in the diffusion of Gospel temperance principles. He was careful to preserve the proper order of things. Though placing temperance first in time when dealing with the heathen of Whitechapel and Hoxton, he did not place it first in importance. Temperance reforms a man; the Gospel saves him.

The next speaker was Mr. Richard Weaver, who began by giving out the hymn —

Now, in a song of grateful praise,
To my dear Lord my voice I'll raise;
With all his saints I'll join to tell
My Jesus has done all things well.

He spoke of his birth and re-birth, his old conversation and his Christian career, praising God for blessing his evangelistic endeavours during the past forty years. He concluded by leading the audience in the old melody—

In the Christian's home in glory,
There remains a land of rest,
Where the Saviour's gone before me,
To fulfil my soul's request.
On the other side of Jordan, etc.

Mr. L. K. Shaw, of Manchester, having led in prayer, a brief address was delivered by Mr. D. Rea, a warm-hearted and much-used Irish evangelist, now preaching at the Edinburgh Castle.

The Chairman then called upon Mr. Henry Varley, who said: "It is a subject for deepest gratitude that this auspicious day has gathered together so many of the Lord's servants to give Him praise. Whilst thousands of us have sent up the sacrifice of praise again and again, I believe this is the first great occasion upon which we have publicly met for this purpose since the memorable days of 1859. It is ours gladly to trace all blessing back to our beloved Lord. We had not had any Gospel to preach or grace to make known, had it not first been in the great mind and heart of the eternal God. Not unto us, but unto his name be praise, who 'so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.' I would suggest that henceforth we have such a thanksgiving day every year; that we come together to bless his name. 'O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together.' Our hearts have been stirred as we have listened to the testimonies of his working from so many of our brethren.

"I have another suggestion to offer. When Israel entered Canaan they were directed by their leader, the Captain of the host, to assail the cities, to lay siege to them, in order to overthrow them. Now, I venture to say that this might be attempted. Four or six of us, men of God, of one heart and of one mind, should attack our provincial cities first, and stay there, working with devotion and persistent energy until practically taken for Christ. I here and now pledge myself to make one of such a company to attempt this result. Let us labour for great things in the name of our exalted Lord."

At this point Richard Weaver, of veteran form and hair now white with age, came forward, and, gripping the speaker's hand, said, "Here's your man; I'll go." The effect produced by this incident will not soon be forgotten; the audience seemed to regard it as being indicative of the answer to Mr. Reginald Radcliffe's telegram, which Mr. Varley had read, and which invited the assembled company to follow the example of the early disciples and scatter themselves abroad. Entering into the desire expressed by this beloved brother, that a short season of silent prayer should be spent in order to a definite accession of power from God, the speaker asked the friends to join in the request. When this was over, Mr. Varley closed the meeting with fervent prayer and thanksgiving, embracing in comprehensive brevity many of the great things which God had wrought.

It was nearly half-past ten when the great gathering broke up, and we believe the deepest conviction prevails that, as a result of this hallowed season, not only will a marked accession of power be known by the large company of evangelists, preachers, and workers who were present, but that a widespread work of grace will follow and be seen throughout the land.

A VISITOR'S IMPRESSIONS.

A sympathetic visitor to the thanksgiving meetings of last week gives his impressions in these words:—

"I could not help being impressed with the place which was given to the Word of God in that large assembly. At a time when attacks are made upon it from almost all quarters, it was astonishing to see a host of intelligent and consecrated men and women committing themselves without hesitation to its guidance. They carried it in their hands; they pleaded it in their prayers; and they were gratefully responsive to the simplest and most unadorned exposition of it. That the Bible should feed and inspire such laborious and useful workers remains a standing evidence of its Divine power which cannot be explained away.

"It struck me as remarkable that men from all Churches came together, apparently oblivious of the Churches they came from and the views they ordinarily represent. They met and mingled as Christians only. No Eirenicon had been issued by any Church courts, yet they came together by mutual consent, and with common agreement; so far as I heard, not a word of criticism or difference fell from anyone. They believed in prayer and in God. They had no doubts about his being able and willing to do wondrous things. Without eloquence to hold them, they prayed and sang, and listened to homely exposition for two hours at a stretch. Spiritual religion is not dead."

ABERDEEN.

Advantage was taken by the friends in Aberdeen of the opportunity of joining with so many Christians in other towns, and especially in London, in thanksgiving for the marvellous work of grace in 1859 and succeeding years. By request, the venerable Principal Brown, who was closely connected with the movement from its commencement, and had conducted a Sabbath morning meeting for twelve years—one of its fruits—occupied the chair. In the course of an interesting statement, Dr. Brown emphasised the remarkable spirit of prayer, of sensible nearness to God, and widespread interest in Divine things which characterised the movement. Reference was also made to boys' meetings held at that time, some of whom had since become well-known Christian workers. Others connected with the Revival took part in a very inspiring, profitable, and well-attended meeting.

FRANCE.

It would be a great omission not to sound a note of joyful praise for the Continent, and wherever the French language reaches and French hymns are sung. In 1861, in Paris, we were on the tiptoe of expectation and holy desire—i.e., all those of us who had read of the Pentecostal times of refreshing in America, Ireland, Scotland, and elsewhere during the previous three or four years, and who thirsted for like blessings in France. The venerated late Madame André-Walther, who had been eye-witness of good accomplished in Scotland, invited Reginald Radcliffe to Paris; and he came, accompanied by Shuldham Henry. They spoke through interpreters, principally the Pastors Monod. On all who received them came remarkable blessing. God "filled the hungry with good things," and they became soul-gatherers.

It was a jubilant time, a time of sowing, of reaping, of hope fulfilled. New songs were put into our mouths; hymns—joyful hymns, bright hymns, expressing present experience—were composed or translated: "Just as I am," "There is a Fountain," "Joyfully, joyfully," etc., etc., which responded to awakened needs, joys, and soul-longings, and ardour to save others. And these hymns prompted more, and are now in all collections. Switzerland participated in the spiritual revival; the new hymns soon swelled into a volume called Hymnes du Croyant (believers' hymns), and lifted many depressed souls and churches out of the doleful psalmody which had so long responded to, and indeed fed, a doleful and discouraged state of mind, and landed distressed souls in a brighter, happier, sounder spiritual region. A tone of joyful Christlike Christianity began to permeate societies and churches, and originated many blessed works crowned with a measure of success previously little known.

Opposition here and there only gave the stamp to the genuine nature of the work which the Lord's own power carried on to fruition. To Him be the praise and glory! We rejoice to join from a distance in the truly called-for thanksgiving!

S. P. Blundell,
In the name of many grateful ones in France and Switzerland.

A GRATEFUL TRIBUTE.

I am glad to see the name of Henry Reed, of Launceston, amongst those for whom you have been giving praise to God. I would like to say he was more blessed to me than anyone I ever came in contact with, and I think my heart would have failed in the old days at the work God called me to, had it not been for the constant encouragement and strength he was to me. There are scores of Christians to-day in the colonies, ministers, evangelists, and missionaries, who with myself can say, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of him."

Birmingham. E. L. Baeyertz.

DEESIDE.

With joy a little company of praying people held Thanksgiving meeting in the Banchory Mission-room (which was quite full), in conjunction with the London and other gatherings, on the 11th, to praise the Lord for his mighty works since '59 and right down to date. There were no addresses. Portions regarding the occasion were read from The Christian, and several letters quoted; also extracts from The Revival and The Wynd Journal of '59, '60, '61, a copy of which I am fortunate in possessing. These stirring reminiscences kindled all our hearts, especially those who could date their conversion to that memorable time.

For nearly three hours the voice of praise and prayer was uplifted by many, and it was with difficulty we separated. Mr. Radcliffe, Mr. Weaver, Mr. Williamson, and many other names were mentioned, for Aberdeenshire was a special scene of victory in those days, and we praise Him that He is still showing us that Isaiah lix. is true to-day as it was then. May the result of all these great gatherings be a stimulus to our zeal to work till Jesus comes.

FRUIT APPEARING.

Blessed be God for Wednesday last! We remarked on our return that it was in keeping with all God's ways that we should now see evidences of coming revival, for He ever responds to hearty praise and prayer as of old. In the full expectation of this I was on the look-out yesterday when preaching at the Baptist Church morning and evening at Fulham. I think the first person I spoke to at the close of the morning service said, "My cup runs over afresh (certainly his eyes flowed over). It was through you I was converted twenty-eight years ago in Stafford Rooms (quoting the passage of Scripture), since which time I have been married and have seven children." On asking his son, who stood by, "Are you a Christian?" he said "Yes." "How long," I asked. "Only this morning during the service." Forthwith came tears of joy, in which his sisters joined, and the weeping four reminded me of many blessed scenes in the past when rivulets of tears have expressed the overflowing joy of the heart.

Almost a similar incident occurred in the evening of peace found while the Word was being preached, and others I have not time to describe, but I thought your heart would rejoice to know this. Thank God we have had continuous blessing in the halls of the Evangelistic Mission, but I have named these because they were especially striking—more nearly approaching the numberless instances of those blessed revival years. On many grounds I look for renewed times of refreshing over a wide field.

C. Russell Hurditch.

ALTON, HANTS.

I would like to raise our note of thanksgiving in our district for what the Lord Himself has done in our villages and among the hop-pickers since 1861. The late Major Gibson and his family, Duncan Matheson, and others, were among the first who went with me to preach Christ in the villages and hop gardens in this heighbourhood. The Lord has raised up from the hop-pickers men who are to-day preachers of the Gospel, and out of our villages men and women who are daily testifying for Christ. Five Mission Chapels have been erected, Sunday Schools established, five churches formed (with at present over 100 members, presided over by myself), and during the hop season six large tents annually erected, and six cart-sheds for evangelistic services.

I am getting old, but can look back and say, "What hath God wrought? Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." S. Chinn.

PRAISE, ALWAYS PRAISE.

"Praise is comely for the upright."—Psalm xxxiii. 1.

Praise, always praise; there's not a day nor hour
But praise is comely: praise will bring thee power.

Praise, always praise; for praise should follow prayer:
Praise Him who makes your wants his daily care.

Praise, always praise; in days or dark or bright,
Praise always brings an atmosphere of light.

Praise, always praise; not with the lips alone;
To God's all-seeing eye the heart is known.

Praise, always praise; so shall thy heart find rest
In knowing that God always gives the best.

Praise, always praise; when power itself shall cease,
Praise will endure; yea, and shall still increase.

Praise, always praise; e'en with thy latest breath
Begin the song which is not hushed in death.

THE RAILWAY MISSION.

A successful conference of delegates from branches of the Railway Mission in Scotland was held at Edinburgh on March 31 and April 1. About forty delegates attended, and gave encouraging reports of work at their various branches. The past year has been a most successful one in the Railway Mission throughout Scotland.

Lord Polwarth presided at a crowded public meeting in the Queen's Hall, and expressed warm sympathy with the object of the mission, assuring the Christian men of his active support in their efforts to win their unsaved mates for Christ.

On Sunday, April 1, a number of Gospel meetings specially for railway people were conducted in various parts of Edinburgh.

Mr. R. Nixon, general secretary of the Mission, has been conducting a series of meetings in Dublin.

At a public meeting in the Christian Union Buildings Mr. D. Drummond presided, and said he considered the Railway Mission to be most useful agency. Mr. Nixon gave particulars of the general work, and Miss E. Tilby furnished some information about the Dublin branch, in connection with which about ten meetings are held every week.

VISITATION OF INFIRMARIES.

Some months ago a few lines were kindly inserted asking for the help of friends in visiting the infirmaries in North London. Through that means some half-dozen friends came forward and joined us in the work, most of whom are still successfully serving Christ, and winning souls for Him. In the houses at Highgate, Dartmouth Park Hill, and St. John's-road, we are needing more workers on account of some being called home and others removing. I venture again to ask through your columns for the fellowship of devout hearts and willing hands, either ladies or gentlemen. Communications may be sent to Mr. J. Leaver, 13 Pemberton-terrace, St. John's Park, N. F. Geller.

THE GOSPEL IN SPAIN.

In the new report of the Association for the Diffusion of the Gospel in Spain, Mrs. Evans writes:—

"We have made a visit to a village called Villanubla (cloudy village). Though it has not a very cheerful name, we found many precious souls trusting in Jesus and the power of his might, and, therefore, passed eleven days full of joy and blessing among the believers, some of whom had grown cold, and almost indifferent, in their struggle of life, for a struggle indeed life is for them. They leave their houses at 3 a.m., and do not see them more till 8 p.m., or half-past, when they are hardly able to keep awake. All these hours of hard toil have been suffered to earn 10d. or 1s. 2d. Poor people are dying under the heavy burdens of cruel taskmasters.

"During our absence from Valladolid a fine young man, a solicitor, lay dying, and a visit was requested. Mr. McCarthy kindly went, and found him near what he called the 'chaos of eternity.' Mr. McCarthy told me that it was some time before he could get a word from the poor man further than oaths and blasphemy against the nuns and the Christ they brought him (a wooden image). When he had had his say against Rome, its people, and Christ, he listened to Mr. McCarthy on condition that he would not refer to Rome. He was then pointed to the living, loving Christ of God, but he had felt life too hard and cruel to believe that such a Christ existed. Notwithstanding he was pleased and somewhat comforted by the words spoken, he was left to die with a dead hatred of the only Christ he had ever seen or heard of till that hour.

"One can almost say for certainty that the majority of Catholics in Spain die so, as they cannot believe in a Christ nailed to a cross—that is, one piece of wood nailed to another, or a Christ laid in the tomb, or in the wafer or 'Eucharist,' for in each case he is a dead, helpless Christ, and therefore of no use to the helpless, needy sinner. In the village we have just visited there are numbers of these lifeless creatures; but, while these abound, there is a bright little band of believers."

Copies of the report and further information may be had from Mr. B. F. Babcock, 17, Water-street, Liverpool.

CAGE LANE MISSION, PLUMSTEAD.

The anniversary meeting was held on Thursday at the Mission Hall, Cage-lane, Plumstead. The hall was well filled, and the chairman, Mr. Denny, gave a short account of the progress of the Mission, which has been carried on for fifteen years by Miss Russell (now Mrs. Anderson).

The annual report was read by Col. St. Quintin, and the deficit proved the great need of more annual subscribers for this growing work, relieving General and Mrs. Anderson from the most unpleasant task of applying for pecuniary help for this mission.

The addresses were given by Gen. Sir R. Phayre, Sir William Stirling, and Mr. John Wood were truly spiritual, impressing deeply on their hearers that in Christ alone can the sinner be saved, that "Whosoever believeth in Him hath eternal life."

Many in the hall gave testimony as to the way they had been brought from darkness into his marvellous light, also how the founder of this work, Mrs. Anderson, together with her husband, General Anderson (now so earnest in the work) have been blessed during the labours of love in their Master's service.

The meeting was closed by the singing of the Doxology, and all must have realised the great power of God working in connection with this Mission.

AT A MEETING of the Manchester City Council, Mr. Trevor called attention to the number of arrests for drunkenness during the past year in Manchester, as recorded in the annual report of the Watch Committee, and the comparatively small number of prosecutions against licensed victuallers and beerhouse keepers for permitting drunkenness. He thought the disparity indicated something wrong somewhere.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—One brought to God in 1859 asks prayer for her two nephews and niece that they may be led unreservedly to the Lord; two sisters for three brothers that they may be brought to Jesus; for a lady suffering much from mental depression caused through anxious care for dear ones during a time of trial and suffering, that the Lord would graciously restore her; for showers of blessing on the annual meeting, followed by week's mission, of the Banbury Y.W.C.A.; for evangelistic services in Plymouth, commencing on April 22, to be conducted by J. J. Scroggie.—For blessing on a work at Leyton, begun by Mr. John P. Gibbens.

AMOY CHRISTIANS IN COUNCIL.

The Amoy Congregational Union has completed five days of meetings, four for business, and one for devotional exercises. It is believed that the great want of public spirit amongst Chinese is being remedied by these Union meetings. Pastors, evangelists, Bible distributors, school teachers, and delegates from the churches, gather from several counties, and every year an increasing amount of important business is done, bearing on many kinds of reforms. A great result, too, is gained in training the leaders of the churches to carry on deliberative assemblies.

The first convert from Jing-chin was received. This gave no small encouragement to an important missionary movement inland. This convert has endured suffering in giving up the opium vice. Native ministers who are enduring money troubles are taught that they are being tested, and that if they are faithful and look up for support they will not be left in need.

A movement is on foot to care for disabled and aged workers. The moral pressure from home, as instanced in the case of questions affecting missionaries in India, is more and more felt here, backing up missionaries in their struggle against moral evils, and helping to keep up their own moral stamina and avoid the demoralising influence of heathenism.

It is more and more realised that missionaries can work most effectually by raising up and training native leaders. A serious conflict on lines of native deadly hatred has been overruled by Christian influence. There are many proofs that a wonderful spirit of co-operation can be fostered in China, if missionaries can meet native leaders on equal terms. The Chinese do not believe in "a rope of sand," but in true authority. They can be moved by the "terrors of the Lord" if other means fail.

It is found to be a much more serious matter to induce Christians to carry out reforms than to start them. In domestic affairs especially there is frequent evasion, some even arguing, "Why should we seek to do more than the apostles?" (e.g., in putting down slavery), not seeing that the advance made in Christian conscience and influence is greatly beyond early times, so that Western Christendom could not to-day allow evil customs in the Church as formerly. We, however, little know the trials of native Christians which lead them to plead for less strictness.

A man who gave up a considerable sum of money for inland missionary work when he needed it to buy a son came to me last night and said, God had led his relatives to give him a son. This is a direct answer to prayer, and a strong encouragement toward teachings of self-denial and trust.

I may also mention a fact not connected with the union. A special effort is being made by powerful presentation of the truth to rescue certain souls from extraordinary peril through temptation to earthly lusts, and bring them to see the glory of Christ. J. Sadler.

Amoy, Feb. 27.

"THE GOSPEL CYCLISTS" will make their opening run for the season on Saturday, 28th inst., when they hope to visit Waltham Abbey and hold an open-air meeting at 7 o'clock. The secretary, Mr. A. F. Borton, Hermon Hill, Wanstead, will be glad to hear from any Christian young men who cycle and who would like to join in this work, which affords a practical opportunity of devoting Saturday half-holidays to cycling for the glory of God. Open-air meetings are held every Saturday in the various towns and villages in S.W. Essex.

THE CHURCH MISSIONARY SOCIETY'S accounts for the financial year just closed have not yet been made up, but it is certain that there is a deficit of some £13,000. The income, though below the exceptional figure of last year, exceeds by more than £20,000 the average of the preceding five years. But the expenditure, which, if it had remained at the same figure as last year, would have been covered, is £13,000 more. In 1892-3 the missionary staff (after deducting deaths, etc.) increased by fifty, which of itself accounts for the augmented cost of the Missions. In 1893-4 the increase in numbers has again been about fifty, and the cost of these will swell the expenditure of the year now commencing. The rapid growth of the Society's work is shown by the fact that its expenditure is £50,000 a year more than it was ten years ago. In these circumstances, the committee are issuing a special appeal to their friends to make an effort to wipe off the deficit before the anniversary on May 1.

BIBLE READING ASSOCIATION.

The twelfth anniversary of the International Bible Reading Association was held on Monday week. In the afternoon a gathering of district and branch secretaries was held the Lecture Hall of the Sunday School Union, presided over by Mr. H. Hawkes, when interesting reports were given by a number of secretaries from various parts of the country. The public meeting was held in the evening at the City Temple, and was presided over by Alderman F. F. Belsey, of Rochester. The report, read by the secretary, Mr. C. Waters, stated that for 1893, 450,000 cards of membership in English had been issued, including 359,980 in England, 12,200 in Wales, 12,200 in Scotland, and 6600 in Ireland. The rest had been distributed over a large number of countries throughout the world. In addition to these, cards had also been issued in eleven other languages. At the present for 1894, there had been issued 480,000 English cards, showing an increase of 45,000 over the number at same date in 1893. As interesting facts it was mentioned that Welsh cards had been sent out to Patagonia, where there is a Welsh Colony, and that 10,000 cards in the native language had been supplied to Samoa with the assurance that all would be required. The members of the Association support a missionary in India whose duty it is to assist the various missionary societies in the promotion and improvement of Sunday-schools for the native children; £451 12s. had been contributed for this purpose during the year.

The Chairman congratulated the meeting on the satisfactory record furnished by the report, both as to the constant increase of membership and as to the work accomplished through the agency of the Indian Sunday-school Mission. Rev. J. E. Shephard addressed the young people present, urging them to make the Bible their guide. Rev. Alfred Rowland spoke on the advantages of systematic Bible reading, the plan of reading the following Sunday's lesson and other portions of Scripture bearing on the subject being most important. Mr. J. E. Liddiard, who had visited many of the I.B.R.A. workers in a recent journey around the world, also spoke.

"WHAT THEY COULD."

Last Thursday evening will long be memorable in the annals of the Somers Town Blind Aid Society. Its blind members joyfully gathered for the special purpose of holding a jubilee praise meeting for the Ragged School Union, and offering to God on its behalf what, from their poverty, they could spare! The intense interest shown in the work, the warm enthusiasm displayed, the willingness with which the blind contributed their pence, touched many a chord in the hearts of friends present. It was matter of very great disappointment to himself and to the blind that Mr. Starey, the founder of the Union, was prevented through illness from joining the gathering.

Mr. John Kirk, the secretary of the Union, gave a deeply interesting résumé of the fifty years of splendid work which the Lord has done through the agency of the Ragged School Union. The audience followed Mr. Kirk's recital with rapt attention. During the evening the Misses Scott and Miss Kirk contributed some sweet songs and jubilee hymns, while the blind united in prayer for God's continued blessing on the Union, and in hearty praise. The collection amounted to nearly £2, many giving their evening's "guide money," some bringing small silver coins, long saved for the occasion, and "only wishing it were more."

LAW CLERKS' CHRISTIAN UNION.—On Thursday evening last, Mr. A. Ellis presiding, "The power of the name of Jesus" was discussed. Seven managing clerks took part, and it was a time of much spiritual blessing. Mr. J. C. Allday, 35, Lincoln's Inn Fields, will gladly afford particulars of the Union.

SPEZIA MISSION.—We have passed through a period of great perplexity and trial, but God has answered prayer. If friends at home could only realise the unparalleled opportunity for preaching the Gospel in Italy, and the growing desire of the Italians to be freed from the bondage and superstition of the Romish priests, we should have no lack of funds.

Fred W. Clarke.

Casa Alberto, Spezia.

BIBLE SOCIETY.—Since the establishment of the Bible Society's agency for Egypt, ten years ago, 183,000 copies of Scriptures have been put into the hands of the people in Egypt and the immediately neighbouring lands. Of these nearly 40,000 have gone to the seafaring folk passing through the Suez Canal and in the town of Port Said. About 66,000 copies were circulated in Egypt, 17,000 in Syria, 52,000 in Palestine, and 8000 in Southern Arabia and the Red Sea coast.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

A branch of the Y.P.S.C.E. recently formed in Bury St. Edmunds already numbers forty members.

The first convention of the C.E. Union for Northamptonshire has been held at Wellingborough. Revs. W. Knight Chaplin, W. Fidler, E. Abbott, H. Matson, T. Stephens, and others took part.

With reference to a paragraph which appeared in our last issue, we are asked to state that the Christian Endeavour Council is in no way concerned in, or responsible for, the arrangements for the Swiss tour there mentioned.

Thirty-six new societies were registered during last week, representing the following denominations, viz.:—Baptist, Bible Christian, Congregational, Methodist, New Connexion, Methodist Free Church, Primitive Methodist, and Wesleyan.

The Stonehouse Congregational Society has sought to develop the movement by sending a deputation of twenty or thirty members to two adjacent villages, who conducted a C.E. prayer meeting, and gave information on the subject. In both cases it is understood that the effort was successful.

A conference of Christian Endeavourers has been held in Banbury. A paper on the objects, principles, and usefulness of this movement provoked some discussion, in which representatives from Banbury, Chipping Norton, King's Sutton, Leamington, Oxford, and Moreton-in-the-Marsh took part.

The care of the street lamps at Eyota, Minnesota, has been undertaken by the ladies of the Christian Endeavour Societies. They volunteered to perform the work gratuitously when it was proposed by the local authorities to license saloons in order to raise the funds necessary to pay someone to attend to the lamps.

The C.E. movement is going ahead not only in Great Britain, but throughout the world. Last week nearly fifty new branches were formed in this country, bringing the total up to 1286. Mr. Baer, the general secretary, writing from Boston, U.S., says that the gain in branches and membership during the first quarter of this year was greater than in any preceding quarter in the history of the movement, for on his register there were 30,610 societies on March 14, with a total membership of 1,836,600.

MISSIONARIES BURNT OUT.

On March 1, through the carelessness of the dhobi (laundryman), our bungalow took fire. There was a strong wind blowing at the time, and in one or two hours the house and all it contained was laid in ashes.

All of our earthly goods perished, Mrs. Batstone and baby Evangeline saving only the clothes they wore. Our books, organ, medical and surgical appliances, clothes, furniture, etc., etc., all gone, but we ourselves saved. We are indeed poor, but yet possessing all things; sorrowful, yet always rejoicing, knowing that our "treasure" and inheritance is above—undefiled, fadeth not away. Praise God that we are able, in whatsoever state we are, therewith to be content.

Our home now consists of a grass hut, 14 by 24ft., our furniture three chairs and two little tables; as yet, no beds, etc.; but soon we will be around again. Our new bungalow will be built by June, we trust.

The more we see of this field, and the more we talk and commune with God daily, and watch his dealings with us, the more we are convinced that He has a great work for us to do. We have no abiding place on earth—only Jesus—a blessed shelter in the time of storm. We rejoice in Him to-day as our all and only sufficiency.

We have some very bright followers of the Lamb here—living lives according to the written and living Word; tobacco, opium and liquor, caste, old associates all given up for Yishu Mashi—Jesus Christ.—Yours in Christian fellowship,

W. H. L. Batstone.

THE UNITED CHRISTIAN MISSION is an agency having for its aim the dissemination of Gospel truth in Continental Europe. This it seeks to do by inserting Scripture texts as advertisements in Roman Catholic and secular newspapers, and by the circulation of Gospel tracts and cards. The mission has carried on its work in twelve different languages, and during the last eight months it has sent out more than 170,000 cards and tracts, and inserted messages in upwards of 1200 different newspapers. If funds permitted, it could insert such messages in at least 1000 more before the year closed, but already those who are carrying on the work have made themselves responsible for a large sum beyond what they have received. Contributions in aid may be sent to Mr. A. J. Arnold, of the Evangelical Alliance, 7, Adam-street, Strand, or to the hon. sec., Rev. J. D. Kilburn, Ottensen, Holstein, Germany.

THE Y.M.C.A.

In connection with the Social Purity branch of the Manchester Y.M.C.A., lectures on "Purity" have been recently given by Mr. W. H. Newett to men at Bolton, Derby, Oldham (P.S.A.), and Huddersfield.

Mr. Ralph Morphett has become secretary to the Bristol Association.

Brondesbury College has been secured by the Kilburn Y.M.C.A. as an Association centre.

It is stated that the revival of the work in Lincoln goes on most satisfactorily, and that some two hundred young men have been enrolled as members during the past year.

The National Council of the Y.M.C.A. of Sweden have arranged for a grand Swedish concert at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday, June 5, at 3 p.m., to be given by a select choir of sixty-six high-class Swedish singers, who will visit England to sing during the Jubilee of Y.M.C.A. here. The object of the concert is to support the work of the Associations in Sweden.

The Y.M.C.A.'s of the Western District met in conference at Frome on the 12th inst., when important and valuable discussions took place upon the questions of the relations of Y.M.C.A's to the Christian Endeavour Movement, Christian bands, denominations, young men's societies, and other kindred institutions, and as to the best means for reaching young men uninfluenced by existing religious organisations.

Mr. W. G. Sprigg, of the Melbourne Y.M.C.A., is leaving Australia to take up the work at Cape Town, where he has been appointed general secretary.

Mr. Geo. Hughes, who for the past nine years has been general secretary at Cardiff, is relinquishing the position, and is about to enter upon work that will identify him with the whole of South Wales, where he is widely known and respected.

The half-yearly conference of the South Wales District Union met at Pontypool on Thursday. The morning and afternoon sessions were held at the residence of Mr. C. Dauncey, president of the local association, and were of a very cheering and encouraging nature. Interesting reports were presented. In the evening a public meeting was held, Mr. Dauncey presiding, when addresses were delivered by Messrs. C. E. Compton, of Newport; Thomas, of Swansea; Smith, of Usk; Jenkins, of Pontypool; and Vigar, of Hereford. The meetings were characterised by much spiritual power.

On Thursday, interesting meetings were held in connection with the anniversary of the Charlbury Association was held.

THE Y.W.C.A.

A branch of the Y.W.C.A. was formed at Rathowen, co. Westmeath, Ireland, about a year ago in connection with gatherings for sewing and Bible study which had for some time been held among the women of the neighbourhood. With God's blessing the work has grown and flourished so much that it now numbers thirty-nine members, who meet weekly. In the last twelve months 210 articles of clothing have been made for the poor Protestants assisted by the Ladies' Irish Association, and thirty-eight pieces of work were contributed as "free-will offerings" by the members in aid of the sale held recently. We should be very thankful for materials to supply our busy workers, as the appeals for clothing are too many to meet without further help.

(Mrs.) Preston Battersby, Secretary.

Will any lady living near London invite a party of our factory girls down to her garden on a Saturday afternoon during the next four months? Address, Miss A. B. Butler, 13, Onslow Square, S.W. A few hours in the country, and especially in private grounds, give such real pleasure to these girls, and it is often the only day in the year that they get into the fresh air.

On Monday, April, 2, the Hon. Louisa Kinnaird presented the Bible and casket from over 13,000 members of the Y.W.C.A., and 2000 other women of the United Kingdom to the Duchess of York. H.R.H. said she was much touched by the kind thought, and wished her warm thanks conveyed to all the subscribers.

BATH.—On Sunday, April 1, Dr. Newman Hall conducted services in the Walcot Wesleyan Chapel, when large congregations met at both morning and evening services and God's presence was felt. On Sunday, April 8th, Rev. James Baillie, of Bloomsbury Chapel, London, conducted anniversary services at Manvers-street Baptist Chapel, when the chapel was filled to excess both morning and evening. Much blessing was experienced during the day. The work at Bath amongst the different churches seems very encouraging. Rev. B. Senior is doing good work amongst his people at Claremont Chapel. A. T.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

A series of successful Gospel meetings has been held at Dunoon. The coming of Dr. Moxey and Mrs. Moxey had been looked forward to with deep interest, and the results have been of the most gratifying kind.

A largely attended conference in connection with the Johnstone Y.M.C.A. was held on Saturday last, Mr. James Barnett, president, in the chair. The subject was "Christian Work," and various brethren contributed. The meeting was much enjoyed by all.

The late Mr. John Clark, of Paisley, left £30,000 to the schemes of the United Presbyterian churches, and another £47,000 to local charities. Among those who participate in his benefactions are the Paisley Young Men's Christian Association, who have now the prospect of getting a hall of their own, which will greatly aid them in their work.

Aberdeen has for long shown a laudable interest in Sabbath-school work, and last week there was held in it a conference of teachers, under the auspices of the Free Synod, at which admirable papers were read by Mr. John Adams, rector of the Normal School, on "School Discipline," and Mr. J. Elphinstone, teacher, Firstray, on "Teaching the Lesson."

Rev. Mr. Paterson, of Hamilton, preached an admirable sermon, which was greatly appreciated, at the opening of the Free Synod of Glasgow. His subject was Christian union, founded on the words, "That they all may be one." He held that the oneness prayed for by Christ was not, primarily, outward uniformity, but inward unity of spirit. He had some apt remarks on such organisations as the Evangelical Alliance.

IRISH NOTES.

Sermons were preached last Sabbath in twenty-four churches of various denominations in Belfast in favour of a more scriptural observance of the Lord's Day.

A band of boys from Dr. Barnardo's Home, under the charge of Mr. J. B. Wookey, held a series of meetings, which were greatly appreciated and largely attended, in Belfast last week.

The anniversaries of the Methodist Missionary Society have been held throughout the country. About 200 centres have been visited by members of the deputation, most of whom are missionaries from China, India, or Africa.

CLOTHING FOR EMIGRANT GIRLS.

Dear Sir,—The cheerful return of spring makes many of your readers contemplate the shedding of winter clothing. It also brings with it hopes of brighter prospects to those young women who are wise enough to avail themselves of the abundant work to be found in the Colonies. The Women's Emigration Association, to which I belong, can offer 100 free passages to Western Australia, and the demand in Canada for general servants is practically unlimited.

I venture to ask for help in outfits, the department I personally superintend. The wardrobe of a little maid-of-all-work rarely contains a stuff dress suitable for a sea voyage. Old and new underclothing are very acceptable. We only send out good girls, for we believe that Christian character is the strength of the mother country, and that only by its transplantation can the fullest well-being of our Colonies be secured.—Yours truly. Adelaide Ross.

BIBLE INSTITUTE LECTURES, CHICAGO.—Mr. C. S. Wakefield, of Cloncore, Portadown, Ireland, lately a student in Mr. Moody's Bible Institute, Chicago, has undertaken to obtain a circulation in Great Britain for carefully produced reports of the theological lectures of Rev. R. A. Torrey, Dr. Pierson, and others. Bible students will find these lectures of real service. Particulars may be had from Mr. Wakefield, at the address given.

SEAMEN'S REST, MARSEILLES.—Since last writing we have had abundant cause for praise and encouragement to go forward. We recently had a social evening for the sailors to keep the first anniversary of the Gospel Temperance Society, formed for seamen. A goodly number of pledges have been taken and we are thankful to be able to trace the beneficial effects in several cases. We are now deeply interested in a superior seaman who had become a complete slave to drink. We are hopeful he will find, as many others have done, that Christ's power to keep is stronger than the temptation.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. Matthew Burnett is holding a ten days' mission at Watford. Prayer for blessing is desired.

Mr. Oscar Owers, who is resuming for the season his Gospel services in Hyde Park, would be glad of much prayer on his behalf. He is still open to take occasional and mission services, and may be addressed 23, Wood-lane, W.

Barrhead, N.B —Mr. Harry Young, of the Evangelisation Society, concluded a fifteen days' mission here on Sabbath last. It is believed the special effort will be productive of much good. A Christian Conference was held on Saturday on "Faithfulness."

Mr. Rowland Sturt concluded on Sunday last an eight days' gospel mission at Chesham. The services were arranged by the Y.M.C.A. of that town, and were supported by the ministers and congregations of the various Nonconformist churches, who united in the special effort.

Rev. Thomas Jackson, of the Clapton Mission, has been conducting Gospel mission services at the Jubilee Chapel, Scarborough. Large congregations have attended at each meeting, and numerous tokens of blessing have been manifest. The Mayor of Scarborough presided at the closing meeting.

Limehouse —Since December last Mr. W. B Bawn has been holding special Sunday evening services in the Town Hall, Limehouse. Owing to the interest awakened, these meetings, originally intended to be closed on the last Sunday of March, have been continued to April 29. Much blessing has been granted and not a few profess conversion.

The Christian Life Boat Crew hold services from place to place, and the testimonies borne by the sailors have been blessed to many. On Tuesday a strong detachment went west to the Uxbridge-road Tabernacle, Shepherd's Bush, where they held a capital service, not a few careless outsiders being attracted, and it is believed some were greatly touched by the stirring testimonies of the members.

Mr. Wm. Smith, late of the Irish Evangelisation Society, has been holding a series of meetings in one of the stations of Belfast Town Mission during the past week. The meetings have been deeply earnest, and the power of God has been manifest. Prayer is requested for the meetings which continue next week. Mr. Smith is open for engagements in England. His address is 10, Canada-street, My Lady's-road, Belfast. Wm. Maxwell, Sec.

Messrs. Merton Smith and Bell have been holding a united Gospel campaign in West Bay, Mich., and the city appears to have been greatly stirred. On the Sundays the services have been crowded out; while Wednesdays have been observed as a "mid-week Sabbath," the shops, works, and places of business generally being closed in order to allow the employés to attend the meetings. Four services were held during the day, and very largely attended. Many have professed conviction and conversion.

Mr. James Wharton has held a most successful revival in Hillsboro, North Carolina. People in the country left their ploughing to attend the services, and so eager were they to hear the Word that they filled the Church to overflowing, and stood at the windows listening. Large numbers have professed conversion, and the Christians have been led into a deeper consecrated life. Nearly all of our pupils have been converted, among whom are all the most promising young men and women. We are full of praise to our God for his goodness.

(Miss) B. C. Bechan.

Mr. Richard Weaver conducted gospel services at the Farwig Mission, Bromley, Kent, on Friday, Sunday, and Monday, April 6, 8, and 9. Although in great bodily weakness, the news of salvation was proclaimed with great power to large congregations. Many came from considerable distances, some of whom had listened to Mr. Weaver ten, twenty, thirty, and more years ago. The homely presentation of the Gospel message attracted large numbers of unsaved men and women, and, especially on the Sunday night, was accompanied by great blessing, many professing to receive the Lord Jesus as their personal Saviour.

Exeter.—A correspondent writes:—Mr. Henry Varley has been here a fortnight, and much interest exists in the City. The afternoon Bible readings have been scenes of reviving to large numbers of believers. Many confessed their acceptance of the Word of Life in the Gospel meeting. The city is feeling the power of the Word of God so clearly and faithfully preached. Mr. Varley goes to Honiton, Crediton, and South Molton for a few days and returns to Exeter on April 26. The large Victoria Hall and some other centres have been secured for the carrying on of the campaign when he returns. A Conference for the deepening of spiritual life is to be held, commencing on the 23rd inst.

Mr. W. R. Lane commenced on Lord's day morning, at Arthur-street Chapel, Camberwell, a ten days' mission, which already shows tokens of great interest. The meetings on Sunday were very largely attended, and numbers seemed touched to the heart. The scene, at the evening meeting especially, recalled memories of the past Revivals, and awakened in some hearts the hope that we are about to experience blessings similar to those which so many of the Lord's people have been commemorating. Without venturing to reckon the converts it may be said that nearly two hundred professed to find the Saviour. Open-air work was carried on vigorously, and between nine and ten at night the whole street was filled with attentive listeners while the Gospel was faithfully proclaimed.

Messrs. B. and F. Weaver have closed a fortnight's mission at Newbattle Free Church, Midlothian. From the first meeting there was evidence of the Lord's presence in melting, saving power. Night after night there have been souls seeking and finding salvation. The harvest of blessing has chiefly been among young men and women, although not a few of middle age have also entered the kingdom. There have been many marked answers to prayer for individual cases. We have cause to thank God for the visit of the evangelists to this district, and ask those who joined us in prayer to offer a note of praise to the Lord for his goodness and wonderful works. The evangelists go on to Dalkeith for another fortnight, where we follow them with our help and prayers. A. Hardie, Minister.

PERSONALIA.

Rev. W. Prichard Williams, of Landore, has been elected editor of the Seren Cymru, the weekly Welsh Baptist organ.

Rev. W. H. Barlow, Vicar of Islington, has, it is announced, accepted the post of Chaplain to the Mildmay Deaconess Institution.

Rev. C. J. Vaughan, D.D., has decided to resign the Mastership of the Temple, a position he has occupied for twenty-five years, owing to his declining health.

Mrs. Robertson, of the Society for the Free Distribution of the Scriptures, we are thankful to say, is progressing favourably and recovering slowly from the effects of her painful accident.

Rev. W. Lawson Forfeitt has arrived from the Congo on a special visit to this country. He is not expected to remain more than a few weeks. We are happy to learn that he is in good health.

Rev. Dr. T. B. and Mrs. Stephenson sailed for New York on Saturday in the s.s. Paris. Dr. Stephenson's visit to the States has been undertaken for the benefit of his health, which had well-nigh broken down.

Rev. G. D. Wyatt, the esteemed Rector of Bermondsey, has had a serious attack of dysentery, which has completely prostrated him. He is, however, recovering and proceeding to Northern Italy, en route for the Engadine, where he is advised to take the iron waters.

Rev. F. B. Meyer has accepted Mr. Moody's invitation to spend August at Northfield. This will be his third visit. Mr. Moody, as we have already stated, is erecting a large auditorium to hold 2500 people, and proposes to continue the Convention for fifteen days, to be followed by a series of Bible readings. Prayer is earnestly invited that great blessing may result.

EAST END SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The East London Auxiliary Sunday School Union held its eightieth anniversary at the East London Tabernacle on Monday evening. Alderman F. J. Belsey, J.P., presided. Mr. R. Tucker read the report, from which it appeared that the number of schools connected with the auxiliary was 108, containing 3023 teachers and 37,468 scholars, 6065 of whom were over fifteen years of age, and 8735 infants; 2206 were church members. During the year 1893 502 joined the church. In connection with the schools there were auxiliary Christian bands, Christian Endeavour societies, and special classes for young Christians, with a membership of over 2900.

The chairman rejoiced in the large and important work done by the auxiliary. There was an interesting fact referred to—viz., the immigration of people into the metropolis; the recognition of this state of things had the effect of increasing the need of Sunday schools, which were the best organisations to deal with it. The most hopeful work was to begin with the young. Rev. J. A. Davies spoke of the need for more teachers, and the necessity for a fuller consecration for and to the work, and said present results should be expected. The meeting was also addressed by Rev. H. S. B. Yates and others.

OBITUARY.

MR. SAMUEL JAMES THOMAS.

We hear with much regret of the falling asleep of this servant of Christ, who passed away on Thursday, 12th inst., at St. Leonards, aged fifty-six. Many may remember how, when residing at Dury House, Hadley, Barnet, he was wont to throw open his house for happy gatherings of Miss Macpherson's and Mr. G. Holland's workers, and was well known for his hospitality and deep interest in the Lord's work generally. In recent years he had been residing at Muswell Hill, until the complaint which has now carried him off necessitated his removal to St. Leonards. His last three or four years have been times of much bodily weakness, but all through his love for the Lord and his enjoyment of his Word have been as bright as ever.

MR. JOHN CLARK, PAISLEY.

In the death of Mr. John. Clark, the senior partner of the firm of Clark and Co., the well-known thread manufacturers, Paisley has lost another of those remarkable public benefactors for which the town has been so famous. Among the many benefits which he and the other members of the Clark family have been the means of conferring on Paisley, the Clark Town Hall is doubtless the most prominent. This magnificent pile cost fully £100,000, and its erection may be said to have revolutionised the life of the town. It was here that Mr. Moody and other evangelists held their meetings, and all of them spoke of the hall, which is seated for about 2000, as one of the finest they had ever been in. During recent years, Mr. Clark resided all summer at Largs, a pretty watering-place on the Clyde, and there, too, his name became a household word for princely beneficence. In 1881 he built and gifted a hospital to the burgh, and two years afterwards he erected, at a cost of £30,000, a very beautiful church for the United Presbyterian congregation there. He was of a retiring disposition, and, like the two brothers, Sir Peter and Thomas Coats, loved to do good by stealth. He will be much missed in Paisley and the West of Scotland. Among his testamentary bequests are:—£30,000 for various missionary and other schemes of the United Presbyterian Church, £5000 to the National Bible Society of Scotland; and Paisley and Largs charities, and the U.P. churches in those places, are handsomely benefited. The sum of £1000 is left towards the erection of a Y.M.C.A. Hall in Paisley, and £250 to the Christian Vernacular Education Society for India.

EDWARD BOOTH, ZAMBESI INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

An angel came to our house last night:
Two went out, where only one came in.

Dear Eddie Booth, so well known to many of your readers, has been called home to be with Jesus, and meet his mother, whose memory he tenderly cherished. All that remained to us of him, we here this morning laid in its last resting-place. He was but seventeen, though far beyond that age in his character and appearance. Our barge was expected up from Chinele, and he had to go to Cheroono hoping to meet it there, and pass the goods through the Customs. Naturally an unhealthy place, it was much more so now during the rainy season. The barge was longer than expected; fever attacked him for the second time badly. However, in a fortnight's time news came that the barge had come. He rose from his bed, saw all his work done, then, though really ill, he started for home—a weary tramp of five days. One of our most faithful evangelists was with him (besides his carriers), and the tale he tells of his weariness yet bravery is heartrending, having to wade through water nearly up to the neck and wild animals and crocodiles abounding. He arrived here, to our delight, on Tuesday morning, not apparently ill, but upon his temperature being taken he was found to be 103 and two points. He was put to bed and seemed really bright and very comfortable. At prayers that night we were singing:—

Hidden in the hollow of his blessed hand, never foe can follow, never traitor stand;
Not a surge of worry, not a shade of care, not a blast of hurry, touch the spirit there.
Every joy or trial falleth from above, traced upon our dial by the Sun of Love.
We may trust him fully, all for us to do; they who wholly trust Him find Him wholly true.
Stayed upon Jehovah, hearts are fully blest,
Finding, as He promised, perfect peace and rest.

As we sang, we heard his voice joining in heartily, and on going in to him and playfully remonstrating with him, he said, "Oh, I couldn't help it, it sounded so sweet. I haven't heard singing like that for so long." With hearts filled with grief, we sang it again to-day while standing round his coffin.

The natives all loved him, and his fellow-missionaries. Though so young in years, his was a ripened character in many ways—impetuous, loving, and generous. "He lives again in lives made better by his presence." It was with hearts full of assurance we laid him in his grave, the sun shining down in its strength all the time. On the Wednesday morning, about 10.30 a.m., he had a kind of fit, and from that time he was quite unconscious—laboured breathing, rapid pulse, and high fever all the time. He continued in this state for thirty-three hours, and then very quietly breathed his last. Two people, whose names had a wondrous charm for him, and of whom he never seemed to tire of speaking, were his old college chum, "dear old Hawley," and his late tutor, Mr. Rattray. He frequently remembered these lovingly in his public prayers.

In his last trip he seemed to have a presentiment that it might mean his death. In his note to me, dated Feb. 5, 1894, after thanking for letters received, he says: "I feel what I need is an unwavering faith in God, and take what comes as from his hand, knowing that my Heavenly Father knows what is best for me. I want to know this blessed experience:

Mine not to reason why—with God,
Mine but to do and die—for God.

If we are in this attitude we can bear all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us. At the present, that which I find hardest to do is to stay quietly here; there is so little to do. I brought so few books down, and time hangs very heavily. I detest this lazy life, but God must have some very definite object in putting me here. I am sure it is to make me more patient, and to learn that in whatsoever place I am, therewith to be content."

We gathered lovely white flowers, grasses, maidenhair and other ferns, and laid some in his hands. He had such a sweet smile—as the scalding tears rolled on his dear sweet face one almost felt he would wake; he was smiling so like life.

We are praying and believing that his death may be a great blessing to all of us, and that "he, being dead, yet speaketh." We are stunned at present. God alone can fill the empty place. So very many have died and are now dying of this terrible fever, but we are quite safe in his hands.

Trusting we shall be remembered in your prayers, I remain, your fellow-worker for Africa, Emmeline H. Rayner.

NOTICES OF BOOKS.

THE BUNYAN RENAISSANCE.

Thanks to Dr. Alexander Whyte, of Edinburgh, there has been quite a revival of public interest in the famous tinker and his books. Messrs. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier have published a beautifully printed edition of The Pilgrim's Progress (2s.), uniform with their recent issue of "The Holy War," a most attractive and cheap presentation of the greatest Christian classic. The same firm gives us Vol. 2 of Dr. Whyte's Bunyan Characters (2s. 6d). For strong, manly, reverent, and bracing exposition of spiritual life and conflict, it would be hard to beat these rambles through the Bunyan portrait gallery. These two volumes will live and move long after the feckless namby-pamby writing of the day is buried in oblivion.

The Money of the Bible is the title of Volume XX. of the excellent "By-paths of Bible Knowledge" series (2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society). Its author, G. C. Williamson, D.Lit., is an accomplished numismatist, and his work is at once scientifically precise and popularly simple. Numerous woodcuts and facsimile representations enhance the value of this handbook.

Within our Gates.—Under this title, a little quarterly has been started to plead the cause of the Spurgeon Orphanages. The first number is full of good matter, mems and incidents from the homes, a chapter by an old boy, and other things of interest to all. We trust it will win for this noble institution many good friends. The paper may be had from the Orphanage, Clapham-road, S.W.

The Parents' Review.—Thoughtful parents will find much intellectual refreshment and profit in the perusal of this high-class monthly, edited by Charlotte M. Mason. In the April issue, the first part is given of "An Inquiry into the Formation of Habit in Man," by Dr. A. T. Schofield. Other valuable contributions are "The Training of Girls for Professional Life," by Edith A. Barnett, and "The Mental and Moral Training of Children," by James Welton, M.A. (6d. monthly. Kegan Paul, Trench & Co.)

Present Day Primers is a new series of shilling volumes issued by the Religious Tract Society; and if the whole prove as good as the first two they will serve a very important purpose in religious education. The volumes already issued are Early Church History, a Sketch of the First Four Centuries, by J. Vernon Bartlet, M.A., and The Printed English Bible, 1525-1885, by Rev. Richard Lovett, M.A. These books will be of service to students, and interesting to the general reader; and we heartily commend them.

The Good News after Marcus' Telling, a literal translation of the Anglo-Saxon version of St. Mark's Gospel, by Rev. H. C. Leonard, M.A., is a little work having peculiar charms. It gives the reader a good idea of the Bible as read by our ancestors during a period of nearly five centuries. Words that have acquired a supreme theological importance are here conspicuous by their absence, the ideas being conveyed by quaint descriptive expressions which cannot but excite instructive reflection. In this issue of his little book, Mr. Leonard has introduced many improvements upon the first edition, published in 1881. (1s. J. Clarke & Co.)

Present Day Tracts, Vol. XII. (2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society.) Here are numbers 67 to 72 of the series of tracts on Christian evidence, doctrine, and morals, which we have so frequently commended, at once for their valuable contents and their judicial tone. The writers are Drs. J. Murdoch, J. Angus, S. G. Green, T. Sterling Berry, and R. McCheyne Edgar, and Rev. M. Kaufmann. The subjects include a comparison of modern scepticism with Christian faith, a selection of testimonies of great men to the Bible and Christianity, a study of the Psalms in relation to modern criticism, and a statement of Christ's Doctrine of Prayer.

Some interesting books for the young come to us from the Religious Tract Society. James Gilmour and his Boys (2s. 6d.) is a delightful record of mission work and experience, mainly in the shape of letters by Mr. Gilmour, written to his two boys in England, after his wife's death. It is a welcome addition to the stories of his devoted life, and ought to be in every Sunday-school library. Round the World with the Union Jack (2s.) gives a bird's-eye view of British possessions abroad, and will enable the youthful reader to understand in some degree our responsibilities as a favoured nation. The Girl with a Talent, by Mary Hampden (1s. 6d.), is a pleasing story of fidelity to the right and its due reward.

Rev. James Ormiston's striking booklet, A Silent Sermon; or, The Prison Opened to One that was Bound, is now in its thirty-first thousand. (6s. per 100. G. Stoneman, 21, Warwick-lane.)

Pentecostal Power is the title of the quarterly paper of the Daily Prayer Union and Worcester Tract Society. The April issue contains many instructive and helpful communications. (1½d. E. Baylis & Son, 22, The Cross, Worcester.)

The Abbey Tracts, by Pastor H. E. Stone, have had a large circulation. Some deal with current errors; others present Gospel appeals. All are good, and being in booklet form, they are likely to be accepted with readiness. (3d. per dozen. J. F. Shaw & Co.)

Penman & Co. have added to their issues of Gospel booklets a pleasing-toned card, the "Perth Series" (1s. per 100), asking in terse and telling fashion various very pointed questions as to the spiritual condition of the reader into whose hands the card may come.

A new issue of booklets from Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling, is entitled For Letters. Twelve assorted, printed on tinted paper, make up a sixpenny packet. The booklets are by Brownlow North, General G. G. Anderson, and Mrs. Robertson, of Callander, and they are all strong in Gospel appeal.

A new, carefully revised, and enlarged edition has been published of Pastor Frank H. White's booklet, The Saints' Rest and Rapture—When? It is a thoughtful Second Advent inquiry, leading to the conclusion: "No deliverance antecedent to the public personal manifestation in glory of the Deliverer; no rest and no rapture before his revelation." (1d. Partridge.)

The Importance of Christian Work among the Young Men of London is a booklet giving portions of a most instructive lecture delivered before the Y.M.C.A., many years ago, by Rev. William Arthur. Here is a striking sentence from the concluding paragraph: "A good Englishman is a blessing far and near; an immoral Englishman is a curse on the creation of God." (3s. per 100. Hodder & Stoughton.)

Appeals.

The Congo Training Institute, Colwyn Bay, N. Wales, has now fourteen young Africans under training in the hope they will return to their native land as missionaries, schoolmasters, or useful handicraftsmen. Each student learns some useful trade, and as some of them desire to learn printing, it is now proposed to put up a small printing establishment for that purpose. A printer of Llandudno has presented the institution with a hand-press, and Rev. W. Hughes, secretary, appeals to others for similar favours, as there is great need of a printing press at our branch institutions in Africa, both at Rick's Institute in Liberia and at the Glamorgan Institute in the Cameroons.

Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portrait and sketch of the late Rev. Joseph eeshima, LL.D., Japanese Christian and ducationalist.

We are being reminded by London workers at the time for the "Day in the ountry" given to poor children, is close at nd. To the great bulk of our readers, the ghts and scents and sounds of rural life are mmonplaces, but to the London sparrows the human species, they are boons of the ghest and rarest kind. We hope that our iends will, as in former years, enable us to lp the mission workers of the metropolis carry out the programmes so eagerly ticipated by those among whom they bour.

It is proposed that Sunday, May 27, shall e observed as a day of special intercession r the discontinuance of the opium trade etween India and China. The clergy and inisters of all denominations are earnestly licited to bring the subject to the notice of eir congregations, and to arrange to have made a special subject of prayer. We sk the earnest attention of our readers to ie weighty article in our present issue on ie subject, "Chinese Opinion on Opium."

Mr. F. Cockrem's "Life of the late Mr. awin Kirkham" (Morgan & Scott), appears pportunely, as the great army of open air reachers are preparing for another season's ork "under the blue sky." No man in is generation has done more to carry the ospel to the masses in the open air than did ur departed friend. No one who reads the ry of his life can fail to receive inspiration om his earnest example and guidance from is long and varied experience. Next week e hope to give some extracts from the book.

The spring meetings of the Baptist Union are in session this week. A strong keynote was struck by Professor G. Adam Smith's sermon on Home Missions at Bloomsbury Chapel on Monday. He eloquently showed how the best and greatest results in national and in religious life come from steady and unremitting toil. Christ dignified labour, and his experiences of common life enabled him to reach the hearts of all sorts of men. The well of human need is deep, and can only be filled by Christ. To him must be traced all the saving and beneficent forces of to-day. Professor Smith magnified the functions of the pulpit, and contended that the regular ministry had accomplished more than any special effort. The sermon was listened to by hundreds of ministers, who frequently gave expression to their approval.

The address of the new president of the Union, Rev. G. Short, of Salisbury, dealt largely with the social aspects of Christian teaching. Never was there a louder call to bring the Christian spirit to bear on the movements and necessities of the time. The Churches must gird themselves to the work of exorcising the demons of drunkenness, of sensuality, and of respectable covetousness. Science and legislation may do much, but the great specific for the woes of humanity is the Cross of Jesus Christ. Dr. S. H. Booth's secretarial report told of an increase in membership for the year of 5000, and spoke hopefully of the general outlook.

The late Professor David Gracey, principal of the Pastors' College, was a strong teacher. Brought to God during the revival of 1859, he lived in the sphere of Divine realities. His lectures were based on Scripture, and true to a deep spiritual experience. We heartily welcome a volume of them entitled "Sin and the Unfolding of Salvation." (7s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster.) The lectures cover a complete three years' course, and will prove of real service to students. We hope to review the work shortly.

Mr. Stead's literary fecundity is phenomenal; perhaps it is not altogether surprising that so much seething brain-power now and then breaks out in unexpected ways. His latest book, If Christ Came to Chicago (Review of Reviews Office), is a terribly scathing impeachment of social corruption and civic misrule in the great American city. Mr. Stead went to Chicago for a brief holiday, but he seems to have been so struck with the all-prevailing rottenness, that he remained to investigate and to lift up his voice against the alliances that he found existing between whisky, politics, immorality, police, and aldermanic knavery. With an unsparing hand the veil is lifted, and the picture that faces the reader is a truly dark and appalling one. The blame for such a state of things is laid at the door of the great body of citizens:—

> Instead of seeing to it that the authorities were just men, upright, fearing God, and hating covetousness, they left the worst elements in the community to convert the city government into a joint-stock corporation for the spoliation of the people and the promotion of perjury, corruption, and all unrighteousness. And now, having accepted Cain's gospel, and lived up to it, they are reaping the consequences.

When he comes to deal with remedies, Mr. Stead advances much that must commend itself to everybody. By all means let the city government be taken out of the grasp of the thieving "boodler," and committed to men of probity and pure hands, who will rule in the fear of God and in the interests of the people. Let the fountains of justice be cleansed, so that judges shall not condone crime, and policemen shall not wink at shameless vice for a consideration. Let the newspapers use their vast influence in the faithful exposure of wrong-doing and the wrong-doers. Let the millionaires learn the lesson of stewardship and responsibility, versus selfish aggrandisement and the ruthless extinction of weaker rivals. Let the lives of the poor be brightened by places of healthful resort, and let incitements to drinking and vice be swept away. All these things are vastly important and necessary.

Yet, when all that is done in Chicago, as it surely may be without Christ having to return in person to accomplish it, the city will be far from being the "ideal city" that Mr. Stead contemplates. We think that if Christ came to Chicago, as He came to Jerusalem, and saw the miseries and the limitations of human life, He would again say to the palsied one, "Thy sins be forgiven thee," before He dealt with the physical environment. Mr. Stead has little that is good to say about the Christian churches in Chicago:—

> Instead of regarding the Church members as saved souls come together for the purpose of saving others, the tendency is too much to regard them as the members of a select club, meeting together for their spiritual edification, and harmless æsthetic indulgence. . . . . Of all the disappointments caused by comparisons between the real and the ideal, the greatest disappointment which Christ would find in Chicago would be in his own Church.

So far as that is a correct statement, we deplore it equally with Mr. Stead. But if "Christ's own Church" is unequal to the task, what hope is there that a new "Civic Church" would do better? If Mr. Stead's book rouses the Chicago churches to a sense of their opportunity and their responsibility, he will have rendered a great and lasting service to that city.

Mr. Waugh's article in The New Review gives some facts with regard to the cruel treatment of children, which may well stir our thought and awaken our shame:—

> Comparing the cruelties practised by the sober and the cruelties practised by the drunkard, the palm for monstrousness goes to the sober. Poverty and ignorance, though often associated with cruelty, are never its cause. . . . The higher—more often than the lower—waged workers have to answer for their cruelties to the law. The educated and refined, when they are cruel, practise worse cruelties—more inventive, spiteful, and sustained—than do ruder-living folks.

The main causes of cruelty are avarice and immorality. All which things emphasise the fact that man's great need is a religion of holy love. We need not go to heathen lands for startling evidence; our own English homes contain it.

Does it indicate the beginning of the existence of a more modest feeling in the nation, that the nude in art is being questioned? The bailies of Glasgow have been much laughed at for forbidding the exhibition of certain pictures, but that was to be expected; all good things are laughed and jeered at at first. Now we find Liverpool joining Glasgow in forbidding an exhibition:—

> An application came before the Finance Committee of the Liverpool Corporation for the use of the concert-room in St. George's Hall for an exhibition of Kalaniff's tableaux vivants. Since the recent appearance of the troupe at one of the theatres, public feeling has been stirred against such representation of the nude in art, and there has been talk of a public prosecution. After discussing the matter in private the committee refused the use of the hall.

The recent agitation in Liverpool in favour of social purity is evidently bearing fruit in several ways.

Nothing seemed so improbable two or three years ago as the disarming of the European Powers, even to any extent, but the terrible military loads now on the nations are giving the rulers pause. On the day after the Conference on Peace in London, called by the Society of Friends, the following paragraph appeared in the papers :—

In diplomatic circles in Paris it is positively asserted that the German Emperor submitted an initial scheme of disarmament not only to the King of Italy and the Emperor Francis Joseph, but to the Czar. After sounding the King of Denmark, who shrank from the responsibility, the Emperor William asked Count Schuvaloff, German Ambassador at St. Petersburg, to submit the plan of a conference to Alexander III. The convoking of this pacific gathering would be left to the Czar himself, the Russian capital being the place of the meeting. Count Schuvaloff was instructed to return a polite refusal, and to say why he was charged with this answer. The gigantic armies of the military Powers, it was stated, are not a cause, but an effect. They are due to the European wars of the last quarter of a century, and to the treaties in which these wars ended.

The Peace Conference wisely asked our Government to take steps to aid in bringing about disarmament, and we cannot but believe that some relief will come to the present intolerable situation.

Many a time we have been asked to recommend books giving a comprehensive survey of the mission-field, and during recent years we have had little difficulty in complying with the request, such has been the growth of missionary literature. A work which has lately been published in America well answers this description, and will prove of great service to such as desire to make a serious study of missions. It is entitled "Foreign Missions after a Century," and is by Rev. James S. Dennis, D.D., of the American Presbyterian Mission, Beirût, Syria. (1 dol. 50c., Fleming H. Revell & Co., New York and Chicago.) The volume contains a course of lectures, apologetic and descriptive, theoretical and practical, delivered before the faculty and students of Princeton Theological Seminary, and concludes with an admirable bibliography of recent literature on missions.

Dr. Dennis very pertinently describes the marvellous development of missions as "manifestly one of the foremost movements of Providence in the religious history of our century." In conclusion he interrogates the Church of Christ as to her indebtedness to aggressive work, and says :—

Is it little to her that she can refer to those Pentecostal seasons in the Pacific Islands and in India, to that first Sabbath in July, 1838, when 1705 souls were baptized in the Sandwich Islands, and that first Sabbath in July, 1878, when 2222 were baptized in the Telugu Mission in India? Is it little to her that she has such tokens of her Lord's presence, such assurances of his benediction, and such promise of immortal glory through the advancement and triumphs of his Kingdom? Oh, let the Church follow hard after this sublime victory, and press on prayerfully and eagerly toward this hallowed goal!

That is to say, Let the Church be loyal to her Lord, and obedient to his last command. Then what we have hitherto regarded as miracles will be normal occurrences, and still "greater works" than have been witnessed will be done in the name of our glorified Lord.

"How much do I study the Bible, and how?" is a question which is being answered in The Biblical World (Chicago) by working pastors of America. Rev. J. L. Withrow, D.D., of the Third Presbyterian Church, Chicago, makes a brief response, in which he says :—

I study the Scriptures from two to three hours for one hour that I give to any other book. The more I dwell upon them the more they attest to my deepest needs their Divine origin. So much so, that it seems to me poorly spent time touching them, that is not taken to induce others to receive the volume as God's Word, with neither "ifs" nor "ands" of any other element in it that is worth mentioning.

This is the way to get to "know the Scriptures." Unfortunately, the book is too frequently laid aside in order that speculations concerning its origin and perversions of its teaching may be diligently studied.

Dr. Withrow recognises the true object of Holy Scripture and its proper place in evangelistic and pastoral work. He says :—

The greatest lack of my preaching, and of the preaching I hear, is enthusiastic and intelligent presentation of the Scriptures as the oracles of God. I have no knowledge of having ever helped a single hearer out of his head or heart troubles with anything else than a full expression of a full faith in the straight assertions of the Holy Scriptures. Hence I study them by books, by topics, by verses, and any other way that lets me deeper into them.

How many Christian workers are there who cannot say the same? "Not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth," are men brought to know God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent.

The Testimony of Jesus is the Essence of Prophecy.

In the early days of my conversion I was taught that the key to all Scripture is Jesus. But some of my teachers forgot their teaching, and were content with Israel in the past or the Jewish remnant in the future as a sufficient key. Matthew is very helpful here. Hosea had said, "I called my son out of Egypt"—meaning Israel; but Matthew sees beyond Israel, and assures us that the ultimate purpose of the inspiring Spirit was to testify of Jesus: "Out of Egypt have I called my Son." And this, after the worship of the angel-directed shepherds and the star-led Magi, is the first identification of Jesus as the Christ. He is the true and ultimate Israel—Prince of God: "For as a Prince hast Thou power with God and with man, and hast prevailed."

Jeremiah hears Rachel weeping for her children and refusing to be comforted because they are not. He thinks of the children of his people in the land of the enemy. But the Evangelist, with clearer and farther vision, knows that it is for the sake of the Redeemer that the children are slain. He is the true Mordecai, whom the Haman, the adversary, hates, and for whom He would slay all his people. This is Matthew's second identification of Jesus as the Christ.

Matthew says that Jesus was born at Nazareth, that the word spoken by the prophets might be fulfilled, "He shall be called a Nazarene." We search in vain for such a prophecy. Then we bethink ourselves that the Nazarites, purer than snow and whiter than milk, more ruddy than rubies, were all dim foreshadows of the Holy Child of Nazareth. But their visage had become blacker than a coal; their skin cleaved to their bones; it was withered like a stick (Lam. iv.). And in the days of Jesus it was asked, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" He was purer than snow; He was white and ruddy; yet "his visage was marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men." The former condition (like the sweet-savour offerings) declares what he was in Himself; the latter (like the sin-offerings), shows what He became for our sakes. He and He only was "The Nazarene." At the close of the Nazarite chapter (Num. vi.) is pronounced the largest and fullest blessing upon Israel. But to be called a Nazarene had become a reproach, a curse, a malediction. Jesus, the Nazarene, rolled away the reproach, became a curse for us; and is mos blessed for ever: "Jehovah bless Thee an keep Thee; Jehovah make his face to shine upo Thee, and be gracious unto Thee; Jehova lift up his countenance upon Thee and giv Thee peace. And they shall put My Nam upon the children of Israel, and I will bles them."

Yes: Moses and the Prophets and the Psalm have all one subject—Jesus: Jehovah-Jesus "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit o prophecy." And Jesus promised, "When He the Spirit of Truth is come, He shall guid you into all truth: for He shall not spea from Himself; but what He shall hear tha shall He speak; and He shall show you thing to come. He shall GLORIFY ME; for He sha receive of Mine and shall show it unto you (John xvi.).

The Father and the Spirit glorify the Son and the Son glorifies the Father, in order tha ultimately God, the Godhead, Father, Son and Spirit, may be all in all.

This is the dispensation of the Spirit; H is the promise of the Father through the Son "The Holy Spirit was not yet outpoure because that Jesus was not yet glorified. When He ascended and sat down on the righ hand of the Majesty on high, He was glorifie in heaven; when the Day of Pentecost wa fully come, and his Church, with one accord in the upper room, in the City of Peace, reste with a full Sabbatic rest of faith in the rise Saviour ("seven Sabbaths shall be com plete"), then Jesus was glorified on earth and suddenly, immediately, the outpoure Spirit filled the place where they wer sitting.

He has been glorified in heaven with un broken continuance; but we, his disciples o earth, have not pointed truly to the pole. W have glorified some truths, some half-truths and some errors, and Him in whom is th breath of our eternal life have we not con tinuously glorified. We have set up on teacher against another, one truth agains another, sometimes one truth against anothe truth, or an error against a truth, or eve against another error. And so Satan ha disunited and divided us. Thus the Spiri has been grieved, and we have been power less, and worse than powerless.

Then we have tried reunion by outward and mechanical means, without avail. It i the magnet that attracts the atoms of steel. Al the dust may be blown away, but the atom will not unite. The magnet must be held above them, and then each atom obeys the law of attraction. Jesus must be glorified and the Spirit will work mightily. Each one will be drawn, and all will come together "Draw me, WE will run after Thee."

The atoms of steel might praise electricity but that would not unite them. The electricity is in the magnet, and cannot put forth its influence apart therefrom. Sometimes we think we must glorify the Spirit; but the Spirit will exert no influence except as Jesus is glorified. The Spirit cannot be glorified except as glory is given to "Christ, who through the Eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God." "He shall glorify Me." We glorify the Spirit when we co-operate with Him in glorifying Jesus crucified and risen, received up in glory, and coming again in glory.

To have Pentecostal power we must have Pentecostal unity. And nothing can secure that unity but Jesus glorified. "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all unto Me."

The great lesson of the Thanksgiving Meetings was the uniting presence and power of "Jesus only—with themselves." M.

Chinese Opinion on Opium.

Sir,—A paper has recently been circulated n China by the Royal Commission on Opium hich deserves some attention. In it a ariety of questions are asked with a view to liciting information on "Opium Consump-on and Opium Revenue in China." These uestions are submitted to Her Majesty's onsuls, and to medical men, merchants, and hers resident in or natives of China, who re specially conversant with any part of hina in which opium is grown or consumed.
s opium is consumed in every part of China, om north to south and east to west, this quiry applies to the whole area of the ghteen provinces.

The first thing that will strike many ersons on looking at this document is that erchants are specially named, and mission-ies are altogether ignored in it. In a country here there is not one merchant in a hundred ho can speak with the people in their own nguage, and not one missionary (of two ears' standing) in a hundred who can not, it ems strange that this preference should be ven to mercantile testimony over the testiony of missionaries who are spending their es for the Chinese, and are mixing freely ith them continually in the intercourse of ily life. However, as missionaries have in few instances been privately invited, through e courtesy of some of Her Majesty's Con-ls, to give any information they can, I feel I ould like to render my contribution to the use of free inquiry, and, through the medium the English newspaper press, to give some eful information, on one aspect, at least, of e opium question.

WHAT IS CHINESE OPINION?

One of the inquiries made by the Royal mmission is the following:—"Is the habit consuming opium condemned, as degrading injurious, by the general opinion of the inese? How would they regard the opium bit as compared with the alcoholic habit?"
o one who has been long in China, and has ixed much with the Chinese people, talking th them in their own language, and entering to their life, can be in any doubt as to the swers—the only true answers—to be given these questions. To deal with the second estion first, one must say that even where inking to excess is most common, it is dom regarded by the Chinese as being any-ing like so great an evil as the opium habit.
s that the opium habit is regarded almost iversally as both degrading and injurious ay be seen from the way in which it is con-ntly associated in the popular language,
d in the public mind, with other "habits"
at are universally condemned.

It is a feature of the Chinese language to ing together in a kind of stereotyped phrase, ree, four, or five words representing one ea viewed in various lights, or several ideas ended in one. These stereotyped phrases
e current coin in popular Chinese discourse.
nglishmen sometimes speak of "Europe, ia, Africa, and America" as if that were a fficient description of the whole inhabited rld, similarly the Chinaman speaks of literati, husbandmen, labourers, and nders" as the equivalent of all classes of ciety, and in scores of other set and formal pressions, he describes whole classes of ople or things. Now, the stereotyped inese phrase, "Ptao, tu, ya-pien yen," i.e., Whoredom, gambling, and opium," is one in nstant daily use in China as the equivalent
"every kind of vice," and it indicates in a markable manner the popular esteem in ich opium is held. This association of opium-smoking with gambling and sexual impurity meets one continually in China, and anyone who will carefully read the extracts that follow this letter will see for himself that this is so.

But I may be told that after all the testimony I have now given is only the expression of my own opinion, and that what is wanted is to know what the Chinese themselves think. I may be told that consuls, merchants, ship captains, and others who have lived in China, speak very differently from the way in which I have spoken. Well, directly I read the inquiry of the Royal Commission on Opium to which I have referred, I said to myself, The best way to answer these questions will be to get hold of a few popular Chinese books that deal with opium from the moral standpoint and in popular language. Such books are to be met with at almost any street bookstall in a Chinese town, and accordingly I went out to get some specimens of this kind of literature. I bought several and I give below translations from the first three that came into my hands. These books I bought at random. I had never heard their names before, and had never read them. They were to me simply Chinese books on opium-smoking.

I wish it to be distinctly understood that these books are purely Chinese in their authorship, and purely non-Christian in their treatment of the subject. They were written by heathen Chinamen for heathen Chinamen, and were never intended to meet the eye of Europeans; indeed, the third of the three speaks most disrespectfully of Englishmen, and the tone of all is distinctly heathen and idolatrous. The writers have come under no Christian or missionary influence direct or indirect. They simply utter the ordinary Chinese ideas on opium-smoking, and hence the value of their utterances in the present discussion. Even if their language is sometimes that of hyperbole, it none the less shows the Chinese mental attitude towards the opium habit.

As I was translating these passages I showed one of them to a Chinese man of letters, a literary graduate and himself an opium-smoker, and I said, "These extracts all give an adverse account of opium. I wish you would find for me some book or books that speak of it in another way. I want to get hold of some passages on the other side."

"THERE IS NO OTHER SIDE,"

he answered. "I never met with any book that spoke favourably of opium, and I do not think you will be able to find such a book." That is the testimony of a man whom I have known for many years, and one who to my knowledge has suffered pecuniarily, socially, and above all, morally, through himself being addicted to the vice. And there are myriads of such men in China, men whose lives have been wrecked through opium, who utterly condemn the use of opium, and nevertheless cling to opium.

Until I have proof to the contrary, I should be inclined to maintain that it would be impossible to produce from a Chinese writer a single passage, seriously written, which expresses a substantially different estimate of opium from that which is given in the following extracts; i.e., a passage which treats the use of opium for any but medicinal purposes as being anything else than generally degrading and generally injurious.

To me, one of the most instructive features of the testimony given by some Europeans in China to the harmlessness of the use of opium, is the contrast which the formal utterances of these witnesses presents with their informal utterances on the same subject. Men who denounce in public the fanaticism of the anti-opiumist, have more than once within my knowledge spoken in private, and when off their guard, in such a way as to show that they themselves regarded the opium habit as one of the greatest of evils.

The truth concerning opium will ultimately triumph, but it may be only after it has first suffered a severe defeat. To myself, in thinking over the present course of events, the history of our Lord's defeat and crucifixion, followed by his resurrection and ascension, has been a source of great comfort and great encouragement, as I doubt not it has been to others. We can but do what in us lies to make the truth manifest, and then commit ourselves and our cause, with confidence as to the ultimate issue, to Him that judgeth righteously.—Yours truly,

"A meeting between prodigals."

"Whoredom and gambling have existed [in China] from the times of the ancient kings, but the foreign smoke [opium] got its hold during the present dynasty [A.D. 1644-1894]. People say 'opium smoking raises one's spirits.' Who does not know that opium brings [men] to skin and bone! They smoke till their face is yellow and their body emaciated, till they lose their appetite and are always expectorating, till their energy is gone and their eyes are always watering, till their backs ache, their legs can with difficulty walk, and their arms lose their strength. As for myself, once I had property, but I ran up an account with the keepers of opium dens. I smoked in good style [here follows a long description of the luxurious opium smoker's surroundings, his ivory pipe, etc., etc.], and my associates were all wealthy folk. My father was a man who did many good deeds, and he was anxious to have a son to perpetuate his name and family, and to bury him when he died.

"I was well off, but I did not care for what was good. I loved to go on the spree with my friends. I was young and thought nothing of squandering money. To whoredom and gambling I added opium smoking. At first the craving for the drug was slight and easily satisfied, but the more I smoked the greater the craving became, until it grew insatiable. I squandered my money, dressed like a lord in silks and satins, and in the top of the fashion. I spent my time with prostitutes and gamblers. For the sake of opium I scattered my family wealth; for the sake of opium I threw away my inheritance. In order to smoke opium I sold my lands. I sold my position and others got it. In order to smoke opium I parted with my house. Because of harlotry I angered my parents, because of gambling I vexed my brothers, because of opium I quarrelled with my wife.

"At first I pawned my clothes, but with fear of the disgrace. Then I pawned all things in the house that I could lay hands on, and the sense of shame had gone. Now I have nothing left to me but a pair of hands. Everything is sold, and I look out for chickens and dogs that I can steal. Then I think of turning robber, but I fear going to prison. I think up and down, but no way is open to me. I may as well hang myself, and take a short road out of life."

Then follows a long and revolting description of a Chinese beggar's life, to which, with all its horrid accompaniments, the speaker is reduced. He speaks of his happy home, now broken up, and his wife and family brought to ruin.

"I want to sacrifice to my ancestors, but I have nothing to sacrifice. I would pray them to help me to give up opium altogether. Formerly friends would bend to me, but now I am poor who will do so? Yesterday I walked through the principal street, and the people all smiled and laughed at me to my shame. Once I was regarded as the descendant of a wealthy family; now I am nothing but a living monkey. I have formed a resolution. I must wander about and beg, but I have bound myself by an oath before Heaven that I will get cured of opium."

EXTRACT II.

From a Chinese book, Ch'uan kai yang yen.
"An exhortation to get cured of opium."

[This tract is bound up with two others, one directed against whoredom and the other against gambling. The whole is "An Exhortation to Prodigals to Reform."]

Two men are talking together on the couches of an opium den, the one a confirmed opium sot, the other a youth who is smoking for the first time. The elder man lays down his pipe, and thus addresses his companion: "Opium has injured lots of young fellows. My eldest brother killed himself with it, and my second brother, in consequence of dysentery, brought on by the pipe, had at an early age to go and see the king of the nether world (i.e., he died). As for myself, I have spent quantities of money in trying to get cured of the habit. I have taken anti-opium pills and this medicine and that. If a well-to-do man smokes opium, he takes good food to keep up his strength, as well as ginseng from Corea and other expensive medicines. He smokes luxuriously, and turns night into day, and never gets up till noon. But the pity is when poor men smoke. In order to gratify the desire for opium, they have to think of all sorts of ways [of getting the drug]. They often have to pawn their clothes till they have nothing left to go out in. They cannot buy proper food. They suffer from cold, and become thin and emaciated. Just look at these opium-smokers, and what they have to go through, and you will keep clear of the bondage. Then there are some people who, having cured themselves of the opium habit, again yield to it, and get the craving for it. They just invite calamity.

"For the sake of opium, men entirely neglect their business and throw away the finest opportunities. For the sake of opium they scatter their inheritances and bring their ancestral houses level with the ground. For the sake of opium they alienate their friends, they kill their old parents with grief, they get separated from their wives, and give up all care for their children. Think of all this and you will see you had better not smoke opium. The drug has smoked millions of young men to death. Opium friends are like lictors sent by the gods of the lower world to hurry men to their end. Opium is like a deadly poison; if you don't take care it will cost you your life! Opium makes men muddled and stupid. It smokes their livers black and their faces like the face of the kitchen god. Opium smokes men as thin as a piece of firewood, and turns them either black or yellow. I would advise you not to get entangled in it. Just look what the consequences are to the smoker!"

EXTRACT III.

From a Chinese book, Ki hai Chung Kwoh.
"A scheme for injuring China."

This is a part of a larger book called "Foreigners Bringing Tribute," which represents the early intercourse between Europe and China as the bringing of tribute by barbarian tribes to the Emperor of China. The foreigners brought all sorts of valuable things that the Chinese had never seen before, clocks, watches, woollen cloths, etc., and Chinese merchants from all quarters came to buy them. At last they produced a curious black looking substance which they said possessed valuable qualities, and they showed the Chinese how to prepare it and how to use it. The Emperor Tao-Kwang was persuaded to accept it, and gave some to his subordinates and officials. They tried it, and were delighted with their first experiences of the effect of smoking. Under its influence they seemed to be wafted in imagination through the mists and clouds to heaven itself.

The people at large are easily befooled, and they blindly fell into the trap which these robbers (the English) had set for them. Like some large fish that has swallowed a hook and got it into his stomach, they could not escape. Those who smoked long were in evil case, their families were ruined, their inheritances were squandered, and it was all up with them. If for one day they did not smoke they became ill. Their whole body became weak, the saliva came out from their mouths, their heads were dizzy, and they were like to die. This plan for injuring people was complete; it was killing men in the dark without using a knife.

Mandarins of all ranks began to play with the opium habit, and men who for years had borne a good reputation as upright magistrates, in a day threw it all away. They ceased to administer justice between litigants, and preferred giving themselves to opium; their subordinates became rapacious as tigers, and would do nothing unless bribed. The merchants were depraved by the same cause. Families were broken up. If a smoker made money he never saved; either he became addicted to gambling or gave himself to whoredom. The priests, Buddhist and Taoist, did the same, and under the fascination of opium, pawned their clothes to indulge in licentiousness.

From the above passages it will, I think, be seen that Christians and missionaries are not the only ones who speak strongly in regard to opium.

THE B.W.T.A.—A very interesting meeting was held on Wednesday, April 18, at Clapton. Mrs. Bailhache gave an address on Rescue Work, and explained the object of the Inebriate Home.

The Prison Problem.

Rev. W. D. Morrison asks, in The Fortnightly, "Are our Prisons a Failure?" and answers his own question in the affirmative. He gives a serious view of the prison problem. The cost of our prisons is, in money alone, some six millions:—

If all the details of expenditure connected with crime were presented to the public in a tabulated form, it would be found that the bill of crime, of which we hear so little, is almost as high as the bill of pauperism, of which we hear so much. The annual bill on account of crime is increasing about twice as fast as the numbers of the population who have to settle it.

The cause of the failure Mr. Morrison finds in the repeated return of prisoners to prison, owing to the inability of our present system to deter criminals from resuming their unlawful practices. He seems to think that the removal of prisons from the local supervision to which they were subject up to 1878 has been a mistake; for, whatever the shortcomings of the old system, up to that time England possessed a body of magistrates of unsurpassed experience on all questions relating to the treatment of crime. Now it is permanent officials who have the subject in hand. We give no opinion on this point further than to say that it seems to us a mistake to lose local aid of the best kind for local needs.

Mr. Morrison shows how greatly the concentrating of our population in large towns tends to the growth of crime and criminals, a point on which we are sure he is right; our own examination into the question led us to this conclusion fifteen years ago. But the vital point of his paper is where he treats of the connection between crime and insanity. He says:—

The ratio of insanity in local prisons has exactly doubled since the introduction of a centralised system of administration. Our present principles of prison discipline are debilitating a much larger number of the prison population than used to be the case. This debilitating process, where it does not actually deprive a man of his reason, often shakes his mental equilibrium, and quite unfits him for earning his daily bread.

Here comes in the Gospel of forgiveness, of hope, and of help. The utter breakdown of a criminal is almost certain unless he can be laid hold upon by a power which will calm him by forgiving and blotting out his evil past, which will strengthen him with a sense of Divine favour and the aid by which he may recover the favour of men. Perhaps we hardly make allowance enough for the shattered condition of being of a man who has sinned, broken the law, been convicted, and is an outcast from society. He is in a terrible plight. The finer his sensibilities, the greater his wreck. Nothing can completely restore him but grace. To get him back into a useful worldly position he needs kindness and confidence, but nothing can so renew him in hope and energy as the knowledge and belief of God's love to him. Of this love Mr. Morrison says nothing; he may intend to point out its infinite worth in a second paper.

In this connection it is of interest to note that the Home Secretary has resolved on the appointment of a Committee of Enquiry into the State of London Prisons. We sincerely hope that the outcome may be such improved methods of treatment and of classification as shall tend to the further depletion of the criminal ranks.

PORTSMOUTH.—Miss Robinson, late of the Soldiers' Institute, gave two addresses at the Welcome Mission, Portsmouth, on Saturday and Sunday evening; and on the latter occasion the hall was crowded, and a large overflow meeting held outside. It was a time of much blessing, and before the close of the meeting some found refuge in Jesus Christ.

/OMEN'S BRANCH OF THE P.S.A.

At the Women's Conference in Huddersfield, in nnection with the recent meeting of the York- ire Congregational Union, an admirable paper was d by Mrs. Theodore C. Taylor, of Batley. Of e Women's Branch of the P.S.A. movement (of ich Mrs. T. H. Lloyd, of Saxe-Coburg-street, icester, is one of the chief originators and ganisers), she said:—

Of all forms of women's work for women, I ow of none more hopeful than this. In the first ce, being essentially a soul-winning work, it has highest authority, the authority of Christ Him- f; in the second place, it generates the sisterly rit. It also furnishes scope for all kinds of rkers, not only speakers, singers, and musicians, door-keepers, attendance registrars, visitors, pers of all kinds. It brings with it the magic nulus that always comes to those forming part of reat army of workers.

t has had, is having, and will have still more rkedly, the stamp of God's own approval, in the pe of marvellous success in winning souls for ist.

The women's meetings, which are now becoming eral in the North of England, are really an out- ne of the men's meetings. In some places, par- larly in the Midlands, these meetings are held Sunday afternoons, as is the case with the men's etings throughout the country, and like them y be called "P.S.A.'s" or Pleasant Sunday rnoon Meetings. Soon after the Men's P.S.A. begun in Batley, the women expressed a strong re for a similar meeting for themselves. The orts taken home by the men must have been very ourable, for the wives and sisters kept sending sages to the women of our church, asking that ething of the kind might be done for them. ng that other denominations in the town were ready to begin a women's meeting on the Sun- afternoon, and that our church was then pied by the men, it was decided to begin a nen's meeting on Monday evening, hence the n P.M.E. or nt thus arose, two years and a-half ago, from essity, has proved a distinct advantage, for in y cases we find that husband and wife cannot bsent from home at the same time, also that e women can give their time to help on Monday ing than on Sunday afternoon. It is certainly h easier to procure women speakers for Monday ing than on Sunday afternoon, when many are ged in teaching or other good work.

eetings of the kind have already been begun Dogley-lane, near Huddersfield; Mouldgreen, dersfield; Great George-street, Liverpool; lford-road, Manchester; Horton-lane, Bradford; ley Hill, Leeds-road, Bradford; Hinton-street, ls; Barnsley; Heckmondwike; Birstall; Batley; Chapel, Wakefield; Leamington; Leicester; ing Town, London; Ashton-under-Lyne; y; Great Horton, Bradford; St. Mary's, Con- national Church, Morley; and there may be places I have not named. So the fire of en- asm is spreading, and the words spoken by our er in Galilee over 1800 years ago, are still g verified, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw nto Me."

ssibly some may say, "We have had churches where, and when they would they could go into . But some never went near. It must be en- inment that they seek now." Well, I always that Christ's way of teaching people by bles must have been very interesting, or they d not have flocked in such numbers to hear . But I am convinced that now, as then, it is Bread of Life that these people seek, and ng but the Bread of Life will satisfy them. pure and simple Gospel attracts them most, many of them are nearer the Kingdom of en than some who have been going to places ship all their lives.

be sure we try to make the services as bright sible. That Religion never was designed

To make our pleasures less, true in their case as in ours. I believe the movement is helping to show men and en everywhere that religion is a pleasant thing; to be very solemn, even dull and morose, ally on Sunday, is not a duty we owe to , but a libel on his name. I only know that ple programme, with a very warm welcome and a great deal of sisterliness, has been the means, under God, of bringing and keeping multitudes of women together and eventually leading them to Christ. Women who before were careless and indifferent, who never, or rarely ever, went to a place of worship, have thus through human love and sympathy, been reached by the Eternal Love.

Not long ago one of the women of our Batley meeting came up to me and told me that she and her husband (he being a member of the Men's P.S.A.) had given themselves to Christ, and decided to join our church. Then she added, with tears in her eyes, "When folks are so kind, Mrs. Taylor, you think there's something in it." Yet the most that she had received had been the friendly hand of welcome, and a little quiet interest in her and her husband's welfare. Now both she and her husband are amongst our most ardent workers in the cause.

Again, the other day another woman said to me, "Since I've been coming to the meetings it has seemed to me that I could hear again the prayers my father prayed for me years ago, and my mother's voice comes back to me, and I think I hear her saying over again the words she said to me the last night before she died."

Then she went on to tell me that on that night her mother called her to her, and told her that she was very ill, and she thought she was going to leave her. And the daughter, thinking to comfort her mother said to her, "Never heed, mother, you'll soon be walking the streets of the New Jerusalem." "Then," she said, "my mother gave me such a look, a look of such deep concern and said, 'But what art thou going to do, lass? art thou coming too?'" So, you see, in the singing of the hymns, and the words she had heard at the meetings, God had been speaking to her heart and conscience, wakening the remembrance of her father's prayers and her mother's last words.

I believe there are thousands of our toiling sisters without any ray of sunshine in their lives, only waiting to be gathered in to hear afresh of Jesus and his love. Many of them learned the old story in our Sunday-school years ago, but the cares of the world and the allurements of Satan choked the Word, and it became unfruitful. As I have sat and watched the women pouring into these meetings, in some instances filling every seat, and overflowing the church, I have felt that one of the most remarkable features about it all was

THE SIMPLICITY OF THE SERVICE.

No great speaker or singer is advertised; no performances; but a simple programme of prayer, song, and addresses lasting but one hour, and of course conducted entirely by women.

I should like to emphasise the fact that it is useless to expect the success of the kind desired unless these meetings are kept strictly religious; make them as bright as possible, but we must never lose sight of the object for which they were begun, namely, "the winning of souls for Christ." In order to get into closer touch with the women, I believe a visiting committee to be absolutely essential. In connection with our work at Batley, we have twenty visitors with a nurse visitor or nurse deaconess at the head.

I would strongly advise a women's prayer meeting in connection with every work of this kind. We in Batley attribute a great deal of the spiritual success we have had to the prayer meeting held every Sunday afternoon. From 80 to 100 women (members of our P.M.E.) attend, and a considerable number take part in it. Many have testified to the good received there.

I do not think we could do without our prayer meeting; it is to us what the drill hall is to the volunteers.

Perhaps some of you are thinking that work like this requires a special genius or adaptiveness, and for that reason you dare not take it up. I feel sure that it does not take special genius, but special consecration. Few have gifts, great gifts, but it is a comfort to think that everyone may be specially consecrated.

Someone to the heavy laden,
Must the Saviour's blessing bear;
Not alone by great and gifted
Must the standard be uplifted,
Feeble ones the work may share.
White the fields, the labourers few.
"Someone?" Shall it not be you?

MRS. J. CHRISTIE MACKENZIE, of the W.T.A.U., has been holding a Gospel Temperance Mission in the New Hall Mission, Wellington, Shropshire. A considerable number of pledges were taken; and a branch of the W.T.A.U. was formed.

TIBETAN PIONEER MISSION.

A member of the band writes: "We had a very happy time at Port Said with Mr. Eoll, the seamen's missionary, whom the Lord sent to the ship to ask us to share his hospitality. His is a very trying work and one could see that he is feeling it somewhat; after ten years' work he has only seen two definite cases of conversion, yet he has sown much seed, circulating the Scriptures in twenty-four different languages; and so I think the Lord did send us to give him a word of cheer. On board the ship there is such a difference in the manner of the passengers towards us, and there is a real spirit of earnest inquiry concerning the way of salvation; although we have not seen any cases of decision, yet we are assured that the Lord is really working."

Writing from the Ceylon and Indian General Mission House, at Colombo, where Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner welcomed the party warmly, Miss Taylor writes: "There is a great work going on here, and our coming has been made a blessing to them and to us. Our brethren are getting on very well with Tibetan; we have all had good health; baby MacKenzie is the delight of all and keeps so well. I am stronger again; pray for us that we may be quick to hear God's voice and quick to obey."

In another letter from Miss Taylor, dated Calcutta, April 2, she writes:—

"We arrived in Calcutta on Saturday afternoon. We are to have a meeting to-night, when I give an account of the journey (through Tibet). Had we not been delayed by the Customs this opportunity might not have been given us. Mr. Rylands Brown (of Darjeeling) had made arrangements with missionary friends here to take some of us in, and Mr. Horne, the husband of our kind friend in Norwood, met us, and was so kind. I spoke yesterday evening at an after-meeting at an American Church, and I find many friends here interested in our Mission."

ITALIAN MILITARY CHURCH.

The following is a translation of an interesting account of the twenty-first anniversary of the Lord's Supper, written by a sergeant of artillery:—"With only eight days' interval the Military Church reassembled lately to solemnise another festival, not less important than that of March 14, but of a character very different. If that was essentially military, this was altogether religious. If in that the King of Italy was mentioned as supreme Duke of the Army, in this is mentioned the King of the Heavenly Armies. This festival of Holy Thursday is doubly interesting to us, since it brings to our remembrance the time when we celebrated the first Lord's Supper on Holy Thursday in 1873, taking for the name of our church, 'The Italian Military Evangelical Church.'

"The soldiers who assisted at the festival of March 14 did not neglect during the following days to assemble to hear the instruction given by our pastor, Cav. Capellini. Standing in the Via delle Capelli one might have seen a continual stream of soldiers of all arms, one by one entering into their church, taking the place assigned them to renew their promises to God. Religion is not dead in the hearts of Italians, and above all in Italy there shall reign, not Roman Catholicism, but the true Gospel, when all this brave youth, the hope of the future, have embraced the truth.

"Rev. Henry J. Piggott presided at the ceremony, and gave a short and touching address. Hymns suitable to the occasion were sung, and Rev. Cav. Capellini brought the solemn service to a close by prayer and the benediction. Each soldier received a copy of the Bible, promising to protect and defend it till death. The Lord bless our Church and our pastor, Cav. Capellini."

WOMEN'S PROTESTANT UNION.—Never before in the history of their Union, initiated three years ago, and now numbering upwards of 5200, has such a crowded room-full met for prayer on its behalf, as at the recent monthly prayer-meeting. The Lord manifested Himself in power to the hearts of those who pleaded with Him. Many requests from members were sent in. A few helpful words on the Emmaus walk and talk of the risen Lord were given by Mrs. R. H. Hill, and the open discussion at the close on topics affecting the great questions at issue with the work of the Union was much appreciated as an opportunity of giving and gaining information.

LONDON YOUNG MEN.

The approaching jubilee celebration of the Y.M.C.A. will afford some idea of the extent and depth of the work of the Association for the good of young men throughout the world. The fiftieth annual meeting of the London Associations, held on Thursday evening last, afforded pleasing evidence of the growing influence of the organisation in the Metropolis. Those who drew up the programme aimed at providing a pleasant as well as a profitable evening, and we are glad to report that signal success crowned their efforts.

After a musical performance by a select choir, conducted by Mr. James A. Birch, the meeting opened in due form. Mr. George Williams occupied the chair, and was in high spirits, as well he might be, since God has graciously spared him to see the jubilee of the institution which he was privileged to found. On the platform were many influential friends, the Houses of Parliament being represented by Lords Chelmsford and Kinnaird, and Mr. Samuel Smith; while ministers of various denominations sat side by side with prominent mission workers and Association officials and friends. Prayer having been offered by Rev. Dr. Kinns, Mr. W. Hind Smith read Psalm lxvii., the sentiments of which fitted in admirably with the aspirations of the meeting.

A brief statement of work and finance relating to the three Associations—Exeter Hall, Aldersgate-street, and Cornhill—was made by MR. ROBERT BURN.

After some remarks on the definitely spiritual aim of the work, and an announcement of the forthcoming "Golden Book," which will set forth the rise and progress of the Association throughout the world, he spoke of the manifold character of the operations, as affecting the body and mind as well as the spirit of man. Notwithstanding the severe pressure in commercial circles, keenly felt by thousands of young men, the statistical returns are maintained in a similar proportion to those of last year in the respective Associations. The financial position of the Association is greatly improved. At the close of the last Association year, the outlook was dark; however, by means of the princely gifts of the president, and largely through his personal influence and labour, £8000 has been raised during the past few weeks, and the present aspect of Association finance is full of hopeful promise. There are heavy demands upon Association enterprise in connection with the forthcoming jubilee, and appeals are being received for assistance in India and elsewhere. It has been decided to raise a Jubilee Fund of £40,000, and towards this, £13,000 has already been secured. In conclusion, God was praised for bringing the Association through all its labours and trials during the past fifty years.

The Chairman, in a brief address, rejoiced that thousands of young men had found a jubilee by the work of the Association; they had exchanged the heavy burden and yoke of Satan for the lighter and more delightful yoke of the Divine Master. He recalled the names of some, now departed, who have helped:—Lord Shaftesbury, Lord Cairns, Messrs. R. C. L. Bevan, George Hitchcock, Samuel Morley, George Moore, J. D. Allcroft, and W. H. Smith. Referring to the twenty-two courses of lectures given in Exeter Hall, he said that men came from Scotland and Ireland and all parts of the country, to give to large audiences the results of their study and research, and great blessing attended the lectures. It would be a joy to him to see such a course revived. At the commencement of the Association some dubious ones said they "would give it twelve months!" Already God had given it fifty years, and he praised Him.

REV. J. E. C. WELLDON, M.A.,

head-master of Harrow School, followed with a forcible address on Christian Character. He said: Day by day I am sending out my boys to become young men—I hope Christian young men. I know what are the difficulties and temptations to which those young men are exposed. Half the evil in the world comes from young men; more than half the good comes from young men. I put my faith in young men; I believe they are the salt of society. It is no marvel to me that when our Lord Jesus Christ came upon a young man, He loved him. But what is it that young men want? What is it that they cannot do without? I say they want the fear of God and the love of Jesus Christ.

If you have not got the fear of God, you may be by nature the best person in the world, but you have not got anything to fall back upon; you have not a truth, a conviction, which will serve you in stead at all times and seasons of life, so that you may know that whatever appearances may be, at last the cause of good is the cause of God, and beyond all question will prevail. I say that you want also the love of the Lord Jesus Christ—you want a Redeemer to trust in, an Example to follow. Do not tell me to do my duty, unless you find me someone who has done his. When Nelson wanted to encourage his young trembling middies to scale the mast, he would say, "I will meet you, my boys, in a quarter of an hour, at the mast-head." That was the way to make them go! And I say that our Lord Jesus Christ, in dealing with his followers does not say "go," but "come." That makes all the difference, and he whose heart is touched with the love of Jesus Christ cannot be finally drawn away from the pursuit of good, because in pursuing good he is drawing nearer to his Divine Master. But I am to speak upon and I began by saying that, according to my experience, it is a difficult and arduous thing to be a Christian. To hear some people speak nowadays, you would think that no one had the slightest trouble in doing everything that is right. That is not my experience, and I venture to say that it is not yours. I suppose I have enjoyed as great educational advantages as anyone in this room—I thank God for that; but I know that there is not a day of my life when I do not feel the need of Divine help, if I am to keep from evil; and I see not why I should believe that what is true of me is not equally true of my brothers and sisters in the world.

It sometimes appears to me that the world mistakes a little the nature of the Christian character. It thinks that the Christian character is soft, and mild, rather easily "taken in." I do not believe in the Christian being "taken in." I think that the Christian should as well be wide awake as his neighbour. But this I do know, that in the character—the human character—of the Lord Jesus Christ there were two elements. There was no one whose language was so tender to poor, suffering, sinful humanity as his; nor was there ever anyone who used such scathing words as He used, such burning words, against iniquity and hypocrisy. If a Christian would be like Christ, he must be strong and even fierce in character. He must be intolerant of the things that are wrong; he must not suffer them, must not endure them, for an instant.

Just think what influence might be exercised by this great meeting if we were all resolved that in public and in private life as intolerant as Christ was, of things that are evil, and base, and vile. Talk about public men and public opinion! we are public opinion. It is in our power to say, as Christian men and women, what we deem to be right; and depend upon it if we stick to that which we deem to be right in Christ's name, there is no power on earth that can stand against us. Therefore, if I may offer a word of counsel to young people, it shall be, "do not stand the thing which is wrong among your companions or friends, but speak out against it." The mischief of the world is not that so many people like what is wicked, but that so few people have the courage to say, "we hate it." It will be a blessing to society, and a blessing to this metropolis, if there shall go out from this hall a strong, vast body of Christians resolved in the converse of their lives to think little about those petty sectional differences which part one Christian from another, and to think much—nay, to think always and altogether—of the eternal distinction which exists between the thing which is right and the thing which is wrong.

WE WILL BE INTOLERANT,

That is one side of the Christian character. I see it exemplified in the Lord Jesus Christ. It would be a mistake to suppose that this strength, this fierceness, is the only element in the Christian character. There is a second element, not less precious, and that is sympathy—sympathy with the weak, the suffering, the depressed, I would even say, the debased. And there is no feature of this Association which touches my heart so deeply as that help which it inspires to give, and in fact does give, to the tempted members of society, and especially to young men in their temptations. We cannot but feel for young men who are called to spend their days and their nights in a city such this. I claim from the State for the young men England—and for the young women also—t they shall not be exposed to unnecessary temp tion. It seems to me to be the primary duty o civilised and Christianised society to make virt I will not say certain, but at least to make it ea It is the business of this Association to look a those young men who, in the circumstances society, are known to be tempted, with them, to extend a helping hand, to put th in the way of finding kind Christian friends, s to save them from the power of the tempters, a also from the power of their own sinful incli tions.

TO SYMPATHISE

Young men talk to me of being their o masters. I remember the words of an English p —Byron—a Harrow man, of whose death this is the anniversary, who wrote:—

Lord of himself—that heritage of woe.

What is it to be lord of yourself if yourself i heritage of woe? Byron was a man who, with his gifts and genius, lacked the strength whic have spoken of as an element of the Christian c racter. There is no one of us who, in trusting exposing a youth for whom we care to the perils the world, will not thank God that there exists holy, this blessed Association, to save and help in the hour of need. "Who is weak," says Apostle, "and I am not weak"? Who is we man or woman, and I do not sympathise with or her? Again, "Who is offended (or made stumble) and I burn not?" Let us sympath and let us burn too. That is the spirit of Apostle Paul; it is also the spirit of the Lord Je Christ.

Mr. Montague Beauchamp, of the China Inl Mission, gave some account of his work in Flowery Land. He spoke of the needs of Chi and urged Christians to arise and send the Go to its millions. He described the joy of serv Christ in the midst of spiritual darkness, and as young men to consider God's call for service in foreign field. The last speaker was of Regent Square Presbyterian Church. He d with the Jubilee outlook. After congratulating Williams on the success which has attended undertaking which, fifty years ago, he launche God's name, he remarked that the Jubilee acknowledge the goodness of God in giving the to start the work upon broad and yet definite ba It is impossible, he said, to feel yourself in swim of the river of this great movement, and be conscious that its history brings enorm obligations. Referring to the future, the spe expressed the conviction that the battle will be, with intelligent unbelief or infidelity, but wit comparatively unintelligent materialism of thou and the contention will be with a tendency and fluence which makes the unseen unreal, and ma Christ an historic personage rather than a li Saviour for us to-day. A pride of life will en vour to crowd out the sense of the supernatu Opposed to this must be spiritual humility dependence upon Christ, and an upwardness of l which is faith in the living God. In conclus Mr. Connell urged that a forward movement n be made against the national sores of drunkenn gambling, immorality; in God's name it mus declared that they must cease.

Between the addresses solos were beautif rendered by Mrs. Mary Davies and Madame Riec mann, and selections were given by the choir.

HACKNEY Y.M.C.A.

The tenth anniversary of the Hackney Asso tion was celebrated on Thursday. In the a noon Rev. F. B. Meyer preached from Eph. ii. At the meeting held subsequently, Mr. J. E. Va presiding, the secretary, Mr. F. L. Porter, said during the ten years the Association had been in istence 993 young men had entered on the roll. the present time there are on the books 292 m bers, including the junior section, showing a crease in members, but a decrease in associa During the past two years three of the members become missionaries to the heathen, and twelv thirteen had gone to college to be trained for h or foreign missions. Mr. Faulkner reported on foreign mission work; Mr. Wood on the junior tion of the Association; Mr. Furmor on the P.S and Mr. Nash on the village mission.

PASTORS' COLLEGE CONFERENCE.

BY ONE OF THE MINISTERS.

The first day of the Conference, Monday, April 16, was occupied with prayer, interspersed with brief addresses. The evening meeting was held in the Tabernacle, Mr. Thomas Spurgeon presiding, and was characterised by much fervour of spirit. The address of Pastor Rugg (of Sevenoaks) deserves an especial mention, dealing, as it did, with the great need of the Church, the unction and fire of the Holy Ghost. Pastor Hailstone, of Reading, gave an address of reminiscence in respect of the late president. Among other things cited were words written by Mr. Spurgeon in an album, in the early days of his ministry: —"I wouldn't give up being a preacher to be an emperor; I would not change my pulpit for a throne. Oh that our people would pray for us!"

The President's address was given, as in former years, at the Tuesday morning meeting, after a prolonged season of prayer. Having commented on the remarkable prayers instanced in sacred history, Dr. Jas. Spurgeon announced as his topic the prayer of Moses. "I beseech Thee, show me thy glory.' This prayer was shown to be the complement and outgrowth of the varied marvels and experiences encompassing the history of this servant of the Lord The thought was fresh and will bear reflection After all, true prayer is the blossom and fruit of the godly soul: and all Divine blessing, and all the purport of Divine dealing, converge as to a focus, and culminate in the heart-cry, "Lord, show me thy glory." The connection between the glory of God and the manifested goodness of God was vividly brought out. The glory is attempered by mercy, and therefore it does not blast, but heals us. 'There would have been no glory for us if He had not been merciful to us." A good point was made of the position in which one must stand to be a witness of the Divine glory—namely, the cleft of the rock. It is those hid in the riven rock that see the glory.

The meeting on Wednesday morning was one of the best of the series. The prayers, many in number, were marked by much intensity and simplicity of spirit; and we infer that the near presence of God was felt by many hearts. A powerful paper was read by Professor McCaig, on "The Cross, the Inspiration for Christian Service." Highly ornate in language, the address was forceful in thought and impassioned in delivery. Four grounds were advanced in support of the position taken. First, the cross gives the best example of service; second, it furnishes the best motive for service; third, it supplies the best power for service; and lastly, it affords the best instrument for service. Speaking on the subject of motive, Mr. McCaig observed: "We think more of our service and its attendant circumstances than of the Master and the infinity of his love." On the subject of power Mr. McCaig enlarged on the uniqueness and reality of the power in question. The power of the cross was unique. It had never been foreshadowed by the schools or found imitators outside. No disciple of Socrates had ever anticipated Paul's watchword, or thus had formulated his creed:—"I determine to know nothing among men save Socrates and him poisoned." But it is on the cross that Christ is most regal.

Pastor Russell followed with an address on "Power from on High," which, though somewhat laboured at first, gathered in force and had considerable cumulative effect. "It is," he said, "not extraordinary sermons that are wanted, but ordinary sermons charged with extraordinary power." The main condition of this power as instanced was this, that "we must be willing to have the sentence of death written on ourselves." Complete self-surrender is the sine quâ non of the blessing in question. "We want to get possession of the power and use it; God wants the power to get possession of us and use us."

At the meeting of the friends and helpers of the College in the evening of the same day, Mr. R. C. Morgan presided, and made touching reference to the late founder of the institution as "an all-round man, whose platform, while wide enough for all the truth of God, was yet too narrow to admit of the dirt of criticism or the cant of fanaticism." "He is gone, but God abides, and He will see to it that there shall always be a supply of men understanded of the people." Mr. Morgan noticed as a good sign of the times the spirit of desire on the part of many for more of the manifested power of the Holy Ghost. He is outpoured when Jesus is glorified; and one of the tokens of his presence is that men honour the person of Christ. Mr. Morgan's address closed with expressions of sympathy with the work of the College, and with the hope that every one of the 730 men might be found doing "a real, true work for God."

Pastor Thomas Spurgeon, the newly-elected president of the Conference, followed with a brief address. As pastor of the Tabernacle Church he could safely say that she was too good a mother to forget her first-born child. Being himself a son of the College, he could truly speak of a warm filial interest in this great work of God. Borrowing from the German Emperor's message of condolence sent after the accident which occurred on one of the German warships a little time ago, Mr. Thomas Spurgeon exclaimed, "Some of our men have fallen, and a few have proved unfaithful; but for the rest, FULL STEAM AHEAD!"

Subsequently, as is customary at this gathering, the work done by college men was sampled by several of the brethren. Mr. Manton Smith, skilled alike in song and narrative, followed, the closing address being given by Dr. Churcher, medical missionary at Fez. The contribution to the college funds, at the supper, amounted to £1522.

Thursday morning's meeting was somewhat overweighted. Three papers were read. The first, by Pastor W. Ruthven, on "An Effective Ministry: how best may we attain to it?" This paper was characterised, not so much by originality of thought as by a tender spirit, deep pathos, and fertility of illustration. Pastor Ensoll followed, his subject being, "The Sunday-school and its relation to the Church." The leading feature was buoyancy of tone, combined with the desire and determination to look at both sides. Sunday-schools were not a failure; nevertheless, they were far, very far, from being the success which the opportunity given warranted us in expecting. While Sunday-schools afford cause for praise, they furnish abundant ground for heart-searching inquiry as to the cause of our spiritual leanness. The closing paper, on "Family Religion," which was read by Pastor J. Askew, formed a fitting sequel and close to the engagements of the morning. Personal and family religion concerns the foundations; and if these be undermined, of what avail the superstructure that may be reared?

In the evening the annual public meeting for the College was held in the Tabernacle, which was filled throughout by an eager and expectant throng. The new pastor presided, and was supported by his brother, Pastor Charles Spurgeon, of Greenwich, Dr. James Spurgeon, the tutors, and other leading brethren. The meeting was of an extremely enthusiastic description, and proceeded on the usual colloquial and popular lines.

The closing meeting of the Conference, held on Friday morning, April 20, is worthy of more than the brief sketch to which we must confine ourselves. Pastor Thomas Spurgeon preached in a manner worthy of his far-famed sire, rising to the occasion, and exhibiting much of his father's directness and force. The feeling is certainly widespread among the brethren of the Conference that God's hand has been graciously revealed in the settlement lately arrived at, and that the augury for the future is in every respect happy. Certainly, so far as the new president is concerned, nothing but words expressive of gratification have reached our ears. It is something to be able to say that if the Tabernacle church is suited, the brethren of the Conference certainly are. The general feeling assuredly is that "instead of the fathers have come up the children." We must confess that, neither in the preaching nor in the presiding did we expect to find in the son so much to remind us of him who has been taken; and this feeling is shared by many. One distinct result of the Conference meetings is to strengthen the hands of the Tabernacle pastor, and, we trust, to strengthen all that makes for true peace and unity. We hope that in other respects also God's goodness may appear, and his name be glorified. The president's discourse, which was based on Acts x. 33, dealt, first, with the record of a model congregation; second, of a model preacher; and, lastly, of a model sermon, and, as we have indicated, was Spurgeonic to the core. The communion and farewell followed. May God be with the brethren till they meet again, and until they finally assemble amid the greater congregation of the redeemed around the Person of the Master Himself.

AMERICAN ARCOT MISSION.

Madanapalle, picturesquely situated on the Ghauts to the south of Cuddapah, is the principal station in the Telugu field of the American Arcot Mission. Besides other useful agencies, the mission maintains here two very good boarding schools for the children of the native Christian community. Connected with these schools there is a flourishing Y.P.S.C.E. Recently, however, a new society has been started here in connection with the boys' boarding school, under the designation of "The Christian Young Men's Improvement Society." While primarily intended for the benefit of native Christian young men, the society admits educated Hindu youths as associate members. A weekly Bible class and monthly lectures on timely and interesting topics, with occasional social meetings, form the general programme of the society for the present. It is, however, the object of the promoters to place within the reach of the members good and healthy reading matter for the two-fold purpose of enlarging their minds and cultivating in them a taste for reading.

With a view to carry out the above object, it has been decided to form a small library and reading room. For the present, however, as the society is still in its infancy, it has been deemed advisable to confine its operations to obtaining and circulating among the members good Christian newspapers, periodicals, and magazines. An appeal is therefore sent forth for the purpose of enlisting in behalf of the society the sympathy of Christian friends interested in the evangelisation of India, and in the moral and intellectual advancement of her young men.

BIBLE CARRIAGE AND TENT WORK.

In a report of this work which Mr. J. A. Vicary, 63, Ashley-road, Bristol, has issued he says:

Up to the present ten Gospel Mission Halls have been erected on or near the ground previously occupied by the tents, where permanent, unsectarian soul-winning work, including Sunday schools, Bible class for adults, mothers' meeting, and Gospel services are carried on all the year round. Tent services were conducted nightly in several throughout the past summer with fruitful results. As several of our tents are too old and rotten for repair, we are, at present, reduced from eight to only four that it would be safe to use, and those require careful overhauling and renewal of ropes before they can be pitched again. A sum of £75 would secure three new circular tents of 30 feet diameter, which would prove most acceptable. Already several spiritually needy villages have been brought to our notice, which we hope to visit with tents this summer as means may be forthcoming for the purpose.

Our large Bible carriage did an excellent work last summer. The work of the smaller Bible carriage has proved most cheering and fruitful during the whole of the year, having put into circulation many hundreds of Bibles, thousands of Testaments, and tens of thousands of Gospel books and cards in the many villages and towns visited.

HOME OF REST FOR WORKERS.—Miss Rhoda May, who has for sixteen years laboured at the Home of Industry, is taking steps to open a small Home of Rest at Folkestone, specially for wearied workers. Help is still wanted towards furnishing the Home. Gifts may be addressed to Miss May, 29, Bethnal Green-road, London, E.

MOON'S SYSTEM OF EMBOSSED READING.—For thirty-seven years Christian people interested in the circulation of embossed books in Dr. Moon's type for the blind have set apart the first Sunday in May for special prayer on its behalf, as well as thanksgiving for the great blessing which has followed the preparation of the Bible and other good and useful books for the blind. In notifying the fact that May 6 is the day set apart this year, Dr. Moon says: "The work has annually increased; thousands of the blind in this and other countries have been taught to read, and a new and glorious day has dawned upon them. The monotony of their lives has been changed to cheerfulness and delight; and above all they have learned to know of Him whom to know aright is life eternal." The system has been applied to 476 languages and dialects. Including the books sent out during 1892, the total number of volumes issued from the commencement of the work is 200,189, and 51,084 stereotyped plates have been prepared. Further particulars may be had on application to Dr. William Moon, Hon. Treasurer, 104, Queen's-road, Brighton.

NOTES ON DAILY READINGS.

SUNDAY, APRIL 29.—ISAIAH LXI.

The application of these words is fixed by Luke iv. 18. But there is a sense in which they are true of the Lord's servants, as well as of the Lord Himself.

The Messiah's Mission (1-3).—It concerns those whom the world ignores or passes by in contempt—the poor, the broken-hearted, the captive, the bound, those who are crushed in life's mad rush. But Jesus takes them into his special care, makes them whole, and constitutes them a great army. His work is indeed the utilisation of waste. He could not do it, however, until He had been anointed with the Holy Ghost, and it is equally impossible for us to minister to men apart from that Divine anointing. We need like Stephen to be full of grace and power (Ac. vii. 8). (2) The "acceptable year" is that of Jubilee (Lev. xxv. 9-10). The Son makes us free (Jno. viii. 36). The Lord stopped in the middle of his text at Nazareth, because the present age is a parenthesis before the day of vengeance. Note the contrast between the year and the day. (3) "A garland for ashes" (R.V.). Let us glorify God, who planted us in his vineyard, by fruit-bearing.

Its Results (4-7).—This refers primarily to the restoration of the ruined cities of Palestine, which shall close the present era. But there is a sense in which spiritual renewal is followed by material prosperity. (5) Let others do what they may in the lower sphere, that you may be set free for the highest and best service. Do not busy yourself with details which others can attend to, but concentrate your life on ministry to God and man. (7) Double as much pleasure as once of pain.

The Moral Qualities of his Kingdom (8, 9).—That religion is abhorrent to God which is merely outward and not the expression of the inward spirit. You shall be recompensed at the resurrection of the just. God's covenant with you cannot be broken. Your spiritual offspring shall live beneath the blessing of God. Everlasting joy shall yet be wreathed about your brow. Sorrow is for the night; joy for the morning. Oh to be acknowledged as God's blessed ones.

The Saviour's Joy (10, 11).—He is the true Bridegroom of souls, and there is a sense in which we share in his joy, his garments, his jewels. Note the combination of imputed and imparted righteousness. The first put on as a garment; the second springing up in our life as plants in a garden. Would that God might have such produce from the soil of our hearts. Let us ask Him to cause it to spring forth.

MONDAY, APRIL 30.—ISAIAH LXII.

The Intercessor (1-5).—Throughout the ages He ever lives for this, pleading that his Church may be one, that the heathen may be given Him, and that Zion may be restored. Consider his unresting love and ministry. Light and fire are his choice for his people. (2) The new name is significant of a new condition of spiritual experience (Gen. xxxii. 28; Rev. ii. 17). (3) Such prayer is sure of its answer. In tenderest words the Saviour addresses his own, assuring them that they shall be no more forsaken and desolate. God loves, though all hate; God delights, though all abhor; God comforts the desolate, and rejoices with exceeding joy. We may endure to be exiled from the family of man if we are thus gathered by the tenderness of Jehovah.

Intercessors (6-9).—The great High Priest summons us to watch with Him. He would fain inspire us with his own unresting prayer. As He keeps not silence, so He bids us not to keep silence. He gives us rest from worry that we may not rest from intercession. The ounce of your prayer is needed to turn the scale weighted with his mighty supplications. Rise to your true position as the Lord's remembrancers (R.V.). And let no prayer conclude without asking God to remember his ancient people, as well as the Church, the Lamb's wife. (8) Here, as in the former paragraph, prayer breaks into praise, resting on the assured conviction that its pleadings shall be answered.

The Divine Answer to the Foregoing Intercession (10-12).—The herald bids the people pass from the gates of Babylon, and the cities of their captivity. He calls upon the nations through which their way lies to make ready the road of their return. The ensign beckons them from afar. God is the salvation of his people. For them He has rewards, and for his foes recompense. As his own gather, they are freed from the idolatry and impurity which had so long disgraced them. They stand forth as the holy people, and the sorrowful epithets of v. 4 are undone and replaced by names that for ever commemorate the Divine mercy and covenant. Perhaps these words are being fulfilled in the quiet re-gathering of the Jews to their land which is going on at the present day.

TUESDAY, MAY 1.—ISAIAH LXIII.

Judgment (1-6).—The judgment of Israel's foes proceeds beside their deliverance. As it was with Egypt, so it will be at last (Zech. xiv. 1-4; Rev. xix. 11-16). In Psa. cxxxvii. 7 Edom represents the enemies of Israel. Looking over the desert, the tableland of Southern Palestine, Isaiah beholds a warrior, whose garments are red with the blood of his foes, as a treader of the wine-press is splashed with the juice of the grape. It is no mistake to refer these words to the blood of our Lord's atonement. It was by his death on the cross that He gained the victory (see Heb. ii. 14) which will ensue on his second advent. But Christ is always standing up for his people, always coming from the country of their foes, always bringing salvation. Choose between the day of vengeance and the year of redemption. The love which now pleads shall one day be the direst element in the anguish of those that reject it.

Praise (7-10).—Let not God's praises die in forgetfulness and silence. Speak of his great goodness, and the multitude of his lovingkindnesses. Remember that there is no anguish which He does not share, no trouble from which He does not save. His angel finds his way into the darkest night, and carries us with unwearied care through the longest day. Let us beware not to grieve the tender Holy Spirit, by which we are sealed.

Memory (11-14).—He is probably "his people." See R.V. margin. Memory wakens under the touch of sorrow. God brought them up from the depths, and will bring you. God's Spirit was amid them, and will accompany you. God's arm went at the right hand of Moses (R.V.), and will do as much for you. As He divided the water for them, He will for you. He will keep you from stumbling; He will lead you down into the valley, as the cattle in the heat of the day, to cause you to rest; He will win glory to Himself out of your life, if you yield it all to Him.

Prayer (15-19).—The Hebrews spoke of the bowels as the seat of tender feelings. Where is thy former pity? (16) We think that God is changed, when, in fact, the change is in ourselves. (17) We become hard when we sin against his love. (18) Our enemies are his. They devastate his holy place, therefore we claim his interposition. We claim our own. It is well when we can date the charter of God's gifts in the past of his eternal choice, and the certainty of his unalterable covenant. Sin may rob of enjoyment, but cannot finally dispossess. We may seem to have become as aliens, but through pain and agony we shall yet be drawn back to Him.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 2.—ISAIAH LXIV.

The Wonders of the Past (1-5).—God has done terrible things for his people. The destruction of Pharaoh and Sennacherib are evidences of his strange work. Here the people with united voice appeal to the past, and ask Him to repeat the wonders that He wrought in the days of their forefathers. When God comes to deliver it is as easy for Him to rend the heavens as for us a garment, and mountains melt at his presence as snow in sunshine. (3) Though great mountains of difficulty wall you round, if God is with you they shall melt away. (4) God works whilst we wait. Though there be no sign of deliverance, behind the veil God is working, and his purposes are fast maturing. The Apostle quotes this (1 Cor. ii. 9) with a slight variation, but the sense is the same. We shall presently see what God has prepared for us, and it will far surpass our loftiest hopes. (5) It is very beautiful to think of God coming to meet his people with both hands full of blessing. And it is equally encouraging to remember that in those ways there is continuance. God does not vacillate. He is not one thing to-day and another to-morrow. Always the same is the motto on his escutcheon.

The Sins of the Present. (6-7).—It is a gracious sign of the work of the Holy Spirit when we begin to consider our sins and ingratitude. The leper, the foul garment, the fading leaf, the autumn wind that sweeps before it all the débris of the street: such are the images of the evil of our habits, the frailty of our resolutions, the nature of the righteousness of which we had been so proud. If our righteousnesses are so black, what must not our sins be? (7) Not to pray, not to stir ourselves up to prayer, not to take hold of God in the importunity of our prayer—all this is criminal indeed. God sometimes withholds his answer to lead us out to a boldness and intensity of supplication that we had not otherwise attained.

Pleadings for the Future (8-12).—"Let the past be forgiven and done away," the people seem to say. "Let us be as clay in thy hands, and mould us according to thy will. Make something of us for thy glory. We have a claim on Thee, because Thou hast chosen us for thy own, and Thou canst not put us away." Then they tell God the story of their disasters and devastations, as though to touch his gracious heart. There is no plea with God so potent, as the laying bare of your anguish and sorrow, your suffering and need. He may be silent, as Jesus was with the woman of Canaan, but he cannot ultimately refrain.

THURSDAY, MAY 3.—ISAIAH LXV.

God's Justification of his Dealings with Israel (1-7).—There were good reasons why God turned aside from the chosen people, and addressed Himself to the Gentiles. Paul quotes these words as indicating Isaiah's boldness, and to show that all were not Israel who were of Israel. Their sins are enumerated, as justifying God's apparent desertion. (2) He had invited them, but they had not come. (3) They made no attempt to hide their sin. Their gardens were scenes of debauchery and idolatry. Their altars were of brick instead of stone, and covered with obscene engraving. They frequented the graves for purposes of necromancy. They ate the forbidden swine's flesh. They held themselves to be superior to all beside because of their ritual and their ancient relationship to God. Therefore God would repay them so terribly that their hands would not be sufficient, and the loose folds of their garments would be called into requisition.

(11) See R.V. Fortune and Destiny were the objects of idolatrous worship, the one in the sun, the other in the moon. (12) In this verse the same words are used of their impending doom. I will destine you to the sword, and number you for the slaughter.

FRIDAY, MAY 4.—ISAIAH LXVI.

A New Economy (1-4).—In these words the prophet announces the passing away of the old dispensation. It had always been inadequate. How was it to be expected that God would find his rest in any house that man might build? Creation is his true temple, and the humble heart his rest. (3) When Jesus said, "It is finished," the Levitical dispensation was of no more account, and its sacrifices were matters of indifference to God. Indeed, if they were persisted in apart from faith and love, they were as abominable as the sacrifices of heathenism.

The Blessedness of the People of God (5-14).—These words are primarily true of the restored Jerusalem described in the previous chapter. Jehovah is heard in the temple-courts taking vengeance on his foes and espousing the cause of his people. (7) Before the fall of Jerusalem Pentecost had won numbers of converts to the Church, and before the great catastrophes which will usher in the close of this dispensation widespread revivals will multiply the children of the true Jerusalem. Those who have shared her sorrows will then be glad with her joy. When Jerusalem is filled with love and faith to her greatest Son men shall be gathered from all the world to find there the metropolis of their faith. All Israel is to be saved, and her ingathering will be to the world as life from the dead.

Judgment (15-18).—The prophet returns to make it clear that whatever blessings will accrue to the Jews, who are such not by circumcision only, but in heart, the judgments upon the rest, who have given themselves up to idolatrous rite, passing in idolatrous procession, and with a priest as leader, through garden and grove, or who have partaken of the flesh of animals forbidden in the Levitical law, will be sudden and terrible.

The Convocation of the Nations (19-24).—It is clearly stated that those who escape out of the great tribulations already alluded to will go forth to all the Gentile peoples, east and west, carrying the tidings of salvation. Then in response all nations will pour their confluent streams towards Jerusalem, God's holy mountain, and will promote the return of such Jews as might still linger amongst them. The fires of Tophet beneath the walls of the city should burn perpetually for those who had remained obstinate in their unbelief.

SATURDAY, MAY 5.—JEREMIAH I.

His Call (4-10).—Let those rejoice who are conscious of a definite purpose in their life. It is easier for such to seek to realise that conception which existed in the mind of God before their birth. We often shrink before the magnitude of the work required of us, and feel that we have no adequate resources. Let us, however, never forget that we are created to good works, and that we are called to nothing for which God has not equipped us, or is not prepared to endue us. When He says, "I have set thee, I am with thee to deliver thee, I will send thee," He always touches our lips, and puts his word into our mouth.

The General Scope of this Book (11-19).—First, its predictions were to be speedily fulfilled. This is taught by the parable of the almond tree, which flourishes early in the year, and is called "the watcher," because it seems to look for the coming spring. So God was watching the near approach of the events predicted here. Secondly, the origin of the evil predicted is indicated in the vision of the seething caldron, which appears to come from the north, significant of the Chaldean invasion from that quarter. Thirdly, we are taught that God can take a timid, yielding man as Jeremiah was, and so empower him with his Holy Spirit, that the weakness of his natural temperament may become strengthened so as to be a defenced city, an iron pillar, and brazen walls. Let us therefore glory in our infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon us. F. B. M.

SUNDAY, MAY 6.

JOSEPH'S LAST DAYS.—Gen. l. 14-26.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Prov. iv. 18.

JACOB was 130 years old when he went down to Egypt. After seventeen years, in which he beheld the prosperity of Joseph, he died at the age of 147 years (xlvii. 9, 27). His last recorded acts were the blessing of Ephraim and Manasseh (xlviii.), and his prophetic utterance concerning his sons (xlix.). He was buried, according to his request, in the cave of Machpelah, near Hebron (xlix. 28-33, and l. 12, 13). It is impossible to think without emotion of the close of such a life as Jacob's. How fitful at first was his faith, and how it was hindered by his worldly policy! How patiently God bore with him, in order to make his faith more simple and strong! How marvellously God's providence made what seemed to be against him to work for his highest good! How bright were his closing years, blessed with the fellowship of the son whom he had so long mourned as dead!

JOSEPH AGAIN COMFORTING HIS BRETHREN (14-21) It was just after the return from the funeral. Joseph was now about fifty-six years old. The cause of the brethren's fear was their sin committed nearly forty years before. Though they were assured of forgiveness seventeen years ago, the sin still troubles them. The longer they live, and the more they see of Joseph's character and position, the more guilty their sin appears. Such conscience-trouble follows all wrongdoing. "Better to be wronged than to wrong." Sin punishes most severely those who commit it. Time does not heal such wounds as these. Learn that you have nothing to fear so much as sin.

The occasion of their trouble was the death of Jacob. They did not yet understand Joseph. Measuring him by themselves, they concluded that he had only refrained from punishing them for Jacob's sake. Now that the restraining influence was removed, would he not be avenged? They did not know that to a godly man like Joseph, forgiveness is far sweeter than revenge. Or, they looked at their sin, which appeared so great. Full forgiveness for such sin as theirs seemed too good to be true. Have you not felt that concerning your sin against our Greater Joseph?

The grace with which Joseph met their trouble is a beautiful picture of the grace of the Lord Jesus. He "wept" (17), not tears of grief that they so misunderstood him, but of sympathy with their sorrow, and of joy over their true contrition. They were the expression of sincerest love—how could they longer doubt his forgiveness? As for their sin against him, God had over-ruled that. (20) He had mercifully frustrated their sinful purpose, and had brought good out of evil. Adore the grace that not only forgives our sin, but averts the evil consequences that might flow from it.

A twofold effect followed their forgiveness:—First, they offered themselves as Joseph's servants (18); and next, they were comforted with heart-fellowship with him (21). Let us learn of Him while we bear his yoke (Matt. xi. 29-30).

THE DEATH OF JOSEPH (22-26).—He lived for another fifty-four years after the death of Jacob, and died at the age of 110 (22). His faith in God, which has been the secret of his noble and useful life, appears also in his death. It enables him to contemplate death with perfect serenity of spirit (24). The prospect of it does not distress him. The death of the righteous is free from fear. Joseph has lived the life of the righteous. Do not expect your life to end well if you do not live well.

His faith also anticipated the fulfilment of God's promises (24). It was long years since Abraham, stretching by his sacrifice, received the prediction (xv. 13-16). The dark period will soon begin for his people, but the promise of God is sure, and darkness will be succeeded by light.

The mention of his bones (25) is the one act of faith of which Heb. xi. takes note. His body was embalmed, after the Egyptian custom, by means of spices and drugs, and was kept in a coffin, "probably made of wood, on the lid of which might be a representation of himself, whilst the whole of it would be decorated with various colours." During the period preceding the Exodus, the body was preserved by some of his descendants, a perpetual memory of what God had done, and a prophecy of what He would yet do. His faith was honoured. (Gen. xlii. 19; Josh. xxiv. 32).

Be imitators of Joseph. (1) In the simplicity of his faith in God; (2) in his fidelity to the duties of every position in which he was placed; (3) in his resistance of evil; (4) in his love and care for his father; and (5) in his forgiving spirit towards his brethren.

A TOUR THROUGH BABYLAND.

BY MISS SHARMAN, Southwark Orphanage.

Allow me to cordially invite you and your readers to turn your steps some fine spring day to Babyland. If you travel from Christ Church, Westminster Bridge-road, in a south-easterly direction for about seven minutes, you will come to the door of a large but unpretending building, over which two words are inscribed, which awaken some of the saddest and some of the sweetest thoughts connected with child life—"ORPHANS' HOME." At that door, I, or one of my helpers, will meet and conduct you through Babyland.

Please turn first into the nursery, where you will see "cradle-beds and downy heads," and hear "pattering feet and voices sweet." See our youngest pet, aged five months, left motherless when seven days old, and fatherless a few weeks later. This baby and her sister, a little three-year-old, were welcomed into the Home together.

Here is another mite, just able to toddle! Her father was accused of crime, and without waiting the decree of an earthly tribunal, appealed to a higher by taking his own life. The poor mother was so crushed, that she became totally incapacitated.

Look at these three lovely little sisters. Their father was accidentally killed, and their mother became hopelessly insane. Listen while they sing their hymn—

"I am a little child, but Jesus cares for me."

Yes, Jesus does care for the tiny forlorn lambs, and has gathered them into a very cosy fold. May they all know his voice and follow Him.

Let us next look at the babies of larger growth in the bright airy schoolrooms, where they are learning the mysteries of the three R's, supplemented by singing, recitation, needlework, and thorough Bible teaching. Then listen to their merry voices in the playrooms; see the elder girls at their work, being taught to "make the house, where God may dwell, beautiful, entire, and clean"; and lastly, watch them as they file in—an army of 220—and take their places at a well-spread table.

Now is not Babyland a land of plenty and a land of promise? Plenty of mouths to be filled, plenty of bodies to be clothed, plenty of minds to be instructed, plenty of claims on time and strength and tenderness, plenty of urgent need for faith in God, and of the co-operation of his people. Then in every young life we see a promise. Who can tell what power for good may be developed from even a few hundreds of rescued children, trained to love their Saviour, and serve their generation?

If any who visit Babyland are moved to help, whether by the two mites, or by the alabaster box, their gifts will be gratefully received, and will not fail to be acceptable to Him who has said "INASMUCH."—Christ Church Magazine.

TRUST.*

SUPPOSING a dear little robin
Were to come on your window sill,
And pick up the crumbs you had scattered
Until he had had his fill.

Would not your heart be tender
With love for the sweet wee thing?
And the more if at last it ventured
On your outstretched hand to cling?

So God our Father in heaven,
For his children a feast has spread,
And calls the sons that are hungry,
To feed on the "Living Bread."

Then, oh, let us boldly trust Him,
Let us venture very near,
And gather the crumbs of comfort
He giveth, our souls to cheer.

For all who confide in the Father,
To them his compassions move,
When his children fully trust Him,
They shall fully know his love.

SAILORS' ORPHANS.

THE fifth annual meeting of the Sailors' Orphan Society of Scotland, took place last week in the Christian Institute, Glasgow, the Hon. JAMES BELL, Lord Provost, presiding. He said he did not think it was possible to read the accounts of the marine disasters of the past winter without the heart going out to those who had lost their parents. No society like this could exist without the active sympathy of the population, and on that ground he hoped it would be liberally supported. There were two or three cities on whom the orphan children of seamen had special claims, and certainly Glasgow was one of them. The children cared for by the society would look back with gratitude, with pride and pleasure, on the years they had spent under its auspices.

Mr. R. H. HUNTER submitted the report:—"We mentioned in our last report that we expected to require £3000 for the general work, and £300 to furnish the new Home, and with gratitude we have to record that we have received £3349 18s. 10½d., and after meeting every expense we know of, we close the year with a balance of £23 12s. 8d. in hand. We have also been able to furnish and open the new Home at Dalmuir, which has proved a very great assistance to us in the conduct of the work. We have admitted eighty-six new children, which, added to the 303 we had at the beginning of the year, makes a total of 389 who have been provided for during that period; but while only 389 have been taken on to our roll, there are 738 children in the families represented, all of whom have derived some benefit from our help. The children have been kept in good health, and we have only to record one death among them." Mr. Hunter stated that the change in the children was marvellous. The new Home would prove a still greater boon, although it could accommodate but a small portion of the children. The directors aimed at an endowment of £100,000 to carry on the work, which was growing as it became known. There was a development which had not been taken up, namely, caring for the orphan children of fishermen. Many of these men perished, and their families were left destitute. But the trustees had not yet taken up their case, as the undertaking was too great. But if the endowment was largely increased they would be justified in taking up such cases. This would place a thousand more children under their care. The work was carried on without a paid agency, the only paid officials being the superintendents of the Homes in Glasgow and Dalmuir.

Mr. W. F. G. Anderson, Professor Drummond, and others spoke.

THE COBOURG HOME for Orphan and Motherless Girls, 8, St. Oswald's-road, West Brompton, held its anniversary meeting on Wednesday week, at Park Chapel Church-room, Rev. S. L. Dixon presiding. A report of the past years work of the Home was read by Miss C. Shinn, which was very satisfactory and showed how diligently her sister, Miss M. Shinn, superintended this important work. Some girls received prizes for faithful service. Rev. C. B. Foy addressed the meeting, and the chairman in the course of his closing remarks said he was much astonished at the care and economy practised in the Institution.

THE LATE W. H. HOWLAND,

OF TORONTO, CANADA.

It was well said by one of the speakers at a memorial service held after Mr. Howland's death that "there never was a death in this city that had come as a personal loss to so many people." But not in Toronto alone did he leave his mark, nor was the sorrow for his loss confined to the Dominion of Canada; in the United States he was well known and loved by all with whom he came in contact.

Born on June 11, 1841, and falling asleep in Jesus on December 12, 1893, the subject of this notice crowded into a few years an amount of devoted Christian work and successful philanthropic labour seldom accomplished even in the longest lifetime. From the time of his conversion in the year 1876, he never tired in the service of his Lord. His restless energy, his clear business head, his great executive ability, and the large-hearted sympathy of his loving nature, his irresistible charm of manner, handsome features, and commanding presence were all laid at the feet of the Saviour he loved so well. He realised more than most that he was "not his own, but was bought with a price."

He was the eldest son of Sir William Howland, well known in the Dominion in political circles, and who was, with Sir John A. Macdonald, one of the fathers of confederation, being subsequently appointed the First Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. When only sixteen he went into the office of his father, of whose large business he was in charge until called upon to take the management of several companies of which he was chairman, and in 1885 to take the position of Mayor of the City of Toronto by a vote of the citizens, which gave him the largest majority ever received by any candidate for that position.

Enjoying largely the confidence of his fellows, Mr. Howland was called upon to occupy many public positions and to preside in various capacities. Whilst a very young man he was elected President of the Board of Trade. In 1876 he was appointed Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Toronto General Hospital, whose affairs were then in an unsatisfactory condition. The institution immediately felt the benefit of his wise and energetic rule, and he was soon able to leave it in flourishing circumstances, and devote himself to other spheres of labour. He was also Chairman of the Evangelical Alliance, as well as of the Dominion Temperance Alliance.

Mr. Howland's election as Mayor of Toronto, after a bitter contest, was a great victory for those who, desiring pure civic government, selected him as their candidate. This event brought his name, as well as that of this city, prominently before the public; and especially was this the case as regards the United States, for in his public capacity he dared to declare that he would and did rule the city on Christian principles, and, in token of this determination, put up in the mayor's office a large scroll inscribed with the text, "Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain."

As a worker in the cause of temperance he was always in the van; the recognised leader for the past ten years in the prohibition movement. The plébiscite vote taken in the Province of Ontario a few days after his death, and which resulted in an overwhelming majority for prohibition, was largely due to the zealous action and wise counsel of Mr. Howland.

It would be impossible to enlarge upon, or even enumerate, the many works of Christian usefulness which he inaugurated or was connected with. But some of them may be mentioned. His sympathies went out largely to the neglected children. He thought it a crime to send a child to gaol, and so he went into the work of rescuing them with his whole heart. One result of this was the Victoria Industrial School, which he started, and which, by his faith and enthusiasm, sprang into existence as if by magic. He organised and put on a solid footing the Prisoners' Aid Association, and personally superintended, until his health began to fail, the Sunday services at the Central Prison and Women's Reformatory in this city. He was, in fact, connected more or less with all the charities and undenominational Christian work in the city. But his work was by no means confined to this city. He was vice-president of the International Christian Workers' Association, and was one of their most beloved associates and welcome speakers at their conventions. It may here be said that for inspiration for work for Christ, and for filling of the Holy Spirit, the meetings of that association, composed of Christian workers from the United States and Canada, are not equalled by any held elsewhere in the world to-day. This association brought him into intimate fellowship with some of the choicest spirits in the United States, where he was almost as much beloved as in Canada.

But that which was dearest to his heart was his Sunday Bible-class and other spiritual work in connection with another of his children, the Toronto Mission Union. The writer well remembers an incident at one of the prayer meetings at this mission shortly after his election to the mayoralty. There was the usual social tea after the meeting, and it so happened that Mr. Howland sat at one end of the table, and an old saint, a coloured washerwoman, at the other. One was the founder of the mission and the chief magistrate of a great city, whilst the other was lowly and unknown, but both of them equally precious to their Lord and Master, "All one in Christ Jesus." They are now both peacefully and happily waiting to meet the beloved ones who remain when the trump shall sound, "and so ever to be with the Lord."

To describe the scenes at the immense funeral concourse which met to do honour to his memory would be but to tell of the love and respect in which he was held by all sorts and conditions of men. The poor—men, women, and children—came in crowds to gaze and weep over that strong, loving, tender face that would never smile on them again.

WILLIAM HOLMES HOWLAND.

We have not space to tell of his beautiful home-life as a husband, father, and friend. If his public life was helpful and Christlike, even more so was it in the privacy of his own home. We close an imperfect record of a noble life with some extracts from a sermon preached in one of the largest churches in the city on the Sunday following his death:—

"W. H. Howland was probably the best known and best loved citizen of Toronto. Bootblacks, newsboys, friendless widows, and the helpless poor, with few exceptions, knew him better than any other citizen, and rejoiced to catch a smile from his manly face. As a public man he was always a favourite speaker on the almost numberless occasions in which he was called upon to take a part. No matter what cause he represented, he always made himself thoroughly understood, and without any of the tricks of the orator he moved and swayed his hearers with the fervour of a soul glowing with the white heat of intense conviction. While his heart was as sympathetic and tender as a woman's, he was at the same time brave and fearless as a lion in his championship of what he believed to be the right. He never allowed the sham refinements of the age to obliterate in his judgment the broad distinction between right and wrong. His enthusiastic love of good, his persistent scorn of evil gave substantial grandeur to his character.

"As a Christian Mr. Howland was practical, intelligent, and aggressive in everything he undertook to do for Christ and his fellow-men. The sublime record he has left behind him will long be a glorious inspiration to his fellow Christian workers, beckoning them onward to a life of self-denial for the good of others. If Mr. Howland was anything, he was the friend of the poor. Upon this Christ-like feature of his character the verdict of his fellow-citizens is absolutely unanimous. The story of how often he has been God's angel of mercy to the widow and the orphan, the poor man, and him who had neither helper nor friend, is one which can never be told; but his record is on high and it cannot be forgotten. If it is true that 'man's ability to die unto himself is the measure of his likeness to God,' if, in other words, we become like God according to the measure that we pour out all there is of us into others, then probably no man in this city has ever stood higher according to that standard than W. H. Howland. Like his Divine Master, he emptied himself that he might be eyes to the blind and feet to the lame, that he might drive the wolf of want from the poor man's door, and make the widow's heart sing for joy."

THE EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

THE BRIGHTON BRANCH.

At the Athenæum Hall, Brighton, on April 16, was held the first anniversary of the Brighton branch of the Evangelistic Mission. It was started about eighteen months ago, since which time the work has steadily gone forward under the charge of Mr. Edward Hurditch, brother of the director of the Mission. Having told the meeting the story of his own conversion, he sketched graphically the history of the Brighton branch since its inauguration one Sunday afternoon, when some sixteen persons strayed in to the new place to hear the Gospel preached. Now there are good congregations twice each Sunday and once on a week day evening, and the workers are able to point to many and say, "This one or that one was born here."

The use of this hall is, however, a somewhat dear privilege from a financial point of view. The treasurer's report showed the sum of £120 a year having to be paid for rental, so it was not unnatural that the burden of some of the speeches should be a desire for a new hall for the work, or the proprietorship of this one. The expense of carrying on this branch hitherto has been about £340, of which but £102 has been raised locally, and though Mr. Russell Hurditch pointed out that this is not in excess of the usual outlay in the opening of a new branch, it will be easily seen that it means a heavy pull on finance at headquarters.

Mr. Willett was chairman at the meeting at the Athenæum, and he was alluded to as a link in connection with the old happy days at Stafford Rooms when he was in hearty co-operation with the work there. To use his own words. "In those days I was in trial and difficulty, so kept quiet." Most interesting was Mr. John McCall's account of his explorations among the old temple foundations as left by Solomon, and valuable the exhortation based thereon, to build only on the Rock, Christ Jesus. Pastor Fuller Gooch's address evidenced a firm heart hold of the truths of the good old Book. Mr. Burt Sharpe had travelled from Hereford to give an interesting account of the tent work conducted in Brighton for four months last summer, in connection with this mission, and which had been attended by much blessing.

TEA TO BALLET GIRLS.—Last week Mr. William Forbes gave a tea in St. Mary's Room, Hammersmith, to the ladies of the ballet, chorus ladies, and dressers employed at Olympia. About ninety were present, of all ages, from quite little girls to elderly women, who were usually dressers. After tea, hymns were sung and solos were given by Mrs. and Miss Forbes. Short addresses were given by Mr. James Matheson, Mrs. Maynard, Miss Barlow, and Mr. W. T. Stead.

BAPTIST YOUNG MEN AND MISSIONS.—The annual meeting of the Young Men's Missionary Association was held on Friday at the Mission House, Furnival-street. The chairman, Mr. H. Bompas, Q.C., Recorder of Plymouth, asked why with all the great wealth in England, there was no more money devoted to the work of missions, and for the spiritual welfare of men generally. He next referred to the thoughtless neglect or want of consideration of many Christian working-men as to the duty of giving. Mr. Markham, the treasurer, read the financial statement. The secretary, Mr. Holiday, gave a review of what had been done by the Association during the past year. Rev. C. Jukes, the L.M.S., gave an account of work in Madagascar. Mr. H. Marshall Lang, of the C.M.S., and Rev. D. Cameron, from the Congo, also addressed the meeting.

MISS DEBORAH ALCOCK,

AUTHOR OF "THE SPANISH BROTHERS," "WALKING WITH GOD," ETC.

IN introducing a sketch of this gifted wr ter to the readers of The Christian, we are glad of the opportunity of recalling her saintly father, Archdeacon Alcock, one of the most devoted, earnest, and successful ministers that ever laboured in the service of the Irish Episcopal Church. Miss Alcock has herself perpetuated his memory in a biography bearing the title, "Walking with God"*—a title that it would have been presumption to adopt in the case of any man whose whole life and ministry did not very manifestly vindicate the phrase.

Converted in early life while a student of Trinity College, Dublin, through a devoted young evangelist, Henry Peters, of whom it was said that "he glided like an angel through the halls of the college, watching for any poor sinner he might lay his hands on and lead to Christ," he laboured first as a curate at Kilkenny and at Tralee, and then near Cork; afterwards in the Isle of Man, at Dublin, and at Waterford, and from the very first was distinguished not only as a most earnest and popular preacher, but as one who spoke in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. "There was that," said one with whom he was associated early in his ministry, "in his appearance, voice, and manner, accompanied with such remarkable power in giving expression to his love for his Saviour and for the souls committed to his trust, as well as such entire simplicity as made his meaning intelligible to the humblest minds, which could not fail to win their hearts."

Between 1852 and 1866 Mr. Alcock was minister or chaplain of Bethesda, Dublin, in succession to the well-known W. H. Krause; and as this was the most important and conspicuous of the charges he held, so it abounded most in influential and fruitful labour. When needing rest he accepted the archdeaconry of Waterford, and rectory of St. Patrick's Union in that city. Here, so far as strength allowed, he continued the same kind of labours as in his more vigorous days. His years were extended beyond the common limit, and during a long time of poor health on to the close of his life, his conversation was visibly in heaven, and his "fellowship truly with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ."

Of two daughters, the eldest died in infancy, and Deborah was virtually his only child. Accepting from her earliest years the Gospel which had brought life and peace to him, entering affectionately and admiringly into all his ministerial work, and privileged to be his companion and spiritual disciple during her whole life, and to watch over him with the most loving and tender care during his declining years, her life was moulded by him, and her respect and admiration for him were intense. This is evinced in every page of "Walking with God," and those who know her personally are well aware how reverently she continues to cherish his memory, not only for his personal excellence and fatherly love, but because she feels that whatever is good in her she owes to him.

(From a Photograph by Mr. J. Moffat, 125, Princes-street, Edinburgh.)

Miss Alcock's life has been spent not unequally in two branches of service—conducting Bible classes and writing books illustrative of Church history. She seems to have been born with a double passion—for teaching and for writing. At fourteen she had a Sunday-school class, and at seventeen she wrote her first published story, which bore upon the siege of Leyden. At sixteen, getting a class of girls of her own age, she became an enthusiastic teacher, finding herself more in her element with them than with very little children. Securing their love and confidence, she kindled their interest in what she taught them. Classes for girls have been her specialty, including in that term women of all ranks and almost all ages.

During her long experience she has always had a preference for the real Bible class, that is, for the method of brisk question and answer, in opposition to that of mere lecturing. In this, as it seems to us, she has shown much wisdom, for though an address may be easier for both teacher and scholar, it is far inferior in its power to excite attention, test results, correct misapprehensions, and stimulate study. But sometimes the class would increase to such a size that perforce the method of question and answer had to yield to that of continuous address. Something of her father's eloquence was developed when the stream was allowed to flow without interruption; and it was acknowledged that as a lecturer she was equal to the best of University Extension lecturers.

The favourite subjects for her classes were the Bible and Church History. The classes for Church History were begun in Dublin when she was very young, continued in Waterford, and resumed more recently in Dublin and other places. Of her Bible work a valuable sample has recently been published in Clark's series of Bible Primers — "The Seven Golden Candlesticks; or, Notes on the Epistles to the Seven Churches of Asia." In her classes on Church History she has not counted it enough to give interesting sketches of interesting men and times: she has always taken opportunities of holding up Christ, and speaking to the hearts and consciences of her pupils.

The form of her books has been determined by her remarkable gift of living in the past, so that it has been a kind of instinctive employment to picture some of the striking scenes of Church history. Of her books, the "Spanish Brothers" is perhaps best known; it has been translated into many languages, and it has been the means of remarkable blessing. Cases might be mentioned of young persons looking up from it with a singular light upon their faces on the very verge of the dark valley. The German publisher wrote that in his country showers of blessing had flowed from it. Other books, familiar probably to many of our readers, are "The Czar," "Under the Southern Cross," "The Dark Year of Dundee," and "No Cross, no Crown." As most important and valuable we must lay emphasis on one of the latest, "Crushed, yet Conquering." The scene is laid in Bohemia, and it revolves round the martyrdom of John Huss. The story of Huss is admirably told. Bohemian traditions, manners, and mode of life reappear before us without any appearance of effort, but so as to show how thoroughly she has studied herself, so to speak, into the very time. All justice is done to the noble character and bearing of Huss, coming out so majestically as it did amid all the baseness and brutality of his treatment. And still more interesting perhaps is the delineation of that subtle but powerful influence which told so remarkably on the Bohemian people, and drew so many, both high and low, to follow his steps. And the story is not told as if it concerned only a political or theological quarrel. The root of the whole movement which Huss began is found in the Divine grace which so illuminated the Word of God and so glorified the person and work of Jesus Christ that he was able to dare all and suffer all for his sake. Something of the same influence seems to emanate from the book; the sound that seems to linger in our ears is not the angry noise of controversy, but the voice of rejoicing and of salvation. We are glad to learn that it has been translated into the Czech language, under the auspices of the Comenius Society of Prague, for no doubt it will be read with interest by thousands of Huss's countrymen.

Adopting, like Mrs. Charles, the form of the story to picture forth the times of old, Miss Alcock's meridian is very remote indeed from that of the writers of tales, too numerous even in religious journals, which do not rise above the level of common love stories. She has the true dramatic faculty for reproducing remote times and scenes; she has culture and taste and wide information to make her pictures full, precise, and rich in colouring; but, above all, she has that profound conviction of the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus that ever seeks to commend Him to her readers.

JEWISH REFUGEES IN PALESTINE.

Mrs. Finn, of the Society for the Relief of Persecuted Jews, 41, Parliament-street, S.W., writes:—

"Mr. R. Scott Moncrieff, our special commissioner, writes from Jerusalem, on April 2, that not a week passes without arrivals of Jewish refugees by the steamers at Jaffa. Destitute Jews are not now allowed to remain in Egypt. They are sent away from Alexandria. Many go to Marseilles, Genoa, and Greece, but are sent back to Alexandria. Not allowed to land there, they come on to Jaffa. At Jaffa there is much sickness. The Mildmay hospital is full. The medical relief we have given has been a very great boon, especially during the last severe fever epidemic. There are great numbers of women and children destitute.

"At Jerusalem there is great distress. A resident who accompanied our visitor to the Jewish quarter writes: 'The poverty and misery are beyond description. The people are living in small holes underground, where no light or air ever gets near them—most of them ill, on the ground, wrapped in rags. It was a very sad sight indeed, and most touching to see old women crying for joy when a few pence were given them.'

"We ask for help. Mr. Scott Moncrieff is now on the spot to further the work. We could employ many in building cottages on our land; and many more could be employed in carpentry, blacksmiths' work, soup-making, stone-dressing, and cultivation. One large cistern for water will soon be ready. We could build many more, and thus give water to those who have none, even to drink. And we only need money to form farm settlements in many parts of the country."

BOYCE MEMORIAL HOME, BORDIGHERA.—Of this institution for orphans and destitute children, under the direction of the Waldensian Committee, Signor A. B. Tron writes: "We have at present in the Home twenty-seven children, and are constantly obliged to refuse applicants, not from lack of room (the Home can accommodate fifty children), but from lack of funds. We have dismissed one of the mistresses, and lessened the expenses in every possible way; and yet how difficult it is still to pay the monthly bills. The object of the Home is to shelter, clothe, and feed poor Italian children, to educate them and lead them to Christ." Communications regarding the work may be addressed to Lieut.-Col. M. Frobisher, 118, Pall Mall, S.W.

STRATFORD CONFERENCE HALL.

The spacious Conference Hall in West Ham Lane, Stratford, E., is much besides a Y.M.C.A. centre, but the work among young men stands out among all the efforts as of peculiar interest and importance. Evangelisation is the warp and woof of the work; it is the aim of the preachers, the raison d'être of the Mizpah Bands, the endeavour of the lodging-house visitors. The mothers' meetings are a great feature, many a poor woman owing her present comfort and future hope to the instruction gained and the sympathy experienced in the weekly meetings. About eighty young women meet week by week in the Bible-class, not a few of whom have been led to a knowledge of Christ during their membership.

The young men's Sunday afternoon Bible-class is undoubtedly one of the most remarkable parts of the work. The members range in age from sixteen to thirty, and the average attendance last year was 132. At the monthly testimony meetings one and another have declared that they found Christ in the class. The young men carry on a vigorous campaign of open-air preaching, and some of their number have regularly conducted missions, with blessed results to the people, as well as to their own edification.

The report includes several other items, showing that the Association is alive, and that the general work of the Conference Hall is in entire harmony with the spiritual movement which brought it into existence nine years ago. The annual meeting on Monday evening was well attended, several prominent Christian workers occupying seats on the platform. After prayer, invoking blessing on the work, by Rev. James Knaggs, Congregational minister, a statement was made by Mr. C. Boardman, who may well be described as the life and soul of the work. The Mizpah Male Choir and Evangelistic Choir were shown to have laboured during the year with much devotion and cheering success. Mr. E. Fox Butlin, general secretary, in whose heart every department has a place, told the story of the Y.M.C.A., rehearsing the difficulties and joys of his labour. Mrs. Butlin spoke of the encouraging character of the work among women.

Addresses were delivered by Mr. R. C. Morgan, who presided; Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, who spoke of the great activity of God's Spirit wherever Christ is preached; and Rev. W. H. Langhorne, of Walthamstow, who derived timely lessons from the words of an early Christian writer, who said: Work for Christ,—because the day is short, the work is heavy, the labourers are remiss, the reward is great, and the Master presses. Mr. Boardman, in a financial statement, intimated that there is still a debt of £433 on the building. Towards this and the current expenses a number of friends made promises, and the meeting closed with prayer, led by Rev. A. Jeffrey, of the Presbyterian church.

GILFORD HALL, SANDYMOUNT, DUBLIN.

For seventeen years this mission has been steadily plodding on with its various agencies. At its recent annual meeting last Thursday, Mr. J. R. Fowler in the chair, several true and staunch friends expressed their thankfulness for the report presented to them. The meetings have been well attended, the simple Gospel proclaimed, and visitation carried on by Mrs. Kershaw and her co-helpers. The prayers and sympathies of God's children are still asked, that a Divine power may rest upon them during the coming year, and that with all boldness the speakers may not shun to declare the whole counsel of God.

MR. LANE AT CAMBERWELL GATE.

It has been a great privilege to be present during the last ten days at the services which have been conducted by Mr. W. R. Lane, in Arthur-street Chapel, Camberwell Gate, S.E. The earnest pastor of the church, Rev. R. Allsworth-Elvey, with a band of well-nigh one hundred devoted helpers, had, for a week or more, met every morning at seven o'clock for prayer, so that when Mr. Lane began the work they were all full of faith and expectancy, and God has not disappointed them.

The first meeting at which I was present, on Sunday week, was very remarkable. The power of the simple Word on the hearts and consciences of the people was very marked, and at the close of the address hundreds were visibly stirred, and very many deeply in earnest about their soul's eternal welfare. All through the week the interest deepened, and the influence of Mr. Lane's powerful testimony for God told its tale in leading numbers to decision there and then for Christ.

Most especially, however, should thanks be rendered to God for last Lord's Day evening. This was a never-to-be-forgotten time. I think I never witnessed anything more blessed than the power of God's Holy Word at that service. Men and women were faithfully told of the consequences of sin. In no measured language the preacher dwelt upon the doom of the sinner who chooses sin and rejects Christ. The effect was truly wonderful. Strong men and women trembled, and sought for mercy, and thank God many found it, and boldly confessed Christ before the large audience. The vestry was crowded with people of all classes and ages, and scores who entered deeply anxious were enabled to trust in the precious blood of Christ, and to know their sins forgiven. It is a fact worthy of notice, that not a few who appeared to be completely broken down, and made to think of eternity, were agnostics and thorough sceptics, or individuals who had come under peculiar doctrinal influences.

The pastor of the church and his united band of helpers will value much the earnest prayers of the Lord's people, that his gracious presence may still be with them, in much blessing, even though our brother Lane's special labours have terminated.

ZAMBESI INDUSTRIAL MISSION.

Six missionaries sailed from Southampton on Saturday by the Union Line Steamer Pretoria. The party consisted of Mr. Peter Barclay, watchmaker, who is going out at his own charges; Mr. Richard Broadbridge, marine engineer; Mr. A. Dickie, Mr. F. J. Mackett, and Mr. Musselwhite, carpenters; and Mr. W. C. Lindsay, gardener. This is the second party that has gone out this season; a third band of six young men have had passages taken for them by the Union Steamship Moor, which leaves Southampton on April 28th. Later parties will follow in May and June. Mr. F. W. Crossley, J.P., of Manchester, has kindly provided a steamer for the use of the mission, and Mr. John Cory, J.P., D.L., is providing two steel barges for both passenger and goods traffic on the river Zambesi.

KENSAL TOWN MEDICAL MISSION.—The fourth annual report says: "This mission has continued to be a channel of blessing to the bodies and souls of the people in the district. The attendances have considerably increased, which shows that the people value the kindness and skill of the doctor, and the sympathy given them at the mission in the time of sickness. The maternity cases attended have been 133, and in each case we can praise God for restored health and strength. In this branch of the work we have the opportunity of training Christian workers, who are anxious to gain this knowledge for home or foreign work. Three ladies who have been here have successfully passed the London Obstetrical Society's examination; and two of them are now in China. A new feature in connection with the work is the opening of a small Seaside Home of Rest at Herne Bay. The Home is open to any women or girls needing change. The charge is 10s. weekly. Between sixty and seventy availed themselves of this opportunity for a change to the seaside. Mr. F. M. Wornis is the hon. medical officer. Communications regarding the work may be addressed to the hon. secretary, Miss E. C. Thompson, The Cottage Gospel Mission, Kensal-road, W.

A NEW POINT for the temperance advocate. Every workman who gives up drinking and spends his money in clothes and furniture, affords employment for a month every year to another worker.—City Press.

Thanksgiving and Revival.

"I remember the days of old, I meditate on all thy works; I muse on the work of thy hands."—Psalm cxliii. 5.

Monday, April 15, 1861, being the red letter day of my history, when the entrance of God's Word brought me light, I thought it my duty and privilege to join the host of God in praise and thanksgiving, but when just prepared to start was hindered, so I had to join the goodly company who could only be with you in spirit.

You have been helped to set going many good things, but never I think have you given such general joy and awakened so deep an interest as in this God-given call to remember the days of old, when "He opened the rock and the waters gushed out and ran in dry places like a river"; when "He brought forth his people with joy and his chosen with gladness" (Psalm cv.).

The retrospect seems to have infused new life and hope, and created fresh expectations in the hearts of many, and I with others am anxiously waiting to hear of another step taken in the same direction, for this gathering of the saints is surely to continue more than one brief day. It will disappoint many if its strength only outlasts the day of its birth, but we look that God has provided something better. Might it not be well to devote a second day at least to speak of the things that were there heard and seen, and if that cannot be, what more acceptable to your readers for a few weeks, than a page of such reminiscences as those recorded by J. L. M. Verney, with a few articles from The Revival of those days. God's word and work grows not old by lapse of time, and if telling out these things were then made such means of blessing why not "tell them over again," Israel of old "forgat his works and his wonders that He showed them" Psalm lxxviii. 11. See the exhortation of Moses. "Take heed to thyself, keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life; but teach them thy sons and thy sons' sons" (Deut. iv. 9).

Who knows but we may yet be permitted to see similar times once more, in which case some of us would feel almost constrained with Simeon of old to say "Lord, let now thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have (again) seen thy salvation." And who can tell what a legacy of blessing might come to the present and coming generation of workers if privileged to listen to living words from the lips of those who were eye-witnesses and participators in the wonderful work God was then pleased to bring to pass? Such a meeting will not long be possible, these elder brethren are being rapidly taken up from our midst.

Before ending this letter I wish to say how pleased I was to see reference made by Mr. Oscar T. Snelling and Mr. W. J. Lewis to the blessing given through The Revival and The Christian. You and your workers must be fully alive to the singular great and good work you have so long been permitted to do, and no doubt you are constantly cheered by letters of thankful appreciation, and these coming to the surface only show what lies beneath, much of which I hope found utterance at the recent meetings. A thousand times am I its debtor, for next to the Scriptures The Christian for more than thirty years has been my best preceptor, and I gladly make this public acknowledgement.

WORDS FROM AN OLD WORKER.

I was very much disappointed that I could not go to the great Praise Meeting in the East End. It would have been a great pleasure to have seen George Holland, Annie Macpherson, and Clara Lowe again, and others—splendid old folks, at home still in their happy hunting ground. But this was not granted me. I have now to partake of the quiet retrospect that makes at once the joy and the sorrow of the aged. However, let me tell that I had my own cup of blessing that day, and that it is always full and running over! The Lord was near, and He reminded me that we shall meet in his great gathering, "when the Son of Man shall come," and in his sanctuary, where "everyone saith Glory!" (Psa. xxix. 9, margin R.V.). This was comfort enough. Nevertheless, there are human feelings that may be indulged, and in their right use glorify Him!

We have no such workers in the south of London as those that scraped up the mud thirty years ago, and exposed Tiger Bay and Ratcliff Highway to the eyes of proud London! Happy day! When the mist was rolled away, Christians flocked down to Commercial-road and Shoreditch. I remember with amusement, and thanksgiving, that when I met a vicar of a parish in a street at midnight near Whitechapel, he said "You ought to go to the Revival Refuge. It is the only place you can get into." And I did, and the dear people there got me a cab to go home. These friends introduced me to the haunts of Jack Sheppard, and made me familiar with the abodes of my prison acquaintance. "Flowery Dean Street" became one of my resorts, and when the words "Prison Mission," were inscribed on an East End doorway I thought my work was done. Now, I know it was only begun, and the "open doors" to many a prison cell have since that day been numerous.

When William Catlin wanted to start a hymn one evening on Clerkenwell-green, he asked if there "was a prison woman at the meeting who could start the tune," and presently "The Lion of Judah" resounded through the air! He had often heard our poor women sing those startling choruses. A clerk said one day, "I don't like that chorus, 'I do believe, I will believe that Jesus died for me,' that you make those criminal women sing in your meetings. I hear it in my schoolroom, where they are gathered by the Countess of Pomfret, and I fear that they deceive her ladyship greatly." "Don't be alarmed," I replied, "these people know more about Jesus than we do, and though they may not yet be really saved, they believe the fact that He died for them. Something will come of it." No doubt of it! How surprised the Rev. —— will be to see the thieves of his Whitechapel parish in heaven! Many patchwork quilts still are to be found in the Princess Mary Village Homes, made in Lady Pomfret's Shoreditch sewing-class for the beds of the little ones we took from mothers in prison.

Time would fail me to tell of all the coiners, the burglars, the pickpockets, etc., that have entered the Kingdom of God through the work of the women who toiled in the Prison Mission in the days when such work was neither popular nor easy.

It is delightful to know that armies of societies, missions, and individuals are engaged in clearing up the slums where we stirred up the dirt. This is indeed a glorious matter for praise! Why don't we hold more praise meetings? We are not all too busy, surely! I am not, for one, and there must be a lot of old people, like me, who would like, metaphorically, to "fight their battles o'er again, and thrice to slay the slain"; and the testimony would be to the glory of God. Only the meetings must not be in such immense halls as Mr. Charrington's, and exclude the weak voices of some of our invalid friends. My Conference Hall is not too big, so I suggest that old lady workers may hold a meeting there with some grand old saint to lead the song. "Honour to whom honour." Annie Macpherson might begin the story, as we have no longer dear Mrs. Pennefather to lead us. How delightful the thought no tongue can tell that we shall have eternity to declare the wonders of Redeeming love!

FROM BLACKDOWN HILLS.

I would gladly have been one among the many hundreds assembled on "Thanksgiving Day" at the Assembly Hall could I have left home and work on the hills. We joined in heart, however, and while we thus united in the fellowship of praise, we also were one with those assembled in our hearts' fervent prayers that what was seen in the years gone by may again be witnessed all over the land.

It may be of interest, and a fresh cause for another note of praise to God, when I say that under God we owe the thirty years blessing on the Blackdown Hills in large measure to the specific help and holy impetus which my late beloved father derived from meetings held by Mr. Reginald Radcliffe and others in Exeter about 1859 or '60. I was but a boy of seven or eight at the time, but I distinctly remember them, and the effect they had on my boyish mind—effects which resulted ultimately in my own conversion to God in 1863 at eleven years of age. One special feature I distinctly remember, which perhaps was specially characteristic of the time, was the remarkable spirit of prayer everywhere manifest—a real agony for the blessing of souls. Truly "as soon as Zion travailed she brought forth her children."

My father used frequently (by way of stimulating to short pointed prayer and definite expectancy of faith) to speak of one particular meeting held by Mr. Radcliffe at Exeter, in the Royal Public Rooms. The building was filling fast, the workers were with Mr. Radcliffe waiting for the advertised time of commencing the meeting, my father among them. Mr. Radcliffe said, "Brethren, we have fifteen minutes before the meeting commences, let us spend it in prayer." Someone suggested that there would be no time for a prayer-meeting. "No time," said Mr. Radcliffe, "no time! Why there is time for at least fifteen prayers." Thereupon he started it; the prayer-meeting was held, and my father used to say of it that it was one of the most wonderful meetings he ever attended; the power was simply marvellous. He was wont to add, "There were eighteen prayers in fifteen minutes, and more than twenty souls truly converted that night." Many have been stimulated afresh by that simple reminiscence. Oh, they were glorious days! And there have been some good times since. The same mighty wonder-working God is still with us, and able by his Spirit to do great things. May every servant of his, however humble, know more of the power of that prayer which not only claims the promises but grasps the Promiser, thus—

Moving the hand which moves the world,
To bring deliverance down.

Then should we not see the country visited with another such a wave of blessing as that for which thanksgiving has been so timely and rightly given. May God grant it.

W. J. H. Brealey.

Wellington, Somerset.

P.S.—I think Mr. Varley's suggestion as to a yearly "Thanksgiving Day" a good one; it would doubtless be a means of very great stimulus to the Lord's servants—a bond of unity among workers and a grand testimony to the world. W.B.

Our friend Mr. George Pearse writes from Algiers:—"I don't forget your gathering at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile End, and we have been praying that the Great Breaker (Micah ii. 13) may go before his dear people and be at the head of them. It is pleasant to see the names of former associates."

---

I cannot help wishing that your "Thanksgiving Day" idea were taken up by the large towns all over the kingdom, and certainly included in the arrangements for Mildmay and Keswick. The idea was in my own mind before you issued it in The Christian, and I rejoiced with all my heart when you gave it out. The response you got showed it was welcome. Do try to get the towns to take it up.

The following note from Mrs. Webster, niece of of the late Mr. James Turner, of Peterhead, will be read with deep interest:—

"I feel that were I to be silent the very stones would cry out. I have been closely linked up with the work and the workers of 1859; James Turner, of Peterhead, and his brother and co-worker, were my uncles. Before they passed to the sky, in 1859, my uncle led me to Christ, and in the fulness of time, at least in some measure, it pleased God to give me the mantle of James Turner. Since then, for many years now, God has led me from place to place seeking souls for Jesus. Oh, the sweet joy of seeking and finding the lost! I should so much like to join in the thanksgiving services, but the Master's work claims me here. In spirit at the throne of grace I shall join you all, and praise God for 1859 and the succeeding years."

---

I was thankful to see you had such good times at the Thanksgiving meetings at the Great Assembly Hall. I was with you in spirit and would have liked to have been with you in bodily presence, but after much prayer it was not clear to me that I was to come. Those precious years of '59 to '61 were good times to me. I was saved in '57, and in '60 and '61 the Lord was helping me in Gospel work in Cheltenham, and villages around that town, on the Cotswold Hills. At Birdlip and Cubberly, and other places, many were brought to Christ. After those meetings, Mr. Cuff, now of Shoreditch Tabernacle, who then lived in Cheltenham, and was a member at Cambry Baptist chapel, came to an outlying district near Cubberly to hold cottage meetings among the young converts. From that village work he went to Mr. Spurgeon's college. Others became workers from that time.

W. Nobbs.

Hereford.

A friend who was present writes :—

"My soul went out in grateful praise as my mind went back to January, 1861, when He brought me up out of the pit of spiritual darkness and death into the light of his love, and at once used me to four of my brothers, two sisters, and mother, all of whom were led to Jesus by the Spirit in a few months. After long and sad wandering my aged father was brought to Christ, and to my great joy was seated in the great Thanksgiving meeting, the language of whose heart was, 'Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation.' 'Bless the Lord O my soul.'"

A few surviving workers, who began work with the East London Mission and Relief Society at the time of exceptional distress, twenty-six years ago, desire to give thanks for the hundreds of women who have heard the Gospel in the sewing classes; for the men blessed at Bible classes, and for the thousands who, through Lady Ripon's and the late Lady Hobaat's devoted labours have been helped to emigrate to Canada. The Lord has taken to Himself most of his honoured servants who formed the committee in 1867, viz., Lord Lawrence, Admiral Fishbourne, Earl Cavan, Mr. Robert Baxter, Miss Baxter, Lord Hobart, Lady Hobart, Somerset B. Saunderson, T. B. Smithies, and others.

You cannot tell the interest and joy with which I read the report of "Thanksgiving Day" in The Christian, after the work of a blessed Sabbath was concluded. My whole heart thrilled with sympathy over the accounts of blessing narrated by the several speakers. What grand unity pervaded the assemblies! Would to God such a spirit prevailed everywhere and always! Would not the very heart of Jesus rejoice?

I well remember the great Revival in Ireland in 1859; and our own wonderful awakening here in 1871, of which Mr. Fennell spoke. Oh for another! One's heart and soul long for a further and still fuller work of the Holy Spirit. I never saw such perfect "unity of the Spirit" as that of 1871; and God, I was going to say, deluged us with blessing. But the "Shibboleths" have, of late years, grown stronger than ever, and political antagonisms do such separating harm. Yet God is supreme, and can again unite and revive his people as of old.

J. T. Wrenford.

WELLINGTON.

On Thursday, the 11th, a thanksgiving service was held in connection with the great meetings at the East End of London. Mr. Thomas Radcliffe, nephew of Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, presided, and gave a stirring address. This meeting was peculiarly appropriate, the New Hall Mission being one of the direct results of the great revival.

STRATFORD.

In the afternoon of April 11, Mr. C. Boardman gave some deeply interesting memories with respect to work in this East End suburb. He would go a dozen years further back still than the events to which he referred, and make mention of the noble efforts put forth in East London by the late Mrs. Mary Curtiss and those who assisted her. What was done then markedly led up to the visit of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. Mrs. Curtiss, it may be remembered, gave the ground on which the hall was erected for the mission of these brethren. After her decease her niece, Miss Eccles, gifted the freehold site for the Conference Hall, which is now a centre of so much useful work.

BRITISH SYRIAN MISSION.—The annual meeting of this Mission was held on Friday afternoon in Morley Hall, Regent-street. Lord Kinnaird, who presided, advocated dividing one's gifts proportionally among different countries, of which perhaps the most interesting to Christians was Syria. Miss Watson, who had spent fourteen years in Syria, dwelt on the extreme ignorance of the poor, and at the same time on the welcome given to ladies in the homes of the people. Canon Bell said he had seen the work of the Mission in Baalbec (where 250 children were under instruction), Beyrout, and Damascus. Great changes were now being made in the country under the influence of railways and returning Jews. It was stated that the financial year ending with next June would probably leave a deficit of £600. Of the annual income, about £5000, only £325 was consumed by home expenses, and half of the eighteen ladies working in Syria were doing so without salary. A sale of work took place before and after the meeting.

THE R.S.U. JUBILEE.

Fifty years ago (April 11, 1844) four earnest men, already interested in the poor, met in a private house near Gray's Inn-road, and resolved to form a central committee of workers. At the next meeting the title Ragged School Union was adopted. In November, 1844, Lord Ashley became president, a position he occupied for over forty years, helping to win by his personal devotion for Ragged Schools the general acceptance and support they secured. The development of these fifty years, the work done for the children of the poor, is admirably set forth in a booklet Then and Now, penned by Rev. J. Reid Howatt, and issued by the Ragged School Union.

Great enthusiasm has been awakened by this Jubilee, and on Friday afternoon the Queen's Hall, that beautiful new hall in Langham Place, was crowded by the friends of Ragged Schools, who met to thank God and take courage. We have attended many Ragged School festivals, and know how hearty and sympathetic the audiences usually are, but certainly the Jubilee gathering was exceptionally so, and the R.S.U. Council may well feel encouraged by the energy and enthusiasm of friends and workers in this great cause.

H.R.H. the Princess Christian and her daughter H.R.H. Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, who were present to show their warm sympathy, are no new friends of the movement, for as many know they have long been deeply interested in the work, and have taken a very practical part therein. After prayer by the rector of Spitalfields, Rev. J. H. Scott,

The Right Hon. Earl Compton, M.P., who presided, said that the purpose of the gathering was to render thanks to God for the blessing of the past fifty years, and while praising Him for what has been done, to pray that much more may be done. The presence of the Princesses reminded him that our Sovereign and the Royal family have from the outset shown sympathy towards Ragged School work. The chairman then reviewed the early history of the R.S.U., and mentioned some of the first leaders, two—Messrs. Starey and Anderson—being happily spared to witness the Jubilee. The R.S.U. is a centre of unity and mutual support for the isolated workers. There are 210 distinct institutions, Ragged School Missions, affiliated to it but independent organisations, carried on by over 4,300 voluntary teachers and workers. But besides this indirect service, the R.S.U. carries on much direct work, as for example certain Missions, the Clothing and Relief Fund, and notably the Drift and Cripple children's branch, which last year held 290 separate meetings, with an aggregate attendance of 60,000 children. Then there are the Holiday Homes, in which over 5,000 children, sorely in need of change, had last year a health-giving fortnight, while 46,000 enjoyed a day in the country. Much as had been done there remained yet much, very much, to do, for London was the dumping-place, so to speak, of the poverty and helplessness of the whole country. The R.S.U. could do much more were the means at its disposal largely increased. All who know what it has done, and what it is endeavouring to do, must feel that Ragged Schools dare not be left to languish enfeebled for lack of adequate support.

The Princess Christian then received 164 purses, presented by representatives of 156 schools, and amounting to the sum of £400. It is interesting to note, as showing how the poor have co-operated, that one purse contained 505 farthings, another 150 pennies, and so on. Besides these purses, gifts and promises were received to the amount of £120.

Sir T. Fowell Buxton, Bart., and Mr. W. J. Orsman followed, expressing the gratitude of the assembly to their Royal Highnesses, and showing how the R.S.U. has been, as it were, the germ of many of the most beneficent institutions of the present day.

Lord Brassey said he was sure they would feel it was a good thing when they gathered in support of any great work that it should receive the sympathy of those who were actively engaged in other similar works. He was present as president for the year of that great organisation of which the active work was done by Dr. Barnardo. Dr. Barnardo would have been present himself, but was unfortunately prevented; but he had sent a message of goodwill, so also had Mr. Diggle, chairman of the London School Board. Speaking for himself, he would say that it was impossible for all who took an interest in the spiritual, moral, and material welfare of the population of this great city not to feel deep sympathy with the work which was undertaken by the Ragged School Union. What was that work? It was to raise up the poor and the forsaken from the misery and often the degradation in which they lived. How did the Union accomplish that work? It accomplished it in the most direct and effective manner. It took in hand the poor and the forsaken at an age when evil traditions were most easily effaced and good aspirations were most readily implanted. He would like to speak a word for a class which no doubt was largely represented at that meeting. It was that class of persons who appreciated and admired good work, but took no part in the work themselves. That class was deeply indebted to those who accomplished such great and glorious results as had been placed on record that afternoon, results which were accomplished almost entirely by unpaid labour.

Rev. J. Monro Gibson, D.D., recalled how the early leaders in the R.S.U. movement first discovered the deplorable state of things in the slums, and stirred the public conscience in the matter. The changes which have been brought about are such as ought to awaken the most profound thankfulness to God; yet, on the other hand, the retrospect must not produce complacency. We dare not rest on our oars. "Forgetting those things which are behind," we must "reach forth to those things which are before," for there is much land remaining to be possessed. In looking back on the past we cannot but see that love has proved the grand touchstone, a spell potent to reach hearts bruised and battered by sin, or dormant through neglect and ignorance. We rejoice in the work of Ragged Schools, because thus thousands of unloved children have felt the power of love, and have thus been led to the highest of all loves, the love of God in Christ. Because this work is carried on voluntarily by earnest, loving, godly men and women; because it has been wonderfully blessed; because of the possibilities before it, we claim for the Ragged School Union the prayerful, liberal, and hearty support of all Christians and all lovers of their fellows.

Mr. S. R. Starey, who called the first meeting on April 11, 1844 (as already mentioned), spoke very briefly, thanking God for the marvellous development and progress of the past half century.

The proceedings terminated with a song of praise. It should be mentioned that four gentlemen, known as the Meister Glee Singers, contributed much to the brightness of the gathering by singing very finely various interesting pieces.

LONDON COALIES AND CARMEN.

The annual gathering of the coalies and carmen under the visitation of two City missionaries took place at the Mildmay Conference Hall on April 17. In the lower rooms about 900 men and women with some of their children sat down to a good tea, excellently prepared by the Mildmay ladies. During tea the kindness of the Mildmay friends and their attention to the needs of everyone, was a feature to be noticed, and although many of the men were somewhat rough, the strictest order prevailed. Each person was provided with a bouquet of flowers with text attached.

Tea over, all adjourned to the large hall, the lower part of which soon became nearly full of coalies and their friends. Here they were cheered by the harmonious music of the Goodlings-road Chapel Temperance Brass Band.

The chair was taken by Mr. Wm. R. Rickett, the president of the Coalies' Mission. He spoke of the rise and progress of the Mission. He said they did not intend stopping at two missionaries, but had set their minds on having two more, so that coalies all over London might feel they had someone to care for them. He hoped the £300 per annum needed to carry this out would soon be forthcoming. Addressing the men, he urged them to be thrifty, to put their spare money in the savings bank, and when they had got £100, to buy a horse and van, and start in the coal trade as their own master. He closed with an earnest appeal to the men to be sober, and above all to become new creatures in Christ Jesus.

After this followed thirteen addresses of from three to five minutes each. Among those who spoke was Mr. Fred Tite, the treasurer, who gave a telling address. The work of the mission, he said, had drawn master and man closer together. Altogether it was a happy and profitable meeting, and one never to be forgotten by those present.

CHRISTIAN COLPORTAGE.

It has for many years been the happy custom to prelude the annual meeting of the Christian Colportage Association with an informal gathering, when brief testimonies are borne by various colporteurs to granted by the Lord during the past year, either blessing in connection with special books, or the Word of God, or personal entreaty and effort. These simple, unconventional utterances are always interesting, and the facts disclosed abundantly attest the value and usefulness of colportage work, especially in outlying and neglected districts. The annual meeting was held on Wednesday week, in Lower Exeter Hall.

Mr. H. D. Brown read the report, from which it appeared that during the past year 43,804 Bibles and Testaments, 752,499 books, 367,798 magazines, and 243,802 Scripture text-cards had been sold, besides the free distribution of 600,000 Gospel tracts, making a total sale during twenty years of over eleven millions. Touching references follow to the death of Mr. R. Paton, founder and hon. sec. of the Association. The aim of the Association is twofold: First, to use the printing-press as a powerful agency in the cause of the Gospel; second, to counteract the terrible effects of the evil literature of every kind that literally floods our country. A bookseller told one of the colporteurs that he sold about fifteen hundred of the very worst class of books for boys every month, besides doing a considerable wholesale trade in the same publications by supplying smaller shops. Yet this man was a member of a Christian Church! The chief trade of a vast number of bookshops is in literature of this kind, and in novelettes of a more or less demoralising character; while many also deal largely in infidel publications and Sunday newspapers. The effects of this are continually being met with by the colporteurs in the course of their house-to-house visitation.

One hundred and thirty colporteurs are at present employed in the society; but there are immense fields in our own land unoccupied, and room for a vast number more. If the Lord's people only realised the great need there is for this agency, what a powerful instrumentality for good it is, and what a real work for God is being done, funds would not be lacking to maintain the work and extend it widely. But the committee greatly regret to say that the income is every year greatly below the necessary expenditure, leaving an ever-increasing burden. From one of the many incidents given we may select the following:—

"That was a beautiful book I bought of you the other day," said a young man-o'-war's man to one of the colporteurs, referring to a copy of Grace and Truth he had previously bought. "I have read it, and been much helped by it, and now I am lending it to my mates. If I had money enough I should like to buy a lot and give them away. I am praying it may be made a blessing to those I am lending it to."

"THE BLOOD OF JESUS"

is a little book which has also been helpful to very many. A rather striking case is mentioned by one of the colporteurs in a suburban district, of a domestic servant who talked very flippantly as he was trying to persuade her to buy a good book, and told him she was going to a servants' ball in London that evening. She was, however, induced to buy this book, and next time he called she told him she had no intention of reading it when she bought it, but when starting off for the ball she wanted something to read in the train, and this book being the only one handy, she put it in her pocket. In the train she took it out to read, and was so affected that when she arrived at her destination, instead of going on, she waited at the station for the next train back, and returned home. Since then the book had been the means of leading her to the Saviour.

Lord Kinnaird, who presided, believed that to some it might be a new idea that the colporteur is a most but so indeed he is, carrying the Gospel into homes and hamlets hitherto closed against it. The Chairman proceeded to dwell on the economy with which the work is conducted, and to enforce the need for larger help. He closed, as indeed did all the speakers, with a warm tribute to the memory of Mr. Robert Paton.

Pastor W. Fuller Gooch enlarged on the tendency of the present day to run after new undertakings, simply because they are new, and to neglect institutions which have done and are doing genuine work. Having touched on the appalling state of things in the land owing to the spread of Rationalism and Ritualism, Mr. Gooch said he rejoiced in this colportage work because it was based on the Word of God, because it is a God-ordained and will be a God-sustained means of blessing to our land and people. He was deeply thankful to find that the C.C.A. believed in God and in the Bible as his word to man. It does not sit in judgment on his Book, but hears in the Book the mind and will of God.

Messrs. H. M. Maynard, T. A. Denny, W. H. Seagram, and D. M. Cameron followed, heartily supporting the claims of the C.C.A., and insisting that colportage work is one of the very best means of reaching the homes of the people.

Rev. W. R. Mowll concluded with a rousing address to the men, emphasising the value of the Book, and the importance of using their influence in defence of the Day of Rest. He dwelt also on the presence of the Master, the promise of the Master, and the power of the Holy Ghost as essential to Christian work.

SALVATION ARMY RESCUE WORK.

A more pathetic statement than that submitted last week by Mrs. Bramwell Booth to a gathering of friends in Queen's Hall it would be difficult to imagine. She told of the general work of rescue and shelter and evangelisation among women carried on by the Salvation Army under her supervision, at an annual cost of some £12,000. But mainly her story was about Piccadilly, the nightly scenes of riot that are enacted in that West-end street, and the earnest endeavours of the Army officers to woo their erring sisters from a life of sin and shame. Some of the cases referred to were exceeding sorrowful as examples of masculine treachery and feminine weakness. Mrs. Booth pleaded with her hearers to realise their individual responsibility in staying this evil tide. She made serious assertions as to the evil influences of certain West-end saloons, and equally serious assertions as to finding among the male partners in the midnight saturnalia men who were known to be deacons of Christian churches. Her principal plea was for help to furnish and rent a house which has been taken for the purpose of receiving temporarily those women who are willing to lead a better life. The work done during the past six months has been very encouraging, and this house will greatly facilitate the work of rescue.

Mr. John Cory, of Cardiff, presided at the meeting, and not only spoke heartily on behalf of the work, but gave £100 towards the present pressing need. In an admirable little speech, Mr. Miles McInnes, M.P., expressed strong sympathy with the effort, and protested against the unequal standard of morals as applied respectively to erring men and women. Modern writers of fiction, he thought, were also to blame for the light way in which they regard defection from pure morals. How any pure-minded, virtuous woman could go on the stage and represent an immoral character, and how other virtuous women could go and witness such representations, he could not conceive.

Over £300 were contributed at the meeting, but Mrs. Booth desired to raise £1000 in order to clear herself of financial encumbrance.

An earnest appeal has come from Mrs. Booth for help towards establishing a Maternity Home at Hackney in connection with the work. This Home would also be used as a place of training for obstetric nursing. Any Christian women desiring to qualify in this line of service should apply by letter to 259, Mare-street, Hackney, N.E.

PASTOR CHINIQUY, in writing to thank British friends for practical sympathy shown by them, writes from Springfield, Mass., on April 11:—"Last week in Lowell, Mass. it was my unspeakable joy, after three addresses, to give the hand of fellowship to twenty-three new converts, and here yesterday, after a simple address, thirteen came out publicly, telling us that they were for ever giving up the heavy and ignominious yoke of the Pope to take the sweet and blessed yoke of Jesus Christ. I receive from every side invitations from Roman Catholics to go and speak to them of the great and precious gift."

EASTER IN COLOMBO.

Colombo is the Clapham Junction of the steamship companies, and many unexpected meetings take place here among the servants of God travelling hither and thither on the business of the King. It has been my privilege to be spending the greater part of three weeks here unexpectedly, and the time has been occupied in the holding of a series of meetings twice a day in the house of Mr. E. Lover. As he is engaged by the leading steamship companies, he comes across the various missionaries, and is glad to further them any way he can. Miss Gurney and Mrs. Walker, engaged in the work among policemen, left Colombo a week or so per Australia.

On Good Friday morning our Bible-reading was further reinforced by the unexpected presence of Miss Annie Taylor and her party of missionaries for Tibet. They had arrived the previous evening, and had twenty-four hours to spend on shore. The subject that morning was the Day of Atonement, illustrated by large diagrams which have done effective service here and elsewhere. Some of the C.M.S. missionaries were also present, and Miss Walker, from Jaffna, in connection with Lady Kinnaird's society. She was accompanied by Sister Lucy, of Notting Hill, and it was delightful to have this réunion of Christian friends. Some members of the Ceylon and India General Mission swelled our numbers, accompanied by Cingalese and Tamil native evangelists.

At 11 a.m. a large company assembled at Galle Face Church to hear Rev. E. Thwaites, of Salisbury; and again at 4.30 a congregation, chiefly composed of children, assembled to hear Rev. Martin Hall tell out the old, old story in a way suited to the capacity of children. Very pleasant was it to get in touch again with the work of the Children's Special Service Mission. In the evening, at six, the church was well filled to hear Mr. Thwaites, and the Lord was visibly moving in many hearts.

At 8 p.m. Miss Taylor and her party met at Mr. Lover's house, which has a wonderful capacity for congregations. The dining-room had 100 seats in it, and was filled. Into the dining-room a number were crowded. The deep verandah was seated, and held nearly 100, and back into the road the people were crowded, until many had to turn away, unable to get within hearing. We hear from her lips the story of God's wonderful dealings with her, and may we not say, too, her wonderful dealings with God—the story so familiar to friends at home. Then her band of missionaries formed into line across the room, English, Scotch, Norwegian, Swedish, Danish, and Tibetan, and with Mr. Thwaites and myself, sang heartily, "Anywhere with Jesus I will gladly go." Four of them added a few words of testimony, and with hearty farewells and songs, left, accompanied by many friends, in thirty-five rickshaws, for the wharf, to embark again. Several men of the Warwickshire Regiment, stationed in Colombo, were present; many of them entered fully into the spirit of the meeting, while the hearts of others were deeply touched. A gift of £25 was made by two present at the close of the meeting for the furtherance of the work of God in Thibet.

Easter Sunday found us all busy in our different spheres of work, with good attendances at the different places of worship, considering that numbers were away up country for their holidays. We had the joy of leading souls to Jesus before the day closed in. A vessel arrived from England in the morning with a party of C.I.M. missionaries and one lady for Singapore, and they went on their way again about midnight. Easter Monday was a full day, for Mr. Thwaites and Mr. Hall, in Galle Face Church and St. Luke's, services being held in English and for the Cingalese through translation. At the soldiers' meeting in the evening, held in the house of a Christian lady, the Spirit of God was blessedly at work leading some more members of the regiment to yield themselves to the Lord. Before Easter week closes we shall be starting again, some to the dear homeland, some to the interior of Ceylon, some of us to Australia, all of us waiting and watching for the Resurrection morning and the hour of his glad appearing. G. Soltau.

THE TOWER HAMLETS BAND OF HOPE UNION reported at its recent annual meeting eighty societies in affiliation and 10,000 members.

VILLAGE EVANGELISATION.

The work of God in the villages of England was the subject of a deeply interesting conference on Monday in the Hall of the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street. There were two sessions in addition to statements made at the noon prayer-meeting. Addresses were given by workers from various parts, describing the great and widespread need that exists for the Gospel in its purity, and the peculiar difficulties which evangelists have to encounter in rural districts. While the narratives of work done were as varied in type and incident as were the individual workers and their spheres, yet there were some points on which the speakers seemed in substantial agreement. One of these was that thousands of villages are in what must be called heathen darkness; another was that when their attention is once secured, they listen with eagerness to the Gospel as to something altogether new. If, on the one hand, there were evidences of distressful ignorance, on the other hand abundant testimony was forthcoming as to the signal blessing which God has granted upon village missions.

At the first meeting, presided over by Mr. R. C. Morgan, Mr. T. S. Helby, who has for many years been moving from county to county, was able to connect striking instances of God's blessing being outpoured with the fervent and unceasing prayers of devoted though feeble friends at a distance. Mr. J. E. Taylor, of Aylesbury, who has lived in many rural centres, said that hundreds of villages are in

THE GREATEST POSSIBLE NEED.

In some you may find a Godly man preaching in the church, and sometimes one or two chapels. He knew villages where there are three chapels, although one would hold the entire population. The Christian people seem to be fighting one another. In other villages the superfluous buildings would be very welcome. He had recently been to a village in which there are no places of worship, nor for miles round; another he knew, in which there is a little church where a three minutes' sermon with no Gospel in it is preached when a service is held. On Sunday last no service at all was held! During last summer, in his caravan journeys, he found the people very desirous to hear the Gospel; they listened for hours, and would not go away. The children also gathered; for weeks the interest continued, and with much blessing as a result.

Mr. John McAuliffe spoke from long and wide experience when he said that there was never any difficulty in getting a congregation in the villages. Two summers ago, when preaching in a Midland hamlet, the son of a farmer living a little way off, whose guest he had been, passed on horseback while he was preaching from his Bible van. The young man's looks indicated scorn, but he said nothing. Some months ago he received a letter from the young man, asking for a parcel of tracts for distribution. He explained that though, while hearing the preaching, he scoffed in his heart, he afterwards received such a shock in his soul that he sought Gospel light, was saved himself, and had now come to desire the salvation of others.

At the afternoon meeting, presided over by Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. John McCall mentioned a new agency for village work in Essex; and Mr. Ransome Wallis read a circular describing the Essex Village Gospel Mission, which is about to start a Bible carriage, and enlist the co-operation of city residents, in evangelistic efforts, to be directed by a devoted man and woman who will live in the van.

HOLIDAY SEEKERS, AND CYCLISTS,

A Buckinghamshire Farmer impressed the meeting with a sense of the deep ignorance of village folk, and declared that in many places the people dare not permit him to enter their houses, for fear of being themselves evicted by the squire. He contrasted such villages with another, where there is a Godly clergyman and a mission hall, and where temperance work is taken up. There the people are prosperous, as well as enlightened.

Lady Hope related some of her struggles, and counselled village workers to do their best to obtain the co-operation of the clergyman. She would like to see each county with a village mission, so organised that the workers could all come together for periodical conference. Her ladyship was followed by the Chairman, whose endeavours in some instances have shared a fate similar to those of his wife: first they were misunderstood by the clergyman, and then openly opposed; but, nevertheless, they flourished, and were instrumental of great and lasting good.

After some hearty words by Mr. William Luff, an address was delivered by Captain Moorhouse, who has lived in vans for over fourteen years, and has travelled in twenty-three counties of England. He remarked that as the villager's vocabulary consists of about 500 words, those who use 5000 words in their preaching, must of their hearers. It is essential for evangelists to tell the Good News in words which the people can understand.

Lieutenant Mandeville related cases of conversion which seemed to show that the illiterate are often visited by dreams, and arrested on a downward course; then they anxiously listen to the Word of God, and it convicts and enlightens them. A Sussex Farmer made an earnest appeal for spiritual Christians to take up residence in the villages. This point was also urged by Mr. Taylor, who mentioned cheapness and healthfulness as inducements to rural life. He undertook to find houses for any who would make Buckinghamshire their centre. A very cheering announcement by Mr. Taylor was that a monthly prayer meeting, attended by ministers and workers of various denominations, has been started at Aylesbury in furtherance of the work of God in the villages.

Another meeting was held in the evening, presided over by Mr. W. H. Seagram.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

As Mr. Webb-Peploe pointed out at the meeting of this Mission on Monday, quite a number of societies are celebrating their jubilee this year. These include the South American Missionary Society, the Church of England Scripture Readers' Society, and the Thames Church Mission, as well as the Ragged School Union and the Y.M.C.A. Hence, as he remarked, 1844 must have been peculiarly fertile in Christian enterprise.

The Jubilee meeting of the T.C.M. was held in the Morley Halls on Monday afternoon, and the jubilee report presented by the secretary, Mr. F. Penfold, afforded evidence that the work is still vigorous and fruitful, while many testimonies were borne as to the blessing which God has been granting on the labours of the Mission. It is very interesting to note that one of the missionaries, Mr. Lowman, has been constantly at work on the river for forty-eight years; while Mr. Carter has been so engaged for nearly the same period.

The report for the past year shows a large amount of good work, in the way of personal dealing, Gospel services on board ship, and the distribution of tracts and books, as well as the sale of Bibles to seamen, emigrants, bargemen, dockmen, and other classes met with on the river at all points between Richmond and the Nore. Services and Bible-classes are also held on board various training ships. So far as possible every vessel entering the river is visited in order that the Gospel may be set forth before those on board. The attendance at the Mission rooms during 1893 has been eminently satisfactory, especially at Ratcliff, East Greenwich, Tilbury, and Leigh. In these the Gospel is faithfully taught, and many hundreds of sailors with their wives and families come to these meetings who would never enter a church.

The Right Hon. Earl of Jersey, G.C.M.G., who presided, described his own observations of the work of the T.C.M,, and very heartily urged the claims of the society on general support.

Archdeacon Sinclair followed, dwelling on the extent of the work, the importance of evangelising seamen whose influence tells in all lands; and emphasising particularly the claims of the Pension Fund for men who had spent a lifetime in this trying mission service. He closed with a plea for gifts of books and all kinds of good wholesome literature for distribution.

Rev. Wm. Wright, D.D., reviewing the lessons of the jubilee, thanked God for increased interest in sailors, and for the blessing granted on Gospel work among them.

Prebendary Webb-Peploe said that his interest in such service had been deepened from the fact that his son is similarly engaged on the Tyne, and that thus he has seen something and heard much of this useful work on board ship. God is blessing the labours of the T.C.M. missionaries very greatly, and it ought certainly to be well supported.

Other speakers followed briefly, and the proceedings were closed with deep thankfulness for the great things the Lord hath done on the river.

THE SONG OF THE SHOP.

A New Version of an Old Appeal.

There are still many large West-end shops at which the young women assistants are not allowed to sit down (except at meal-times) throughout the long day.—Weekly Paper.

With a face that is weary and wan,
And a pain in her throbbing head,
A shop-girl stands, in her trim black gown,
With limbs that are heavy as lead.
Full well does she know her fate,
She must stand though she's ready to drop,
And she presses her side with a feverish hand
As she sings the "Song of the Shop."

"Oh, when will it come?" sighs she,
"The boon for which I so crave.
Oh, when will pity be shown to me,
A West-end counter-slave?
For whatever my task may be,
And however I strive my best,
Or busy or not, 'tis my sorry lot
To never sit down to rest.

"It's stand—stand—stand,
From weary chime to chime,
Stand—stand—stand,
As though honest work were crime.
There is never a rest for me,
However fatigued I feel,
For me oppress'd there is never a rest,
Though my very senses reel.

"It's stand—stand—stand,
Till the brain begins to swim,
Stand—stand—stand,
Till the eyes grow dazed and dim;
And the customers come and go,
And my lips must still shape a smile,
Though a gnawing pain is at my heart,
And I well-nigh totter the while.

"O women with daughters dear!
O you that are mothers and wives,
Do you ever think of the weary round
That is wearing out our lives?
Do you ever give it a thought,
As you at the counter sit,
That there's never a seat for those who stand
On the other side of it?

"O Masters, who seem to be
So deaf to our deep-drawn sighs,
In the name of common sense, oh, say,
Do you deem your conduct wise?
For how can we serve your ends,
Or take in our work delight,
When such is our weariness alway
We can hardly stand upright?

"Oh, for one spell of rest!
A respite, however brief,
Would bring me comfort beyond all price,
A sweet and a glad relief.
A little resting would ease my aches,
And would drive my dread away—
The dread lest I in a faint shall fall,
Which haunts me every day.

"O Ladies! to you we turn,
'Tis to you that we plead for aid;
It is you can bring that blessed thing
For which so long we've prayed.
For the sake of our common sex,
On our harsh employers frown,
And refuse to purchase in any shop
Where the girls may not sit down."

With features weary and wan,
And a pain in her throbbing head,
A shop-girl stands, in her trim black gown,
With limbs that are heavy as lead.
And there, till the respite comes,
She must stand, though she's ready to drop,
And still in a voice of dolorous pitch—
Oh, that her tones may reach the rich—
Must sing the "Song of the Shop."

—Abridged from "Truth."

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FITZROY BAND OF HOPE showed that the work is being vigorously pushed forward.

FACTORY HELPERS' UNION.

Exeter Hall was on Saturday afternoon the scene of an animated gathering in connection with this section of the work of the Y.W.C.A. in London, which exists for the sake of promoting the moral and spiritual welfare of the thousands of girls and young women employed in the factories, mills, and laundries of the metropolis, and of some of the large provincial towns.

The work is carried on by means of institutes, evening homes and clubs, where the girls are invited to betake themselves in their leisure hours, and where all kinds of efforts are put forth for their entertainment and instruction. Among these are included classes for musical drill, dressmaking, cooking, singing, needlework, and general improvement.

A special point is made of closing each evening with a hymn, Bible reading, and prayer, while Bible classes, which are largely attended, are held two or three times a week. Besides this, weekly visits to the factories and work-rooms are arranged with the employers' permission during the latter half of the dinner or tea hours, and to the laundries during work hours. Hundreds of houses of business are thus visited by ladies, who hold a short service with the girls, consisting of hymns, Bible teaching, and prayer. Thousands of girls thus hear God's message of salvation, many of whom are reached by no other organisations.

There are also in connection with the Union a Sick-aid and Holiday Fund, Flower Mission, and Letter Mission, Total-abstinence Union, and restaurants, where good wholesome food is supplied at cost price. That an unmistakable influence is being created over many of the girls through these varied agencies there was unmistakable evidence at Saturday's gathering, when some 1200 of them were present, many of them taking part in the competitions in singing and musical drill, which were an exceedingly interesting feature of the proceedings.

The Duchess of Albany presented the prizes to those successful in these competitions, as well as to those who excelled in technical work, a considerable quantity of which was on exhibition. Among those who took part in the proceedings were Sir F. Fowell Buxton, Lord Kinnaird, Baroness Halkett, Rev. J. F. Kitto, Mr. C. E. Tritton, M.P., and Dr. Richard Glover, of Bristol. A few closing words of earnest Gospel appeal were addressed to the girls by Rev. E. A. Stuart.

A CHRISTIAN SOLDIER.

General P. G. Scot, whose death is reported in Edinburgh at the age of 70, was, from his youth, a very earnest Christian officer of the Bengal Army. He was of so humble and retiring a disposition that neither in India, nor since his retirement several years ago, was he well-known in the Christian world. The writer of these lines met him in 1849 at Allyghur, where, as the adjutant of his regiment, the 12th Native Infantry, he was leading a consistent, quiet, and pious life.

When his regiment mutinied with many others in 1857, and the officers had to make the best of their way to the nearest military fort garrisoned by English troops, Major Scot mounted his horse and rode off in the direction of Agra, some eighty miles or more across country. After proceeding some distance he overtook two young officers on foot, who were also escaping from the rebel Sepoys. Knowing that if they were overtaken their lives would probably be lost, he dismounted and made them get on his horse, saying that "perhaps they were not as prepared to die as he was," and he told them to push on as fast as they could. I believe both got safely into Agra, and he, whose death we deplore, lived to the age of three score years and ten!

It was a noble act of self-sacrifice, worthy of the highest honour, but not, I think, known to many of the old Bengal Army. Punjabee.

BRAZIL.—The revolution has ended in Rio, and we are having a little more quiet, and things are seeming better now. We are having good times in the Lord's work. To-day we are celebrating our third anniversary. Nearly all believers are present, and we feel happy and rejoice together. To-morrow we hope to baptise two candidates. Pray for us and for the Lord's cause in Brazil.

Letter to the Editor.

ABOLITION OF ARMIES.

The enormous and ever-increasing cost of the maintenance of peace in Europe, owing to the large armies kept on foot by the Continental Powers, is, in all its bearings, a matter of such momentous importance as to demand our most serious attention, to discover, if possible, a remedy calculated to lead to a general disarmament, a beneficent event that would do away with the misuse of money needed for better purpose than the wholesale slaughter of our fellow mortals, and release millions of men to return to the plough and other peaceful occupations. On Scriptural and philanthropic grounds I am a strong advocate for the settlement of national disputes by arbitration, believing aggressive wars to be highly criminal, as an offence against humanity and a disgrace to our boasted civilisation, as well as a defiance to the holy maxims of our blessed Saviour, whose mission on earth was "peace, goodwill towards men," who pronounced a blessing on the peacemakers, and was called the "Lord of Peace."

I have with my own eyes seen so much of the horrors of war during the Sutlej campaign, 1845-46, and the Sepoy mutiny campaigns, 1857-58-59, that I am strongly opposed to invasive wars when honest men are compelled to fight an injured foe, against whom they have no cause of offence whatever. A sanguinary engagement may well be described as hell let loose, where the poor dying horse uplifts his head to heaven in mute appeal against man's inhumanity. I fully concur in the Duke of Wellington's reply to the remark of a fashionable lady observing that "a victory must be such a splendid sight." Whereupon the Iron Duke replied, "Madam, there is nothing more horrible—except a defeat."

War means appalling and sickening sights, like those I have myself seen—burnt homesteads, brutal excesses, heartrending groans of the dying, sending men into eternity with oaths on their dying lips, and last, but not least, the occasional furious outbursts of revenge, such as the massacre of several thousand Sikhs in the Sutlej at the Battle of Sobraon (Feb. 10, 1846), in which action I served with my regiment. This awful scene occurred on the retreat over their sole bridge, which broke under the weight of the fugitives, when our artillery was brought forward to the very brink of the river, and for a whole hour fired volleys of grape and round shot into the dense mass of the poor wretches struggling for life in the cold waters of the river.

Burns truly says:—

> Man's inhumanity to man
> Makes countless thousands mourn.

Let every humane man cry mightily, Down with the curse of war, the cause of such awful misery; let it meet the fate of its twin sister, duelling, which can be defended on the same ground as that of warlike enterprises—namely, the alleged necessity of defending one's honour.

Despite all difficulties in the way, there can be no reasonable doubt that the wisest plan for averting an appeal to the sword is by the establishment of an international tribunal for the settlement of all disputes between nations. "Your arguments," said one to me the other day, "are good, but they are impracticable." Well, if this be really so, it must be owing to gross ignorance, which requires enlightenment. But if the cause I plead for is good, it surely behoves good men to help it on as best they may. Moreover, if a thing be wicked and wrong, then it surely is possible either to remove it, or at least to diminish the sphere of its operations. Wars, some think, will last through all time, but if all lovers of peace were heartily to exert themselves in the philanthropic crusade of suppressing the heathenish practice of war, much would be done towards ending these wholesale barbarous slaughters of our fellow-creatures.

But nations must first go to school to learn lessons of sound political wisdom in these matters, and who are more fit schoolmasters than those, like myself, who know by experience what war really is, and who for nearly ten years have at different places in England addressed open-air meetings advocating the cause of national arbitration, and sometimes at some personal risk? For on one occasion at Hastings, whilst denouncing some of the iniquitous wars of the present reign, a political rough secretly threw a stone at my face, which would probably have blinded me if the missile had not been providentially warded off by the rim of my hat. But this adventure will not deter me from pursuing the same course on fitting occasions. I have, moreover, used other means in seeking to mitigate our national pugnacity; such for instance, as writing to Mr. Gladstone, then Premier, a strong letter of warning against rushing into the Egyptian war. This, unhappily, proved a mere flash in the pan, as soon afterwards occurred the unchristian bombardment of Alexandria, and all the subsequent bloodshed and misery in that aggressive war.

Let me ask, are not the Churches of Christendom largely responsible for the continuance of war? It strikes me that they are so in a considerable degree. For it is very sad to find really Christian people so blinded by party politics as to be defenders of the many unjust and unnecessary wars waged in the Victorian era, which can only be defended on the wretched principles of statecraft and expediency, whilst I maintain that Christian principle—that what is right in the sight of God—rather than worldly expediency, ought to regulate our conduct as a nation, and that the same code of morals is equally binding on us collectively as a nation as it is on us respectively as individuals. The objections of providential dispensations, and the good that has frequently followed wars are of no weight when we come to the true standard of right; because we must not do evil that good may come; although the Almighty often allows that to happen which He disapproves of, and by his matchless skill makes the wrath of man to praise Him by producing good out of evil. The Divine command to man is "Cease to do evil," and war is an unmitigated evil.

I am not, however, so sanguine as to expect the world to be converted to the views of the London Peace Society, engaged, as they are, in the prosecution of a good work, at least till the Second Advent. Nevertheless, all lovers of peace should endeavour, by all means in their power, to promote their philanthropic views, even as we ought to seek to put down all kinds of evil, such, for instance, as the putting down drunkenness, the parent of all immoralities, and which I know, from my long experience in the Army, is the cause of nearly all the crimes committed by the soldiers. Things look more hopeful just now, as I am pleased to see in The Standard of March 31, that in reply to a question by Sir J. Whitehead as to whether Government were prepared, in view of the alleged willingness of Russia and Austria to enter into negotiations with other nations for a general reduction of armaments, to take steps with the object of bringing about a conference on the subject, the Chancellor of the Exchequer replied that Her Majesty's Government would take every opportunity that appeared to them to be favourable to promote the object indicated in his honourable friend's question.

With this hopeful encouragement, all lovers of peace and national prosperity should put their shoulders to the wheel, and strive with all their might and main to terminate the barbarous practice of war, and to begin by striving to bring about a great reduction in the monstrous armaments of Europe. S. Dewé White, Colonel,

Late Bengal Staff Corps.

FARWIG MISSION HALL, BROMLEY, is a centre of great activity. Often enlarged, it is now filled every Sunday evening, and meetings of some sort are held every night in the week. An open-air meeting, held every Saturday evening the whole year through has been definitely blessed to the conversion of several and the members and workers are eagerly anticipating the open-air campaign of the coming summer, four to six meetings being arranged each week. Dr. Harry Guinness is to conduct the services on the Foreign Missionary Sunday, April 29, and will lecture on "The Heathen World" the next day.

C.E.T.S. WOMEN'S UNION.—The annual meeting of the Women's Union of the C.E.T.S. took place at Grosvenor House. The thirteenth annual report states that the work has gone on satisfactorily during the past year. The report of the Free Shelter Home for police-court cases is very satisfactory. Of the thirty-two cases admitted during the year only six proved thoroughly unsatisfactory, while of 140 reported as doing well last year nearly all are doing well still. Mr. C. E. Tritton, M.P., said they were obliged to confess with sorrow that female intemperance was one of England's national disgraces. The Women's Union were doing a great work to lessen this and to seek out the poor victims of intemperance, and by means of mission women, homes, and shelters, to win them into the paths of sobriety, virtue, and peace. Short addresses were given by Mrs. Locker Lampson, Rev. J. H. J. Ellison, and others.

MRS. AMANDA SMITH.

I cannot tell you how much I regret not being able to be at the great thanksgiving meeting recently held, for I feel that among all the people that gathered for praise and thanksgiving no one had greater cause to do so than myself. In looking over my life, and seeing God's special goodness to me of the last twenty years, how He has helped me on four continents to preach Christ as a full and complete Saviour to all who trust in Him; the scores I have seen brought to Him in that time, and the way in which He has watched over and protected me by land and sea, fills my heart to overflowing with indescribable thanksgiving and praise. And though the time has so far passed, I feel I must record my regret at not being present, and my desire to thank those who have prayed for me.

God has wonderfully answered prayer. I am so much better, and I am full of gratitude and praise to my dearest Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, for surely He hath dealt bountifully with me. I left Matlock last Thursday, and am taking a few days' further rest in the beautiful country; then later on I hope to go to Thrapston for special treatment for my throat, and with God's blessing I believe I may hope for great good. How wonderfully this has all come about! Surely it is nothing less than the Lord's doing; it is marvellous, and I heartily join my note of praise and thanksgiving with all the Lord's dear children everywhere, and say, in the language of the Psalmist, "I will bless the Lord at all times. His praise shall be continually in my mouth." Amanda Smith.

WIDOWS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

A very interesting meeting in celebration of the eighty-sixth year of the Society's existence was held on Thursday evening, April 19, at the Mansion House. In the unavoidable absence of the Lord Mayor and of the president of the Society, Alderman Sir Andrew Lusk, Bart., the chair was taken by Prebendary Whittington, who, in proposing the adoption of the report, in a deeply sympathetic speech referred to the useful work of the Society as having come under his own personal observation as a city clergyman. Both the chairman and Rev. Dr. McEwan, who in an eloquent speech seconded the resolution, drew attention to the leading principle of the Society, viz., to provide, after full inquiry, means whereby distressed widows can maintain themselves and their children. The meeting was also addressed by Revs. A. W. Gough, Alex. Morgan, Messrs. J. Douglass, Matthews, and Cæsar, all of whom pleaded for support to the Society, which for so many years had quietly and unostentatiously, but most successfully, been engaged in the amelioration of distress among the suffering poor.

THE MILDMAY JEWISH MISSION BAND.—Mr. Samuel Wilkinson, of the Mildmay Mission to the Jews, proposes a new departure, in the formation of an itinerant evangelistic band, including about twelve earnest workers, to visit cities in the United Kingdom during June and July, in order to present the Gospel first to Jews and then to Gentiles. He writes: "The object of the undertaking is not to plead for funds anywhere, but to win souls; also not to ignore other stationed Jewish missions or workers, but to cheer and support them. We are open to receive invitations to any town without any financial guarantee being given, and shall lay the invitations before God, and seek his guidance. It is open to any of the Lord's stewards to send gifts for this special object, or to offer hospitality." Further particulars may be had from Mr. Wilkinson, The Central Hall, Philpot-street, Commercial-road, E.

FACTORY GIRLS' COUNTRY HOLIDAY FUND.—The new report states that during last summer 463 girls and women were sent away from various parts of London for a brief stay in the country. The average cost of each case is about 10s., including railway fares. The report says:—"Among the dwellers in the narrow, sunless courts and alleys of London are to be found those most in need of a change to the fresh air and pleasant fields of our beautiful English villages. The committee especially ask women to remember their less fortunate sisters, who are compelled by our present social conditions to pass most of their lives in a dull, monotonous round of work, too often carried on in ill-ventilated and unhealthy factories. Gifts of wearing apparel of all kinds will be most thankfully received. On the whole the girls sent away last year were most kindly treated by the cottagers, and the country workers all did their best to make their holiday bright and happy." The hon. secretary of the fund is Miss Canney, St. Peter's Rectory, Saffron Hill, E.C.

THE Y.W.C.A.

The annual meetings of the York Y.W.C.A. were held on April 18. In the afternoon, at the Mansion House, the Lady Mayoress, Lady Dodsworth, and Miss Whitwell (president of North of England Y.W.C.A.) spoke. In the evening about 160 assembled. Miss Whitwell again spoke, also Miss Tristram, of Durham.

A mission was held at Princess House, 106 and 108, Brompton-road, from April 8 to 15, by Miss Hull, of Eastbourne. The meetings were well attended, both in the afternoon and evening, and many were led to accept Christ as their Saviour. There was also much blessing amongst the Christians, and our hearts are full of praise.

Alice M. Bethune.

The annual report of the Belgravian Institute, 2, St. George's-road, S.W., has for its key-note "Come." In looking back over another year this word shines out brightly. Come to the Bible Classes, has been the invitation to many; and at these Bible Classes is given the Royal invitation from God's own Word, "Come unto Me." Under the heads of Come to the Health Lectures, the educational classes, and the social gatherings, good work is recorded. "Come to a Country Day" has cheered weary toilers, while, "Come and Help Others" has brought willing responses from the members. Gifts of flowers for the Flower Mission will be gladly received by the superintendent, Miss Maunsell.

Shaftesbury House, Burton-on-Trent, has been opened. The Hon. G. Kinnaird and Miss Whitwell were present to speak on the work of the Y.W.C.A. Nearly all the ministers in the town gave personal support to the occasion. The building contains a large evening room for outside members, supplied with every home comfort. Accommodation has also been provided for several boarders in excellently-fitted up cubicles and single bedrooms. Opening services were held, when Hon. E. Kinnaird and Mrs. Theodore Walker addressed the meetings. A week's mission followed, conducted by Miss Haddon (Fleckney). The meetings have been well attended, and God's power has been very present to convict and heal. Many have been brought to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus, and Christians have been stirred up to fresh enthusiasm in his service.

THE Y.M.C.A.

Dr. Harry Guinness has held a three days' mission at the Liverpool Association.

Successful anniversary meetings have been held at Charlbury and Leighton Buzzard.

Major Seton Churchill addressed the annual meeting of the Nottingham Association.

The youths' section at the Bristol Association, which numbers over a hundred members, held its annual public meeting on the 16th inst.

Several of the larger Y.M.C.A.'s, including Birmingham and Plymouth, have opened their reading-rooms and extended other privileges to the members of the Soldiers' Christian Association.

The membership of the Trowbridge Association has increased from 60 to 150 during the past year. A ladies' working committee is rendering invaluable aid by raising funds for the Association.

The Y.M.C.A. at Grays, Essex, are trying to extend the library, and make it more useful to young men. The librarian, Mr. H. Philbey, 140, High-street, Grays, would be thankful for gifts of books.

At a recent conference of the Madras Association it was proposed that daily at noon, when the gun fires, each member, wherever he may be, should pause for at least one minute and lift his heart in prayer to God for blessing on the Association. The proposal is worthy of general adoption.

Both the South-Midland and the South-Western Districts held their conferences on Wednesday (18th). The secretary of the former, Mr. F. Hunt, of Reading, arranged several meetings at Newbury, and the workers who assembled were much encouraged. The latter district held its conference at Penzance, where the allied associations reported a membership of 3848.

The annual general meeting of the Edinburgh Association was held in the Association Hall last week, Mr. David Shaw, W.S., presiding. The thirty-ninth annual report showed an increase in the membership, and treasurer's financial statement a reduction in the current debt. The chairman and other speakers expressed their gratification with the progress made during the year in all departments.

During the past year there has been a considerable development of Y.M.C.A. work in Madras, the membership having risen from 268 to 393. The Christian Patriot says the Association is beginning to be a very powerful factor in moulding the lives and characters of Hindu young men. "In the work of undermining caste," says the journal, "in opposing old standing superstitions, the Young Men's Christian Association stands foremost. . . . We would be greatly lacking in our sense of duty if we failed to appreciate the great good the Association has done for the young men of our community."

The district meeting at Tunbridge Wells on the 18th inst. was attended by a large number of representatives of the Associations in Sussex, Surrey, and Kent, and practical discussions took place on various departments of work. The principal topic, "The Scope and Objects of the Y.M.C.A. Bible-class," was introduced by Mr. A. C. Furse, of Camden Town. Captain Baring presided at the morning meeting, Colonel Birney at that of the afternoon, and Mr. Walter Langton at an enthusiastic young men's meeting in the evening. Mr. A. C. Tessier was elected hon. district secretary. Interesting reports were presented from a number of the branches, and the success of the conference in every way illustrated the practical wisdom of this form of organisation, whereby the Associations grouped in District Unions in different parts of the country are enabled to meet periodically to confer as to how they may best promote the interests and usefulness of their work.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOUR.

The Northampton, College-street, Society holds its meetings on Sunday evenings after the chapel service in the school-room. There are twenty-five active members in the Society.

The North Kensington Society gave a social to welcome their new pastor, Rev. J. Fleming Shearer. About one hundred and thirty guests attended. The address of welcome was given by the treasurer, Mr. J. R. Pettejohn, and, in response, the pastor spoke of C.E. work. Mr. Arthur R. Cove also gave a short address.

The Grays Tabernacle C.E. Society held a social meeting on Wednesday week. After tea a public meeting was held in the chapel, presided over by Rev. T. Heywood. The Society, which commenced about six months ago with a membership of thirty, has now increased to eighty members, and has been the means, in God's hands, of awakening fresh spiritual life in the Church.

A C.E. Convention, held last week in Exeter, was largely attended. Amongst the leading speakers were Revs. W. K. Chaplin, W. E. Rice, and J. B. Morgan. The latter described the "Four Pillars of Christian Endeavour" as, (1) The pledge, which was a re-introduction of the old covenant idea which was in existence during the olden days. In concrete it was to confirm their vow of allegiance to Christ. There was much vague indefiniteness in the religious life of to-day, and not only was the pledge essential to the movement, but it was really the key of the position. (2) Prayer. (3) Consecration service. (4) Committee work.

EAST-END LODGING HOUSES.

The annual meeting of the Spitalfields Lodging House Band was held at the Mission Hall, 87, Old Montague-street. Rev. J. W. Pratt, vicar of St. Stephen's, Coleman-street, presided. The treasurer stated that the income during the last year was about £180. The secretary gave an epitome of last year's work, which comprised meetings in lodging houses, shelters, and in the mission hall, open-air meetings, free breakfasts, etc. Several teas were given to fallen girls, when a number of these were brought under the influence of the Gospel; some have been placed in homes or situations. Interesting details are given in the printed report, copies of which may be had from Mr. Millership, 87, Old Montague-street, E.

Pastor W. Fuller Gooch gave a helpful exposition of Romans xvi. 17, and following verses. He said that if the work were only known by the Christian Churches it should lack for no good thing.

CURRAGH SOLDIERS' HOME.—The new report of this Home says: "The soldiers come in looking so bright and happy, glad to leave the barrack-room for a quiet evening, and loving above all to join heartily in the hymn-singing, of which they never seem to tire. The meetings are well attended, and we have been specially glad to note how the Christian men act as missionaries in doing all they can to induce their comrades to come to the Home. We have had many letters from men who have left the Curragh, and are witnessing for God in other places. We have availed ourselves of unusual opportunities for visiting the soldiers' wives married off the strength—owing to the kindness of a friend in sending a large parcel of clothing for distribution amongst them." There is still an incubus of debt on the Home, and as soon as £200 has been raised, a friend will come forward with the remaining £100. The hon. sec. and superintendent of the work is Mrs. William Perry, Soldiers' Home, Curragh Camp, co. Kildare.

SCOTTISH NOTES.

Interesting jubilee services were recently held in connection with the U. P. Church at Helensburgh. The congregation was formed in 1844 with thirty members, and it has now on its roll 660. It has been well served by a succession of very able ministers, Dr. Alexander McEwen, Dr. Duff, Dr. Hislop, and now by Mr. Welch.

A considerable number of overtures on union with the U. P. Church have been sent up to the Assembly by Free Church Presbyteries, and the Established Church Synod of Glasgow and Ayr have adopted one suggesting the appointment by the Assembly of a committee to consider reunion with other Presbyterian churches, and to confer with them on the subject. The question of union, therefore, once more will have a prominent place at the May Meetings of the Presbyterian Churches.

It is understood in Glasgow that Rev. J. J. Mackay, of Trinity Free Church, will accept the call of the Hull Presbyterian Church which has been addressed to him. He has been very successful in his present sphere of labour, especially in his aggressive work among "the lapsed masses," many of whom he has added to the church. Although a strong man, his two years' work in Glasgow has told upon him. Rev. W. Ross, of the Cowcaddens Free Church, who has done noble work in the same connection, is also feeling the strain, and has applied for a colleague and successor, who will likely be his son, who is very acceptable to the congregation as a preacher.

IRISH NOTES.

The Church of Ireland Temperance Society is now probably the largest temperance organisation in Ireland. It has nearly 1000 branches and 120,000 members.

The Fishamble-street Mission, Dublin, has been doing an excellent work both amongst the poor in the locality and also to the divinity students in Trinity College, Dublin, as a field in which they learn experience in missionary efforts.

Anniversary meetings of the Church Missionary Society were held last week in Belfast and the North of Ireland. Rev. Mr. Bateman, of the Punjab Mission, and Bishop Tucker, of Uganda, were the deputation. The latter had a deeply-interesting story to tell. The congregation of St. Thomas', Belfast, have offered £100 a year towards the support of a missionary in Uganda.

The opposition of the populace to the street preaching in Cork is week by week becoming more bitter. Rev. S. T. Boyd, Methodist minister in the city, has written to the papers to say that he has read with wonder and indignation the reply of the Chief Secretary in the House of Commons with regard to the resolution of the Cork Methodist quarterly meeting, and characterises the reports of the interviews between the police and the members of the quarterly meeting and himself as untrue, baseless, and misleading, whilst he declares that "important matters were suppressed." The proceedings of Sunday last showed no abatement in the hostility of the crowd.

OXFORD NOTES.

The Summer Term has commenced, from the point of view of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union, with great promise. A meeting was held on Saturday, on the invitation of Mr. Talbot Rice, at which papers were read, followed by discussion, on Christian work in the universities. The meeting was full of prayerfulness and power.

A meeting was held last week in connection with the Church of England Society for Waifs and Strays, which was addressed by Rev. J. W. Goddard, deputation secretary, and Rev. F. J. Chavasse, of Wycliffe Hall, the latter pleading earnestly on behalf of this work, and at the same time paying a cordial tribute to Dr. Barnardo's noble labours in this direction.

Mr. J. Brown, of the Evangelisation Society, has concluded a three weeks' mission in St. Clement's parish, which has been a time of manifest blessing. Mr. Brown's Bible readings and addresses have been greatly valued, and throughout the whole time the attendances have been large and the interest hearty.

By the death of Rev. E. S. Ffoulkes, vicar of St. Mary's, the University Church, Oxford loses a well-known figure. His perversion to Rome and his return from thence are well known, while of late years his earnest, though admittedly somewhat eccentric, championship of the Bible against the rationalistic school has especially brought him before public notice. To St. Mary's Church he devoted the last fifteen years with loving interest and enthusiasm.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Ned Wright has conducted services at the Mission Hall, Whyteleafe, Surrey. There were large gatherings, and the Holy Spirit was at work. It was a time of refreshing, and good results will surely follow.

Norway and Sweden.—After attending the thanksgiving service in the Great Assembly Hall, Rev. Walter Bradbury embarked for a short mission tour to Norway and Sweden, taking 1000 Scriptures to distribute amongst the Scandinavians.

South Africa.—Writing from Kimberley on April 2, Mr. J. W. Burke, the singing companion of Rev. John McNeill, says:—"The way has opened up wonderfully here for us, and our meetings have been very good. The singing has been greatly blessed, both here and at Cape Town. We leave to-morrow for Bloemfontein.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallows has concluded a nine days' mission at West Orchard Congregational Church, Coventry. The meetings were mainly for deepening the spiritual life of our members, and as such the addresses were very helpful. The earnest and forcible appeals to the unconverted led to several accepting Christ as their Saviour.

Ireland.—A united Gospel Mission extending over a fortnight has been held in West Street Hall, Portadown, by Mr. Jas. Miller, of Belfast, assisted by the local Methodist and Presbyterian ministers: a similar mission has been held in Londonderry by Mr. S. Montgomery, of Bangor. At each place several are believed to have decided for Christ.

Tunbridge Wells.—A Gospel mission was held in the Baptist Tabernacle here by Mr. Henry Thorne, from April 2 to 16. Much blessing has resulted. Many have reason to praise God for the visit of his servant, and for the proclamation of a full and free salvation in Christ Jesus. The Bible readings have been full of instruction and profit, and well supported.

Ponders End.—Mrs. Hoadley, of Eastbourne (sister of the minister, Rev. J. T. Peace), has completed a successful eight days' mission at the Ponders End Congregational Church. During the mission many young people and others came out on the Lord's side. The young converts have been formed into most promising junior and senior Christian bands.

Mr. H. Powers commenced a twelve days' mission at North Shields, on April 1, this being his third visit, in connection with the Methodist New Connexion Mission Hall. So large were the congregations that the friends were compelled to secure the Royal Assembly Hall. At the close of the mission, the friends had to rejoice over many being brought to Christ. J. M.

Mr. John Elliott has had most cheering barn meetings at Zeal Monachorum, North Devon. So large was the attendance that chairs and forms had to be borrowed from the cottages. Despite some opposition, the Lord has blessed his Word and precious souls have been saved. The evangelist will be glad of prayer for special services in the Market Hall, North Tawton, from April 22 to May 6.

Mr. Geris Hanna, a Nazarene, has been conducting the Sunday services at Conference Hall, Eccleston-street, during this month. His narrative style in describing the parables of our blessed Lord in connection with the everyday life customs of the people resulted in commanding an unusually large attendance. He is open for engagements. His address is, care of Mr. Hurditch, 164, Alexandra-road, N.W.

Rev. Thomas Waugh has had a good mission at Pontypool. As the first week went on the gatherings increased, and the spiritual tone and influence became so deep and manifest that there was a general breaking down, and many eagerly pressed into the inquiry room and sought and found the Saviour. Very special and signal Divine power attended the last Monday night's meeting and the farewell meeting on the Tuesday night.

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh has been holding a successful seven days' mission at the Soldiers' Home, Lichfield. One of the special features attending it was the number of non-commissioned officers who came to hear him night after night, many of them thanking God for his clear exposition of the Word. His anti-infidel tracts have been a great help in removing difficulties from doubting minds, and much definite blessing has resulted.—J. F. Woodman.

Exeter.—Mr. Varley's meetings continue to cause much stir. On Friday he met about thirty of the leading Christian workers in the city, including ten Christian clergymen and ministers. A correspondent writes: "There is a sound of an abundance of rain. The meetings have been suspended for the present week, because a Conference is being held for the deepening of the spiritual life. Mr. Ned Wright is to preach next Sunday and on following days. Let the Lord's remembrancers pray earnestly for blessing to attend this Gospel campaign."

West Kensington Park.—A ten days' evangelistic mission has been held here by Mr. William Sampson. Much prayer had preceded the mission, and the lamented death of Rev. R. J. Andrew, superintendent-minister, had melted many hearts and prepared for the mission preacher. The power of God was abundantly manifest. The appeals of the evangelist probed many a conscience, and led many to decision for Christ, whilst many believers spoke of having received grace.

Leeds.—The house to house visitation of Leeds carried out under the guidance of the Leeds Evangelist Nonconformist Ministers' Association, revealed the fact that many of the citizens were unattached to any place of worship, while many others attended but irregularly. The Association therefore resolved to hold at once a series of central mission services to rouse church members to greater activity, and to win the unconverted to Christ, as a preliminary to a great mission to be conducted early next year in all the Nonconformist churches of the city. The Central Mission has just been carried out (April 9-13) with gratifying results. Large audiences have gathered in the Albert Hall for the noon address to business people, the afternoon service for the deepening of spiritual life, and the evening evangelistic service. Amongst the missioners have been Revs. W. Y. Fullerton, J. Manton Smith, F. B. Meyer, and Dr. Newman Hall. Many have confessed their desire to live the Christian life, and the churches have been greatly quickened, while the united front presented by the ministers of all denominations was most gratifying.

PERSONALIA.

Lord Radstock, we regret to learn, is detained in India by a serious attack of fever.

Rev. F. J. Paton, Dr. J. G. Paton's son, and the first white child born in Aniwa, New Hebrides, is now settled as a missionary at Malekula, in the same Group.

Rev. Thomas Champness is very ill. The direction of the work of the Joyful News Mission can ill spare him. Much prayer is being offered for his speedy recovery.

Dr. Murray Mitchell.—Since the publication of our former paragraph we are happy to understand that Dr. Mitchell, of Nice, continues to regain strength, and purposes to return home immediately.

Mr. Charles Minor has been visiting the prisons, police-courts, and hospitals in New York and Blackwell's Island, N.J., preaching and singing the Gospel. He hopes to return to England about the end of May.

Mr. Thomas L. Johnson, of the African Mission, finding himself unable to resume active work for the Mission, has been compelled to resign for the present. He hopes, however, to do evangelistic work when his health will permit.

Miss F. E. Willard is soon to return to America, and a farewell meeting will be held at Queen's Hall, Langham-place, on Thursday evening, May 10. Canon Wilberforce and Sir Wilfrid Lawson will speak, and Mdme. Antoinette Sterling will sing.

Sister Louie (Miss Harper, R.A.M.), who has rendered invaluable service as a sweet singer of the Gospel, is, we regret to hear, laid aside with influenza. Her medical adviser states that she must on no account take any mission engagements for another month. Hence she has been most reluctantly compelled to cancel all mission engagements during the months of April and May.

Rev. John Wilkinson, accompanied by Rev. James Adler, has gone to America in order to stir up interest there in God's ancient people. He hopes to be back in time to attend the Mildmay Conference at the end of June. The Russell legacy, which, from various causes, has dwindled to about £17,000, has at last been received, though it is more than three years since the death of the testator! It is proposed to devote it entirely to the furtherance of New Testament distribution.

Mr. George Pearse, in a recent letter from Algiers, says: "We have had an unusually severe winter, and disappointing to winter visitors, and much misery amongst natives, with whom we have tried to do a little. My wife has all her usual energy and zeal, and works away with Jews, Arabs, Kabyles, Mzabs, and French, Spaniards, and Italians. The Spaniards are the most encouraging, and the two Spanish evangelists find much success at Bab-el-oned. We proposed to come and live and die here, as it seemed to be our place. I find something to do, and my heart is as young as ever, though infirmities increase. I know I am only a hewer of wood and drawer of water for the house of my God. What a meeting in glory! I only know the Lord is coming soon, but how and when I leave to Him. Let us enjoy glory now! We are a little nearer enjoying it."

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

An anti-opium meeting was held on Thursday at the Y.M.C.A., Manchester. Messrs. Cecil P. Turner, Marcus Wood, Yung-King-Yen, and Miss Muir (all from China) were among the speakers whose descriptions of the ruin wrought in China by opium were very grievous.

The Bishop of London preached last week, in Reading, the annual sermon in connection with the St. John's Branch of C.E.T.S., taking for his text Matt. xviii. 7, "Woe unto the world because of offences, for it must needs be that offences come, but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh."

An Irish Women's Temperance Union has been formed, and the first conference in connection with it is to be held in Belfast early in May. Papers will be read by workers from different parts of Ireland, including Mrs. J. A. Thompson, of Cork; Mrs. Barcroft and Miss Richardson, B.A., of Bessbrook; and Miss Edmundson, of Dublin.

At the closing meeting of the thirty-second series of the Lambeth Baths winter meetings, Rev. W. Mottram, the superintendent, read a statement reviewing the work of the past session, which, notwithstanding unexpected difficulties at the outset, had been successful in a gratifying degree, the attendance having averaged 4300 per week. He remarked that to clear off the expenses of the meetings he should require £110.

The Preston branch of the B.W.T.A. have set their minds upon the erection of a National Temperance Memorial Hall, at a cost of some £10,000, and have inaugurated the scheme by holding a bazaar in the Public Hall during the past week. The bazaar was well patronised, and resulted in over £200 being raised in furtherance of the object named. It is impossible to speak too highly of the work accomplished by this Association among the women.

At Crowland, near Spalding, last week, a meeting was called to protest against the Local Veto Bill, and a large company assembled. But the publicans' friends were disappointed, for after the audience had impatiently waited for half-an-hour a telegram was handed in, informing the organisers that the speakers could not attend. Some Local Vetoites were wide-awake, however, and they turned the proceedings to good account by carrying a resolution in favour of Local Option.

The Bishop of London, at a meeting of the C.E.T.S., asked what could be more important than the endeavour to help men who were struggling against temptations? The sin of intemperance was one which caused unexampled mischief, but he sometimes felt that even a blacker sin was indifference to intemperance. He quite recognised that intemperance was not confined to one class, but the sufferings it entailed fell heaviest upon the toiling classes, who by their labour really upheld the whole framework of society, and had the strongest possible claims for help and assistance upon the community.

At the International Medical Congress recently held in Rome, the subject of alcoholism was introduced by Dr. Fazion (Naples), who presented a large series of statistics, showing that excessive consumption of alcohol was nowhere prevalent in Italy to anything like the extent which prevailed in the northern countries of Europe. Curiously also it appeared that alcoholism was more common within the bounds of Italy in the northern provinces, Lombardy and Venice, than in the southern provinces of Umbria, Tuscany, and Rome, and least of all in the province of Naples and in Sicily.

A curious point in respect of the Scotch licensing laws has been provisionally decided upon by the Edinburgh magistrates. For several years the lessees of the theatres in the northern capital have sold wine, beer, and whisky by the direct permission of the Excise. The Government officials have, however, discovered that they acted illegally in allowing the sale of spirits, and refused to have anything further to do with the theatre licensing. In anything but an enthusiastic fashion the magistrates allowed the theatre managers to carry on the sale of drink, and the question as to the continuance of the indulgence may be raised at the next six-monthly licensing court.—Daily Chronicle.

The British Women's Temperance Association held a drawing-room meeting on Thursday afternoon at Chesterville, Hornsey-lane, N. Miss F. Balgarnie delivered a vigorous address, in the course of which she said it was now the desire of the association to inaugurate some special movement whereby the lowest and most unfortunate women of their cities might be reached, and helped by means of sisterly love and affection to regain their lost womanhood. It was, therefore, desired to secure industrial homes for inebriate women. The object of the homes was to reach those who had fallen from higher influences through drink, and to provide a refuge which would be as sufficiently attractive to the young girl who had fallen as to those of mature age who likewise had sunk into crime through intemperance.

OBITUARY.

MRS. HENRY GAMBLE.

By the death of Mrs. Henry Gamble, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Torquay, loses a generous supporter. The Presbyterian says:—"She was widely known for her large-hearted gifts at Gourock, at Belfast, and during the later period of her life in Torquay—a gifted speaker, a warm and steadfast friend, and a mainstay of all kinds of philanthropic and Christian work." Many missions will suffer by the departure of this liberal supporter of Christian enterprise.

GENERAL MACLAGAN, R.E.

This earnest friend of missions passed away at Kensington, on Saturday. He was a brother of the Archbishop of York, and was one of the oldest officers in the Indian Army. Since his retirement he has devoted himself to philanthropic work, but was especially noteworthy for his interest in missionary work, being on the working committee of both the S.P.G. and the C.M.S. Societies. He was a man of wide knowledge, and corrected the missionary atlas of the latter society. He was joint secretary with Canon Jacob of the Board of Missions, and had taken an active part, till his illness, in the arrangement for the missionary conference at the end of next month.

THE McALL MISSION.

The Bon Messager, the mission boat of the McAll Mission, is again being prepared for the work of evangelising on the rivers of France. It is now at Bas-Meudon, on the Seine, near Sèvres and St. Cloud, and the meetings are nightly well attended. Pastor S. Gout and M. Reveillaud have been speaking with much acceptance, and have been encouraged by the numbers, and by the attention manifested. In a few days' time Capt. and Mrs. Pim will take charge of the little vessel and commence work on the Oise or the Aisne. We trust that much prayer will be offered for the success of this new enterprise. The two summers spent on the Marne were much blessed, and two permanent stations have been opened as the result, at Epernay and at Vareddes, and we hope that soon a third, at Lagney will also be commenced. Our funds are exhausted and we need help greatly.

THE EMPEROR AND THE LORD'S DAY.

Dear Sir,—A profound impression has been created in Venice by the refusal of the Emperor William to attend the theatre on the Lord's Day. As the public know, his visit to Venice was a brief one, and was hurriedly arranged. However, the city set itself with might and main to show him honour, and its efforts culminated in the getting up of a great theatrical performance for the evening of Sunday last. When the Emperor was informed of what had been done, and was asked to honour the assembly with his presence, he replied, "Since I have become Emperor I have made it a principle of my life never to attend any place of amusement on the Lord's Day."

King Humbert, I believe not unreluctantly (for none can value more the blessings of a day of quiet than such a busy Sovereign), followed the Emperor's example. As both Emperor and King were expected, the theatre was crowded from floor to ceiling, but the Royal box was empty. The brilliant gathering learned a lesson on the duty of keeping holy the Lord's Day.—Yours, etc.,

Alexander Robertson, D.D.

Venice, April 14, 1894.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on mission at Gosberton, Lincolnshire, commencing on April 29.—That much blessing might be given on a ten days' mission at Pontymoile (Mon.), by Richard Weaver, commencing on the 29th inst.—For a three nights' mission, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd May, to be held by Mr. W. R. Lane for young women at "The Old Welcome."—For a special eight days' mission at the Lighthouse, Wells-place, Camberwell.—For blessing on services at Cubitt Town, E., during May, by Mr. Isaac Skidmore.—For blessing on a missionary, Mr. George Clarke, at Weston-super-Mare, commencing on Whit Sunday.—For a mighty working of the Holy Spirit on the garrison and town of Chatham.

CAUTION.—A man named Samuel Kohn, about 30 years of age, tall, light-haired, with slight moustache, talks with an American accent, holding a ticket of the Boston (Massachusetts) Young Men's Christian Union (Unitarian), latterly professing to be a converted Jew, has lately been very widely robbing the Christian public by false pretences. Sometimes his wife is on the point of confinement, and he earnestly desires to get her back to her friends in Germany. Sometimes he has obtained a situation in London, and has not the means to reach the metropolis. He has stolen some writing paper with the heading "City of London Young Men's Christian Association, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.," and has written for himself a false character. The last seen was signed "Robert Burn, pro J. H. P." Friends are warned that this man is wholly untrustworthy.

Fallen Asleep.

At Barking, on 16th inst., Mrs. W. H. Stephens, wife of the postmaster, and herself a faithful servant of Christ.—At Newcastle, Councillor Blakey, a devoted S.S. superintendent and elder, and an influential leader in Christian movements.—At Sheffield, Mr. H. Outram, a well-known Christian leader.—At Peckham Rye, Mr. W. Jones, aged twenty-one, a devoted teacher and worker, who had volunteered for foreign missions, but had been forbidden by the doctors from going.—At Dyserth, near Rhyl, aged ninety, Mr. Robert Hughes, known far and near in the Principality as an eloquent preacher.—At Halifax, on 13th inst., Mr. W. Cooper, for thirty years a prominent and leading Christian worker.—At Nottingham, on 15th inst., Mr. H. Carey, aged eighty-two.—At Clapham, on 13th inst., Mr. John England, a devoted schoolmaster, aged forty-one.—At Gloucester, Celie Alexandrine, wife of Rev. J. Hartwell.—At Bromesbury, on 15th inst., Mr. J. W. Johnson, a useful labourer.—At Oxford, on 13th inst., Mrs. Phipps, aged seventy-three, a faithful follower of Jesus.—At Greencastle, Belfast, Mr. Wm. M'Kinsty, a devoted Presbyterian elder, aged eighty years.—At Lylehill, co. Antrim, Mr. Wm. J. Gibson, an earnest Sunday-school and Christian worker.—At Lurgan, on 23rd inst., Dr. Campbell, Dean of Dromore, in his eighty-third year.—At Ashmore, on Thursday, April 5, Mrs. Ann Wheeler, aged 102 years, the widow of Mr. George Wheeler, at one time a well-known local preacher.

Appeals.

Chatham, Kent.—A few friends who have been working here some years, and who have erected a church, schoo.-room, and eight class-rooms, the total cost being £2500, require £1000 more to free these premises of debt. They are most anxious to obtain this sum, so that they may have a free hand to engage in Gospel and temperance work.—The secretary is Mr. Joseph Karn, Leicester-road, Chatham.

St. Giles' Christian Mission.—Now that our winter's work among the poor is ended we find ourselves entirely without funds, so great has been the demands upon our resources. We have supplied coals to many who would otherwise have been without firing; clothing has been given where sorely needed; soup and other food have daily been distributed to large numbers struggling with want. Beside all this we have the inmates of our four Boys' Homes and also of our Women's Home needing constant care and provision. Wives and children of prisoners in their helplessness have very especial claim upon our sympathy and help. I regret to be under the absolute necessity of again appealing for aid.—Wm. Wheatley, Superintendent, 4, Ampton-street, Regent-square, W.C.

"ECHOES FROM JAPAN."

This book, which has reached its second edition, has been for some time out of print. The authoress, Miss M. McLean, would be glad to issue a sixpenny condensed edition of it if sufficient encouragement is offered to meet cost of printing. Address, Miss McLean, care of Messrs. Passmore and Alabaster, London, E.C. An American gentleman, in a letter to the well-known authoress, Miss Petrie, B.A. (now Mrs. Carus Wilson, of Canada), said:—"Certainly this book deserves a wide circulation. Few contributions to missionary literature are so well written, and few writers' personality is so strong and buoyant and gracious. Her courage and tact made me think of Miss Frances Ridley Havergal, whom I admire very much. I had never before read of any Christian work among the sailors in Japan, and was especially delighted with her graphic descriptions of the great spiritual awakening among these men."

WEST LONDON MISSION.

The seventh anniversary of the West London Mission falls on Friday, May 4. Rev. Mark Guy Pearse will preach in Craven Chapel, Foubert's-place, 206, Regent-street, at noon. Baroness Langenau presides over the afternoon meeting, also in Craven Chapel, at 3.30. Addresses are to be given by some of the Sisters of the People. The evening meeting will be in St. James's Hall, Piccadilly, at seven o'clock; Mr. John Cory, of Cardiff, in the chair. Dr. Parker, Dr. Rigg, Rev. H. Price Hughes, Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, and others will speak.

The lease of Wardour Hall having expired, the transference of the services held there to the time-honoured Craven Chapel necessitates some changes in the work of the Mission. Mr. Price Hughes has commenced a Sunday morning service there; Mr. Josiah Nix taking the service at night. The meeting for prayer, praise, and Bible reading, hitherto held in Prince's Hall on Friday evenings, will be henceforth held at Craven Lecture Hall from 8.30 to 9.30. It is proposed shortly to arrange some Friday afternoon meetings in the Church Parlour, in which the Sisters of the People will take part.

Palestine Exploration Fund.—The Duke of York has consented to preside at a lecture on "Future Researches in Palestine, and the Important Results to be expected from them," to be delivered by Major Conder, R.E., D.C.L., LL.D., on Tuesday, May 8, at 4 p.m., at the Westminster Town Hall. The proceeds will be devoted to the exploration at Jerusalem, for which a firman has just been granted by the Sublime Porte.

Notes and Comments.

WE purpose next week to give portrait and sketch of the late Pastor John Victor, of Clevedon, Somerset.

A communication has been received by the committee formed to invite Messrs. Moody and Sankey to conduct an Evangelistic Mission in London next winter, regretting their inability to come owing to pressure of work in America, and expressing the hope that they may be able to do so at some future time.

Those who are specially interested in studying the work of grace in 1859, and onwards, to which much reference has of late been made, may like to know that a few copies of the first five vols of The Revival can still be had of the publishers of this paper. The set of five vols (July, 1859—December, 1861) will be sent post free for 10s.

At the Village Conference last week stress was laid on the fact that the vocabulary of many villagers does not exceed 500 words. What, then, could be a more flagrant illustration of how not to do it, than to commit the evangelisation of the villages to men whose ordinary conversation extends to 5000 or even 50,000 words? Our fathers were wise who insisted on language understanded of the people. What is needed for the spread of the Gospel is not men highly educated in science, literature, or theology, but men taught and experienced in the school of God. Moses the son of Pharaoh's daughter, had, during forty years of country life, to unlearn the wisdom of the Egyptians, in order to become Moses the man of God, the evangelist to the Israelitish labourers in Egypt.

"There must needs be sects among you," said the Apostle to the gifted but divided saints at Corinth, "in order that they who are approved may be made manifest among you." And in accord with this he told the saints at Ephesus, "Yea, of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them" (Acts xx. 30). This is the sure test of schism. Some specialty, some peculiarity, some "perverse thing," by which the propagator of it draws away disciples after himself, or by which those among whom he is approved make him manifest. The "perverse thing" may even be a truth or a person magnified out of due proportion. It was a perverse thing to bring one apostle as a teacher into antagonism with another; and nothing was more "perverse" than to say, "I am of Christ," in a sectarian spirit. Some are now in the same spirit setting the Gospels against the Epistles, as though they were not all inspired by the same Holy Spirit.

This ambition is natural to the human heart. "Their inward thought is that their houses shall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to generation and generation; they call their lands after their own names." Among the things which Jesus' angel signified to John, not the least significant was the revelation that in the great earthquake seven thousand names of men were slain (Rev. xi. 13). Of all the goodly stones and gifts by which they that were rich sought to commemorate their names, not one was left upon another; but the nameless widow's mites are had in everlasting remembrance. We shall all be glad to meet her and other of the Lord's poor in the Lord's Land.

W. S. writes us, reflecting on the smallness of the amount contributed at the Thanksgiving Meetings, and proposes a great Thankoffering meeting. It must, however, be remembered that those meetings consisted largely, (1) of Christian workers, whose daily needs are for the most part barely met by their incomes, and (2) of those who are giving every day. The few millions annually given for the work of God by English people are often contemptuously compared with the 140 millions spent on drink, the twenty millions on tobacco, and other millions on other needless or hurtful luxuries. But this is not where the true point of comparison lies. The few millions represent (1) the munificent gifts of a few wealthy people, who give liberally—in some cases to the extent of half their income, or more. (2) the not less munificent givings of some not wealthy Christians; and (3) most munificent of all, the gifts of the Lord's poor, every penny of which means some comfort abstained from or some necessary of life foregone. Those who work for God are also those who give to God. The bulk of professing Christians give practically nothing. The gifts of the wealthy world even to philanthropic objects are comparatively nil.

"He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him." The real stones of stumbling are within, in the heart; not without, in the things done to a man, the things he has to encounter and to endure. Owing to defective vision, some men are always knocking against things in the street and in the house, whereas those with good sight hardly ever encounter a difficulty. And similarly some Christians are always hurting themselves, rather than being hurt by the behaviour of brethren towards them. They suffer from slights, from neglect, from unjust treatment, from coldness and unneighbourliness; but if they abounded in brotherly love these things, however real and however hard to bear, would, at least, not be an occasion of stumbling in their Christian profession. They would not neglect prayer, avoid the fellowship of the Church, cast off their faith, and return to the world. They would walk in the light, and be able to go on their way unhindered.

Not a moment too soon has the National Anti-Gambling League decided to see whether the law, which is now put in force against gambling by poor men, cannot also be brought to bear upon rich men. The alarming spread of gambling, and the ruin it is causing, are a sufficient reason for using the law vigorously. But it is obvious that no thorough work can be done so long as the worst offenders are allowed to go unpunished. To pounce on errand-boys and make raids on a few insignificant clubs, while the notorious clubs of rich and titled men are unassailed, is to make law and justice a mockery. There may be the same law for rich and poor—though in this case that seems doubtful—but the administration of it may be very different; hence law is too often brought into contempt. Evidence, it seems, has been collected against several of the racecourse enclosures and clubs, which is said to be sufficient to obtain convictions. Mr. Hawke, honorary organising secretary of the League, is reported as having said:—"However much we might regret any public scandal, the League can be no respecter of persons." Let us hope it may be successful against all those rogues who gamble, both rich and poor.

Another feature of the present work of the League is that Mr. Hawke has obtained the assent of six influential newspapers, three in London and three in the provinces, to the League's bill for rendering penal the publication of the betting odds, upon the condition that prohibition is made universal. The League has also a bill in a forward state for regulating outside Stock Exchanges. There are other institutions in the City of London which need reforming in the matter of gambling, and when the League can find time to attend to them, they also will have their turn. All this will make a flutter, and we may be sure that clever means will be adopted to do in legal ways things that are morally wrong. None the less should law be made to conform to the moral standard, and be applied equally all round.

The people of Birmingham are making a vigorous protest against a proposal to establish a racecourse near the great Midland metropolis. Political leaders and religious teachers are alike opposed to the scheme. In his sermon in the Town Hall on Tuesday, in connection with Wesleyan Foreign Missions, Dr. Parker, of the City Temple, referred to the proposal as one likely to be disastrous to the welfare of Birmingham. He described the term racecourse as being not in the singular number, but as bringing with it everywhere its inevitable plural of drunkenness, gambling, licentiousness, covetousness, and all manner of evil. We very heartily wish the inhabitants of Birmingham success in their efforts to prevent so great a curse being established in their neighbourhood. It is notorious that a racecourse means injury both social and moral to the people. And we trust the time will soon come when princes and peers will cease to countenance by their presence and support so prolific a source of vice and crime.

While this evil threatens Birmingham, startling and painful revelations are being made by Miss Isabel Kenward, secretary of the Girls' Letter Guild. From some of the girls among whom she works, she discovered that among factory girls the habit of betting is very prevalent. The custom seems to be for the girls to give their money to the foreman or head person in the shop, who either acts as bookmaker himself, or hands it over to a betting man. The amount risked may be from threepence to sixpence. If successful, each girl may receive two shillings. Married women seem to be the chief offenders in this respect, and become temptresses of others. Girls entering the factory and refusing to bet at first, find the practice so common that they soon fall into it. This is an alarming state of things. Surely employers cannot claim to be quite free from responsibility in connection with it.

These statements by Miss Kenward led to further inquiries being made by a representative of The Birmingham Daily Mail. The result of these inquiries is that many more painful facts are brought to light. These are a few:—Twenty per cent. of the bookmakers' patrons are women. Among the betting papers seized at a public-house some time ago, some bore the names of about half-a-dozen women. The explanation was this:—These half-a-dozen women lived in one court. A sporting paper was bought as soon as their husbands left for work in the morning, then one who could read announced to the rest the selections for the several races. Painful quarrels between husbands and wives are the inevitable result of such practices. Several cases are given, one that of the wife of a policeman, whose infatuation led her to spend her husband's wages so freely that he had ultimately to be separated from her. Another, the wife of a man in a respectable position, who spent upon gambling every penny of her husband's money, and even drew largely upon money he had banked, and who ultimately closed her miserable life by suicide. We are thankful that light is being let in upon these facts. Is it too much to urge that the Press, which is helping to expose the evil, will cease to give so large a space to racing and betting news?

From a recent speech by the Rev. Wm. Carey, of Barisal, East Bengal, as well as from many other signs around us, it is evident that our long intercourse with the heathen religions of the East is beginning to produce its crop of errors and evils.

India, he urged, was a neglected field, and he believed that this was due to the looseness and the falsity of the views held concerning Indian faiths. He abhorred that Parliament of Religions held some little time ago in the city of Chicago. He did not believe it was right to admit any other but Christ on the platform of faith. Jesus was King, and there was but one Sacred Book.

We take it that the right position for a missionary to take is to find out all the good in the religion of the people to whom he goes, every grain of truth among them, and then use it in the light of the Gospel to attract and aid. Just as Paul did with the inscription "To an unknown God," and with the words of heathen poets. This is a very different thing from admitting that Christianity is only one of many forms of faith, all from God, and that Christ is only one of many Masters.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—Commander Key, R.N., presided last week at Exeter Hall over the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Midnight Meeting Movement for the reclamation of fallen women. The annual report, which was adopted, stated that during the year meetings had been held in all parts of London, as well as in Leeds. Day meetings had now been organised, and in most cases had been highly successful in securing the attendance of the unhappy women of all classes.

Fulness of Blessing.

Let us with adoring hearts acknowledge God as the glorious Giver, who gives according to "the riches of his glory," and in continuity. His unspeakable gift is his Son, the gift of his whole Person to us, a whole Christ, but not in the sense of parting with Him. The gift of his Spirit is also the gift of his whole Person. "God giveth not the Spirit by measure," nor his Son by measure. The Son, when on earth, was in the bosom of the Father; now He is in the glory of the Father; but He dwells in our hearts by faith. The Spirit given at Pentecost is shown in the Apocalypse as "the seven Spirits before the throne," but He likewise has his dwelling in our bodies.

Jesus has the seven Spirits of God—that is, the Holy Spirit in his fulness—and the Spirit has come in his fulness, and is given to each believer to produce wondrous experiences. We are gloriously endowed, as we read in 2 Cor. i. 21, 22: "Stablished in Christ, anointed, sealed, and the earnest of the Spirit given." This is on God's side an everflowing fountain—no stint, no impediment to its full flow. But now an important question arises on man's side: Do we receive Him? Are we receiving his Spirit in his fulness? "He that believeth on Me," Jesus said, "out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." The soul-thirst will drink of Him, and the word "believeth" implies the need, the self-emptiedness, the craving, which can only be met by the living water; a revelation of a full Christ, who has a measureless ability to bless, and asks us to open to Him that He may sup with us. There is no limit to the "supply of the Spirit of Jesus," and it is most instructive to see how the richly-endowed Apostle felt himself so closely linked with his fellow-believers that he depended on their prayers for that supply (Phil. i. 19).

The exhortation "be filled with the Spirit" is imperative! and what does that imply? It has been said most happily by Mr. Ernest Boys that it means, it involves, not our having more of the Spirit, but rather the Spirit having more of us. This opens up wondrous possibilities, and the thought came as a revelation to some waiting souls recently at the Cape of Good Hope. What is needed, then, for the blissful experience of this fulness of blessing, is that our whole being be fully yielded up to God, and that we have a continually fresh experience of "the renewing of the Holy Ghost, which is shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour" (Titus iii. 5, 6).

But the great object of our contemplation is Jesus Himself, and not the Holy Spirit, as that may lead us to a too exclusively subjective religion, and as Robert Hawker says in his comprehensively Scriptural hymn to "Jehovah-Jesus":—

Yet, Lord! Thy grace we dare not bound.
Near to Thyself we've always found
The Holy Ghost is ours.
Thy person is the blessed clue
To all who would the Father view,
And know the Spirit's powers.

Let us not, then, be content with a stereotyped form of doctrine of the Spirit's coming once for all; let us seek daily to be anointed with fresh oil, and to experience what freshness in life is known by his renewings, making the Word sweeter than ever, prayer a delight, and service more easy, whilst we are kept low in our own esteem, and in the assured conviction that "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ is sufficient for us, and his strength made perfect in our weakness."

Algiers. Geo. Pearse.

More to Follow.

There is evidently a widespread desire, with which we intensely sympathise, that those hearty and spontaneous Thanksgiving Meetings on April 11 should lead on to some definite result. We think that all who took part in them in bodily presence, and the far larger number who were in spirit with us at the Throne of Grace, will be agreed in these two propositions:—

(1) That our chief need, in order to effectual service to God, is the fulfilment of the Saviour's prayer—

That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us; that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me.

Every temporal alleviation and every spiritual blessing are included in that one condition: "that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me."

(2) That the only bond of union is love to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ—God-manifested-in-flesh, crucified, risen, glorified. All true Christians are one here. There is no truth which any two persons see precisely alike, and there are very many on which we widely differ. But in loving and honouring Jesus of Nazareth, the Man Christ Jesus, Jesus the Son of God, we are absolutely at one. And that memorable story of David's reign may always be re-enacted with reference to great David's Greater Son.

All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron [Fellowship], to make David king over ALL ISRAEL: and all the rest of Israel were of one heart to make David king. And they were with David three days, eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them. . . . for there was joy in Israel.

Let us meditate on this whole story (1 Chron. xii.), putting Jesus for David, until our hearts burn within us as He talks with us by the way.

There is an evident and general desire for union or reunion. Reunion appears to us impossible. We cannot gather up all the broken pieces of our forefathers' failures, but we can begin just where we are, on God's first and everlasting principle of love to Christ and love to the brethren. And we can take hold of his strength who says:—

Behold, I make all things new.

Will not prayer, earnest, importunate, believing, prevailing prayer, individual, social, public, move the hand that moves the world? "O Lord revive thy work, that thy people may rejoice IN THEE." M.

WORK AMONG "SHOW PEOPLE."

That the show folk, as a class, are receiving increasing ministration year by year is shown by the report just issued. Twelve years ago the Travellers' National Total Abstainers' Union was formed at the fair at York, and during the last year, at nearly forty towns "travellers" have received special attention from local friends. Gospel temperance meetings were held, Scriptures and tracts distributed, and hundreds of pledges taken. Schools for the children were carried on at seven or eight fairs, and it is now proposed that four school vans should go on tour, the better to ensure their training and instruction. The hon. secretary of the Union is Miss E. Millington, York, and friends who wish to be helpful to show folk may receive guidance from her, based on her long experience in the work.

The Caravan is a carefully edited quarterly, which has a considerable circulation, and an issue in French and in German is to be distributed during the summer.

THE PARENT who should have but one special gift to bestow upon a child, could hardly do better than choose for him good temper. It solaces every hour and cheers every occasion.

Dew upon all the Ground.

When God was going to send Moses to his afflicted people, He gave him three signs, the key to the ultimate meaning of each of which is Jesus.

As the fire was in the thornbush and the bush was not consumed, so "God was manifested in flesh"—"sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh"—and the flesh was not consumed by the holy fire, "for our God is a consuming fire." Moses called the vision a "great sight"; Paul called the antitypical reality "agreat mystery" (Ex. iii. 3; 1 Tim. iii. 16).

As the rod in Moses' hand became a serpent, and taken into his hand became again a rod, so Jesus, the Rod of God, by whom He made all things, was lifted as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness—"was made a curse for us." But God raised Him up, and He became the Rod of God again, by whom He has smitten the power of the enemy, and wrought the mightier work of redemption.

As Moses' hand taken from his bosom became leprous, so Jesus came forth from the bosom of the Father, and was made to be sin for us, though He knew no sin. And as Moses put his hand into his bosom again, and it became as it was before, so Jesus, the Man of God's right hand, went back to the Father's bosom, and will come forth again apart from sin for the salvation of them that wait for Him.

When Gideon was called of God to deliver his people from the yoke of Midian, he made objection of his unfitness, as Moses had done before Him; and God gave him a sign by fire, as He had given Moses. But the Spirit loves to reveal Jesus, and He put it into Gideon's heart to ask another, and a double sign. I have known dear children of God try to unlock this sign of the dew upon the fleece, with the Jew for a key, but it does not answer to all the wards. We are like Mary, who supposed Jesus to be the gardener. Like the disciples, we see Jesus standing and know not that it is Jesus.

The dew of heaven from above; his heavens shall drop down dew; the dew lay all night upon my branch; who hath begotten the drops of dew? The king's favour is as dew upon the grass; like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest; thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead; I will be as the dew unto Israel; the remnant of Jacob shall be as a dew from the Lord; the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew.

These allusions to this silent but blessing-bearing distillation show that the dew is a synonym for the favour of the Lord, the grace of God. And the Lamb without blemish and without spot is fitly represented by the fleece.

"Let the dew be on the fleece only, and let it be dry on all the ground." And it was so. That was normal. "Grace is poured into thy lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever." Upon Him alone the Spirit as a dove could rest. "I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before Him." "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

"He wringed it out a bowl full of water." How that expression "wringed it out" describes the sufferings of Christ. "Thou hast drunk the bowl of the cup of staggering, and wringed it out" (Isa. li. 16, A.V. and R.V.). "If this cup may not pass from Me, except I drink it, thy will be done."

> Gethsemane, the olive press,
> And why so called let Christians guess.
> Fit name, fit place, where vengeance strove.
> And gripped and grappled hard with love.

"Now let it be dry only on the fleece, and let the dew be on all the ground." Gideon did not know what he was asking. The hesitation in proposing this was not the shrinking of the man, but of the Spirit, who suggested the sign and knew its deep and dread significance. For this was not normal. Therefore it says—"And God did so that night." "It was so" before—but "God did so" now. The night was not mentioned above; now the darkness, the black and dark night, is emphasized. It is God's strange act—his strange work (Isa. xxviii.). Judgment cannot be the strange act of the Judge of all the earth. But "to slay the righteous with the wicked, and that the righteous should be as the wicked, that be far from Thee" (Gen. xviii. 25). That in Abraham's view would be a strange act for God—foreign to his nature. Into God's strange act the angels desired to look.

The fleece is dry. "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" "The reproaches of them that reproached Thee are fallen upon me." "I have eaten ashes like bread, and mingled my drink with weeping, because of thine indignation and thy wrath," for "Thou has lifted me up and cast me down" (Ps. xxii; lxix.; cii., etc.)

> Lo, at noon 'tis sudden night,
> Darkness covers all the sky,
> Rocks are rending at the sight,
> Children, can you tell me why?
> What can all these wonders be?
> Jesus dies on Calvary.

He who was rich with the dew of his youth, for our sakes became poor, dry, forsaken, that we through his poverty might be rich.

"And on all the ground let there be dew." "Grace (favour-dew) and truth came by Jesus Christ." "Grace be unto you and peace, from Him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven Spirits which are before his throne; and from Jesus Christ, Who is the faithful witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to Him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen." (Rev. 1. 4—6).

> That He might spare his enemies
> He would not spare his Son.

"It was dry on the fleece only, and there was dew on all the ground."

By the grace of God He tasted death for every one. The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all. Thou hast brought me into the dust of death. Upon Him fell the curse. "The heaven over you is shaped from dew."

Oh, yes; "He loved me and gave Himself for me." He took my dry and dewless place, that I might come into his place of grace and favour, and blessing, "to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein He hath graced us in the Beloved."

The uniting love of brethren, so good and pleasant that it is like the holy and unique anointing oil, is also like the dew of Hermon, which descended upon the mountains of Zion. That goodly mountain, white and high, and lonely, where Jesus was transfigured, is a fit emblem of Himself, in Whom his God and Father has blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places and heavenly things.

> Glory, glory, everlasting,
> Be to Him who bore the cross,
> Who redeemed our souls by tasting
> Death—the death deserved by us.
> Spread his glory
> Who redeemed his people thus.

A much-loved brother in Christ told me forty years ago that these were all fancies. But I know they are God's fancies—and God's fancies are only the expression in God's poetry of God's facts. Some minds are so made that they can only learn in very sober prose—in abstract logical statement. But some can hear the music in the sound of many waters; they understand the prophets who have used similitudes; their ear is attuned to the poetry of heaven.

When like a flash of lightning you have done his bidding, stand still and silent, having let down your wings (for in the latest vision of the living creatures there were four wings to cover their bodies and only two to fly). Stand still and listen, for there was a voice from above the crystal firmament that was above their heads, when they stood and had let down their wings.

The mystery of God is finished when JESUS reigns (Rev. x. 7; xi. 15).

Spiritual Astronomy.—2.

THE TEACHING OF THE SUN.

By Rev. J. F. T. HALLOWES, Birmingham.

IV. The Sun has a far-reaching power of attraction.—More than 300 planets revolve round the sun. The largest of these, Jupiter, is 1200 times as large as our earth, others are only a few miles round, but all are held in their proper orbits by the one great force of solar gravitation, which is more powerful in its influence on each planet than is the united attraction of all the other planets. Thus it is the sun which determines the path of each planet. They are mutually influenced, and as they pass one another are slightly drawn in each other's direction. But while thus responding to these minor attractions they are governed by the sun, which never loses its dominant hold upon them, saving them from those disastrous collisions which would otherwise be inevitable.

Thus it is with true Christians. Christ attracts them more than all created souls. These they respond to within safe limits. They are influenced by them, they are governed by Him. "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord." They revolve round no centre but Christ. They make no man, however eminent, their sun. They watch all creature-attractions lest these should draw them over much. Such are lawful, but they "will not be brought under the power of any," lest these should take them from their soul's chiefest light, and bring upon them multiplied disaster.

V. The Sun is able to bleach various substances.—Its white light has a mysterious chemical property, and can make certain things white that are exposed to it. Thus have I often seen pieces of linen brought from the factories and exposed in the fields to the rays of the sun, which after some time shine away the yellow tinge, and the linen at last becomes of a pure white. In vain do the moon and stars shine upon it. These lesser lights have no such bleaching power. This belongs alone to the sun. And who can shine away our sin but the Sun of Righteousness? Vain are the beams of the Church or the world. In them there is not the mysterious property which cleanses our soul-stains. Even the Church, which may well be compared to the moon, is as destitute of this spiritual power of cleansing as are the lunar rays of the chemical power. Constantly expose yourself to the searching beams of the Sun of Righteousness. Unfold your soul, as it were, spread out its desires and thoughts, that all which does not make for righteousness may be shone away. Is there anything you dare not expose to the great detective rays? St. Augustine, before his conversion, used at times to pray, "Lord, cleanse me some day, but not yet." Fear not the blessed beams. They will only banish what is impure, what is unlike themselves.

VI. The Sun did much for our world ages ago.—Long before man lived the heat of the ancient sunbeams developed the vast vegetation of the coal period. And so immense forests flourished in this and other lands, and, sinking beneath the surface of the ground, were gradually turned into coal. We are thus indebted to the sun of the past, as well as of the present. Treasures of immense extent have been laid up for us by the sun in the crust of our globe, on which now we draw for the genial warmth of our fires, the lighting of our cities, and the working of our machinery. Treasures of immeasurably greater value have been laid up for us by Christ in his wondrous redemption accomplished for us eighteen centuries ago. We are born into a world redeemed by the precious blood of Christ. We find a vast provision of mercy already at our disposal. The finished work of Christ on the cross waits our appropriation. On this we can, so to speak draw for our own personal requirements.

VII. The Sun gives more light and heat to some parts of the world than to others.—The same sun shines on all lands, and yet some receive much more light and heat than others. Compare, for example, Africa with Greenland. The reason for the superior climate of the former is that Africa is so turned towards the sun that his rays fall much more fully on it than on Greenland. In Greenland the sun never rises to a great height above the horizon, the rays never stream down perpendicularly, but fall aslant upon its surface. Hence the vegetation is stunted and sparse, contrasting greatly with the gorgeous flora of Africa.

Our soul's climate and productions are determined by our relation to the Sun of Righteousness. Would you enjoy tropical warmth and light, turn your soul full and square to Him whose rays will then fall upon you more abundantly. And with the improvement in your soul's climate will come superior productions. All the fair flowers and delicious fruits of grace will abound. Man cannot change the relation of his country to the sun, but he can change the attitude of his soul to Christ.

VIII. Our very lives depend upon the Sun.—Amongst the countless hosts of heaven there is only one body on which we are absolutely dependent. Were the fixed stars to vanish, the planets to disappear, and the moon to be blotted out, we should be put to great inconvenience, especially by the unrelieved darkness of the nights, and the almost complete cessation of the tides, but still the earth would be a fit abode for man.

If, however, the sun were to be extinguished, all life on this globe would immediately be extinguished too. Such a winter as the Polar regions never knew would at once set in. Our dependence upon Christ for spiritual blessings is just as absolute. We could exist spiritually without the angels and without the saints, but without Christ we must indeed perish. "In Him we live and move and have our being." Without Him there is nothing for us but darkness, despair, and death.

SOUTHSEA CONVENTION, for the deepening of the Spiritual Life.—Mr. Robert Wilson will preside at this conference, May 14 to 18. The speakers will include Revs. J. B. Figgis, Gelson Gregson, W. Fuller Gooch, W. Houghton, J. J. Luce, R. Middleton, and Dr. Harry Guinness. The missionary meeting will be on Wednesday, 16th, at 3 p.m.

A New Translation
PAUL'S SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

By Richard Francis Weymouth, D.Lit., M.A., Fellow of Univ. Coll. Lond., Editor of the Resultant Greek Testament.

Ἡ ἱκανότης ἡμῶν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ.—2 Cor. iii. 5.

[The object aimed at, however imperfectly attained, is to express as exactly as possible in the English of the nineteenth century the true sense of the Apostle's words as given in the best editions of the original Greek.]

10. But as to myself, I Paul entreat you by the gentleness and self-forgetfulness of Christ, I who when among you have no imposing personal presence, but when absent am fearlessly
2 outspoken in dealing with you— I, however, beseech you not to compel me when present to act fearlessly in the peremptoriness with which I reckon on displaying audacity against some who reckon that we are guided
3 by worldly principles. For though we live in the world, it is no worldly warfare
4 that we wage. The arms with which we fight are not human, but are mighty for God
5 to overthrow strong fortresses. For we overthrow pretentious reckonings, and every stronghold that towers high in defiance of the knowledge of God, and every thought we carry off as into slavery, into subjection to Christ;
6 while we hold ourselves in readiness to punish every act of disobedience, after you as a church have fully shown your obedience.
7 Is it outward appearance you look to? If any man is confident for himself that he is Christ's, let him once more reckon this within himself, that as he himself belongs to Christ,
8 so do we no less. If, however, I were to boast more loudly of our authority (which the Lord has given us to build you up, not to pull you down), I should have no cause to be 9 ashamed. Let it not seem as if I would frighten you with empty in my letters. Be-
10 cause, "His letters," says one, "are authoritative and forcible, but his personal presence is unimpressive, and as to eloquence, he has none."
11 Let such a one take this into his reckoning, that whatever we are in word by letters when absent, the same are we also in act when present.
12 For we have not the audacity to rank ourselves among, or to compare ourselves with, certain persons distinguished by their self-commendation. Nevertheless they are not wise, measuring themselves by one another and comparing themselves with one another.
13 We, however, will not exceed due limits in our boasting, but will keep within the limit of the sphere which God has assigned to us as a limit,
14 reaching even to you. For there is no inordinate stretch of authority on our part, as though it did not extend to you: we pushed on even to Corinth while proclaiming the Good
15 News of the Christ. We do not exceed due limits, boasting in other men's labours; but we entertain a hope, as your Christian character advances, of gaining among you and in our own sphere promotion to a larger field
16 of labour; of telling the Good News in the districts beyond you; not of boasting in another man's sphere about work already done.
17 But "whosoever boasts, let him boast in 18 the Lord." For it is not the man who commends himself that really passes muster, but he whom the Lord commends.

2 Reckon....audacity: I venture to conjecture from the frequent repetition of these words in this part of the Epistle that the Apostle alludes to some charges brought against himself in which these words somehow played a conspicuous part.

6 As a church: you (in the plural) as opposed to any rebellious individual or faction.

8 Pull you down: or, overthrow you, as in ver. 4.

THE REDHILL CONVENTION.

This rising Surrey town has again kept its annual convocation, and the steady increase in numbers evidences its rapidly growing influence. Perhaps the great event of the recent convention was the Thursday night meeting and its remarkable after-meeting, when two-thirds of the great assembly remained for prayer and further instruction. That night will have been a very memorable one throughout eternity for the many souls who received a full blessing. Mr. Robert Wilson, of Broughton Grange, presided throughout.

Space is not available for a detailed report; we can only note some of the more suggestive addresses. On the Tuesday forenoon, Rev. W. S. Standen took for his subject, "Lord, why cannot I follow Thee now?" (John xiii. 37). Peter had been at many conventions, at a very memorable one, which he never forgot, on the Mount of Transfiguration, and now at this blessed convention around the Lord's table. Was he not able to follow his Lord? Had he not forsaken his family, his occupation, his boats, his nets, his all, and had it come to this, after all, that he could not follow his Lord? Peter had failed to understand his Lord, what kind of life he had to live, what kind of Messiah the Lord Jesus was. Peter and the disciples loved their Lord, but they feared the cross. The Lord saw in Peter a self-righteous holiness; he had not reached the point, "Yet not I." So it is with many; it is only as we are in union with the Lord, and as his Spirit abides in us, that we can follow Him. How does the Lord bring this about? The Lord "looked upon Peter, and Peter went out and wept bitterly." Before we can follow the Lord, He must break us down, and bring us in lowly obedience to the cross.

On Tuesday evening, Rev. Evan Hopkins spoke on Ex. xxxiii.—The Power of the Presence (v. 16); The Loss of the Presence (v. 33 to 37), and the Restoration of the Presence (v. 40). What do we know of God's presence around, before, within? God wants us to be thoroughly transparent.

On Wednesday, a new speaker, Mr. E. P. Telford, in his terse, decided, but loving way, spoke from Rev. iii., "Neither cold nor hot." We may be in this condition, and be ignorant of it. This lukewarmness may be alongside the most perfect orthodoxy or the purest morality. How does lukewarmness show itself? By pride, faultfinding, lack of desire for work for God. What is God's remedy? "Be zealous therefore, and repent."

The Bible reading on Thursday afternoon was taken by Rev. Charles Fox on Luke v. So many people pressing upon the Lord Jesus, a good sign; empty vessels, another good sign. So many full vessels come to churches and meetings that God has no room. He sends trials as a mode of making vessels empty. Let Christ enter the empty vessel, and let Him have the whole disposal of us.

The early prayer-meetings were fairly attended, and a large number of prayers were offered, at the close of which a short address was delivered by Rev. R. Turner Sole. By the invitation of the Vicar of St. Matthew's, a large number of the convention friends attended the morning service, at which an earnest sermon was preached by Rev. W. S. Standen, and this was followed by the Lord's Supper.

In the afternoon there was a good attendance at the Town Hall for the praise and testimony meeting. Space will not permit us to refer to the testimonies, which were numerous, earnest, and many of them deeply pathetic, evidencing the power of the Holy Ghost.

The last evening brought together a very large gathering in the Town Hall to listen to missionary addresses. From a statement read, it appears that fourteen missionaries have been thrust out into the heathen mission-field from the neighbourhood of Redhill and Reigate; that three more are in training, and ten others waiting for the way to be opened for them to go out. Dr. Harry Guinness related his experiences in Congo-Balololand. The frightful condition of that country, from slavery and heathenism, with their awful cruelties, thrilled every heart. Mr. Albert Head placed before the audience the condition of the world, the parting command of the Risen Lord, the responsibility of Christians, and their privilege in labour for God.

The May Meetings.

The Baptist Union.

Many practical questions that are fermenting in he public mind found a place in the programme of he Union's meetings last week. The Sunday losing of drink shops was called for; so also was better observance of the Lord's Day. A protest as lodged against sectarian teaching in Board chools, and the liberation of the Episcopal Church rom State control was approved of. Resolutions ere passed in favour of a stricter application of he law in suppressing social evils, calling for inter- ational arbitration, and condemning the lynching utrages that are now disgracing some American ommunities.

On Friday, the closing day of the sessions, much nterest was awakened by the visit of a deputation rom the Baptist Union of Scotland, and the free nterchange of fraternal greetings. In the same ne was a warm and brotherly address by Dr. G. S. arrett, of Norwich, chairman of the Congrega- onal Union. Dr. Barrett hopes to see before very ng the organic reunion of all the Presbyterian urches in Scotland, of the various Methodist bodies in ngland, and of the Baptist and Congregational urches. These acts of consolidation would not nly be a saving of spiritual force, but would nable the free churches to make a stronger stand gainst the growing sacerdotalism of the time. emperance effort and pastoral efficiency were pics that had earnest discussion.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The missionary interest was well to the front roughout the week. There was the usual array subsidiary gatherings in connection with the oung Men's Society, the Zenana Mission, and hers, but the main interest centred in the great neral meeting of the Baptist Missionary Society in xeter Hall on Thursday evening. Notwithstand- g the doleful note of another large deficit that d to be struck by Mr. Rickett, the treasurer, the oceedings were full of inspiration and enthusiasm. ord Overtoun could not fulfil his engagement to eside, because of an attack of influenza, and his ace was taken by Mr. Rickett, whose speech ok the form of a financial report on the situation. he outstanding item was a deficit of over £14,000 the year's accounts. The committee have re- lved that instead of making special efforts to clear this debt, they will aim at bringing up the come of the current year so as to balance expen- ture. In view of the ascertained fact that a very all proportion of the members of the Church con- bute to the missionary funds, the churches and e individual members throughout the country are be systematically visited so as to swell the tide of ssionary interest and increase the gifts of the urches. Whether this method will have the sired effect remains to be seen.

The "ideal secretary," Mr. A. H. Baynes, made rief, but pregnant, statement, referring all those terested to the May Missionary Herald for details. e declared that they had never presented a report re remarkable and inspiring for progress all ng the line. It tells of an unusual number of nverts, of the growing spirituality of the native ristians, and of their earnest evangelistic efforts. fer giving some cheering facts as to progress in dia, China, and Africa, Mr. Baynes scouted the a that there should be any retreat of the fight- g forces. He read a pathetic letter from an st End widow, who sent a ring, a brooch, and 2s., nenting that she could not give more, because e had no more to give. If this spirit of sancti- d self-sacrifice were to animate the great body of ir members, they would have plenty of resources. The four speeches that followed were worthy of e occasion. Rev. S. S. Thomas, of Delhi, gave a wing account of progress in India, and called for re men—the very best men—and an enlargement support adequate to the needs of the great athen fields. He was succeeded by that burly presentative of Congregationalism, Dr. Herber ans, of Carnarvon, who fairly enchained the ention and awoke the enthusiasm of the audience a speech full of pathos, humour, and real quence. We must not be in too great a hurry, said, to realise results; God works slowly but rely in nature and in grace. As to the condition heathendom. Dr. Evans said he had been much ightened and thrilled by the Exeter Hall speech Mrs. Bishop, the traveller, last autumn. "What tale, flat everyday life this would be without the ck of God, the house of God, the day of God, and, better than all of them, the Son of God. We are called to pay our debt to those who have not heard of Him yet." The collection came on the back of Dr. Evans's moving appeal, and then came addresses by Rev. R. D. Darby, of the Congo Mission, and Rev. Yung-King Yen, of Shanghai. Our Chinese brother was well received, and he spoke weightily as to the recent wonderful advances in his own country; but he came late in the programme and the hearers were beginning to show signs of weariness.

Other meetings in connection with the Baptist Missionary Society included a breakfast meeting on Friday morning, when a large number of pastors, deacons, and others conferred together as to the best means to be taken to further the missionary interest in the churches, and a special gathering for the children and young people of the denomination on Friday evening, when there was a crowded audience to listen to the interesting addresses of several returned missionaries.

On Saturday afternoon there was another large crowd—again of young people—at the City Temple, at a meeting arranged by the Young Men's Missionary Association to hear addresses by Rev. Wm. Carey, of Barisal, Eastern Bengal, and the venerable Dr. J. G. Paton. What may not be hoped for as the result of such a gathering? There was wonderful enthusiasm among these young people, and the stirring words of the two missionaries evidently created a deep impression on the whole audience. Mr. Carey invited a thousand of them to offer themselves straightway for work in India, and made the remark that he felt sure that if the churches were to hear that a large contingent of young people were ready thus to go out the means would soon be forthcoming to send them and to support them in their work. God grant that many of these young hearts may hear the call to "go," and may be willing to obey!

Trinitarian Bible Society.

Major Porcelli, R.E., presided over the sixty-third annual meeting of the Trinitarian Bible Society, held on Tuesday last week in Exeter Lower Hall. The Protestant Evangelical character of the Society and its work is well known, and the report, which was read by the secretary, Rev. Dr. Bullinger, aimed at vindicating the Society's existence, and describing its operations. As regards finances, the Society's position is satisfactory, the gross total (£6056) showing an increase over the previous year. The circulation of English and foreign Scriptures reached the aggregate of 497,300, including Bibles, Testaments, and portions, free grants being made to sixty societies, institutions, and Christian workers in various parts of the world. As the premises in St. Paul's Churchyard are about to be pulled down, the Society is now compelled to seek a new habitation for its offices and depository.

A desire to secure the utmost typographical accuracy has occasioned delay in the appearance of the new edition of the Hebrew Bible, but the greater part has now been printed off, and the complete work will be issued shortly. The Hebrew-German Bible has been completed; the Pentateuch is electrotyped, while 684,000 portions of the New Testament have been printed. During the year two new editions have been brought out of the Hebrew New Testament (which has been so widely circulated by the Mildmay Mission to the Jews), bringing the total number of copies issued up to 259,000. The report gave deeply interesting particulars of colportage and missionary work at home and in Russia, Finland, South Africa, France, Germany, Spain, Italy, South America, Turkey, Sweden, Denmark, and Portugal. Numbers of zealous workers all over the world were supplied with Scriptures, without which their efforts would be comparatively paralysed.

The Chairman, in the course of a brief address, maintained the great importance of an unswerving Protestant witness at the present time. He was conscious that this testimony involves odium and something more, for he had been made to suffer in various ways for acting up to his Protestant and Evangelical convictions. Rev. A. Wilkes, M.A., rector of Whitton, urged jealousy for the Bible, and held that the attacks upon the written Word are aimed against the living Word, whose Divinity has been questioned by Satan ever since the temptation in the wilderness. Addresses on the principles and work of the Society were also given by Revs. William Frith and John Ashworth, Mr. Louis Liesching, Col. Alves, and Mr. H. C. Nisbet.

Lepers in the East.

The annual meeting of the Mission to Lepers in India was held on Tuesday week in Morley Halls. Sir T. Fowell Buxton, who presided, opened with a brief recital of some of his own observations during his recent winter tour in India.

Mr. Wellesley C. Bailey presented a running summary of the report. Dealing with statistics, he said he believed that in India alone there are considerably over 100,000 lepers, while in Japan there are 200,000 known cases, and in China probably as many as in both these countries put together. The object of this Mission is to present the Gospel to these miserable sufferers; to relieve their suffering so far as possible; and by segregation to save the untainted children of leprous parents from falling victims to the disease. The Mission does not send out agents of its own, but aids the missionaries already on the spot, and endeavouring to work among the lepers. Apart from this, many asylums are maintained, and hospitals aided. All this is carried on at forty-one stations, of which thirty-three are in India, Burmah, and Ceylon, six in China, and two in Japan. "In India we have now twelve asylums of our own, and in Burmah one; while we give aid to nineteen institutions in India, and one in Ceylon. In Japan we have no work of our own, but have given building grants of £200 each to Kumamoto and Tokio. We have been permitted to commence work in Hiao Kan, Central China, under the supervision of Dr. Walton, and have sent money to build a hospital. This, with the home we are building at Kucheng, Foo Chow, and a hospital at Hangchow—under the care of C.M.S. missionaries—will make three homes or hospitals in China. We are also putting up a small hospital at Codacall, South India, and two small homes in the Colaba district. We have five children's homes, while we are supporting children of lepers at three other places, where as yet no special home has been built."

Earnest efforts are, moreover, being made to establish a Home for European Lepers, our own kith and kin, suffering from this dread disease. To start the Home £2000 is needed, and only £268 is in hand yet. In enforcing this plea the secretary mentioned, without fully detailing, a sadly-touching case which seemed to be quite as worthy of special note as the self-sacrifice of "Father Damien," of which so much was lately heard. In this instance an American lady missionary working in India, feeling run down, went home to rest. While among her dear ones in the States, she discovered that she had contracted leprosy. Immediately she resolved to return to India, and spend the remainder of her days in labouring among the lepers. This devoted sister is now in charge of a leper asylum in the Himalayas. Several incidents were mentioned by the secretary showing the power of the Gospel among the despised and outcast lepers. Many such are given in the report.

Rev. G. M. Bulloch, L.M.S., lately superintendent of the Almora Leper Asylum, began a telling address by showing how all false systems, pagan and Mohammedan alike, ignore the outcast leper, and offer nothing to inspire one ray of hope in his breast; but Christianity brings sympathy and hope. What this meant for these hopeless ones he went on to show by facts from his own experience at Almora. He had seen hope dawn, and in many cases the love of the Lord Jesus fill the heart with gladness, and illumine the soul with the presence of God. In all his missionary experience he (the speaker) had never seen the power of the Gospel more beautifully illustrated than in its results among these despised lepers.

As to the children's homes, he emphasised the need for them, and showed that of forty children of leprous parents who from the Home at Almora had grown up and settled out in life, only one had become a leper, and even he is now doing true Christian work. All the rest appear to have quite escaped the taint.

Rev. W. J. Richards, C.M.S., lately superintendent of the Alleppey Leper Asylum, in the native State of Travancore, went on parallel lines with the previous speaker. He also had become sympathetically interested in lepers, had begun to work among them, had found support and aid in this Mission to Lepers, had built a small asylum, in which good work is being done and many souls saved, while the pitiful sufferings of the diseased bodies are relieved.

Dr. Gauld, of the Mildmay Medical Mission, and formerly of Swatow, China, described the condition of lepers in China, showed what work was being done, and told how three different native churches, far apart from one another, were founded by poor lepers who heard of Jesus in Swatow Hospital, and, going back to their own villages, carried the good news with them. Thus lepers were worth saving, and certainly few more sadly need all the comforts comforts the Gospel can bring.

Information on this Mission, and as to the condition of the lepers, may be had from the secretary, Mr. Wellesley C. Bailey, 17, Glengyle-terrace, Edinburgh.

Christian Evidence Society.

At the annual meeting of this Society, held on April 24, at St. Martin's Town Hall, the report stated that the committee have had a year of great anxiety; the income has declined and the branches have been unable to render assistance. Mr. Lee, Mr. Rosedale, and the Secretary have been very successful in lecturing in London and large towns. The committee propose to lessen the number of lectures unless considerable help be forthcoming.

The Bishop of Peterborough (chairman) said the intellectual needs of men are as constant as the needs of the body. This Society goes to men who are in darkness or doubt or perplexity to tender help. The complaint that Revelation is not clear enough, is an attack on the freedom of human nature in which we glory. If Revelation had been such that man could not misunderstand it, human nature must have been entirely different, and about that it is useless to speculate.

Archdeacon Sinclair said that recently discovered works testify to the authenticity of the New Testament writings. Increasing evidence of ancient monuments and inscriptions shows also the accuracy of the Old Testament. Miss Weston said that Mr. Lee, one of the Society's agents, had done splendid work amongst blue-jackets; he had "knocked many of their sceptical arguments into a cocked hat." Prof. Adeney thought that men are not so flippant to-day as they formerly were on religious questions. This makes the work of the Christian advocate the more serious. It must be solid; an ad captandum style of argument will not now satisfy. Young people are growing up whose minds must be informed before they face the problems they are sure to meet; hence the wisdom of the classes and examinations of the Society. Rev. A. F. W. Ingram said eager crowds in Victoria and other parks wished to know what is true, and how religious difficulties can be met. No one who saw them could doubt the pressing necessity for the lectures delivered there, and for the literature circulated.

Open-air Mission.
